7. An interview conducted with one, Joseph Toohey, Chief Technician, Spectrum Image Group, 10835 Midwest Industrial Blvd., St. Louis, MO; Phone 314-423-8111, and upon being appraised of the aforementioned photographs, revealed that his firm did in fact, do electronic imaging on photographs. When questioned as to whether he would analyze said photographs to locate any possible discrepancies, Toohey advised his firm would first have to get clearance from their Legal Department prior to completing that type of request.

8. An interview conducted with one, Jerry Taylor, Assistant Chief Photographer, and one, George Maravich, Chief Photographer, ADSTAT Photo Group, #10 South Broadway, St. Louis, MO, revealed, subsequent to their examination of said photographs, that said photos did contain numerous inconsistencies that would generally give the appearance that said photos had possibly been altered. Maravich stated he was aware that "electronic imaging" was in use in altering, to various degrees, photos to represent person(s) and/or objects not originally in the photo.

9. An interview conducted with one, Cynthia Cygan, Laboratory Manager, Photo Touch Up Specialist, Silver Image Group, 4248 Forest Park, St. Louis, Missouri, revealed that the only Midwest company providing electronic imaging for photographs is one, Crosfield Design Systems, Minneapolis, Minnesota, (See Attachment C-1, C-2, and C-3, of this report for imaging particulars).

10. Located and conducted subsequent interview with the following Forensic Photographer—Legal Consultant: Mr. Fabian Sickels, Sickels Legal Photography, Inc., #70 West Sherwood Drive, St. Louis, MO 63114, Bus. Phone: 314-426-2400. Qualifications: Qualified Forensic Expert in photography analysis Federal Court and State Court. Professional Laboratory Owner-Operator since 1945. Prior Combat Photographer, U.S. Marines, WWII. Qualified in all levels Court—Civil Cases—Photo Analysis. Photo analysis completed by Sickels for various Law Enforcement Agencies. Photo Analysis completed in Sickel's Laboratory in presence of Custody Officer/Investigator to maintain correct custody chain.

Mr. Fabian Sickels, upon examining said photos related the following expert opinions:

a. Said photos are of 2nd to 3rd generation copies.

b. Sickels related he could not definitely state said photos had been altered, but due to the various inconsistencies apparent in the photos under magnification, said photographs certainly deserved a more thorough examination which could be completed by him and staff members with the original negatives and 1st generation prints of the indicated photos.

c. Quote: Fabian Sickels, "Photos generate enough suspicion to warrant competent examination of the original negatives and this first generation photo prints."

d. Sickel advised that his laboratory, if afforded the opportunity by the investigating officials, (D.I.A.) (JCRC), while in their presence or at a professional photo laboratory of their choice, also in their presence, through the expert examination of said photo's original negatives and 1st generation prints, could conclude whether said photos are true or not true, altered or not altered.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you, please? They are saying that this photograph of Bill Gadoury is a fake, is that what you are saying to us?

Mr. GAYDEN. In varying degrees from "fake" to "it needs to be studied." They would not accept it on its face. So it is in varying degrees.

The CHAIRMAN. The experts will not accept this on its face?

Mr. GAYDEN. Well, I can quote someone for example—

The CHAIRMAN. So now they are going to introduce this person, correct?

Mr. GAYDEN. Do you want to hear some of the quotes?

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Mr. GAYDEN. One of them says, this is the chief photographer for the St. Louis Police Department, in his opinion that "the said photographs have been retouched in order to add the area in the photos."

Mr. Block, another one, through the use of a magnifying device, says, "White male subjects in all photos do not have consistent shadowing with the other persons in same photos; the foliage on examination did not match in the background sections of several photographs; (c) all of the pose of Master Sergeant Eddie Smith in the pictures (1) and (2) is very similar; photo number 1 shows a cut jagged shoulders on Smith, as opposed to photo number 2, where Smith's shoulders are rounded; (d) facial lighting on representative in Napoleon photo number 5 is not consistent with the other two males; (e) Block related in his opinion that photos are drop-ins and photos have been altered to give an untrue impression.

I might add that they refused to give the Borahs the original negatives or a first-generation copy for this hearing.

The CHAIRMAN. Is Bill Gadoury here?

VOICE. He flew back.

Mr. GAYDEN. There are others in varying degrees.

The CHAIRMAN. Were any of you present when these photographs were taken?

VOICE. No, sir.

Mr. GAYDEN. I would also like to make the letter of Major Gittins an exhibit, too.

The CHAIRMAN. Absolutely. All of this will be placed into the record.

Mr. GAYDEN. In closing, we have a lot of evidence; this is not all we have. For example, the hair samples of Albro Lundy. We can afford—we believe 90 percent of this is wrong; if I am wrong with the Borah picture. I am a judge; I was born with an eraser on my pencil, and I will admit it.

PREPARED STATEMENT OF HAMILTON GAYDEN

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Vice Chairman, Members of the Select Committee: My name is Hamilton Gayden and I thank you for this opportunity to discuss our present ability to investigate the existence of live Americans in Southeast Asia. By way of background, I am a State of Tennessee Circuit Court Judge and an author of a novel, a story of an American P.O.W. However, I appear before you as an individual American, not as Judge nor as an author.

I also introduce to you in absentia an American-Laotian by the name of Kham-bang Sibounheuang. A year and a half ago, Khambang and I formed a pact; we agreed to merge in an effort to gather evidence of American POW's and, if the situation presented, to help in an escape attempt. Khambang is presently in Southeast Asia.

Our original motives were somewhat different although in time our interests have become more similar. My desire was to help liberate live Americans from bondage; Khambang's main interest was to draw attention to the oppressed Laotian people who are being subjected to endless deprivation of human rights and liberties—the POW issue might draw attention to the conditions in Laos and Vietnam today.

At this point, Khambang and I have accumulated considerable evidence: photographs, finger, thumb and hand prints; human hair including "root hair"; signatures, written messages, live witnesses; some of the evidence has been discarded by us as false, other evidence will require scientific testing, i.e., DNA hair analysis and comparison; thumb and finger print comparison and interviews of live witnesses; and we may even be able to provide a live video of American P.O.W.s. We have already delivered considerable evidence to the Foreign Relations Committee, although we admittedly have no clue as to whether that evidence is secure. We believe our evidence to be 90 percent accurate. We also believe we will be able to prove beyond a reasonable doubt the identity of a handful of American POW's, and by a preponderance of the evidence of many other American and allied P.O.W.s. We offer an educated guess that there are as many as 300 to 400 American and allied POW's scattered in small or large groups of camps and guarded villages throughout Laos, Vietnam and possibly southern China.

Our evidence comes from many sources including Khambang's Laotian contacts in Laos and Thailand, military and civilian. (Khambang is the 13th ranked member of the International Free Laotian congress, was a company commander in the Royal Lao Army and is a veteran of the secret war in Laos, 1960-1975.) We also are in contact with an Interpol agent, one ex-CIA Special Forces person who obtained evidence for the United States on POW's in Asia, and a DIA informant, among others.

To address the question of what "our capabilities" are we must draw a distinct line between "Our" meaning Khambang, myself, other private individuals and friends who have had no encouragement or help from the U.S. government. In fact, we believe we are justified in adopting the approach that the U.S. Government is our number one enemy.

In order to understand our government's directive to those agencies charged with MIA/POW affairs, we must come to grips with the ominous realization that the ever-present threat that the Vietnamese and Laotian leaders will disclose to the American people the existence of live Americans who still want to be repatriated is the focal point and driving force for the administration's Southeast Asia foreign policy, and it is this silent yet politically explosive blackmail that dictates the purpose and policy of the government agencies charged with MIA/POW affairs.

The directive from the top is simple: "There are no POW's!" And this is a direct quote from the President, the National Security Adviser and the Secretary of Defense.

The sole quest for accountability is condensed down to delivery of "remains only." This statement paraphrases a Laotian Ambassador who stated to an American businessman that the Laotian government has privately continued to attempt to negotiate for the release of Americans. The program for the agencies is to deceive, discredit, deny, debunk and most importantly, interdict—no live POW's: the goal is for the Vietnamese and Laotians to carry out the final act; dead men don't talk.

Looking at the big picture, the realities are that we are on the threshold of being asked to accept a Southeast Asia Foreign policy where we promote democracy with money and men and women in Cambodia and concomitantly refuel Communism just across the borders in Laos and Vietnam. This inconsistent policy will assuredly lead to needless bloodshed for American men and women and our allies stationed in Cambodia.

In our endeavor to obtain evidence we have had to box from many angles as we have many enemies who do not want the facts to emerge—that there are live Americans still being held against their will.

The duplicity of our own government is unchecked. Why? Because the American people want to believe our leaders. A prime example is the simple pronouncement by the Defense Department that the three men in the recent photograph are Russians. The average person on the street believed it. Yet it is an incredible lie.

Even Khambang and I, for a short period of time, opted to cooperate with the Defense Department in giving them raw intelligence. The result was that the Defense Department passed the information, against our requests, to the Communists. We also have been told of the Defense Departments' destruction or loss of official finger print files, "red flagging" of recent confirmed live-sighting reports, and "red flagging of live files" all in the past weeks.

The Defense Departments' excursions into Laos in search of Donald Eugene Carr is a floor show to deceive—to have the American people think the Defense Department is working on the problem. The way to get Donald Carr and the 30 men he is with out is to give the Laotians an ultimatum or negotiate. And we know, don't we, that the Laotians allegedly found Daniel Borah, the "mountain man", immediately from one photograph passed to the Communists by the same defense department. The Communist have the Carr photo. Why don't they just go get him!

We also know that there is a plan in place to "end-run" this Committee to begin immediate talks with Vietnam. At the time of this writing I am told by an informant that the President himself will unilaterally announce the beginning of talks. The two reasons advanced to justify "immediate talks" is that we are wasting an opportunity to develop oil reserves and because the Laotian and Vietnamese Communists are cooperating on the MIA/POW issue. Simultaneously, we are told in November, Americans being held in Southeast Asia will be removed to an area west of Dien Bien Phu where they will be held pending the progress and outcome of talks to normalize relations, and the Final Solution is tentatively set for January to February of next year. We are told our government is fully aware of this plan, and one of the essentials of this plan has already taken place—the delay of any inquiry by this Committee.

In closing, I am going to quote the Vietnamese Ambassador to United Nations, Ambassador Nguyen Can, who said to a group of us who met with him in the fall of 1989 at the Vietnamese Mission in New York, to paraphrase: We will never be able to account for Americans because your government won't let us.

Senator SMITH. Was any recording made on anything other than just a photograph?

VOICE. He was fingerprinted.

Senator SMITH. Do we have Borah fingerprints, Dan Borah's fingerprints?

The CHAIRMAN. Was video taken or was it only stills?

VOICE. Still photography.

Senator SMITH. Do we have Dan Borah's actual fingerprints?

Mr. GAYDEN. Senator Smith, the answer to that is after 6 months, they showed up. But the Borah family does not fully accept those as being true fingerprints of Dan Borah.

Senator McCain. So it is your allegation that the U.S. Government has tampered with the photograph in order to make these two people look alike. Because these photographs look incredibly alike.

Mr. GAYDEN. I am relying on experts, Senator McCain. I am admittedly not a photograph expert.

Senator McCain. Well, an expert identified this first picture, a forensic expert, as being Mr. Borah.

Mr. GAYDEN. Which brings me to this question. We also have the picture of Larry Stevens which came out of the Denver Post.

Senator McCain. Focusing on Mr. Borah right now, OK?

Mr. GAYDEN. It seems to me an independent expert, with a $1 million budget that this Committee has, an independent expert could be hired by you guys to find out the truth. Because they are going to say one thing, and probably we are going to say another.

The CHAIRMAN. Wait a minute. The Borah family is about to meet this person, correct?

Mr. GAYDEN. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you going to say that that will not settle it?

Mr. GAYDEN. Absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not think that will settle it?

Mr. GAYDEN. If the Borah sons come back and say, no—no, I take that back. If they say that it is not Dan Borah, there are several other possibilities. For example, they have got the report of the names; they are totally wrong. The names they use for the wife and the children are absolutely wrong. The place where the picture was taken is not correct either. And so they either do not know—graph, they videotape it, they bring this back to us in the most complete manner possible so that this issue does not gain a life of its own. Is that possible? Can we somehow wire them over there and make sure that happens?

Because certainly to my non-expert eye, but being in politics, we look at a lot of photos. These look like the same human being to me, and I think it is very important, obviously, because that will, I think demonstrate; I do not know what more they can possibly do at that point in time. Would that begin to help satisfy you if the entire event were videotaped?

Mr. GAYDEN. I think it is going to be videotaped. Our people are taking videos over and cameras. They are going loaded, too. And that does not mean that that is the only piece of proof we have, a plethora of proof we will offer through the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

On the Stevens picture, one last word. The Stevens picture that came out this week, that Michael Charney says is Stevens, the Government is going to say obviously it is not Stevens. I would say why do you guys not get together and hire an expert? Let him tell you; let a third party tell you. That is the way we do it in our court, instead of us throwing stones at them and them throwing stones at us.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you mean by hire an expert?

Mr. GAYDEN. Let the Committee hire their own expert to take the Stevens photo and say, tell us—

The CHAIRMAN. On the Stevens photo, we are going to do analysis on these other photos, absolutely. But I want to wait and see what transpires on this Borah photo. But absolutely, on the Stevens photo, we will look at that as carefully as we can, and also on the other photos that, the Robertson, Lundy, Stevens photo, the joint photo.

Can I ask, could we hear the testimony from Al Lundy and company? Or Gladys, are you going to go first?

STATEMENT OF GLADYS STEVENS FLECKENSTEIN, MOTHER OF LT. COMDR. LARRY STEVENS

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. I do not think I need to even read what I have written because Judge Gayden did come out with a picture of my son. I have had that completely ID'd. We had it blown up. This is the blow-up.

The CHAIRMAN. Just for the record, so everybody knows who you are talking about.

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. This is my son, Lt. Comdr. Larry James Stevens at a young age. This is the picture that was brought out, that Judge Gayden brought out. He would be 49 years old next month. I believe it is my son. I have had it analyzed by Dr. Charney, who has analyzed it not only one time, but two times. We have also had another private source analyze it, by the name of Tom Wilson from Pittsburgh, and he has definitely ID'd it.

I also was waiting for the Government to analyze it, because when they found out Dr. Charney had done the analysis, it was sent to the DIA, and in return they sent it back to me as of September 16, saying that they would not accept an independent source, but that they would do their own analysis.

The CHAIRMAN. I am sorry, I did not mean to interrupt you, Gladys. I did mean to, but not rudely. But, Judge, you brought that out, is that correct?

Mr. GAYDEN. Well, "you" is a euphemism for the Lao contact. I am actually the American depot for the Lao. It was brought out by Laotian freedom fighters.

The CHAIRMAN. It was brought out by a Laotian. When was that brought out?

Mr. GAYDEN. Probably I would say in May, May 1991.

The CHAIRMAN. Of 1991.

Mr. GAYDEN. Yes. On the back of the photograph, I believe, is written September 1990; it was taken on Savoy Island.

The CHAIRMAN. And this Laotian who gave this to you, have you had prior contact with this person?

Mr. GAYDEN. He came to the U.S. in February, and I met him personally.

The CHAIRMAN. Who paid for his trip to the U.S.?

Mr. GAYDEN. He paid for it himself. His son lives here in South Carolina.

The CHAIRMAN. I beg your pardon?

Mr. GAYDEN. His son lives in South Carolina.

The CHAIRMAN. He brought that with him when he came?

Mr. GAYDEN. No, he did not. He sent it in May. He came here in February, and that came later.

The CHAIRMAN. Was there a full articulation of precisely what his route of acquisition was?

Mr. GAYDEN. Yes, he came from Vietnamese friendlies, who may be dead, by the way, as of 3 weeks ago; a Mrs. H-o-a, who was in the 5-page code that is also with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and a major and a Vietnamese general. These three individuals were responsible for bringing Albrow Lundy to the banks of the Mekong River, where they were interdicted 3 weeks ago.

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. I would like to finish my statement. As of September 16, I received the information from the Defense Department that they didn't accept the picture which had been analyzed by Dr. Charney, and that they would analyze it themselves. I waited up until now. I've called and called trying to get that analysis to me, which I did not get, and didn't know about until I arrived here yesterday morning and it was handed to me by Major Gittins.

My son from California had been on the phone to Dr. Carl Ford, and he wouldn't even speak to him about this issue, but did get to his aide. The aide said it would be in the mail, and I needed that information before I got here, so I was pretty upset about that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, they are going to come back next week to respond to a lot of the other things that have been set forth here. And so I can promise you that that will be on the agenda when they do come back.

Senator REID. Mr. Chairman, what information did she want?

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. I wanted the analysis done by the Defense Department on the picture of my son that you're looking at here. In the conclusions in the report that we did get from the DIA, I only read the first two lines. I think that says enough. But it says I cannot say whether or not the service record and purported images show the same man. The man in the two images do look somewhat alike.

At the end they say, finally, I am concerned about the technical foundation upon which Dr. Charney has made his identification. Again, I say I positively believe Dr. Charney. He has done two different analyses on it. He went public with it on live television in California, I saw it on channel 4, stating that he had the analysis and it was my son, Lt. Larry Stevens.

And that's about all I need.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you a question. How do you balance that kind of an analysis against—and I just ask you this personally—how you balance that kind of analysis against the fact that we know that some of these photos—in fact, four of them, it appears, are fraudulent. We have seen the actual photograph from the Soviet magazine. How do you deal with that?

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. I can deal with it very well. For one thing, this second picture that came out of my son, his father has been dead for quite a few years. My grandson took a look at this picture and he disappeared for a while and came out with a picture of Larry's father. And I was in shock at the complete, total likeness of his father, who would have been approximately the same age as Larry is today in that photo.

And that certainly was another convincer to me.

The CHAIRMAN. But does part of you sort of steel yourself for the potential that there are some hoaxers out there, and somebody might be taking advantage of you?

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. I am quite sure that there could be people out there working the situation, because we have heard of that. Yes. But in this instance I have—Dr. Gayden has brought this picture out. It was taken in 1990 in September. It has been totally analyzed by three different times.

The Government has not said yes or no in this report from them.

The CHAIRMAN. So, therefore, obviously, you—

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. I have to accept it. That is my son. Because it is. That is my son. I have been fighting for 22½ years to find that boy, because I've always felt that he was alive. Now here he is in this picture. And I have to say again, you mentioned the report of the three men in that picture. Well, we got conclusions from that too. I still state again before this Committee that that man in the three man picture on the right-hand side is my son taken at a much earlier date.

He is the image of his younger brother. I am positive that both of those men are the same. When you put the pictures up and really analyze them against that picture and the ones that I do have, you can see the resemblance.

But I do want to say that in conclusion of the three man picture, this comes from Sandia Laboratories, this is the Government's analysis on that three man photograph. And I have to read this to you. It says I—now, they sent me a 19-page letter trying to tell me that this picture was taken after World War II; they're Russians, in Russian uniforms. They have guns. But their conclusion, after all of that: "I cannot prove that this photograph is a hoax, but I believe there is substantial evidence that rifles are being held. It doesn't make sense that captive POW's would have their picture taken holding weapons. This, however, is conjecture on my part. I have found no evidence that this photograph has been tampered with.

"I also have found no evidence that it is tamper-free. I recommend a continued historical literature search to locate the original image."

Now, again, let me repeat, "I cannot prove that this photograph is a hoax." This is from the DIA, Department of Defense.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that, but they did find that the signed piece of it had been taken—

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. We've never paid any attention to that sign. The only thing we paid attention to are the three faces in that picture, and you will have their testimony as to their feeling about that.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, is it your—just so I understand these pictures correctly, the picture on the left is the one similar to the one right here in front of you. And that is the recent picture that you say that the Judge brought out?

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. And the other picture in the middle is the one that you say, that is the one I recognize from the three person picture?

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. Yes. That's the one—the one on the right-hand side of the picture. That is my younger son.

The CHAIRMAN. I beg your pardon?

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. This is my younger son on the right-hand side.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that. But the picture in the middle.

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. You are saying that the picture in the middle is the same person as the picture on the left?

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. Yes. I definitely think so. But I think it is at the time of aging in there. I think this picture was taken quite some time ago. But the three men have been seen, as Dr. Gayden has just said. And we know those faces are real. They are our men.

[The prepared statement of Mrs. Fleckenstein follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF GLADYS STEVENS FLECKENSTEIN

Members of the Senate Select Committee. My name is Gladys Stevens Fleckenstein. I am the mother of L/CDR Larry James Stevens. After taking off from the USS Coral Sea, Larry was shot down in a night action over the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos on February 14, 1969.

Eye witness reports from three U.S. fliers who saw the crash of Larry's plane state they picked up a 5 to 10 second beeper signal 2 or 3 minutes after Larry's plane impacted the ground. They are positive the signal came from Larry.

The official report from Larry's commanding officer on the incident stated that he felt the chances of Larry's survival were good. A navy man, John Hamill, Lemoore, California, who was aboard the Coral Sea on this same cruise told me that the ship's crew was told that Larry "punched out" immediately and was known to be alive on the ground. These and other data throughout the years only strengthen my belief, Larry is alive.

I have always felt in my heart that my son survived the crash. Now I have that proof. After 22½ years of searching, traveling to Paris, Geneva and Laos, flag raisings, speeches, and doing whatever I could do to keep the awareness about our LIVE POW's before the public. We have spent everything we have had over the years and now I have reached the end of my quest to find my son. We have found Larry Stevens. I have a picture brought out by a source of the Three POW's in my possession. The man on the right is my son. I have a new LIVE POW picture, of Larry wearing a blue shirt, brought out by Judge Hamilton Gayden's sources. This blue shirt POW photo has been positively identified by Dr. Charney of Colorado Springs, Colorado. Larry Stevens has been positively identified by a second forensic expert, Thomas Wilson, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. (Documentation of photo I.D. attached.)

My family and friends who have men in a "missing" status have long felt that the U.S. Government, and especially the DIA, are not aggressively pursuing the data and evidence that support our belief that live Americans remain captive in Southeast Asia today.

One single fact shows the most damning proof that DIA is not serious about finding live POW's. Using information that DIA had been sitting on for 6 months, the families contacted a source known to the DIA for those 6 months, talked with him by phone, flew to his home in California, and were given a copy of the Three POW Photo showing the three men, and which had the names of Colonel Robertson and L/CDR Stevens on the back. All of this was accomplished in well under 72 hours from the time news of the sighting report was first received by the families on November 8, 1990. Yet, in a letter dated December 10, 1990, a month later, Deputy Chief Trowbridge states DIA is still trying to interview this same source.

In support of my belief that DIA is remiss and not doing an adequate job on the POW/MIA issue, I offer the following:

1. DIA has over 1,400 first hand live-sighting reports which claim that live Americans are being held against their will. These 1,400 reports are classified and are denied to the families and to the American public (including Members of Congress).

Why should reports of incidents that occurred 20 to 25 years ago remain classified? Is it "national security" matter or is LIVE POW information being classified in order to cover up DIA's ineptitude?

Worse yet, these files denied to the families have been TURNED OVER TO HANOI.

2. The Tighe report specifically charges DIA to have a mind-set to debunk all live-sighting reports and states that evidence proving LIVE POW's exists, remains classified and is hidden from the families and from the several congressional committees which have oversight responsibility.

3. The 5-page letter submitted by then Chief of the POW/MIA section of DIA, Col. Millard A. Peck, makes the same charge.

4. The interim report as well as the final report by the "U.S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations Republican Staff" document in detail similar allegations.

5. DIA and the IAG (inter agency group) have launched a concerted and continuous attack to debunk the identification by family members of at least five military men whose reported photos have been made public lately. The names of L/CDR Larry Stevens, Col. John Robertson, Maj. Albro Lundy II, Lt. Daniel V. Borah Jr., and Maj. Donald G. Carr (all names appearing on official MIA lists) have surfaced along with photos and reports which claim these American military men are still alive. Instead of trying to deny these men are alive, the DIA should send out their teams to follow all available leads.

Our men shot down and captured are advancing in age. We need the WILL to find them NOW and bring them home AT ONCE. Advancing age, disease, confinement and possible torture are not conducive to their health and well-being. DIA's most urgent task is to send investigative teams to the prison sites and caves where indigenous people have stated that live Americans were observed being held against their will. I feel this may be our men's last hope to ever see their homeland again. It is up to you, the newly formed Senate Select Committee, to BRING THEM HOME NOW.

STRANGE HAPPENINGS THAT PUZZLE ME

1. The FBI claim they have no fingerprints for any of the men in the three POW photo. Yet, all three men have held high security clearances. It seems strange that the Los Angeles Hall of Records have a birth certificate of my two younger sons, but not one of my POW son, Larry Stevens. The same situation exists with hospital and DMV records. (See the Fingerprint Saga, attached.)

2. DIA sends us a tape and written material in a foreign language. When we request an English translation, DIA sanitizes all names and places in the returned English version, but leaves this data in the foreign copy.

3. Instead of helping the family members, DIA forces us to prove time and time again that our men are alive, while DIA classifies all the records we need.

DIA claims that the pictures of the 3 men is a hoax and yet they cannot prove it. I received a 19-page report from Sandia Laboratories and their conclusions which I would like to read to you.

"I cannot prove that this photograph is a hoax, but I believe there is substantive evidence that rifles are being held. It doesn't make sense that POW's would have their picture taken holding weapons. This however is conjecture on my part. I have found no evidence that this photograph has been tampered with. I also have found no evidence that it is tamper free. I recommend a continued historical literature search to locate the original image." Let me repeat part of the first line—"I cannot prove that this photo is a hoax."

Regarding the purported picture of L/CDR Steven's alone, Sandia Lab's state: "I cannot say whether or not the service record and purported images show the same man. The men in the two images do look somewhat alive. Sequence 1 on the video tape documents this. However, sequences 2 and 3 on the video tape show that an imposter can also be photographed to look somewhat like the service record and purported images. The increased width in the purported image compared to the service record images of the test subject as a youth and as an adult. Age and weight gain did not increase the width. Finally, I am concerned about the technical foundation upon which Dr. Charney has made his identification."

Dr. Charney has positively identified my son's picture two different times and I believe in his analysis one hundred percent.

I have fought the fight all these years when our government should have brought my son, and all LIVE POW's home and as full as possible accounting of those who perished. Last, they flew me out over the Ho Chi Minh Trail, Laos, and I left my heart and my son in that lonely and foreign land.

At the very best what is going on here is gross incompetence starting with Carl Ford and leading to President Bush.

At worst, there is an active government cover-up.

Gentlemen, if there are any real men left in the leadership of this country, I call on you now to stop this pathetic charade and bring my son, Larry Stevens, home.

Larry has managed to get his picture out. What more can he do?

The CHAIRMAN. Let me hear from the members of the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens—or let me hear from the Roberts and Lundy family here.

STATEMENT OF SHELBY ROBERTSON QUAST, ROBERTSON FAMILY MEMBER

Ms. QUAST. I'm Shelby Robertson Quast. I'm here speaking on behalf of Col. John Robertson. What we've chosen to do is share my testimony with my sister, Deborah Robertson Bardsley, because she just recently returned from Hanoi, and has some interesting things to share with you.

Tomorrow marks a year anniversary since I first got this photograph. And, in marking that anniversary, what I want to do is I want to set the record straight. There seems to be some confusion throughout the world. We continually hear that this photograph is a hoax. That it's a fake. That people believe that we found this photograph in a Soviet magazine.

The Washington Post ran a story yesterday that, once again, it was in a Soviet magazine. It was a Soviet baker. Let me quote Carl Ford. Let me quote Colonel Cole. Let me quote Bob Sheetz, Susan Strednanski, the Defense Department press person. That picture has never been found in a Soviet magazine.

I guess I'm asking for some help. We have said this so many times, yet I continue to hear it's been in a magazine. It's simply people don't want to hear that. And I would like to, for the record, set it straight. It has never been found to be a fake or a hoax, or ever found in a magazine.

The CHAIRMAN. The picture of the threesome together?

Ms. QUAST. Absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. You are absolutely accurate. That is correct. It has never been found in a Soviet magazine, and it has not yet been proven to be a hoax. And that is—

Ms. QUAST. Excuse me. If I could, I want to just ask one thing. Could you—I would prefer that you don't say it hasn't yet been found to be a hoax.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, what I am saying is that the DIA has found inconsistencies that they have cited.

Ms. QUAST. But what they have found and what they have reported to me—

The CHAIRMAN. I was simply using the words that Gladys used that she read from them. That is all.

Ms. QUAST. OK. Yeah. What's been reported to us is the fact that the sign has indeed possibly been altered or added. That's not something that we want to say has not happened.

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct. No judgment has been made to the Committee's understanding.

Senator REID. I thought—in fact, I think I met this young man in an elevator. He was carrying around a picture of his father. He is a lot older than he looks, too. But, anyway, after I saw him I read that this came out of a Soviet magazine. Where did this come from?

The CHAIRMAN. There were several photographs that came out in one package, so to speak, from the same source.

Ms. QUAST. I'm going to address that entire thing, actually. I'm going to address it in the testimony. If I could do that, I think I will answer your question, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Go right ahead.

Ms. QUAST. I would like to just continue to set the record straight, and it addresses that point. This photo came out from several sources. Not just one. The list includes foreign officials. It includes a monk. It includes a shaman, a general, a teacher. A towel merchant happens to be included in that list.

The photograph was first received in November, and that was through a Cambodian refugee. It was not in combination with the other four photographs. The second picture received from site two by an American was also not in connection with those other four photographs.

Admittedly, there might be somebody who got a hold of one of the copies of the photograph and is marketing it, but I want to be clear, this has come through several sources, and one of them was tied with the other four photographs. While I was in Cambodia I did see those four photographs. Only one of them had an altered date on it at that time. Something has been added since they came out to Thailand and back to the United States.

When we got this photograph in November and it was identified as being my father, what we did was we decided to work backward and based on the photograph to see what evidence existed that may show that my father is alive. And I just want to tick off quickly what that evidence is. My father, Colonel Robertson, was a Vessey discrepancy case, defined by Gen. Vessey yesterday as last known alive.

Two, a villager, a Vietnamese villager, stated he captured a bright-haired pilot in September 1966. Another man in the same province but from another village talked of capturing a dark-haired pilot. Only one plane went down in that province during the entire time of the war.

The villager who stated he captured a bright-haired pilot took the pilot to his home and, while waiting for officials, had a conversation in English with this pilot. My father's backseat pilot, Hugh Buchanan, who's dark-haired, said he never had a conversation in English when he was captured before the officials came to pick him up.

Senator REID. Say that again.

Ms. QUAST. There are two pilots in the plane. My father had blond hair. His backseat pilot, Hugh Buchanan, had dark hair. In one province there are two reports of two pilots being possibly captured, one with bright hair, one with dark hair. And what I'm saying is that a villager who allegedly captured the one with bright hair said—had a different story of capture than Hugh Buchanan, who came home a returned POW, experienced.

There is one other discrepancy between the two captures. And that is, Hugh Buchanan was captured by somebody he felt would be in his forties right now, while the man who captured the bright-haired pilot was apparently in his 70's.

Congressman Pete Peterson testified under oath before the House Committee that he was interrogated with my father's I.D. card and dog tags, both of which were in impeccable condition. There was an interrogation report in our file, and it describes the capture of a U.S.—

Senator REID. I am sorry. Congressman Peterson was?

Ms. QUAST. He was a POW.

Senator REID. But you say he was interrogated. And what about the dog tags?

Ms. QUAST. He was interrogated with my father's dog tag and I.D. cards. He was pulled out and he was individually pulled out and asked how he knew Colonel Robertson. And he was shown my father's I.D. tag and dog tags. At that time, he said they were in impeccable condition and he could only assume that the body or person of my father was also in the same impeccable condition. He never did see my father, though.

Hugh Buchanan never stated Robertson went down with his plane. He stated he did not know what happened. My father's commanding officer felt that Colonel Robertson could have survived the crash and been taken prisoner. Successful experience ejecting from a burning aircraft was something that my father had before. In Germany he did the same thing and was commended for that.

He was a category two. His supposed remains that were returned were actually found to be an animal bone and a rock. The remains of Colonel Robertson have never been returned to the United States or identified in Southeast Asia.

In August 1990, DIA received a live-sighting report on my father. In October 1990, they received a photograph with my father's name on the back, as well as Lt. Cdr. Stevens, as well as fingerprints. The photograph was positively identified by the family.

I traveled to Cambodia with that and spoke with the man who said that he had been a guard at my father's prison and had allegedly spoken with my father. DIA received over eight live-sighting reports stating that my father was seen somewhere in—throughout Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam.

And my sister also traveled to Hanoi and spoke with the person that felt the person he captured could have been my father.

This is all proof that goes to substantiate why he could be alive. The only thing that could possibly substantiate his death is a villager report that said he disintegrated in the aircraft. Yet, my father's file is one of the Vessey 57 discrepancy cases where fate has been determined. There's a lot of evidence to suggest my father could still be alive, but they still closed the case.

I want this case to be returned back to an active discrepancy case, or I'd prefer that the Committee take a look at the file and see if there is indeed evidence to have found fate determined in that case.

The reason that this concerns me as much as it does is the emphasis on the road map—that the road map places on resolving discrepancy cases. It states that the Vietnamese need to cooperate fully to resolve the discrepancy cases, provide witnesses to resolve these cases. However, what I was hearing the last 2 days from various people testifying is if we ever receive a live American from Vietnam we will never normalize.

I'm just asking what the message is we're sending, because I'm confused. It sounds like we're saying, if you ever return a live American we'll never normalize with you. But if you want to normalize, we have to resolve the discrepancy cases. And I'm just hoping the Committee can clarify that for me.

The third part I just want to touch upon is quickly to address the access to information. I have been promised at a very high policy level access to my father's file, but denied access by those people that have testified before this Committee when I went to see the file. I'm asking what is the policy and who actually runs the show for the POW policy.

We've been told that families have access to all information in the files. In our case, that's simply not true. There is another photograph that's not the same. We saw that at the Defense Intelligence Agency, and we simply have not been able to see the report that that photograph came in with. There is an October 18 report that was sent to the Stevens family about Robertson, yet we've not received it.

There's also another—the analyses of the photo we have not received. The reason I'm bringing that up is our casualty officer went into the Defense Intelligence Agency this morning, compared notes, and gave us a report from 1988, but those three are still missing. What I'm saying is I don't believe the family is indeed getting all the information.

The last point I just want to touch upon is I've spoken to people in the DIA POW office. This person is in a position to know. I feel that what they told me was when Mike Peck was in office—I just want to state this for the record—that there was more excitement and more interest toward the live POW issue during Colonel Peck's tour than at any other time, either prior or after his tour.

Mike Peck stepped outside of Pentagon policy when he let me talk to a source and actually get this photograph. And he did something that was extremely decent. When he walked out of the Pentagon with me that day he knew he had just kissed his career goodbye. I just want to say I hope that we can look at the policy that enables people to keep this secrecy and not let that happen again.

PREPARED STATEMENT OF SHELBY ROBERTSON QUAST

I am the daughter of Col. John Leighton Robertson, POW. I will testify on behalf of the Robertson family. I want to state for the record that the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photo has never been found to be a fake or a hoax. It has never been found in a Soviet magazine.

I will present compelling evidence that Col. John Leighton Robertson could still be alive and in captivity. My father is currently included in the 57 Vessey Discrepancy cases where fate has been determined. There was no basis for this decision. My father's case should be taken out of this category and put back into the active discrepancy cases. I have requested that this be done numerous times and I am hoping that the Select Committee will feel compelled to help me.

I would also like to discuss the emphasis the State Department's places on resolving the discrepancy cases in the road map for normalization with Vietnam. It appears that the Vietnamese may be pressured into resolving these cases even when there is not credible evidence to do so. My father's case is a strong example of this.

There seems to be a great deal of confusion surrounding who actually runs the show regarding the POW issue. It seems that DIA's special office for POW's can override decisions and policies made at a much higher level. DIA's special office for POW's has not provided the Air Force casualty officers or the family with all the reports they have received despite repeated requests, and they continued to deny access to analyses that have of the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photo.

Why is policy still in place that enables the POW issue to be surrounded in a shroud of secrecy?

There are a lot of questions surrounding the POW issue and I am asking that you help us get to the truth. It may be difficult to navigate around the policies and economic pressures to normalize but it is our responsibility to get to the truth regarding our POW's, mine as a daughter and yours as Members of the Select Committee on POW/MIA affairs. My father deserves at least that much.

There is compelling evidence that Col. John Leighton Robertson could still be alive and in captivity from the Vietnam war.

Vietnamese villager stated that in September 1966 he captured a pilot with "bright hair" while a man from another village within the district talked of capturing a pilot with dark hair. Colonel Robertson had blond hair while his back seat pilot had dark hair. The villager felt he recognized a photo of John Leighton Robertson as the "bright haired" pilot he captured September 16, 1966. (Documented on October 1991 trip to Hanoi. Film footage available upon request from Deborah Robertson Bardsley.)

Villager stated that after capture of "bright haired" pilot, he walked him to his home; while waiting for officials a college student came and had a conversation in English with the "bright haired" pilot. Hugh Buchanan did not speak to anybody who spoke English while waiting for officials.

Could it be that two pilots were indeed captured September 16, 1966 and that the student that spoke with the bright haired pilot was one of the students from the Super phosphate plant sighted in the attached CIA document. The pilots taken to this plant were reportedly handed over to the Soviets and Chinese. Is it possible that Colonel Robertson went into a separate prison system from the initial point of capture—and that records may have been altered from the beginning.

The villager who captured the dark haired pilot is now in his forties, Hugh Buchanan stated that the villager who captured him in 1966 was in his twenties. The villager who captured the "bright haired" pilot is now in his seventies.

Vietnamese official stated he knew of the villager that captured Colonel Robertson.

Interrogation report No. 503-68 included in Colonel Robertson's file, provides information concerning the observation and description of a U.S. pilot downed over BAC Giang Province, NVN. The description of a blond haired pilot in his forties could match that of Colonel Robertson, but not Hugh Buchanan. Hugh Buchanan was 21 and Colonel Robertson was 36 in 1966.

According to district officials in Vietnam, only one plane crashed in this province during the entire period of the war. Two individual pilots appear to have been captured in this province September 16, 1966, not just one.

Congressman Pete Peterson, former POW, testified July 31, 1991 under oath before the House Subcommittee on POW's that he was interrogated with an ID card and dog tags, both in impeccable condition, belonging to Colonel Robertson.

How did the Vietnamese get the ID card and dog tags of Colonel Robertson? If Colonel Robertson went down with a fiery aircraft, how did his ID card and dog tags survive the crash without damage? How did the Vietnamese know that Colonel Robertson knew Pete Peterson. They were not in the same squadron, but know each other prior to Vietnam. Is it because Colonel Robertson questioned his captors about the fate of Pete Peterson who had been shot down 6 days earlier?

Lt. Hugh Buchanan never saw Colonel Robertson after Lieutenant Buchanan ejected. Hugh Buchanan never stated that Colonel Robertson went down with the plane. Hugh Buchanan is available for comment.

Colonel Robertson's commanding officer felt that Colonel Robertson could have certainly survived the crash and been taken prisoner. He extended his MIA status beyond the 12 month reevaluation period.

Colonel Robertson had experience successfully ejecting as a pilot is less than ideal circumstances. In 1956, while stationed in Sembach Germany, his plane blew up in the landing pattern. He safely ejected from his aircraft at less than 300 feet above the ground, he was awarded caterpillar wings for a successful forced ejection below 300 feet. Colonel Robertson was continuously evaluated as being level headed, even when under extreme pressure.

Colonel Robertson was classified in category 2—a status reserved for men about whom the U.S. government had suspicion that the enemy had further knowledge.

Colonel Robertson was listed as one of the 119 Vessey discrepancy cases. A U.S. team traveled to Vietnam to "resolve" the discrepancy case.

March 1990 JCRC investigation of case 0459 (John Robertson). Team spoke with villagers that had several contradictory stories. The team chief stated that the villagers were nervous and hesitant to provide any information regarding this case. The U.S. Hanoi office recently stated that they suspected the villagers had been coached as to what to say. Not one of the villagers saw a dead body, yet "alleged" remains were turned over to the U.S.

April 1990, the Vietnamese returned the above mentioned "alleged remains of Col. John Leighton Robertson. Upon investigation of Box 2 with the name John L. Robertson attached, received during the April 10, 1990 repatriation, CILHI found the skeletal material consisted of three bone fragments, all of them from a large mammal the size of a horse or cow. In addition there was a piece of non-bone material, possibly a rock. No remains were received in this repatriation that can be identified as Robertson. No remains identified as John Leighton Robertson have ever been returned to the U.S. or identified in Vietnam.

Vessey discrepancy case of Colonel Robertson became one of the 57 Vessey discrepancy cases where fate had been determined, this determination was agreed on by the Interagency Committee. Vietnam states at every opportunity that this case has been resolved. Resolution of the Vessey Discrepancy cases is an integral part of the State Department's roadmap for normalization with Vietnam. Vietnam may be under pressure to resolve discrepancy cases even when they do not have any evidence to accurately or truthfully do so, the Interagency Group, DIA and JCRC did not question this flagrant lack of evidence, but agreed with the inaccurate analysis. Why? Is it possible that the groundless analysis used to "resolve" the case of Colonel Robertson was a calculated effort to further the normalization effort?

August 1990 DIA received live-sighting report of Col. John Robertson and LCR. Larry Stevens.

October 1990. DIA received faxed copy of photo and another live-sighting report of Colonel Robertson and LCR. Stevens. The photo had the names of these two individuals written on the back. This photograph was accompanied by finger and palm prints allegedly of Col. John Robertson. However, the finger prints of John Robertson, Albro Lundy and Larry Stevens are missing from ALL U.S. government files. No comparison can be made to the finger prints received. Where are the finger prints? Why were they removed from the files of each of the men pictured in the photograph?

Shelby Robertson Quast traveled to Cambodia and spoke with a man who claimed to have been a guard at a Vietnamese prison camp where Colonel Robertson was held. He claimed to have spoken directly with Colonel Robertson and identified him as the man on left of the photo.

DIA has received over seven live-sighting reports of Colonel Robertson, of which I am aware. DIA had knowledge of the person who allegedly took the photo and where the photo was taken. Copies of these reports are available on request. The location of the place of captivity was independently reported to us by a retired NSA crypto linguist, prior to receipt of the first hand report that DIA has in its possession (DIA denied to Shelby Quast ever having this information). This report available upon request.

The above evidence as to why Col. John Leighton Robertson could still be alive and in captivity is very compelling; yet Colonel Robertson is still listed as one of the 57 discrepancy cases where fate has been determined. The only evidence to support this finding of fate is the contradictory statements of Vietnamese villagers.

Shelby Robertson Quast has requested numerous times that the analysis used to determine the fate of Colonel Robertson be reviewed. The case of Colonel Robertson should be returned to its original discrepancy status; there is absolutely no evidence to support the analysis that led to the determination of fate; while, to the contrary, there is information to support the fact that he may be alive.

STATE DEPARTMENT'S ROAD MAP FOR NORMALIZATION

Phase I of the State Department's road map for Normalization with Vietnam.

After the signing of the Paris Agreement for a Cambodian political settlement Vietnam must:

- cooperate fully to resolve quickly the remaining unresolved "last known alive" discrepancy cases through unilateral efforts, to include providing the necessary witnesses and historical records to facilitate joint investigations.

The signing of the Paris Agreement took place October 23, 1991.

It appears that the State Department and the Administration are pressuring Vietnam to resolve the remaining unresolved discrepancy cases; to provide witnesses and historical information that will effectively close the case. No where in the road map is there a demand for live Americans.

Criteria to be a Vessey 1 & 2 discrepancy case: high knowledge ability of Communist governments, included are the last known alive on the ground cases.

This appears to be exactly what took place with the case of Col. Robertson. He last listed as one of the 119 Vessey discrepancy cases, the Vietnamese provided the "necessary" witnesses to resolve the case. The contradictory statements of these witnesses was accepted to quickly resolve the discrepancy case. Thus complying with the State Departments criteria for normalization. While the evidence that compels one to believe that Col. Robertson could be alive was not even followed up.

Why did the Inter Agency Committee, made up of the State Department, the Department of Defense, National Security Council and National League of Families that fate had been determined when no credible information had been presented.

The Vietnamese have officially stated on numerous occasions that they would like the names of the individuals providing information of live American POW's so they can be punished. Why does the U.S. government provide raw data of live sightings and complete with names and locations to the Vietnamese government, when the families can't see this information. Why doesn't DIA attempt to speak with these individuals instead of giving the names to the Vietnamese so they can be punished?

WHO IS RUNNING THE SHOW

Shelby Robertson Quast requested to debrief her trip to Cambodia with the person she traveled with to DIA's special office for POW's. She was refused because policy did not allow family members to debrief with nonfamily members. It was prohibited by policy. DIA refused to review the policy despite numerous requests by the family and the Air Force.

Shelby Robertson Quast requested to see the 22 pages of information regarding the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photo referred to in DIA's 7 page analysis. Carl Ford assured access to this information to both Albro Lundy and Shelby Quast. When Shelby Quast attempted to see this information she was denied access by DIA. How is it that DIA's special office for POW Affairs can override a decision made by Carl Ford.

Shelby Quast submitted a list of questions regarding the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photo to Carl Ford's office July 21, 1991. She was informed on July 22, 1991 that the questions had been answered by Carl Ford's office; but they had been sent down to the DIA special office for POW Affairs. Shelby Quast has never received a response to these questions despite numerous requests. Why does the DIA special office for POW Affairs approve questions answered by acting Assistance Secretary of Defense? Who is running the show?

Shelby Robertson Quast requested through the FOIA to see all versions of the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photograph. At a meeting with Bob Sheetz and Chuck Trowbridge of the DIA special office for POW's, she was informed that there was only one version of the photograph. Yet when Chuck Trowbridge showed Albro Lundy and Shelby Quast copies of the photo, there were clearly two separate versions of the photo. One, the highly publicized version, and the other showing a great deal more of the bodies of the men in the photo. How many other pictures of these three men exist. When Shelby Quast contacted the Air Force Case officer regarding the other photo, she was informed that the AF had never received that information from DIA's special office for POW's. Is DIA's special office for POW Affairs picking and choosing what information they share with the military and the family?

Shelby Quast requested to see the original of the above mentioned photo. She scheduled an appointment with Chuck Trowbridge to see the original photo along with the source of information and report. She confirmed her appointment with DIA; yet when she arrived at DIA the photo had allegedly been sent to the lab and Mr. Trowbridge did not have the accompanying report handy. Shelby Quast has called DIA several times since to see the original photo; she has been told each time that it is not available.

Shelby Robertson Quast had requested to see her father's file. She was told that policy prohibited access to the file and was referred to Carl Ford. Carl Ford stated that she could have access to Col. Robertson's file; however when she made the appointment, confirmed her intentions with Carl Ford's office and Col. Jordan's office, she was denied access to Col. Robertson's file by Chuck Trowbridge of DIA's special office for POW Affairs. Shelby Quast was simply informed that Carl Ford misspoke. Who actually sets the policy, why can Chuck Trowbridge override a change in policy made by Carl Ford. Who is accountable?

The family of Col. Robertson has been continually told that they have all the information in the file. However, it is a fact that they do not. The fact that another photo exists along with an accompanying source report that neither the family nor the Air Force has is proof that there is information in Col. Robertson's DIA file about which the family has not been informed. Why is POLICY being used to enable DIA to keep information from the Robertson family and the Air Force regarding Col. Robertson?

Why does the DIA give the families and the Air Force sanitized live-sighting reports, when the forward raw data including source names and locations to Vietnam?

At a meeting with Bob Sheetz and Chuck Trowbridge, Shelby Quast and Albro Lundy were informed that DIA did not have any information regarding the person who purportedly took the photograph; yet Shelby Quast has a live-sighting report that states otherwise. Why was this information denied?

Despite numerous requests, Shelby Quast has never received any information regarding alleged follow up of any of the 22 live-sighting reports mentioned in the DIA 7 page analysis. No one in the U.S. Hanoi office has been tasked to follow up on any of the live-sighting reports on Robertson, Lundy or Stevens. They have not even seen these reports. Is anyone at DIA or DOD actively following up on any of the live sightings? If so, why is the family being denied the information?

Despite numerous requests in person, in writing and through FOIA, Shelby Robertson Quast has never received any of the analyses or photo overlays of the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photograph that DIA mentioned in its 7 page analysis. Why is the family denied access to the photo analyses?

Why is the U.S. government allowed to stand behind a policy that enables them to deny access to information regarding POW's; when the war has been over for 18 years.

Why can Chuck Trowbridge override a policy decision made by Carl Ford? Who is accountable? When Shelby Quast questioned how Carl Ford could assure her access to her father's file on one day and the next day she could be denied access, she was simply informed that Carl Ford misspoke.

Senator SMITH. I just want to interrupt for one quick question, Shelby.

Did you get any official explanation on the Pho To photo? Did you get any official explanation as to what that means?

Ms. QUAST. No, I've never seen anything official.

Senator SMITH. Are you aware that there is?

Ms. QUAST. Well, not from the Defense Intelligence Agency.

Senator SMITH. Did you, from the Defense Intelligence Agency?

Ms. QUAST. No, we received one from a retired intelligence—

Senator SMITH. What did you get on that?

Ms. QUAST. He was able to decipher it as being a particular location.

Senator SMITH. Just for the record it is. There is a village in Hanoi on the road from Son Tay to Vinh Yen called Pho To. I have not even—and I just want to say for the record that I have had a number of discussions with Government officials on that point on that photo. I was not told that but I did find it out on my own by simply looking at a map, which I should have done in the first place. But again, it is interesting how you have to elicit information.

I just wanted to ask one other question and we will get right back to you.

Just for the record here, when did you and how did you find out about this photograph?

Ms. QUAST. I first found out that there was a live-sighting report from the Stevens family, because my father was mentioned in a report sent to them. And I called DIA and went in the next morning. This was November 8 I found out; went in the morning of November 9. And while we were there they said, well, we've received a faxed copy of a photograph that is allegedly your father and Lt. Comdr. Larry Stevens. The names were written on the back.

The next morning I went in and asked to please speak with that source. I had found out from an analyst, Warren Gray, that the source, the Cambodian source in California, had been trying to give them the photo. He did not want to send it through the mail, but felt there was an extremely tight time constraint and had asked DIA to please come and get it or bring him out. Whatever they wanted to do, he wanted to pass this information on and get in touch with the families.

At that point Colonel Peck let me talk to the source, and I flew to California myself and picked up the photograph.

Senator SMITH. Were you told that the photo had been in the agency for a while?

Ms. QUAST. I've heard a lot of different things. I've heard that, yes, they've seen it since last July; then I heard no, it was only faxed in. I'm not exactly certain when they first saw the photograph.

Senator SMITH. I apologize for interrupting, please go ahead.

Senator REID. Mr. Chairman, one thing I do not understand is where Mrs. Quast, where you live?

Ms. QUAST. I live in Vienna, VA.

Senator REID. So you live in Vienna. And Mrs. Fleckenstein, where do you live?

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. I live in Big Bear Lake, CA.

I would like to add, if I may, just one little thing here on what she said about getting this information through Colonel Peck. All of what she was talking about, all of this was accomplished in well under 72 hours from the time news of the sighting report was first received by the families on November 8.

Yet, in a later letter dated November 10, 1990, 1 month later, deputy chief Trowbridge states DIA is still trying to interview the same source, and that source told Shelby that he had been trying to get hold of the family for 6 months and hadn't been able to—or allowed to.

STATEMENT OF DEBORAH ROBERTSON BARDSLEY, ROBERTSON FAMILY MEMBER

Ms. BARDSLEY. I'll just take a moment. I am disappointed that some of the Senators are missing. I recently returned from Hanoi, just 14 days ago, and it was actually due to a suggestion on the part of Senator Kerry. He called me when he returned from his trip and said that he thought it would be very enlightening for me to go over there myself. When I received an offer from Scottish Television that they were making a documentary on the POW issue and would like to extend an invitation to me to go to Hanoi and just document what it was that I could find out over there, I was very happy to take them up on that invitation.

I found out several things I never realized. That I was the first family member to actually, in Bangkok, go to site 2, which is a refugee site of about 192,000 refugees, where a lot of the live-sighting reports on POW's come from. I was the first family member, I understand, to visit Stony Beach and JCRC in Bangkok at the American Embassy. I understand that I was the first family member to go to the American Hanoi Office. I was the first family member to go to Son Tay Prison. I was the first family member to meet with Mr. Dich, the head of the Vietnamese MIA office, Mr. La Bong, the deputy director of the Department of Americas, Mr. Le Mai, the vice minister of the Department of Americas, Mr. Nguyen Co Thach and Mr. Kiet, the Prime Minister.

There are a lot of things I would like to talk about, however, Senator Kerry's aide told me that if I would like to talk about my trip I'd have to fit it into the 5 minutes allotted to my family to speak on my father's case, so I will just make myself available for any questions. However—

Senator SMITH. Any information you have you may provide for the record, and you may take a little more time if you wish.

Ms. BARDSLEY. Thank you very much.

A couple of things. As I think everybody has heard discussed here in the past few days, family members do not have access to source names or locations on sighting reports. When I was meeting with some of the Vietnamese officials they said to me, next time you come to Vietnam, why don't you bring us the names of the people who have told you these terrible things about these hoaxes. They provided me with a newspaper article from the Washington Post in case I didn't know that our picture was a hoax. They said next time you come you bring the sources that have told you these terrible things and we will punish them.

As a matter of fact it was interesting, and reminded me that on July 26 the Vietnamese released a press release that said—it was regarding the Robertson-Lundy-Stevens picture. They felt—really, I guess, in shorthand that the picture was a fake and the guys were dead. That whoever had provided this photo deserves severe punishment.

Now, the day after this was put together, and actually the day that it was released, I understand that an American official was in Vietnam to speak to them about the picture, and Mr. Dich of the MIA office in Vietnam gave me some information that was given to him by this official.

I'll tell you I was really quite shocked and surprised to find that a Vietnamese official was giving me source names that were involved with the picture. I simply couldn't believe my eyes, frankly, especially, considering that he had just told me that they would punish these sources. And to find out that an American official had given classified information—after the past few days I've heard that is simply not policy for us to do that.

Senator SMITH. May I clarify? I want a clarification. The Vietnamese gave to you a list of sources that were provided them by American officials?

Ms. BARDSLEY. Yes.

Senator SMITH. Sources of collecting data?

Ms. BARDSLEY. Yes, names and locations, even, I see, of a government official in the Cambodian ministry who's involved in the Robertson-Lundy-Stevens picture.

Senator SMITH. So one of the sources listed was an official in the Cambodian ministry, and that source was provided to the Vietnamese?

Ms. BARDSLEY. Yes, it was.

Senator REID. How long were you in Vietnam?

Ms. BARDSLEY. I was in Vietnam for 5 days, and I feel like in my 5 days that I was in Vietnam I found out more about my father's case than I've learned from the Government in 25 years.

Senator SMITH. Would you submit for the record that list of sources? Would you be willing to do that, and who provided that list to you, or a copy thereof?

Ms. BARDSLEY. Yes, as I said, in fact I hope that what I'm saying is now being provided for the record. And I don't know, I tell you. I hesitate because if this is classified information I don't know that it is legal for me to turn it over to you now. I'm serious. I do have a copy here, and I can let you look at it, I guess. If an aide would like to take it up—

Senator SMITH. Oh, so it would not be classified.

Mr. LUNDY. This is classified information. This information is not provided to any of the family members—

Ms. BARDSLEY. Or Senators or Congressmen.

Mr. LUNDY. A high-ranking member of our State Department gave this list to the Vietnamese.

Ms. BARDSLEY. Also, along with this list, once again to my surprise, I do realize that some of the sighting reports in regards to the Robertson-Lundy-Stevens picture are classified, and that we family members cannot see this information. So I was once again very surprised that a Vietnamese official gave me a classified sighting report that lists the location of the camp that these men were allegedly held in, the name of the general who runs the camp, and the name of the man who took this picture, and described that it was taken in front of a specific kind of trees.

My sister, Shelby, right before I left to go to Hanoi, implored the Defense Intelligence Agency to please let her look at the files, asked if there had ever been a report made that had to do with any person that may have been involved with taking this picture, and was told at that time that no such report existed.

Now, this is one of the really quite surprising things that I found out on my 5-day trip to Hanoi. Once again I would be happy to answer any further questions.

Senator SMITH. All right, I think that—

Ms. BARDLEY. Excuse me, if I could add one thing. I was very interested to hear that one of the sources on this list, Colonel Cole testified yesterday, is now missing and unable to be found in connection with the picture. And, I'll tell you, I'm concerned that a list of sources is given to the Vietnamese when they say they want to punish sources, and then I hear from Colonel Cole that one is actually missing. I have some questions and concerns about this.

Senator SMITH. We have some questions about it, too, and we will take those up, I assure you, with the officials involved.

Mr. Lundy, I think you are the last witness in the group, and so why do you not proceed for a few minutes, and then we will try to take some questions.

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. Can I just add one thing? Judge Gayden just gave me this note. He said that I should mention the fact that there is a hair root sample of my son also, and all of my family has sent hair over there to be analyzed.

Senator SMITH. Your comment there made me think of something, and now I apologize—we will get right to you in a second. How many people here in the room are either current military or former military—members of the military—just raise your hand?

[Show of hands.]

Senator SMITH. If you were fingerprinted when you went in the military, would you put your hand down?

[Show of no hands.]

Senator SMITH. There is not a hand remaining, let the record show. I am absolutely amazed that whether these fingerprints that are being presented to us in the name of a prisoner or allegedly prisoner—are accurate remains to be seen, but I am absolutely flabbergasted that we cannot find fingerprints on record anywhere in the service record of military personnel. The first thing that happened to me when I went in was I was fingerprinted, and apparently everybody else here was too.

So I am just going to put all officials in control of these on notice that I intend to know why, in the case of all of the live-sighting reports, and all of the individuals involved in those reports, why we do not have fingerprints in the service jackets of those individuals. And if you do not know why you better start looking because I want to know why. [Applause.]

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. Senator Smith, that isn't all of it either, because I—when I was looking to get fingerprints I went to the Hall of Records in downtown Los Angeles. They had no birth certificate on my son, but they have on the other two of my sons. I went to Sacramento; they have no birth certificate on my son. DMV, the hospital records, there are no fingerprints to be had anywhere.

Senator SMITH. I do not understand that, but we will find out about it.

Al, go ahead.

Mrs. FLECKENSTEIN. Thank you very much.

STATEMENT OF ALBRO L. LUNDY III

Mr. LUNDY. Thank you for allowing me to speak on this. I again want to stress for the record, Senator Reid and I had a nice conversation in an elevator about this particular photograph and about my father. I have asked one photo analysis that we've done to be passed around to the Senators. It's a simple photo overlay. It's done on acetate, and if you take a look at it—you just lift the acetate up—one of the photos is my father as a younger man and then the other photo is the copy of the photo drawn out. You see that it matches perfectly. All the features are the same, the head shape is the same, everything with regard to the photo is exact. That's a very simple analysis, something that could have been done very easily, I think by the Government immediately, but has never been done, or at least has never been provided to us.

I'm going to start out telling about the Lundy family a little bit, and about Maj. Albro Lundy because I think he is the reason and those men are the reason that we are here. My father, still serving in Vietnam right now, went over in 1970, a highly decorated individual, I've put in the record. But we were told he was killed Christmas Eve, 1970. The Government told us that, and my family—6 children ages 12 to 9 months old, and my mother accepted that and it was brutal. I almost lost my mother at the same time I lost my father because of the closeness of that relationship.

But my mother worked very hard to get over it. She went to law school. Myself and my older sister worked very hard helping raise the children.

We never thought twice about my father being alive. There were some mysteries with regard to the circumstances of his accident—incident. We didn't have those cleared up for us, but we never thought twice. To us he was dead. It was very difficult to get to, but to us he was dead.

I was approached by an individual named Scott Barnes in 1981, I guess. Scott Barnes said that he had been in the embassy, in the CIA, in Thailand—Bangkok, Thailand—the CIA portion of the embassy. And he had seen an individual file, a secret file, a top-secret file given to him by Colonel Mather—Paul Mather, who I think, interestingly enough, has been rehired by the DIA. And that Colonel Mather said here's someone we've had reports about. He might be alive. Now this is CIA information by the way.

Our family—and I brought this man—I met him by coincidence in church. My name is Albro Lundy and my father's name is Albro Lundy, and he had seen a visitors' roster and approached me. He said I would like to tell you about the information. He had information about my father's case that I didn't have with regard to the circumstances of the accident, the individual area where he went down, things that the family hadn't been provided. He said your father may be alive.

We said, thank you very much. We think you are very well intentioned, but we know you're wrong. My father is dead. And we sent Scott Barnes on his way. Scott Barnes never again contacted me until this photo came out.

In 1985, I finished law school and I said, you know, I wonder about the mysteries. The mysteries were my father's parachute opened, but they said there was no one in it. I didn't understand how a parachute could deploy without any weight in the parachute. There had to be somebody there and I've spoken to parachute experts about it. They say you've got to have some weight on a parachute for it to deploy.

So I wanted to talk to the witnesses. I figured there were witnesses to my father's incident. There's no way they could call him killed in action, body not recovered, unless they had some witnesses.

So I wrote a FOIA, and I want to direct your attention to this blow-up here. You have it attached in the bound copy of my statement. So if you cannot read it, but the part that is highlighted says specifically, this is all the information in the file, there were no witnesses to this incident. Then down at the bottom, I just want to highlight there, it says, sensitive to the people. That is from the Air Force, that is the DOD, that is my contact. There were no witnesses and Albro Lundy, just graduated from law school, said this is the official Government response to me, and I didn't look any further. I believe there are no witnesses.

I'm a family of military background. We believe our Government. We know our Government. We trust our Government. My father was the ultimate patriot. I didn't look any further. There were no witnesses.

Judge Gayden sent me a letter, Easter of this year. He says, I have information about your father, who might be alive. I say to myself, another one, my father is dead. But I call him up because this time I am interested; I want to follow up the leads, and he has got basically information which I did not think could come from just anybody about my father.

He has got my father's Social Security number, he has got my father's birth date, he has got his correct rank, and he has got his correct name, Albro Lundy, which is as unique as his Social Security number. And besides, he is dead.

I said, where is this information coming from and why would somebody bring information about Albro Lundy out; he is dead. No one would be so stupid as to try and pull a hoax; he is dead. I had better follow this up a little more. Because I could not understand where that information came from. So I start writing.

Actually what happened is, a little while after that, my mother got information from the government, the same, very same information that Judge Gayden had sent to us in a TWX. In that TWX it had a cover letter, and Chuck Trowbridge was the person that had written the cover letter. He said, disregard this information; it really is nothing but a dogtag report.

My mother did not look any further. She took that and threw it in the trash. My father is dead. She threw it in the trash. I said, Mother, I would really have liked to have seen that. I had to get my own copy. I called up and got a copy, and I read through it again, and I said, well, dogtags do not have birth dates on it. Chuck, how could that be? Why did you call this a dogtag report?

Chuck has not responded to me as far as that is concerned.

Senator REID. Who is Chuck?

Mr. LUNDY. Chuck Trowbridge. I am sorry to be so familiar. He testified here earlier. I said, well, I am going to read the report itself, because it was basically a letter purportedly written for my father with this information. I did not believe much of the information on it. But I did not know where that correct information had come from, and that was very unusual to me.

And I saw something at the bottom of the letter that amazed me. It said thumbprints. Now, I did not get the original; I got a transcription. But it said thumbprints.

Senator REID. Is this from the judge?

Mr. LUNDY. No, this is from the DIA. And nowhere in the cover letter that said disregard this did it mention these thumbprints. Nowhere. And so I called up and I said, there is thumbprints in the original; have you checked? Have you checked my father's thumbprints? I think we can get rid of this right now.

Because to be honest with you, I did not tell my mother anything about the investigation I was doing. I opened the case as a case in my law office, and I was going to disprove it because my father was dead; this was a hoax. I spent literally thousands and maybe tens of thousands of dollars worth of man-hours trying to disprove this case.

I did not want to bring it back into the family. My father was dead, and I knew what this would do to our family if I brought it up again. Three and a half months worth of investigation before I told anybody in our family about this.

You know what I was told when I asked about the fingerprints—have you checked the fingerprints? Now, this has been in the DIA's hands now for 5 months. They said, we do not do that unless the next of kin requests it. That was the response.

I said, well, I am next of kin. And they said, no you are not. I said, well, what do you call me. No, you are not next of kin; your mother is next of kin.

So we had to go through a little formality. But I requested it, and I got an answer back: There are no fingerprints in your father's file. There are no fingerprints to check on him.

I said, my father had top secret security clearance, nuclear, intelligence. He was ROTC, went to regular. How could there not be fingerprints in my father's file? And then I looked through the file very carefully. Here is the—I would like to draw your attention to this next blow-up, and it says right there, there is a letter in his file, it says, attached are forms and fingerprint cards on the above subject.

Senator REID. But look at the date on it.

Mr. LUNDY. Right. But they do not throw anything away. That does not make any difference when the date is; 22 of December, 1954, that means my father was fingerprinted and the card was in his file. Then, more importantly, look down there on the bottom, it says, "National Agency check is completed on this individual." That means the fingerprints were good. That means Henry classification cards had been done. That means my father's fingerprints had been checked out in the Government, and the Government had a set of fingerprints in his file, that very file I was looking at.

Much to my amazement, when I flipped it over to find the attachment, there was no fingerprint card attached, nor were there any Henry classification cards. I cannot understand that. I still cannot understand that. It is absolutely unbelievable.

This is a smoking gun letter, that there is cover-up in our government. It could not possibly happen if there was not, because guess what? Somebody had to pull that card from his file; it just does not magically disappear, or they just forgot to take out the cover letter.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we are going to inquire when the folks come back next week.

Mr. LUNDY. Moving on to the photo itself—

The CHAIRMAN. We need to do that. We need to try to wrap this up. I am not trying to cut you off, but I just need to.

Mr. LUNDY. I understand. I felt that was probably the most important aspect with regard to the Government's response.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever asked them about that?

Mr. LUNDY. I have letters.

The CHAIRMAN. About the fingerprint thing, though.

Mr. LUNDY. Right—

The CHAIRMAN. And their answer to you is what?

Mr. LUNDY. There are no fingerprints—

The CHAIRMAN. No, but as to why, as to what happened?

Mr. LUNDY. "We do not know. We are very sorry." That is one of the most embarrassing things I can tell you. Carl Ford, if can quote Carl Ford—

The CHAIRMAN. Is it beyond the realm of possibility that it might be incompetence and not—

[Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. I am just asking the question.

Mr. LUNDY. One, two, three, all—

Ms. FLECKENSTEIN. All three of them, they were highly cleared for security.

Mr. LUNDY. And it just so happens that there are pictures of all three, legitimate pictures, that is what I want to get to, because I did photo analysis. Before I would even take this to my mother, before I would even bring it up, I made sure in my own mind that my father was alive.

Let me put it this way, that I had enough evidence that somebody would not have to prove to me he is dead. OK? And I think that is what our Government should be doing right now, it should be saying to the Vietnamese, you prove to us he is dead; you prove to us all of these guys who are missing are dead. It is not our responsibility to prove they are alive because they know they are alive.

We knew they are alive, and that is my father. This analysis, I had a 16-point analysis done. There are 16 facial features—and if you saw the overlay, it is obviously recognizable—16 facial features of my father on one to the other. It is him; there is nobody that is disputing that. The only people have been the DIA who said they are inconclusive, they do not have a result. Inconclusive is all they have said as far as it being him.

But I went to my mother July, I say July 5, probably, and I said, Mother, I have got information, you need to know about it. I think now is the time you should hear it. She did not hear any information, she just wanted to see the photograph. I said, let me brace you. She just wanted to see the photograph. Minutes later, after she saw the photograph, she said, that is your father. Absolute identification.

We do not need anything else. All of our families know, we absolutely know those are our parents or sons. We do not need another analysis.

The CHAIRMAN. May I ask you a quick question there? Apparently some other families claim it is theirs.

Mr. LUNDY. Is it not interesting that the other families, and we are tight, families of POW's and MIA's—and I was not part of this 5 months ago, I could not even think about POW's. My father was dead. We are so tight, they treat these people like sisters. She calls me her son, because we stick together; we have to.

None of those "families" that the DIA has talked about have come forward, have called and said, let me help you here, this is my son or this is my brother. Would it not be a relief to me? I am looking for the truth. If that is not my dad—

The CHAIRMAN. We are going to try to get at that.

Mr. LUNDY. I asked Chuck Gittins, I said, please, Chuck, contact those people. Please write them and tell them to contact me. I need to know, I need to know. I do not know if Chuck has done it or not, but they have not contacted me.

I do not even know, to be honest with you, if there are other families. Because I think they would have gone public, because if that is their man, they would want him home, too. They would be right here in front of you saying, I want my man home. And they did not do it.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you one other sort of—

Mr. LUNDY. We could just ask Chuck that question.

Chuck, have you followed that up? That request I asked of you? [Applause.]

Mr. GITTINS. [Inaudible.]

Mr. LUNDY. There you go.

[Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. I did not hear what he said.

Mr. LUNDY. I asked Chuck if he had followed up the request I had to forward my name and a request that the families contact me, to those "other two families." And he did not know what I was talking about.

Mr. GITTINS. He has not made that request to me, sir.

Mr. LUNDY. That is an absolute untruth. I have made it two different times, once at the Pentagon and once at the POW Task Force hearing that I did in front of Chairman Solarz. Twice. I have not done it in writing; that is my mistake.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me gavel this quietly back to order and see if we can try to pull this together.

Mr. LUNDY. I will finish up here.

[The prepared statement of Mr. Lundy follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF ALBRO L. LUNDY III

In March 1970 at the age of 37, Maj. Albro L. Lundy, Jr. said goodbye to his parents, wife and six children to answer his country's call. In the face of extreme controversy about a conflict half a world away, he unquestioningly went off to fight for freedom against an enemy known as communism. He is first and foremost, a patriot. Major Lundy is a fighter pilot but his military record shows far more. Prior to his assignment to Southeast Asia, he had taught German Luftwaffe pilots how to fly America's best planes. Upon return from his tour in Vietnam, he was to be assigned as the military attache to an Eastern European embassy (he went down just 12 days before his rotation home). Major Lundy had also served at Space and Missile Systems Organization (SAMSO) where he had designed weapons systems and operations. This assignment came after he had completed his master's degree in Human Factors.

In addition to his family, his love was flying and he was very skilled at it. During the first 8 months of his tour in Southeast Asia, Major Lundy was awarded the Silver Star, 2 Distinguished Flying Crosses, the Air Force Air Medal and 6 Air Force Commendation Medals, (Fourth through Ninth Oak Leaf Clusters.)

FACTS OF LOSS INCIDENT

On Christmas Eve 1970, Major Lundy was flying a med-evac search and rescue mission in North Central Laos over the Ban Ban Valley. Although two other A1E fighter groups had refused this mission, Major Lundy volunteered. Three Air America helicopters, two Raven forward air controllers, an Air America C-7A and another A1E were flying on that mission. Major Lundy reported having a rough engine and that he needed to leave the airplane. Subsequent intelligence analysis indicated that his engine was hit by groundfire, as the area was heavily defended by both North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao ground troops.

Major Lundy announced that he was leaving the airplane and the observers watched an apparently normal chute deployment. One observer reported seeing someone in the chute initially, while other observers reported that no one was in the parachute as it neared the ground. Ground rescue teams were unable to reach the parachute site as the area was very hostile and casualties were taken.

Major Lundy was declared MIA, survivability rated as Category 1 (indicating out of aircraft at time of crash—Attachment 1). Two days later Major Lundy was declared KIA/BNR. There is no clear explanation given as to why he was declared KIA. Although combat forces try to make the best determinations they can in the face of uncertainty, this does not mean their judgments are infallible. For instance, Ernie Brace, who had been declared dead by the U.S. Government, returned alive in 1973 during Operation Homecoming I.

Immediately following Major Lundy's "death", and for 20 years thereafter, the Lundy family was given but a fraction of the above information. For instance, both the telegram and official condolence letter from the Commander of the 56th Special Operations Wing, Col. E.J. Walsh, specifically indicated that Major Lundy did not leave the aircraft and that "he died instantly as a result of the aircraft crash." (Attachment 2) Yet, one witness states that he saw Major Lundy in his parachute and the government to this day lists his survivability category as 1, meaning that he was out of the airplane. Additionally, the family was told that a parachute deployed from the plane, yet no adequate explanation has ever been given as to how his parachute could deploy if he went down and was incinerated in the plane. Finally, from whom, when, and where did any of this information come from? The family was not given any information to answer these questions or verify the facts.

FAMILY RESPONSE

Major Lundy's family accepted the KIA/BNR designation despite the mysteries surrounding the crash. The Lundy family went on with their life. Johanna Lundy went to law school, became an attorney and raised six children on her own. Major Lundy's loss was so traumatic to the family that they completely avoided the POW/

MIA cause even while the war was ongoing. The Lundy family accepted the death of Major Lundy so firmly that when Scott Barnes met some of the family at church in the summer of 1981 and said he had information that Major Lundy was still alive, the family said they were not interested in his information because Major Lundy was dead. Barnes approached the family because he saw Albro Lundy III's name in a visitor's book and recognized the unique name.

Scott Barnes reported on Major Lundy in his book Bohica on page 42. The Lundy family formally requests the Senate Select Committee to subpoena the CIA files on Major Lundy that are referred to in Bohica and to subpoena Col. Paul Mather, to question him about Major Lundy and all other POW's. (Attachment 3)

Major Lundy's eldest son, Albro III, had always wanted to speak to the wingman who watched his father go down and in 1985 he submitted a FOIA Request for his father's file and the names of the witnesses to his crash. The Air Force responded by sending Major Lundy's personnel and medical files but sent a letter stating that there were "no witnesses to Major Lundy's incident." Albro Lundy III accepted this letter as the truth and did no further follow-up. Despite this letter, when the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photo was leaked to the media, the government immediately said that there were four witnesses to the "death" of Major Lundy. (Attachment 4)

Why did the government lie to the family when they knew there were witnesses and at least one witness statement? The government has lost all credibility in the family's eyes—they now want to see all the original documents for themselves. And so they should. There is no legitimate reason to classify these documents.

FIRST LIVE REPORTING OF MAJOR LUNDY

In the Spring of 1991, the government sent Johanna Lundy a transcription of letters purportedly written for Major Lundy. The government classified them as "dog tag reports" of an obviously fraudulent nature although the report contained correct information not found on a dog tag. Johanna's response was to toss them in the trash and mention it to her family in passing. This is another example of how firmly the family believed that Major Lundy was dead.

Albro III ordered his own set of documents and while examining them found a mention of thumbprints buried in the bottom of the transcription. It was difficult for him to understand why this wasn't mentioned in any of the government's analysis. Certainly this could prove or disprove the correct nature of the report and whether or not Major Lundy did survive.

Albro called his Air Force Liaison officer, William Frampton, about the case. His first question was, "Have you run the fingerprints yet?" Frampton replied that they do not check fingerprints unless the next of kin requests it. Lundy III was stunned. At this point it had been 5 months since the original documents were received. This is the "Highest National Priority" and the government does not even try to match fingerprints of a possible POW? The Pentagon leaves "no stone unturned" in their search for POW's and does not try to verify fingerprints? Lundy also noted that they also did not call the Next of Kin and ask if they wanted them checked or mention them in their reporting. In some cases the NOK may not even know that fingerprints exist to try matching.

MISSING FINGERPRINTS

Lundy's amazement at the cavalier attitude toward the fingerprints turned to shock when it was discovered that his father's fingerprints were missing from the file and no match could be attempted. In addition to knowing that his father had been fingerprinted at least 5 times, Lundy III possessed a letter from his father's file saying "Attached is Major Lundy's fingerprint card." (Attachment 5) His father's prints did not just fall out the file if they were attached to this letter. Someone had to take them out on purpose.

ENTER: THE FAMOUS PHOTOGRAPH

In late April, Judge Hamilton Gayden called Albro III and suggested he contact Gladys Fleckenstein, the mother of Lt. Comdr. Larry Stevens, because she might have a photo of Major Lundy. Gladys had had the photograph in her possession for almost 6 months and had never been able to identify the third man in the photo. The names of Stevens and Robertson were on the back of the photo Shelby Robertson Quast had obtained.

Gladys had previously been aware of the Lundy family name from a letter sent to her by Chuck Trowbridge of the DIA in February 1991 stating that Major Lundy was supposedly held with Robertson and Stevens (Attachment 6). Gladys requested the Lundy family address, however, the government would not release this information. The fact that private individuals had to bring these families together is not so incredible when compared to the fact that the government possessed a 3-man photograph with an unidentified third man and independent corroborating evidence that these 3 men were being held together and never once contacted the Lundy family to possibly identify the third man. This blatant government malfeasance directly contradicts the stated POW policy of being the "nation's highest priority."

Upon receiving a copy of the photograph from Gladys's source, an American humanitarian worker who received the photo at Site 2, Thailand, Albro immediately submitted it to a preliminary photo analysis that showed the photo had not been tampered with, except for the label applied as the sign. Albro who wanted to protect his family, especially his mother, did not mention the photo or his investigations.

SECOND EYE-WITNESS ACCOUNT

On June 27, Lundy was called by the Air Force Liaison with a second-hand live sighting of his father, still reportedly held with Robertson and Stevens, that was received in January 1991 by DIA. As of September, 1991, the DIA still has not investigated this live sighting. This was confirmed by Bob Sheetz, Chuck Trowbridge and Warren Grey in a meeting with Lundy and Shelby Quast September 1991. In fact, when the question was raised at this meeting specifically about these men, none of these individuals, supposedly fully briefed on the case, even recalled the existence of a second live-sighting report. DIA had the report 5 months before giving it to the family and has still not followed up a live sighting now 9 months old on this highly visible case. If the families had been given the names of the sources and supposed locations, instead of having this information classified, the men might be home right now.

PHOTO IDENTIFICATION

Albro finally told his mother about the existence of the photo in early July, just prior to flying to Washington for the National League of Families conference. Johanna demanded to see the photo before hearing any corroborating evidence, and she identified the photo within minutes. "That is a picture of my husband," Johanna Lundy has said to the world. Nothing but an actual photograph of her husband would convince her that he survived. It took the weight of this picture, along with the other evidence, as well as the government's dishonesty and malfeasance to cause her to question the government's initial declaration of his death. "Why would they lie if they don't need to?" she states. This photo is also unanimously identified by all Major Lundy's relatives and friends.

This photograph has also been analyzed and the identity of Major Lundy has been confirmed by photographic and computer photo analysts. These analyses will be submitted separately upon request of the Committee. Particularly with Major Lundy there is an unmistakable correlation of Major Lundy's features in his young photo's to his aged image in the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photo.

Albro Lundy III has made four trips from California to the Pentagon to see the file on his father and has been denied access each time. The first time occurred during the League of Families conference where the Robertson, Stevens and Lundy families all met together for the first time. When all three families questioned Pentagon officials during the League of Family Conference July 11-14, they all said they had never seen the photo before. Because of the families' definite identifications of the men in the photo, Carl Ford and Ken Quinn made plans to give the photo to the Vietnamese and request repatriation of the men.

On July 5 the photo was given to the Vietnamese and surrounding governments. On July 16, the photo was leaked to the press—not by the families.

On July 17, the Pentagon held a press conference saying the photo could not be proved authentic and "unnamed Pentagon sources" said the photo was a hoax.

Before Ken Quinn could even get to the bargaining table on July 25, the real OFFICIAL government policy was made quite clear to the Vietnamese; THE POW's ARE ALL DEAD.

The Pentagon undermined Ken Quinn's trip to Hanoi to discuss the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photo by releasing to CBS News a 7-page analysis discrediting the letters and therefore, by association, the photo, even though the two had never before been connected, on the eve of his meeting. This analysis, containing a plethora of errors and misinformation too numerous to cite here, was handed to nationwide news media before it was released to the three families involved. Carl Ford had promised the families prior to this that nothing would be released to the news media without it first being given to all three families involved. When questioned by Albro III about this breach of his promise, not to mention policy, Ford responded, "I guess my word is not worth much, is it?" Absolutely not, says the Lundy family.

One of the most tragic results of this breach was the fact that Johanna Lundy was told by reporters over the phone that the analysis indicated that remains of her husband and his identification card had been found. The fact that the government would even have printed this information when it knew that Major Lundy flew sanitized, (meaning that he flew without any identification on his person because he was flying in the secret war in Laos), and that the official government line to Mrs. Lundy until this moment had been that he was incinerated in his plane, is nothing less than brutal and blatant dishonesty. The government has yet to make a retraction nor provide the Lundy family with any of the evidence they purport supports this lie.

The government has had this photo in its possession since June 1990 according to DOD News Briefing on August 6, 1991. A FOIA submitted in September requesting all copies of the photo and photo analyses done on it has still not been responded to by General Soyster. The families were told by Bob Sheetz that the photo was not sent to the FBI for analysis until July 1991. Why did it take the DIA one year to even submit this photo for analysis? Why does DOD continue to focus on any potential aspect of this case except for the identities of the men? Why does the only photographic analysis (from Sandia) released to the families dwell on the erroneous identification of the photo as circa WWII instead of specifically focusing on the specific identities of the three men? In fact, an identity analysis was not even requested of Sandia.

Concerning other Pentagon allegations about this photo, the Robertson/Lundy/Stevens photo has never been found in any Soviet magazine nor has it been proven to be a "fake" or a "hoax". The Pentagon's official response to the families is that the families' identifications indicate that these men are who we say they are and the Pentagon is seriously investigating it. Yet, in actuality, they are doing nothing to bring these men home and, in fact, are discrediting the evidence that shows they are alive.

QUESTIONS REQUIRING ANSWERS

Why would our government risk their credibility with the Vietnamese by giving them a photo they had done no analysis on?

If the government truly had evidence showing questions about the photo, why did DIA not share this information with the families when they made numerous trips to the Pentagon requesting all information on the photograph? Or did DOD just start slandering the photo for their own purposes after it became public?

If two other families have actually identified the middle man in this photo, why haven't they come forward to shed light on this photo and to help bring their man home?

Why hasn't the DOD forwarded the Lundy family's request to these two families that they come forward or contact the Lundy family privately? Did the DOD just create this story as a way to debunk the most readily identifiable image of the three men?

How could a parachute deploy without a person in it?

Who were all the people who saw Major Lundy's incident? Where are the witness statements of the Durax pilots referred to in Park Bunker's witness statement?

Why was Major Lundy rated survivability Category 1 and still declared KIA without further proof of his death?

CERTAINTY OF PRISONERS IN LAOS

The United States lost 586 servicemen, missing in action, in Laos during the Vietnam War. In February 1973, the communist Pathet Lao, through their spokesman Soth Petrosky, claimed to hold dozens of our men as prisoners of war and demanded that the U.S. negotiate for their release. Within 2 months, President Nixon fell from power because of Watergate and never negotiated with the Pathet Lao. The Vietnamese, as recently as July 1991, through their U.N. Ambassador, told Johanna Lundy that the Vietnamese did not negotiate with the United States regarding POW's held in Laos and that the U.S. must negotiate directly with the Pathet Lao. To this day, not one living American POW has returned from Laos. "You do not understand. . . there is a greater destiny for our foreign policy in Asia and the POW's are expendable in pursuit of that policy. . . ." said Harriet Isom, Charge d' Affairs, United States Embassy, Vientiane, Laos, 1990.

SUMMARY

In the Lundy case, the family has been deliberately lied to, Major Lundy's file tampered with, all evidence including the live sightings and fingerprints have not been pursued and the photo has been erroneously slandered by the government. The Lundy family feels the government has shown a complete lack of good faith in trying earnestly to follow up all possible leads on the possibility of Major Lundy's captivity. They have in fact deliberately obfuscated the truth, prolonging the captivity of Major Lundy as well as all the other live POW's. It's time to stop the ludicrous charade that has been perpetrated by the Department of Defense. We pray that the Senate Select Committee can reveal the truth and finally bring our loved ones home.

FORMAL INFORMATION REQUEST

The Lundy family formally requests the Senate Select Committee to obtain and provide to the Lundy family the following information which we know exists:

- All classified information on Major Lundy.
- CIA Radio Intercepts on prisoners captured in Laos from 1970 until today.
- All photo analysis done since receipt of the photo in June 1990 which should include DIA and FBI's photo analysis.
- All reports of photo and sources.
- Latent prints of Major Lundy known to be held at the FBI.
- Any and all Henry Fingerprint Classification Cards on Maj. Lundy.
- Witness statements of all Air America pilots referred to in Park Bunker's witness statement.
- All CIA files on Major Lundy, particularly the one referred to in Bohica.
- Subpoena of Col. Paul Mather to discuss post-1973 reports of Maj. Lundy.

QUESTIONS REQUIRING ANSWERS ON THE LUNDY CASE

Why would our government risk their credibility with the Vietnamese by giving them a photo they had done no analysis on?

If the government truly had evidence showing questions about the photo, why did DIA not share this information with the families when they made numerous trips to the Pentagon requesting all information on the photograph? Or did DOD just start slandering the photo for their own purposes after it became public?

If two other families have actually identified the middle man in this photo, why haven't they come forward to shed light on this photo and to help bring their man home?

Why hasn't the DOD forwarded the Lundy family's request to these two families that they come forward or contact the Lundy family privately? Did the DOD just create this story as a way to debunk the most readily identifiable image of the three men?

How could a parachute deploy without a person in it?

Who were all the people who saw Major Lundy's incident? Where are the witness statements of the Durax pilots referred to in Park Bunker's witness statement?

Why was Major Lundy rated survivability Category 1 and still declared KIA without further proof of his death?

Why did the government lie to the family when they knew there were witnesses and at least one witness statement?

Why did it take the DIA one year to even submit this photo for analysis?

Why does DOD continue to focus on any potential aspect to discredit this case except for the identities of the men?

Why does the only photographic analysis (from Sandia) released to the families dwell on the erroneous identification of the photo as circa WWII instead of specifically focusing on the specific identities of the three men?

The CHAIRMAN. Let me, let me just say to you, because I think that we have been for today at this a long time. You have been at it a lot longer, and we recognize that. Let me try, unless colleagues have any further—Senator Kassebaum.

Senator KASSEBAUM. I am just curious, because, Judge Gayden, you seem to be a conduit largely through your Laotian connection, is that correct?

Mr. GAYDEN. That is correct.

Senator KASSEBAUM. Do you have any idea why all of a sudden there seems to be, through this Laotian connection, these photographs coming? Have they asked for financial reward? Or do you have any ideas why this is happening as it is?

Mr. GAYDEN. Well, there are two things, probably, well, three things. The predominant thing is, and this has not been mentioned at all, I think that the sudden full court press by this administration to normalize relations is because the Communists are losing it. They are losing it, I know through the Laotians; they are losing it in Laos and they are losing in Vietnam, just like they did all of Eastern Europe.

We have affidavits from Pathet Lao soldiers that that is Dan Borah, Communist soldiers with a hammer and sickle in their own file with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. They do not mention that; the Defense Department does not mention that. We could get them here, possibly. They will tell you it is Dan Borah.

We have people right now that are actually revolting against the Government.

Senator REID. I cannot understand this. What happened with the hammer and sickle?

Mr. GAYDEN. We have affidavits from military Communist officers with the hammer and sickle saying that that is Dan Borah. So what it is, is there is actually a revolution going on, but we do not read about that in our news. But it is going to happen.

So I think there is a full court press on to refuel the Communists, in my opinion, to keep the secrets. This way it is now coming out through the Pathet Lao and the Vietnamese Communists.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, Judge, I am not going to pick an argument with that, because there is another side that would suggest that it is going to crumble over there no matter what. I think it is, personally, with time. It may be sooner rather than later.

But the question here is whether or not we are going to further the process of getting answers no matter what happens politically. I mean, that is really the question. One day longer is one day too many, and we have all agreed on that.

So the question is not so much the dynamics of the politics and everything, frankly. It is whether or not we are able to get answers now, and whether there is a process in place that allows us to do it. Now, do you believe that is the reason?

Mr. GAYDEN. No, there is another reason, and Senator Smith is familiar with this. We get both kinds. We have, we, and I say "we," my Lao connection has several contacts. Some of them are actually after the $2.5 million reward; that is a motivation, no doubt about it.

Senator KASSEBAUM. Have they collected some money?

Mr. GAYDEN. I am sorry?

Senator KASSEBAUM. They have collected rewards?

Mr. GAYDEN. No, they have not, no. When one of them comes across, it was 24 Congressmen, of which Congressman Smith was one of them. They have really come and generated a lot of interest, and the Vietnamese, as I have been told, that are part of this Lao connection, are strictly for coming out and turning in the Vietnamese and showing that the Vietnamese have been holding POW's. They are not interested in the reward if they are alive.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me intercede here.

Mr. LUNDY. I wanted to say one other thing.

The CHAIRMAN. Absolutely.

Mr. LUNDY. Specifically with regard just to the treatment of the families, and my coming in here now. Because as soon as my mother identified it, basically I flew to Washington and gave the photo to the Defense Department, and said, here is my dad, go get him, please bring him home. Bring my dad home.

I was naive. I was absolutely, entirely naive. Because instead of my Government saying, like when Bobby Garwood was identified, they brought him home, instead of my government going over there and finding my dad and bringing him home—

The CHAIRMAN. No, he came home on his own with the help of another nation.

Mr. LUNDY. OK, that is fine, I am sorry I misquoted there. I have put up now with 5 months' worth of the photo being slandered erroneously. Never once have they questioned the identities, never once have they done anything but connect it to things which are fake. I mean, really, absolutely fake.

There are nine different sources. My source is a woman, an American, who brought it out. But that never gets mentioned in the press. Everybody says that photo is a hoax. I look at them and I say, but that is my dad, that is my dad. So my point here is that my little girl, she is 3 years old, and she says, when is Papa coming home; Papa is in Laos. Papa is in Laos. I am reading her a book, and the book is called, The Emperor's New Clothes.

Everybody knows, everybody knows there are men alive, and that we left them there. What I am asking this Senate Select Committee to do is be a little boy in the audience that looks over and says, he has got no clothes on, because that is the charade that is being played right now.

The CHAIRMAN. All right, let me try to bring this to a sensible conclusion for the first 3 days. First of all, it is clear, we could spend another 3 hours with all of you in a panel in open session. But we are going to wind up at the end of that 3 hours where we are right now, which is where the Committee really needs to begin to do some analysis outside of the Committee, by bringing in some experts, sitting with you individually and pulling this together.

It is clear, and the last 3 days I think have indeed been different than I predicted. I said I did not think there would be revelations; I think there have been some, and not the least of which was a statement by a gentleman who spent years at this effort, that he believes that people were alive for a period of time.

I think the fact that this is the first time we have ever had people from on the ground, in Vietnam, come forward is new. I think the level of distrust is in itself its own revelation, and it is a tragedy; there is no other way to describe it. It is extraordinary that so many people are here feeling that there has been a breach of faith with them—convinced that there is, not feeling it, just convinced.

Whatever it is that has happened, whether there is legitimate cause or illegitimate cause, the fact remains that this has documented why this Select Committee had to be created, and it has documented the difficulty of the task ahead of us. There are too many families who, for whatever reasons, are not getting the answers that they deserve to have, not being treated the way that they deserve to be treated. That has to change.

Now, Secretary Cheney came here personally 2 days ago, and said it has changed, and will change. The proof of that will be Albro Lundy and whether or not you get the information, and whether or not each and every one of you get that, and whether this Committee does.

But I think there has got to be a mutuality in this. I think there has got to be an effort to try to help the DOD and DIA and others to be able to do their job in these next months. This Committee is here with a life now that will watch that very, very carefully. We are going to be sort of the intermediary, if you will, the interlocutor.

We are also going to be doing an awful lot of hard work of our own, a great deal of research, a lot of the facts. Now, nothing that has come before us in the last 3 days at this point is going to be discounted, is going to be cast aside.

We are going to divide up the Committee in a way that allows staff to be able to address each of the sort of compartments that are in front of us, ranging from photographs to live-sighting reports, to the intelligence review to the case-by-case review, to the question of the experts that are needed to try to discern some of this, to the on the ground effort in Vietnam itself.

The Committee obviously has an enormous amount of work in front of it.

Next week we will hear from some of those about whom accusations have been made today and give them an opportunity to respond.

Colonel Cole is here now; Major Gittins is here now. Major Gittins, if you want an opportunity to respond now, but I think it would be better to bring you back with everybody else and have an opportunity to answer these kinds of questions. And we will proceed then to do that and to set that up in as short an order as possible.

The State Department has sent up a deposition in writing with respect to the accusations made by Mr. Burch, and those will be entered into the record at this point in time.

[The letter referred to follows:]

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE.
Washington, DC 20520.

Hon. JOHN KERRY,
Chairman, Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN. Thank you for your letter of September 20 asking the Department to respond to the allegation that the Secretary ordered a mass destruction of POW/MIA records. Upon learning of the accusation, our Vietnam desk officer contacted Mr. Burch in an attempt to clear up what may be a misunderstanding. Mr. Burch declined to provide us with information that would have helped our investigation.

The Secretary of State has not issued a written or oral order this calendar year to destroy POW/MIA files. As best we can determine, no other Department official issued a written or oral order this calendar year to destroy POW/MIA files. In any case, we have been unable to find anyone in any of the bureaus listed in your letter who received such instructions.

As you might expect, offices within the Department of State routinely retire, for either destruction or storage, old documents to make room for new documents. While the Department does not preserve and store every copy of every document on every subject, substantive documents, including those dealing with POW/MIA issues, are preserved and stored.

To my knowledge, the only file retired this year that might pertain to POW/MIA matters was a chronological letter file kept by the previous desk officer for Vietnam, Donald Stader. A copy of the transaction form is attached. Although Mr. Stader's letter file is still intact and will remain so at least until the Committee can further clarify Mr. Burch's allegations, chronological files are eventually destroyed because a copy of each document in those files also routinely appears in a subject file that is preserved for storage.

As you may know, there are retired individual State Department office files dealing with POW/MIA matters located in the Washington National Records Center in Suitland, Maryland. They have been declared permanent records by the National Archives and Records Administration.

We have done our best to investigate Mr. Burch's allegation and can find nothing to substantiate it. If the Committee can provide more information, we would be happy to investigate further.

Please let me know if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

JANET G. MULLINS,
Assistant Secretary, Legislative Affairs.

Attachment: As stated.

But we will continue to follow up on those issues also. I want to thank you, each and every one of you. It is no fun for you to sit here, I know, to vent your spleen at your own government in whom you have believed as deeply as you have.

This is obviously about as contentious an issue as there is. And it is going to be hard for this Committee to sort some of it out, although I think we are really on a road to being able to do a lot of it.

And Senator Smith, do you have any comments you want to make?

Senator SMITH. Yes, very briefly, Mr. Chairman.

First of all, I want to thank Senator Kerry for his cooperation throughout these hearings and also in the process of setting up the Committee, which was a long and arduous task—too long. Some of that was out of our control, however.

We look upon this as the beginning. We know it has been a long, long road, but we have made some commitments and I have made some that I intend to keep, that we are going to do everything in our power if it is humanly possible to find out the truth.

And Jack, in the case of something as dramatically different as what you have to say and what other people have to say, I would, although I would like to ask you some questions now, I would prefer to wait to get the response and then come back and do that.

But we are driven to do this. I want to assure you that. We are driven to find the answers. We are not miracle men and women, but we are driven to try to find the truth. If we can do it, we will. We are not going to give any false hopes. But this has been a very, very good start, because we got to hear you, all of you, we got to hear every witness tell his side or her side of the story. What we have to do now is dig. This is not meant to be complete. It is just the beginning.

I do want to make—it has nothing to do with the witnesses, and just a quick moment, Senator, of personal privilege. Earlier in the day I made a comment regarding something that I perceived to be the truth that was different from what Senator McCain perceived to be the truth. It was exactly that. What his perception of it was and what my perception was and it was in no way that I intend or in any way to challenge the veracity of Senator John McCain, whom I have the greatest respect for.

It was a difference based on a set of facts that he had and a set of facts that I have and I will make my side of that available for the record.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

Senator Reid?

Senator REID. I know that time is late. I do want to say this. I think, for my peace of mind, it would have been much better had we ended these hearings the first day. Because there was very little controversy, it would have made for a nice clean hearing and we could have gone home and not worried about it.

I have learned a great deal in these 3 days. The fact is, they did not end the first day, and I think we have a lot of facts that are going to take a lot of digging.

I want to publicly commend and applaud you and Senator Smith and the entire staff for the fine hearing that has been developed. I was a trial lawyer before coming back to Washington and personally prepared and had prepared many, many cases. This is starting out like a very well-prepared case and we should come to a good conclusion.

The CHAIRMAN. I appreciate that comment very much, Senator. It would be nice if this were clean and easy. The reason there are 3 days of hearings and the reason there is controversy is that there is controversy. If we are going to lay this out, there is no way to avoid that. There is nothing that is going to be easy about it.

On the other hand, I really see a framework that is coming out of these 3 days. I also must tell you that until proven otherwise, I am convinced that Secretary Cheney's put himself on the line here in a way that no other Secretary of Defense has done.

This Committee is going to do its utmost, obviously, to follow-up on that and hold that to account. I have worked closely with these people over the last weeks and I believe they want this issue resolved.

I also believe that there is a new page that has been turned over in terms of the openness. Now, that proof will be in the next weeks—very shortly. We are told that much is to be declassified. We are told that much will be available that has never been available before and some of it already is.

So bear with us. If you do not get something right away, I hope it is mostly because we are understaffed and overworked and not because there is an effort not to get it to you.

But I suspect this process is going to open up. And the test of that will be our work and your cooperation with us over the course of these next weeks.

We will not not ask any questions and we will not avoid seeking the answers, no matter how difficult they are.

On that note, we stand adjourned.

[Whereupon, at 7:35 p.m., the Committee adjourned.]

POW/MIA POLICY AND PROCESS

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1991

U.S. SENATE,
SELECT COMMITTEE ON POW/MIA AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC.

The committee convened, pursuant to notice, at 9:40 a.m., in room SH-216, Hart Senate Office Building, Hon. John F. Kerry, chairman, presiding.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. JOHN F. KERRY, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

The CHAIRMAN. The select committee will come to order. Good morning, our apologies for starting a little bit late this morning. We were having a Members meeting from 8:30 this morning. We were hearing some testimony in closed session and now are moving into the open session.

As everybody knows, this session is the wind-up, if you will, of the initial 3 days of the select committee's hearings. I have said previously, and I am not going to stop repeating it because I think it is terribly important to keep in mind, that the opening days are exactly that—opening days—and their purpose is to outline the parameters of this issue.

We heard from the administration, we heard from veterans organizations, we heard from a foreign witness, we heard from people who have been on the ground in Vietnam for the first time ever in the course of this kind of inquiry, and we heard from the families. We agreed that since we knew that certain kinds of allegations were going to be made, that it was fair to permit those against whom the allegations were made to come back and to be able to answer some of those in open session in order to help the committee but also in order, in fairness, to be able to address those as a matter of public record, and that is why we are here today.

But again, I emphasize on behalf of the entire committee, and we have just in our own meeting with Senators confirmed our inclination to proceed efficiently and quietly to a certain degree in these first months with a significant number of depositions and a significant number of private meetings in order to gather facts, and to separate fact from fiction, and do the best job that we can of trying to lay out reality here. But I will confirm that every Member feels very strongly that no stone should be left unturned, but every Member also feels very strongly that at the appropriate moment, obviously it all has to be laid out in public, or we become part of the problem, and we do not intend to let that happen.

So this is not a morning for long opening statements. I will say something for the record and ask any of my colleagues if they want to add quickly to that.

Senator McCAIN. I wanted to add one brief comment, Mr. Chairman. We have been contacted by many people who wish to testify before this committee. Obviously, this committee cannot take personal testimony of every person who wants to, but I know that they are all assured that we will take their deposition, their statements and read with interest any statement or any information that they feel needs to be brought before the committee, correct?

The CHAIRMAN. That is absolutely correct. We welcome that information. We know there are people out there who have it. There are also people out there who think they have it and do not, and we want to make it very clear that the committee is not going to tolerate folks who want to use us as some kind of springboard or platform for wild-eyed, cock-eyed theories that have no basis in fact whatsoever.

We are going to be tough with respect to that, and we have a process set up to try to do it, but we do want at the end of this process for everybody who has legitimate information to feel that this committee was receptive to it. We already have met with people that have never been part of any prior inquiry. We are going to meet with other people who have never been part of any prior inquiry, and I suspect that the chips will fall where they may in that process.

Mr. Ford, thank you for coming back. We appreciate it, and without further ado we would welcome any opening statements that you and Mr. Sheetz and Mr. Quinn want to make. I do want to swear you in again, which is important.

STATEMENT OF CARL W. FORD, JR., ACTING ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR INTERNATIONAL SECURITY AFFAIRS; ACCOMPANIED BY ROBERT SHEETZ, CHIEF OF THE SPECIAL OFFICE FOR PRISONERS OF WAR AND MISSING IN ACTION, DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

Mr. FORD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. We very much appreciate this opportunity to come back this morning. I wish I could tell you that we had been able to, in the past week, do all of the homework that we plan to do and that we have been able to respond to all of the questions and concerns and allegations.

We haven't, but as the Secretary pledged to you, we are committed to carry through 150 percent, is that we will provide you with anything you request, and that we see this as an opportunity to lay out for the committee what we are doing and how we do it, and we believe that that opportunity will be a positive thing for us and the families and the American people.

I have taken some of the comments that we have been able to develop so far and put them into my statement, and I'd like to go through that. I will be submitting as I go along various documents for the record. My staff and I are already at work going beyond that, but it will be given to the committee as we complete it over the next few weeks.

First, I'd like to clarify a point that came up in last Thursday's testimony concerning the phrase, last known alive discrepancy cases. This is something that's been confusing to a lot of people, and we've tried to put some rigor to our definition so that hopefully we can dispel some of the confusion.

The way we define a discrepancy case is a case about which the U.S. Government has convincing evidence that the Governments of Vietnam, Laos, or Cambodia, should have specific knowledge. The term, discrepancy case, includes not only individuals who were last known alive, but also individuals who we are not certain of their fate, or who were known dead but for whom the Indochinese Government should be able to provide information or remains.

As you can see, the definition is broad. Within this broad definition, we have identified three sub-category cases. We did this because over the years a great deal of confusion has developed over what precisely we were talking about when we use the terms, discrepancy case, compelling case, last-known-alive case, Vessey case. All meant different things to different people.

The three sub-categories of discrepancy cases are first, the last-known-alive cases, those cases in which the U.S. has information that the individual survived the loss incident and fell into enemy hands. In the case of air incidents, this includes cases in which the crew members are believed to have successfully exited their aircraft and have been alive on the ground. In the case of ground incidents, this includes cases in which individuals were last known alive, were not gravely wounded, and were in proximity to enemy forces who should have specific knowledge of the incidents.

The second category is a POW at Homecoming, a specific group of individuals who, during the Vietnam War, were classified by their commanding officers and service Secretaries as POW's but did not return during Operation Homecoming. These cases are also known to many families as last known alive, due to their POW status. There were 97 individuals so listed. Subsequently, 42 listed POW's have been accounted for through unilateral Vietnamese repatriation. The remainder are still unaccounted for.

The third category are those that we think that the Vietnamese, or the Laos, or the Cambodians, should have knowledge of the incidents. Circumstances of loss or subsequent information is convincing that Vietnam, Laos, or Cambodia, should have knowledge of the incident. In some of these cases there is convincing evidence that the individual did not survive the incidence of loss. In many cases, there is convincing evidence, however, that Vietnam also has remains.

With this background, now we'll shift to the 119 individuals who have been discussed in the testimony here called variously the Vessey cases and the Vessey discrepancy cases. The first point to make is that from the beginning the list was not meant to be all-encompassing. In 1988, DIA, JCRC, General Vessey, and the Office of the Secretary of Defense, worked together to develop a list of most compelling last-known-alive cases as well as other discrepancy cases, i.e., cases of individuals for whom the Vietnamese should have knowledge of the fate of the individual and the remains if the individual is dead.

The list was not exhaustive, merely illustrative. The primary purpose was to shed light on the live prisoner issue by asking the Vietnamese to help us solve cases in which there was either hard evidence or a strong possibility that the individual survived the incidence of loss but did not return in Operation Homecoming, and for whom, as of 1987, there had been no accounting.

So far, despite our investigative efforts, we have not returned any live Americans or uncovered proof that unaccounted for Americans are alive in Vietnam. There are additional cases beyond the 119 individuals which fit into the discrepancy case definition. Again, not all of the Vessey discrepancy cases involve individuals who were last known alive. Some of them involve individuals who are known dead, but the Vietnamese should be able to provide information or remains.

In addition to the 119 individuals whose cases were presented to the Vietnamese by General Vessey, we determined that there are 64 other individuals who meet the last-known-alive definition as well as 13 individuals who were classified by the respective service Secretary as a POW at Operation Homecoming in 1973, and who are not included in the Vessey cases, who are otherwise not accounted for.

This group of cases will be the focus of the full-time efforts of the Hanoi Office under the CINCPAC joint task force already described to this committee by General Christmas. They will all be investigated within Phase 1 of the CINCPAC plan.

Next, I would like to address an issue which has been implicit in the testimony you've heard from many family members regarding DIA. The issue of family members and DIA analysts meeting directly to discuss individual cases has proved problematic. DIA is an intelligence collection and analysis agency. Their personnel are not trained for family outreach, and the function of family outreach is not an appropriate one for that agency.

The families' primary point of contact for discussion of their cases is the designated Service Casualty Affairs Office. Those offices are staffed with personnel trained to perform the family outreach role. In cases where the family is dissatisfied with the service received from the Service Casualty Affairs Office, the proper place to redress that problem is with my office.

The problems experienced within DIA that resulted in the changes made by the Secretary's management inquiry associated with Colonel Peck related to functions assumed by the POW/MIA office that were not within their mission. Those functions have been removed and placed within my office.

Where it is appropriate, if there are questions about the intelligence, what we will do is, when they meet with us, we will ask Mr. Sheetz or members of his staff to join with us when we meet with the family so that they can explain from their perspective the intelligence, but that the meetings are conducted and the contact with the families are done by myself and my staff.

Let me now turn to some allegations that were made by Dr. O'Grady. We certainly understand the grief felt by Dr. O'Grady over her family's loss. We have reviewed the O'Grady case file, and we believe that Dr. O'Grady's family has been properly served by our casualty affairs process.

The O'Grady case is one in which we believe that the family has been promptly and accurately notified about investigative activity and information relating to the case. Dr. O'Grady's sweeping allegations of Government nonfeasance, malfeasance, and misfeasance, are without factual basis.

For example, Dr. O'Grady states that her family was advised from the time that her father became missing that he was dead. That statement is quite simply wrong. From immediately after his incident of loss, the Air Force believed there was a good possibility he survived. He was seen to eject from his aircraft. He was seen with a good parachute, and his chute was seen on the ground, but he was not in it. All indicates were that he survived his ejection.

Colonel O'Grady was carried in a missing-in-action status until 1977, when his status was reviewed at the express request of the primary next of kin, and his status changed to deceased, and a presumptive finding of death was entered in his case.

Senator MCCAIN. Who was the primary next of kin?

Mr. FORD. His wife. A second most serious allegation was made by Dr. O'Grady which requires discussion. She alleged in her testimony that identifications were made with teeth and teeth fragments, but when independent forensic anthropologists were consulted there were no dental records to be compared to. Again, this is absolutely false. There has never been a dental identification rendered by the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory without benefit of dental records. In every case, either an antemortem dental x-ray or dental chart was available to provide the factual predicate for the dental identification.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just interrupt you for a moment. Where does that come from, her perception that it was not there? Do you know?

Mr. FORD. I don't know, but I have Col. Johnnie Webb, who is the head of our CIL-HI facility in Hawaii here, and if there are questions about this, he can either answer them for the record later, or you can call him to testify.

I have a detailed written response to other allegations made by Dr. O'Grady in her testimony that I would like to submit for the record, but let me note, I always feel personally very uncomfortable when I have to make statements like this that suggest that a family member has not gotten the story exactly right. It also suggests that somehow I'm portraying the Defense Department as never having made any mistakes with the families, or not having always been sensitive to their concerns.

As I said the other day, there are too many examples—more than I would like to have to explain to you—where we have, in fact, made mistakes and not been as sensitive as we can, and we will not try to hide that fact. All you have to do is talk to some of these family members and realize how distraught they are over so many years, and how difficult it has been for them, and when mistakes are made they clearly remember them.

But again, it's also important for us to make sure that the professional—professionals in our casualty offices and our various offices like CIL-HI, when charges are made, we also have to defend them as well.

Let me move on to Robertson, Stevens, and Lundy. As dissatisfied with the Department's performance as the families clearly are, the Department of Defense has vigorously pursued the investigation of the photo.

I have personally made myself available to the families to answer their questions and respond to their concerns, as has my staff and the Director of the DIA Special Office for POW/MIA Affairs.

We have been unable to either confirm or disprove the identifications of the subjects in the photo made by the family members. We are continuing to investigate the photograph. Any—any suggestion by the families that there has been less than an honest effort to investigate and locate the source of the photograph is disingenuous. The facts establish otherwise.

We have requested assistance from the Vietnamese at the highest level of Government. We have sent three separate investigative teams to Cambodia to follow up information in an attempt to locate the source of the photograph. We have requested all of our defense attaches worldwide to search for the photo.

We have tasked several technical means to obtain information on reports associated with the photographs, and have established all-source collection requirements to obtain additional information about the photo, the individuals, or the associated reporting. We are continuing to investigate vigorously. However, without some new leads we may not be able to solve the mystery of this photo.

Finally—and this is an important point—the Colonel Robertson case is not closed. It is still under active investigation, and any preliminary judgments made have been set aside pending further investigative activity and information. I would like to submit a brief written response to the specific allegations contained within the testimony of the families for the record.

Next, let me turn to Mr. Donahue's testimony about his brother, and if I might, let me just read very briefly from the transcript of that testimony. He was asked by Senator Reid about getting the live sighting reports, and Mr. Donahue said, yes, and I would like to mention one, if I may, right at the top, if I can read from it. I also have information about live prisoner of war.

And he reads information about a live prisoner of war named Jefferson Donahue—that is a phonetic spelling—date of birth, airplane number, and it gives the aircraft number, and it gives my parents' zip code in Florida instead of the aircraft number, and how this guy in the jungles of Laos ever got my parents' zip code number?

And Senator Reid then said, where did you get that, and he said, this was a live sighting report provided, classified. This is the declassified version provided by the Defense Department.

Let me also submit for the record a fact sheet that was circulated by the family in Southeast Asia, and let me just read briefly from that. It's toward the end, and it shows a photograph of Mr. Donahue's brother and some of the information about him, and then at the end it says:

The family of Capt. Morgan Donahue is willing to underwrite by prior arrangements the cost of obtaining credible and demonstrable physical evidence of his survival—i.e., fingerprints, photographs, et cetera. They will also offer a substantial reward to anyone arranging for his escape or delivery alive and well to a location to be mutually agreed upon in the city of Bangkok, Thailand, where he would be met by his father and others.

No information on how he reached Bangkok, who brought him there, or how he managed to get back to the United States, will ever be disclosed to anyone, including representatives of the Thai Government or the United States. At such time as arrangements are made with persons capable of this task, the family of Captain Donahue will provide information which can be used to positively identify only him.

Captain Donahue's father can be reached at No. 7 World Green, Cocoa Beach, FL, U.S.A., zip code 32931, and his telephone number is—and then it gives his telephone number.

I think it is quite clear where it is possible that this person in the Lao jungle got the zip code of Mr. Donahue's brother. Unfortunately, it probably came from this flyer with the offer of a reward.

The CHAIRMAN. When was the flyer distributed?

Mr. FORD. I will have to check, Mr. Chairman. I'm not sure. The one I have doesn't have a date on it, but I will get that for the record.

Over a period spanning two decades, members of Morgan J. Donahue's family and others have circulated flyers in Southeast Asia seeking information on the missing Air Force officer. Attached is a 4-page, undated information sheet which we believe was circulated circa 1979. Note that the last page clearly lists the address of Captain Donahue's father, including his zip code.

In 1987 an ethnic Lao in Thailand told DOD interviewers that Jack Bailey had given him a Lao language flyer on Captain Donahue. The Lao man, who claimed to have been previously involved in gathering POW information and remains, said that based on the flyer on Captain Donahue he planned to give up his other activities and devote himself solely to searching for Captain Donahue.

Captain Donahue, then Lieutenant Donahue, was assigned to the 606th Special Operations Squadron (Candle Light) of the 56th Special Operation's Wing at the Royal Thai Air Force Base at Nakhon Phanom, Thailand, located adjacent to the Mekong River between Thailand and Laos. He was a Navigator flying a C-123 flare dropping aircraft. The air distance between his base and the Ho Chi Minh Trail to the east where his aircraft went down was approximately 85 miles.

On the night of 13 December 1968, at 0300 hours, local time, Captain Donahue's aircraft, with a total crew complement of seven, the pilot, copilot, flight engineer, two navigators and two "Flare Kickers" (individuals who were responsible for dropping flares via the loading ramp in the rear of the aircraft to illuminate North Vietnamese vehicular traffic on the Trail moving south) were flying a mission at approximately 8,500 feet mean sea level (2,000 to 3,000 feet above the ground) on an assigned length of the Trail searching for surface movement of North Vietnamese vehicles, with the mission of illuminating such traffic by flares. Once such traffic was located and flares dropped, the C-123 aircraft functioned in forward air control.

ling capacity to direct medium size bombardment aircraft to any such target for ordnance dropping purposes. On the night in question, a convoy was spotted by the crew of the C-123, and a B57 aircraft loitering at a higher altitude was given the location of it and directed to it by radio by the C-123. For whatever the reason, in descending on its first bombing run, the B57 struck the C-123 cruising below it. Both aircraft were damaged in the collision and subsequently crashed. The B57 struck the ground near the bank of a river and the C-123 hit the ground in a wooded area in the nearby rocky hills (Karst).

It is not believed that either of the two pilots in the B57 aircraft survived the accident, however, the aircraft commander of the C-123 airbase parachuted safely from the aircraft and landed in the top canopy of one of the many tall trees in the area. He remained concealed therein until shortly after 0800 hours local time when he was rescued by a Jolly Green Giant helicopter. He was subsequently debriefed back at his home base, Nakhon Phanom, at which time he stated that he saw at least one other parachute descending beneath him in the darkness after he had bailed out of his aircraft, but it was too dark for him to identify the user. He was unable to say how many of his crew had successfully escaped from the airplane. The location of the crash scene of the C-123 was approximately 75 nautical miles from the Royal Thai Air Force Base at Nakhon Phanom on the 105 degree radial of the TACAN radio navigation station at that Base. The impact area was reported as being northwest of the village of Sepone (Tchepone), approximately at Ban Phaphilang (XD055824), which, at that time, was in Pathet Lao controlled territory as it is today.

No word was received on the fate of Captain Donahue after the accident in which his aircraft was involved until the Spring of 1975. At that time the Sepone inhabitants positively identified Captain Donahue from pictures and descriptive literature brought to them from Royal Lao territory. He was described as the American "pilot" who had landed by parachute near their village on the night of 13 December 1968. He apparently broke a leg on landing and was captured by Pathet Lao who took him away the next day in a cart.

In the summer of 1975, a credible source of information was arrested held by the Pathet Lao in their Headquarters Building in the City of Vientiane, Laos. According to that source, now in the United States, the name of Captain Donahue was regularly mentioned by Pathet Lao intelligence personnel as the list of Americans they were holding was periodically read off in briefings in the Headquarters. The source, who also reads and understands Lao, further stated that whenever the opportunity presented itself, a quick scan of Pathet Lao documents that were laying around on desks was made. A number of these documents reflected the names of U.S. personnel still in Pathet Lao prison camps, and among them there always appeared the name of Captain Morgan Donahue. What the source of information saw and heard demonstrated that Captain Donahue was indeed alive and being held in a highly secure and little known prison camp near Sepone as recently as the summer months of 1975.

A third credible source of information, the former Director of National Security of Laos, was located and interviewed in 1977. He stated that prior to fleeing Laos in 1975, before the takeover by the Pathet Lao in 1975, he gave the names of over 200 American "pilots", who had been captured by the Pathet Lao after their aircraft had been brought down to the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane. Having some recall of the names on the list which he surrendered to the U.S. Embassy, he claims to have remembered that of Captain Morgan Donahue and affirms that there is an excellent chance that Captain Donahue is still alive in Laos.

Further, another credible, high ranking source of information stated that he had located and talked to Captain Donahue who was being held in a high security prison for American pilots near Phu Bhan. He subsequently planned a night helicopter escape for Captain Donahue, but unfortunately the takeover of the nation of Laos by the Pathet Lao at this same time precluded the effort from being made. The source of information disappeared about this time, and it is not yet known whether he was seized and taken to an indoctrination camp (seminar) to be "re-educated" or whether he was liquidated.

Particularly worthy of note is the fact that during one of a number of visits the father of Captain Donahue made to the villa, in Vientiane, of Soth Pethrasi, who was the Chief Delegate of the Pathet Lao prior to the takeover of the country by the Pathet Lao, he was personally told by Soth that the Pathet Lao forces had captured and were holding over 100 American "pilots". Soth refused to identify or give the locations where these Americans were being held and stated that the matter was one which should be formally addressed when the war was over.

During the 1973 prisoner release by the North Vietnamese after the Paris Peace Accords were signed by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho of North Vietnam, nine Americans were freed by Hanoi, but because they had been captured on the Ho Chi Minh Trail by North Vietnamese in Laos, the Pathet Lao claimed that the nine were being released by them and not the North Vietnamese. Intelligence sources allege that the Pathet Lao are still holding captured Americans because Kissinger did not recognize Laos in his Paris Peace Accords, and the Pathet Lao refuse to give their U.S. prisoners to the North Vietnamese to surrender to the Americans.

The family of Captain Morgan Donahue is willing to underwrite, by prior arrangements, the cost of obtaining credible and demonstrable physical evidence of his survival, i.e., fingerprints, photographs, etc. They will also offer a substantial award to anyone arranging for his escape or delivery alive and well to a location to be mutually agreed upon in the city of Bangkok, Thailand, where he would be met by his father and others. No information on how he reached Bangkok, who brought him there, or how he managed to get back into the United States will ever be disclosed to anyone, including representatives of the Thai government or of the United States.

At such time as arrangements are made with persons capable of this task, the family of Captain Donahue will provide information which can be used to positively identify only him. Captain Donahue's father can be reached at #7 Willow Green, Cocoa Beach, FL, USA, 32931. His telephone number is 305-783-2698 (home) and 305-853-2121 (office).

There was also the problem of fingerprints. There have been allegations made that fingerprints and other records have mysteriously disappeared from DOD files. There is no conspiracy to purge records. The Department of Defense does not maintain fingerprint records. The FBI is the sole agency with that responsibility. I request that this letter from FBI Director Sessions to Congressman Solarz explaining lost or purged fingerprint records be entered into the record.

[The letter referred to follows:]

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
WASHINGTON, DC 20535,
August 27, 1991.

Hon. STEPHEN J. SOLARZ,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs,
Committee on Foreign Affairs,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: On July 31 and August 2, you conducted hearings concerning MIA's from the Vietnam War, in particular, the recently surfaced photograph that depicts three individuals that are purported to be MIA's. Carl W. Ford, Jr., Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary for International Security Affairs, Department of Defense (DOD), was the principal witness for the administration at the hearings. At the request of DOD, the FBI had been requested to conduct analyses on the photograph and documents associated with that document. Additionally, the FBI conducted other analyses in relation to the MIA's.

As you are aware, DOD requested the presence of FBI representatives in the event certain topics surfaced in the course of the hearing. We provided experts on fingerprints and photography. We believed that their presence was necessary so that an accurate and complete record would be established if questions arose concerning those issues. These issues were mentioned in the course of the hearing, but more information is available that will make the record complete. I am taking this opportunity to provide that information and comment on another issue that was raised at the hearings.

By letter from you to Mr. Ford dated July 26, 1991, you requested an analysis of "finger and palm prints that the Lundy and Robertson families have received and have associated with their missing relatives." (In conversations with staff, it has been determined that this was a joint request with Congressman Robert J. Lagomarsino.) Since the FBI is the repository for fingerprints for military personnel, DOD requested the prints for these individuals, in addition to the third person linked to the photograph, Lt. Comdr. Larry J. Stevens. A search of FBI fingerprint files did not disclose a record for these three individuals. There are many reasons why we may not currently have those fingerprints and an explanation for the record may be beneficial.

The most logical reason for the absence of these prints may be the policy for purging files. In the case of military prints, if DOD reports an individual killed-in-action (KIA) or otherwise deceased, the print is placed in a special file for 7 years and then destroyed unless there is additional information furnished by the military. In testimony, Mr. Ford advised that the DOD had listed Maj. Albro L. Lundy, Jr., and Lieutenant Commander Stevens as KIA based on eye witnesses' accounts of each incident. Relevant herein is a list of 2,483 names furnished to the FBI by DOD in 1984. They were identified by DOD as being "Americans Unaccounted for in Southeast Asia." A search of our fingerprint files identified prints for 912 individuals from that list. The prints for the three individuals linked to the photograph were not among those with prints in file. All existing prints from that list are being maintained and are not subject to being purged.

Another explanation is that we never received fingerprints of those in question. But, it would perhaps be more than coincidental that the prints for three individuals linked to a single photograph would not have been submitted. This is particularly true given the policy of fingerprinting all military personnel. Unfortunately, due to the volume of civil prints alone, approximately 35 million individuals and 90 million cards, records of receipts are not maintained. In most instances, the only means to determine if there is a print on file is to check the index. The absence of an individual from the index only indicates the FBI never had a file. It could have been previously purged from the system, but, in most instances, there would be no record of the purge.

Fingerprints are frequently not capable of classification/retention due to their illegibility based on the quality of the inked prints that are submitted. When this occurs, the prints are sent back to the contributor with a request to obtain a legible fingerprint card for resubmission. It is not unusual to not receive a follow-up set of prints. As above, there would be no record if this occurred. As a point of reference, in the first three quarters of fiscal year 1991, the FBI Identification Division rejected over 790,000 fingerprint cards for this reason. Although historical figures are not available for the Vietnam War era, rejection rates for prints submitted by the military in early 1980's were about 15 percent.

In the course of the hearing there was testimony that the photograph had been submitted to a photographic expert to determine if the middle individual was identical to Major Lundy. According to the testimony of Major Lundy's son, 16 positive points of identification were made. It is the opinion of the FBI's photographic experts that due to the poor quality of the photograph such an identification process is not possible. Further, positive identifications from photographs are dependent on scars, marks, and other individually unique features. Additionally, the positive identification points that were recited by the witness are broad-based characteristics common in large segments of the population. This does not reject the possibility that an individual may "recognize" a particular person in a photograph, but it does reject the capability to make a positive identification through analysis, given the quality of the photograph and the absence of identifiably unique features.

One other issue raised at the hearing bears clarification. A Member raised the issue that the FBI had in its possession photographs of a possible MIA approximately 6 months before they were made available to DOD. As stated by the Member, these photographs were furnished to the FBI by a Congressman. However, no specific information was furnished the FBI that these photographs concerned a possible MIA. Even if they had been suspected to be MIA related, the FBI had no reason to believe that the photographs had not already been referred to DOD. Within a matter of a few days, these photographs were returned to the Congressman. I would also note that many communications between Congress and the FBI are considered to be privileged unless otherwise indicated. This is a privilege we do not take lightly, given the sensitivity of constituent and other matters that are referred regularly to the FBI. The FBI does not believe we acted improperly in this instance.

The FBI remains committed to assisting Congress and DOD in the resolution of the status of the MIA's. Submissions by DOD are being handled on a priority basis. Should you be in need of additional information as the FBI's role, please contact Charles E. Mandigo, Special Counsel, Congressional Affairs Office, telephone number 324-6028.

Sincerely yours,

WILLIAM S. SESSIONS.
Director.

Mr. Carl W. Ford, Jr.,
Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary for International Security Affairs, Department of Defense, Room 4E813, The Pentagon,

Washington, DC 20301-2000.

To prevent a recurrence of this problem in the future, I have tasked the service Secretaries to examine possible alternatives to establish a redundant, independent source for military fingerprints separate from the FBI records. I will report to the committee and to the families when we have implemented a solution to this problem.

There were also questions about the Minority staff report. I am not prepared today to go through the entire report. One, we haven't had enough time to go through it line by line yet, but let me just go through some of our concerns about it.

I would like to point out a couple of glaring examples of poor research and errors. On page 5 through 8 of the report, the staff states "in fact, only 591 U.S. POW's were repatriated by the North Vietnamese during Operation Homecoming, which is 12 percent of the figure of 5,000 U.S. POW's held by the North Vietnamese reported by the New York Times."

The original New York Times article, the primary source material appeared on the front page of the 6 March, 1973 issue. The number 5,000 appeared only once in the entire article quoting an American source who stated at a meeting of the Joint Military Commission the previous day North Vietnam had demanded the release of 5,000 communist prisoners held by Saigon.

This 5,000 number cited incorrectly in the report has been often quoted by POW activists and is used within the report to lend credence to the allegation that 85 percent of American prisoners of war were withheld by Hanoi after Operation Homecoming.

A second inaccuracy is found in the prologue to Part 2, page I. The report states, "In spite of 1,400 unresolved reports of first-hand live sightings, the Department of Defense remarkably still believes it has 'no credible evidence.' How does it dismiss these reports?"

In fact, there are numerous inaccuracies in just that simple statement. First, while there have been over 1,400 first-hand live sighting reports, only approximately 100 are unresolved. Second, live sighting reports have not been dismissed. In over 75 percent of the first-hand live sightings received, DIA analysts have been able to establish that the report is true.

These reports involve POW's who returned at Operation Homecoming or have been correlated to other Americans or westerners, such as missionaries or individuals stranded in South Vietnam when the communists took control. Almost 300 relate to Private Garwood, who returned from Vietnam in 1979.

There are numerous other factual inaccuracies throughout the report. To catalogue the inaccuracies would require a document of equal length and would be beyond the scope of my testimony here today. A more important issue—

The CHAIRMAN. Can I interrupt you there for just a minute? I think this is something that I talked to you about a few months ago, and it was my understanding that it was going to be prepared, that just such a categorization—I think it is critical to have that.

Mr. FORD. We are in process of preparing it, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I think the committee would welcome a page-for-page, line-for-line refutation and statement of accuracy. I think it is absolutely critical once and for all to resolve those kinds of things.

The Minority Staff Report charges the Government with conspiracy and cover-up in its handling of the POW/MIA issue. The author's arguments, however, are grounded in speculation and cloaked in innuendo. Replete with factual errors, the Report relies on news articles and quotations taken out of context to prove its claims. The shoddy research and poorly supported reasoning reveals the authors' superficial grasp of the issue and make it appear as if they had formed their conclusions before undertaking an examination of the data.

The following examines selected passages of the Report relevant to the Second Indochina War and the Gulf War. Specific excerpts as well as general themes are addressed.

PROLOGUE TO PART I

Report: (Prologue to Part I, i) "On the record, the U.S. Government has professed to give [the issue] 'the highest national priority.' Off the record, this priority vanishes. Instead, other considerations emerge: Grand visions of a foreign policy of peace and reconciliation; desire for a new economic order of trade and investment; ideological imperatives to downplay the hostility of antagonistic systems; and the natural tendency of the bureaucracy to eliminate its workload by filing cases marked 'closed' instead of finding the people."

Response: If, as the above polemic states, the bureaucracy's goal is to mark cases "closed" and "eliminate its workload," then it has clearly failed. More than 18 years have passed since the conclusion of Operation Homecoming, and only 316 of 2,583 missing individuals have been accounted for. Executive branch initiatives to secure information on our missing servicemen from the Vietnam era span more than five administrations. No administration has permitted diplomatic policy considerations or bureaucratic ennui to interfere with its efforts to search for MIA's. DOD challenges the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Minority Staff to describe even one instance where DOD suggested that the normalization of economic relations should be accomplished at the expense of accounting for POW/MIA's. While the results of the search for MIA's have failed to meet expectations, primarily because the communist governments of Indochina have refused to extend their full cooperation, the perception that the U.S. Government might have something to gain by failing to act is spurious. The minority staffers of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are not the first individuals outside the Executive Branch to examine the government's commitment. Over the years, conspiracy and cover-up charges concerning the Government's handling of the POW/MIA issue have been repeatedly investigated by the Congress and DOD and found to be without foundation. A congressional mechanism has been in place since 1975 to exercise oversight. DOD and DIA activities and efforts in this area have been vigorously monitored by the House Select Committee on POW/MIA's, the POW/MIA Task Force of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, the Senate Veteran's Affairs Committee and by the Senate and House Select Committees on Intelligence.

The Department of Defense remains committed to achieving the fullest possible accounting. Assets devoted to the collection and development of intelligence data to resolve the issue have increased steadily over the years and all available means of intelligence collection are routinely exploited. The U.S. is currently engaged in joint efforts with the Indochinese governments to investigate loss incidents, interview eyewitnesses, and excavate crash and grave sites. Diplomatic initiatives, however, have failed, thus far, to elicit their full cooperation. Access to records as well as to areas identified in live sighting reports has been limited.

Report: (Prologue to Part I, ii, iii) The Minority Report claims that the U.S. Government is unable "to cope with the problems of accounting for the missing," and offers, as an example, the case of SPC Melissa Rathbun-Nealy, taken prisoner by Iraq during the Gulf War. The Report states that her status was "initially listed as 'unknown,' then changed to 'missing,' a status distinct from that of 'MIA,' reserved for personnel unaccounted for in noncombat circumstances. The Report notes that she and SPC David Lockett, the individual with whom she was captured, were never listed as MIA or POW despite the existence of an abundance of information indicating that they had been captured. The authors claim that the failure to categorize them as such represented 'an important illustration of how DOD uses technical distinctions to avoid a finding of POW/MIA.'" Response: The Minority Report's discussion of accountability during the Gulf War demonstrates the authors' fundamental misunderstanding of the difference between assigning a missing person a status as defined by the Missing Persons Act, and accounting for the individual in fact. The Missing Persons Act was written specifically to protect the financial interests of the missing servicemember and the next of kin. An individual's accountability is not addressed by the Act and only comes into play once someone is lost and the act is implemented.

Rathbun-Nealy's initial "unknown" status represented a category to which all missing personnel were assigned for an interim 10-14 day period to permit the commander of the individual's unit time to conduct a preliminary investigation. She was moved to "missing" and not "MIA" because hostile action had not yet commenced and, as a truck driver in a convoy, she was in a noncombatant role. Despite indications of her capture, she was not listed as a POW because the available evidence was not sufficiently compelling. The military services maintain strict requirements for confirming someone a POW not "to avoid" such a finding, but to protect the families from exposure to reasons for hope that are not absolutely verifiable. The underlying philosophy is to avoid error at all costs but to err on the side of caution if error is unavoidable. Meanwhile, the search to locate the individual in the enemy's prison system continues.

In Rathbun-Nealy's case, the Army Casualty Officer supplied information to her family which strongly indicated she had been captured. Although, the information was not considered by the Army to be sufficiently compelling to change her official status, the Army's determination did not diminish the commitment of DOD analysts to pursue all information relevant to her case on the assumption that she was alive and a POW.

PART I: THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

Report: (5-1, 4) Henry Kissinger's statement, in his book Years of Upheaval, that the U.S. "knew of at least eighty instances in which an American serviceman had been captured alive and had subsequently disappeared," is interpreted as proof that Kissinger believed at the time that these men were still alive.

Response: In making this statement in his book, Kissinger did not state that he believed the men were still alive. He simply commented on their unaccounted-for status. When their names did not appear on the list of prisoners returned after the Peace Agreement was signed, he asks, in the very next sentence following the one quoted in the Minority Report, "Why? Were they dead? How did they die? Were they missing? How was that possible after capture?" The Minority Report fails to note that these very cases are part of the 119 Vessey discrepancy cases, chosen to be investigated first because they demonstrated the most compelling evidence of men we believed survived their loss incident and for whom the Vietnamese should be able to account.

Report: (5-1) "However, news reports and other documentation stated that the U.S. Government left men—perhaps thousands of men—in the captivity of Communist forces in Southeast Asia."

Response: There is no credible evidence to suggest that the U.S. Government abandoned anyone who was a captive of Communist forces at the end of the Vietnam War. (See discussion of reference made to New York Times article below for source of reference to "thousands of men" above.)

Report: (5-2) "In fact, it was widely known that the Pathet Lao were holding many other U.S. POW's. On March 25 one news report stated: U.S. sources believe that a substantial number of the missing [in Laos]—perhaps as many as 100—still may be alive. The conclusions are based on inspections of crash sites by search teams and on intelligence reports."

Response: When the Paris Accords were signed, we had no evidence of live Americans being held in Laos. There have been numerous reports, from a variety of sources, suggesting that large numbers of Americans were being held by the Pathet Lao. During Operation Homecoming, nine Americans who had been captured in Laos were released by the Vietnamese. The Pathet Lao, however, never released any Americans who were listed as POW or MIA at the time the Accords were signed. One of the principle sources of the reports described above was Soth Petrasy, a Pathet Lao spokesman in Vientiane during the conflict. Souban Srithirath, Laos' Vice Foreign Minister, has stated that Mr. Petrasy's comments were sheer propaganda, made at a time when the Pathet Lao were trying to encourage their troops and supporters. Petras, in a separate interview, confirmed that his statements were "wartime propaganda" intended to rally Lao support.

Report: (5-8, 10) An Associated Press dispatch, referencing a New York Times article, is quoted by the report in the following manner: "While the North Vietnamese did not list a number of prisoners they wanted freed, The New York Times reported from Saigon today that American sources set the demand at 5,000."

The report goes on to build a case on the number "5,000" quoted from the Times, stating that "only 591 U.S. POW's were repatriated by the North Vietnamese during Operation Homecoming, which is 12 percent of the figure of 5,000 U.S. POW's held by the North Vietnamese reported by the New York Times." The report's very next paragraph goes on to correlate the number "5,000" even further. It states that "the number of prisoners which The New York Times reported that the U.S. Government demanded from the North Vietnamese—5,000—correlates with the statement of a former employee of the U.S. Government [Jerry Mooney]. This former National Security Agency (NSA) employee said in a sworn affidavit that the North Vietnamese repatriated only 15% of the U.S. servicemen they held in captivity. In other words, according to this source, the North Vietnamese kept 85% of the American POW's who were alive after March 28, 1973."

(5-10) The report bases further analysis on the figure "5,000," stating that "the North Vietnamese—apparently—were waiting for the reparations that Kissinger had promised them, before the vast majority of American POW's reported by the New York Times were to be repatriated. Doubtless, they held the prisoners back as human collateral. It should be noted that the 5,000 POW figure cited by the Times is slightly less than twice that of the U.S. official POW and MIA totals. However, it is likely that the 5,000 figure reflected the total number of individuals believed to be held by Communist forces in Southeast Asia at that time. This total would have included the total number of covert or Black Cowboy POW's and MIA's who were not factored into the official U.S. Government MIA and POW casualty figures for the entire Second Indochina War throughout Southeast Asia."

Response: The original New York Times article, from which the number "5,000" was taken, appeared on the front page of the 6 March 1973 issue. In that article the number "5,000" was mentioned only once, as a reference to a quote from an American source who states that at a meeting of the Joint Military Commission the previous day, North Vietnam had demanded the release of 5,000 Communist prisoners held by Saigon. Despite the authors' misinterpretation of the meaning of the New York Times' 5,000 figure, it, nevertheless, is consistently cited and incorporated analytically to support the Minority Report's key argument that thousands of American POW's were abandoned in Indochina.

Report: (5-9) "Some evidence suggests that a number of nonrepatriated Americans may have been turned over to Soviet control and subsequently transported to the Soviet Union. A former U.S. military serviceman, assigned to the NSA, provided the Minority Staff sworn affidavits that during the Vietnam War he 'tracked' a certain number of U.S. servicemen from their point of capture to their release to the Soviets for debriefings by both North Vietnamese and Laotian officials. This has not been corroborated, but information provided to the Minority Staff indicates that POW's may have been sent to the Soviet Union for interrogation and subsequent use of their special skills."

Response: Mr. Jerry Mooney, a former National Security Agency (NSA) analyst, has asserted over the years that the U.S. Government has or has had intelligence information that proves the existence of American prisoners of war left behind in Southeast Asia after the withdrawal of U.S. forces from Vietnam in 1973. Additionally, he has claimed that a portion of these men, those with special technical or intelligence knowledge, were transported to locations outside of Vietnam, specifically to the Soviet Union and China. Mr. Mooney's claims have been investigated and proven to be false (Details of the investigation are available for discussion in executive session.) Recent assertions from Soviet sources that an American POW from the Vietnam War was living in Kazakhstan and that Soviet officials interrogated American prisoners in Vietnam after 1973 are under investigation.

PROLOGUE TO PART II

Report: (Prologue to Part II, i) The position of the Executive Branch is that there is "no evidence" that living Americans exist in Southeast Asia, nor were any left after American prisoners were returned in 1973.

Response: The official position of the Executive Branch is as stated in the DOD POW/MIA Fact Book, dated July 1991:

"Although we have thus far been unable to prove that Americans are still detained against their will, the information available to us precludes ruling out that possibility." (Italic for emphasis)

Report: (Prologue to Part II, i) In discussing the 1,400 or so live sighting reports, the report claims that "the U.S. Government has not judged a single one of these thousands of reports to be credible." It also claims that the 1,400 reports are unresolved.

Response: Both statements are wrong, as 75 percent of the live sighting reports have been judged to be true. They are simply sightings of accounted for Americans (i.e. returned POW's), or of Amerasians, Eurasians, Westerners, Russians and East Europeans who are mistaken for Americans. A large number are of Bobby Garwood. Because live-sighting reports come into DIA on a daily basis, the number of unresolved continues to fluctuate. Currently, approximately 100 remain unresolved.

Report: (Prologue to Part II, i, ii) Garwood's "court martial as a collaborator and deserter solved two problems for DOD. By bringing up the charges DOD sought to redefine his case as a voluntary expatriate and therefore not technically a prisoner—and it enabled DOD evaluators to dismiss fully 200 of the live-sighting reports."

Response: All returnees, who had personal contact with Garwood while they were held captive in the South, agree that he was not a POW but a "collaborator." Private Garwood was tried by a General Court Martial and convicted of aiding the enemy and assaulting a fellow prisoner of war. His conviction was affirmed by the U.S. Navy Marine Corps Court of Military Review and by the Court of Military Appeals. The fact that he was tried by a military court for desertion and collaboration stemmed from the charges initiated by fellow prisoners of war and was not in any way motivated by an attempt on the part of the Defense Department to deny any claims he may have had to being a POW. The close to 300 live-sighting reports judged to be of Bobby Garwood have not been dismissed, only resolved. They have been correlated with Garwood because the information they contain clearly identifies him and no one else. (For further information on Garwood, see Garwood File enclosure.)

Report: (Prologue to Part II, ii) Files are not accessible to the families.

Response: Through the armed services' casualty officers, the DIA provides all relevant information to families in accordance with public law. The families receive all information that has been correlated to their missing member. The files maintained by the DIA, however, are classified documents because they contain information which identifies intelligence sources and methods. Before being released to the casualty officers, who in turn provide them to the next of kin, the documents are sanitized to remove sensitive information which may identify the intelligence source or reveal the manner in which the information was collected. The names of all associated individuals, including those of other MIA's, are also removed to protect their privacy and that of their families.

Report: (Prologue to Part II, iii) "Colonel Peck confirms that a 'cover-up' has been in progress."

Response: Col. Peck's allegations were examined by an internal DOD inquiry and were found to be without foundation. In testimony before the House Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs, he was unable to substantiate his claims. (See responses to inquiries 7, 8, and 10 in Committee letter requesting responses)

PART II: LIVE SIGHTINGS

Report: (6-1, 2) The U.S. Government's policy of dealing with the live-sighting reports is flawed. Weaknesses exist in methodology and procedures for collecting and analyzing information.

Response: DIA's efforts in examining reports of firsthand live sightings are predicated on the assumption that some Americans are still alive in Indochina. The urgency inherent in this assumption dictates that such reports receive the highest priority in intelligence analysis and collection resource allocation. Consistent with this determination, DIA's methodology emphasizes the fullest possible exploitation of live sighting reports. Reported information is rigorously compared with the aggregate of intelligence information available in DIA's data base, then developed and followed-up on as required, regardless of where it may lead.

All information is evaluated according to the plausibility, cohesiveness, and sufficiency of the data and all potential corroborative evidence. Upon receipt, live-sighting reports are examined to determine if the geographic location of the sighting, the time and circumstances of the sighting, and the details provided correlate to a known missing American. Related data is retrieved from DIA's extensive casualty, source, and camp files, and the information is compared with what is available in the report. All files of losses or known incidents of capture or imprisonment in proximity to the location reported are isolated for possible correlation as are all files of sources who have previously reported sightings in the same area. A similar procedure is then employed to isolate the files of missing individuals whose time and/or location of loss generally relates to that given in the report.

Based on these findings, a preliminary determination is made regarding whether the descriptive details provided by the source correlate to any of the missing Americans believed to be likely candidates. If the information is judged to be possibly pertinent to a POW or MIA, it is actively pursued by all available means. Data gaps identified may require that the source be reinterviewed, or that further collection efforts be taken. The establishment of the POW-MIA office in Hanoi manned by U.S. technical personnel, including a DIA analyst having extensive knowledge of Vietnamese record-keeping systems, and a DIA live-sighting investigator, facilitates the live-sighting issue. The Government of Vietnam has permitted representatives of the U.S. Government to conduct targeted information research through direct access to official archival material, and has begun to grant limited access to reported live-sighting locations.

A live-sighting report is considered resolved when it has been determined that the evidence is clear and convincing that the individual described has been identified or when analysis indicates that the report is clearly a fabrication. Once these analytical judgments are reached, DIA's analysis is then subjected to the scrutiny of an interagency review panel before the report is considered resolved. This panel consists of representatives from CIA, State Department (INR), OASD/ISA, OJCS, and DAMI-PO. Upon concurrence by the review panel, the report remains in DIA's data base where it is available for review by analysts working independently on other live-sighting reports.

Reports in which questions of correlation or validity remain unsettled are considered unresolved and are subjected to additional analysis and collection efforts until a final determination can be made.

Report: (6-3, 4) DOD correlated a sighting report of the capture of an American pilot to returnee Capt. James Hickerson, USN, instead of LTJG Dooley, so as to consider the report resolved. The minority staff claims to possess a written statement, made by CAPT Hickerson, that contradicts many of the details of his shootdown that he provided in his debrief.

Response: On 22 October 1967, LTJG James E. Dooley was flying an A-4E aircraft which was hit by anti-aircraft fire following a strike mission in Haiphong. U.S. witnesses to the incident reported that LTJG Dooley's aircraft was streaming fuel and headed toward the Gulf of Tonkin, where it descended and crashed into the water just east of the Do Son Peninsula. There were no signs that LTJG Dooley ejected from the aircraft, no beepers were heard, and a search revealed no sign of survival.

The Senate Foreign Relations minority staff report claims that: a) DOD correlated a sighting report of the capture of an American pilot to returnee Capt. James Hickerson, USN, instead of LTJG Dooley, so as to consider the report resolved; b) "In 1973, a U.S. POW who had been repatriated said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell in Hanoi"; c) "Two Thai special forces' soldiers released from North Vietnamese custody in 1973 identified Dooley's photograph as a fellow inmate" and; d) A communist photo of captured U.S. pilots in Hanoi shows a partial profile of a person who "strongly resembles" LTJG Dooley.

a. The refugee report clearly describes the capture of CAPT Hickerson, whose own detailed POW debriefing account of his capture, given immediately following "Operation Homecoming," closely follows the source's reporting. The minority staff's "analysis" of the fore mentioned live-sighting report is a classic example of how raw reporting, without access to a data base of facts, can be misinterpreted. In this instance a Vietnamese refugee source interviewed by the Joint Casualty Resolution Center (JCRC) in December 1986, reported firsthand information on the capture of a U.S. pilot in what he believed was October or November 1968. The source described seeing a man in a parachute land on the beach and attempt to evade by swimming out into the water. The source says the Vietnamese shot at the swimmer to limit his movement, and local forces swam out to capture the man. He also says that the pilot began firing at the Vietnamese and attempted to talk on a hand-held radio, but was unable to do so due to waves. He goes on to report that the pilot wore a one-piece uniform with a long zipper in the front and that the POW was blindfolded and his arms bound behind his back before he was loaded into a sidecar. He adds that he was later put in an automobile and driven away.

Based solely upon the loss location, time of day and month, JCRC originally believed the report could relate to LTJG Dooley; however, when the facts of CAPT Hickerson's capture were later brought to their attention (JCRC did not have access to his debrief at the time the original correlation was made) they reevaluated all reports from that area and rescinded their tentative correlation to LTJG Dooley, concluding that the source's information described CAPT Hickerson's circumstances of capture.

The minority staff says that CAPT Hickerson has provided a written statement of his capture, claiming "he could not have been swimming out to sea when he was captured," and refuting other points in the source's story. They say that "Hickerson was taken to prison riding on the back of a bicycle, not in a jeep as the fisherman described."

While DIA does not possess the alleged written statement from CAPT Hickerson to which the Senate staff refer, we do have his 1973 debriefing in which he details the events of his December 1967 capture. Upon returning to the U.S., CAPT Hickerson told debriefers "... (he) collapsed his parachute, he found himself face-to-face with about 100 civilian personnel. He immediately separated from the parachute and started running out into the shallow water, after going a short distance he detached his seat pack and commenced swimming seaward. About this time rifle shots started splashing in the water around him ... "At this point Hickerson saw he was about to be captured so he pulled out his survival radio and sent the message ... to his wingman. He then stopped, put up his hands and surrendered to the DRV swimmers." In his debrief CAPT Hickerson goes on to describe how he was stripped of his clothing, blindfolded, his hands tied behind his back and how he was put on the fender of a motorcycle and taken to the fishing village. Later that day he was also moved in the sidecar of a motorcycle, during which time he was seen by crowds of people who threw rocks and sticks at him.

While there are slight differences in the source's account and CAPT Hickerson's as reported in his debrief, the refugee report clearly refers to the former POW. It is noteworthy that the source was only 13 years old when he observed the event, and 19 years passed between the time he saw CAPT Hickerson's capture and the time he reported it to U.S. authorities.

b. No returnee ever claimed to have seen LTJG Dooley's name on a prison wall. DIA is not aware of anyone claiming to have seen Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell. This story appears to stem from a returnee who reported that another POW had mentioned seeing Dooley's name on a wall; however, the POW to which the story was attributed never mentioned Dooley in any manner in his debriefing or later interviews.

c. The Thai POW's did not identify Dooley's photograph as a fellow inmate with any certainty. When shown a pre-loss photo of LTJG Dooley, they were uncertain, saying only that they saw a similar face in 1968 at a prison known as the "Zoo." Based upon other information they furnished, it is clear that they saw another individual who subsequently died in captivity, but who bore a physical resemblance to the preloss photograph of LTJG Dooley they were shown. There is no information that points to LTJG Dooley's capture or to his being imprisoned at the "Zoo" or any other prison.

d. LTJG Dooley is not depicted in any post-capture photographs. With one exception, every POW photograph from the war has been identified. The one remaining unidentified photo is clearly not the missing Naval aviator. DIA possesses no post-capture photographs that can be attributed to LTJG Dooley.

PART II: "BLACK OPERATIONS"

Report: (7-1) The names of all individuals unaccounted for have not been made public. Personnel lost in covert or "black" operations are declared KIA and are not included.

Response: No one is missing from the public list, and there is no secret list. The authors of the report are under the illusion that the U.S. Government considers a man accounted for if a presumptive finding of death has been made. In fact all the MIA's were presumed dead by the early 1980's, with the exception of COL Charles Shelton, USAF, who remains listed as a POW for symbolic reasons. A presumption of death, however, in no way changes the Government's obligation to account for those missing. The Senate staff members appear to have confused legal, administrative procedures with DIA investigatory methodology—two approaches having totally unrelated purposes.

PART II: ACCOUNTABILITY

Report: (8-1) The means of arriving at accountability is questionable.

Response: The U.S. Government's goal of fullest possible accounting is achieved by resolving individual cases. A case is resolved when either an individual or his remains are returned or when a convincing explanation of why neither is possible can be formulated.

Within the U.S. Government's goal of fullest possible accounting, General Vessey's specific goal is to illuminate the POW issue by utilizing a number of discrepancy cases.

During the Vessey process, we have collected sufficient intelligence to confirm the fate of 56 individuals: 22 have been accounted for through the return of remains; 34 are known to have died but have not yet been accounted for.

Joint investigation of an incident proceeds on the assumption that the man is alive. The case is investigated until the man is located and returned alive or until evidence confirms that he did not survive. Once death is confirmed, the investigation/negotiation continues until his remains are returned or until it is determined that there is no likelihood of remains recovery.

In the course of the investigations witnesses are interviewed, crashsites are visited, aircraft wreckage is studied, and excavations are mounted.

DIA's primary role in the joint investigation process is to collate and assess information derived from U.S. and Vietnamese files and from the investigations themselves.

Data gaps are identified, some of which Vietnam is requested to fill through research of wartime records, provision of additional witnesses, or site surveys and excavations.

All information is evaluated according to the plausibility, cohesiveness, and sufficiency of the data, amount and type of corroborative evidence, and credibility of the source.

To confirm an individual's fate an analyst assesses whether the evidence available firmly identifies the individual involved and whether it proves that death did or did not occur. If death is indicated, an analyst must assess the prospect for recovery of remains by determining the reliability of evidence revealing the location of death and by taking into account the possibility that the individual's remains may have already been recovered.

Clear and convincing evidence must be obtained before any judgement is rendered regarding the death of an American or a decision made that remains are not likely to be recoverable. The process is a rigorous one. DOD believes every effort to obtain information must be exhausted before a determination can be made.

Report: (8-4) Dr. Michael Charney is cited for his charges that CILHI has misidentified and deliberately lied about the identification of remains.

Response: A Professor Emeritus at the University of Colorado, the report cites Dr. Charney as a forensic expert critical of CILHI's methodology. He has never visited CILHI. He is the same Dr. Charney who claimed to have scientifically determined the photo, now known to be of a Lao tribesman, to be that of Navy Lt Daniel Borah. Dr. Charney's photo identification methodology is based on the computerized superimposition of "edge" images where a known image is superimposed on the image in question and the two photos' various "edges" analyzed for overlap. According to a photo analysis expert from Sandia National Laboratories, the integrity of "edge" images remains questionable since the "definition of an 'edge' in a digital image is somewhat subjective." The Sandia expert concludes that a definitive identification cannot be made using this technique alone.

PART II: THE FRENCH EXPERIENCE

Report: (9-1,2,3,4) The French experience in Vietnam is a precedent for U.S. experience.

Response: In 1954, 6,900 persons, of whom 2,200 were native French, were carried as missing from French expeditionary forces. These were not prisoners but rather men lost under uncertain conditions. All native French prisoners were returned by the end of October 1954. A tiny number of non-French and non-Vietnamese remained in North Vietnam but not against their will. Of the Vietnamese serving in French forces who were carried as missing, some had changed sides prior to the end of the war. These indigenous Vietnamese decided to settle in the North. According to the French Government, the Geneva Accords, ending the war, were implemented, and no one remained behind against his will.

EPILOGUE

Report: (10-1,2,3,4,5) The report's authors claim their conclusions parallel those of Col. Peck.

Response: (See response to Col. Peck's charges of cover-up, Prologue to Part II, iii and responses to inquiries 7, 8, and 10 in Committee letter requesting responses to the Select Committee's inquiries.)

Mr. FORD. A more important issue that this committee should address of Mr. Usry is why he and other staff members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff have withheld from the Department of Defense information relevant to the investigations of the Stevens case and the Borah case. Not only has Mr. Usry withheld information that would have assisted the Department of Defense in more expeditiously investigating these cases, but he has stood by while Senate staff members directed sources not to provide their information to members of my staff, the DIA, or others within the Department of Defense investigating these cases.

Mr. Chairman, for example, I hope that you will question Mr. Usry about how long he had the Borah information before July 1991. When the Department of Defense finally received the information, we resolved the case in less than 2 months.

The CHAIRMAN. In point of fact, the family doesn't think you resolved it, is that accurate?

Mr. FORD. I'm not sure that that's the case. Let me go through this next part of my testimony, because I think that there were also allegations made by Judge Gayden and also by Jack Bailey that I would like to address myself to.

I unfortunately was unable to either be here or watch on C-SPAN the testimony of Judge Gayden and Jack Bailey, and I also unfortunately, or fortunately, did not read the transcripts until yesterday when I was preparing for this testimony. I am glad that I didn't. I was so outraged—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just interrupt you for one second if I can. We want to try to keep this hearing going so we don't have an interruption. Senator McCain will chair while I go and vote, and let me just say for the record, Senator Smith was not here at the outset simply because it is his amendment on the floor right now and we are voting on it, and I think he'll be back shortly. So if you could keep going, we will try to keep running through.

Mr. FORD. I was mentioning that I was glad that I didn't finally get around to reading those until yesterday, because I was so outraged that I'm sure it would have affected my whole week.

The Borah and Carr families have been the losers as a result of the allegations made by a number of individuals before this committee. Family confidence in their Government has been further eroded by the unsubstantiated and specious claims of Government conspiracy. Mr. Sheetz will later discuss the Carr case in detail. However, I would like to spend a moment on the Borah case and the allegations made by Judge Gayden before this committee.

Judge Gayden's allegation that the Department of Defense would knowingly provide to the family, the Congress, and the American people altered photographs of the meeting between our investigator, Bill Gadoury, and the individual is outrageous.

Even more disturbing is the fact that Judge Gayden, an officer of the court, would allege that he obtained a photo analysis of the photos of the meeting and then assert that DOD photos are frauds. This committee cannot stand by and let these gross distortions of fact go unnoticed. If Judge Gayden's photo experts believe the DOD photos are a fraud, he should produce their reports or their testimony or an affidavit or other suitable evidence.

Our investigators, with the help of the Lao, found the individual photographed in Laos and identified as Lieutenant Borah. The individual is not Lieutenant Borah. The Borah family has been convinced by Judge Gayden's bailiff, Khambang, that the individual is Lieutenant Borah, and Khambang has accompanied the two Borah sons to Laos. Khambang's blood relative in Thailand passed the roll of film containing the Borah photos to Khambang in the United States.

Khambang has a long history of providing POW-related materials from as early as 1985, and none—not one of these leads has ever proven valid. I have a fact sheet on Khambang that I would request be entered into the record. The Judge Gayden-Khambang connection needs to be thoroughly investigated. I hope that this committee will undertake that task.

If I might, I would also like to add some of my own personal involvement in this particular case. Judge Gayden made much of the fact that we have put Lieutenant Borah in jeopardy by having his photograph appear on Laotian TV. I would simply note that the first time I saw the photograph was on NBC, and that after having seen the photograph and noticing the remarkable resemblance between the photographs of Lieutenant Borah and this photograph that was on NBC, we tried to get hold of the photograph.

There was a period of weeks when it was in almost every newspaper in the United States, almost every television station, probably throughout the world. We couldn't get a hold of it. Until Senator Smith interceded we were unable to get the information. Once we had the information, we were able, using the photograph and working with the Laotians, to find this individual that was in the photograph.

The only question about putting people in jeopardy was a long period of time in which this information was withheld from the people that our Government has tasked the job with checking out all of these leads. The notion that Bill Gadoury, who appeared before you, would allow himself to be inserted in a photograph that had been doctored, or that he had doctored a photograph, I just find totally outrageous that anybody would make such a claim.

He was here before you. You had an opportunity to meet him. The fact is that he was under oath, and that all we have done is tried to do our job, and when we do our job, then some other story comes up, and guess who seems to be behind much of all of these allegations, Mr. Khambang.

Mr. Khambang is someone who was involved also in Mr. Usry's secret trip in August. He had reported that he had information about the Stevens case, and Robertson, Lundy—particularly Stevens—and that there was information that if they went to Southeast Asia, that he would be able to provide our researchers with information.

This was communicated to the Secretary of Defense. He agreed to allow a plane to be diverted to take this mission. I know this for a fact, because it happened to be diverted away from me. I didn't know it at the time, but I was in Hawaii with the Under Secretary of Defense at a meeting and we happened to have the only aircraft that was unmarked to be sent into Southeast Asia, only to find out that it had been redirected. We also supplied by request individuals who were polygraph investigators.

Mr. Khambang hit Bangkok and was told go find your sources and bring them in. After much delay, and explaining why he was having difficulties, he finally brought in one individual. Mr. Usry and the team of investigators questioned him. They polygraphed him, and they concluded that he was lying.

When during the interviews, as I understand it has been told to me, the source that Khambang brought in indicated that he had provided this famous map of various people located in Vietnam that were being held prisoner on an island, he was asked a very simple question. Well, could you draw us again that map? When he could not draw the map or barely draw at all, they asked the obvious question, well, who did draw it?

Well, guess who drew it? The same people that are providing Khambang with the Borah photograph information, and at the time in August we had not located the Lao hill tribesman. We did not directly make the connection that here were two cases in which Khambang had clearly been involved, one in which his source failed to polygraph, and the second in which the photograph had obviously been taken of the wrong man and had been given to the families as possibly being Lieutenant Borah.

Now, it takes a lot of our time and a lot of our energy, and it certainly is frustrating to me, but all of that pales in comparison to what this puts the Borah family through. The fact is that they have been led to believe not only that their son was still alive, and all that that trauma involved, but when it was proved to be false, fabricated, they now are being told, no, no, no, that's not true, your Government has altered the photograph, all of this coming from a guy who was clearly involved in scams.

Now, I don't think that—that anyone here, or certainly anyone in the Pentagon, can feel very comfortable with the notion, beat up on us, call us names, but the fact is that the people that really get hurt by this are the families who have these people coming around preying on their uncertainties and their concerns about their loved ones, and it ought to stop, and that's one reason we think that this committee is one of the best ideas going, because hopefully we will get to the bottom of this.

I would ask Mr. Usry as a challenge, if he is so interested in investigating cover-ups, if he is so interested in investigating us, fine. Do it. Do your best. But why doesn't he spend some of his talent and some of his time investigating what are clearly egregious incidents of preying on these poor families, and as far as I'm concerned, we've got to do something. I don't have all the answers, but I know we have got to do something.

Now, let me talk about Mr. Bailey. Mr. Bailey, along with two Congressmen, requested to see high officials in the U.S. Government and Secretary Cheney agreed to see Jack, accompanied by two Congressmen. I was present, Secretary Wolfowitz was present, others were there, and during this meeting Jack presented some of the information that he had been unwilling to provide over several months of intensive efforts to try to get him to share with us, and we thanked him for it.

He also provided the name of this notorious Mr. X. In fact, it was done—he was so nervous about providing the name that he only told it to me, not to the Secretary, not to the Congressmen. There was this writing on a piece of paper and he was showing it only to me. I did not speak Laotian, and so I just simply took it at face value. After all of this rigmarole and mystery to get the name, it was sort of like giving us Smith, and it's someone in the New York phone book. It was not even spelled correctly and was absolutely of no help to us.

But beyond that, the most important aspect of the meeting was that we thought that there was a reconciliation between Jack and the Defense Department and that we got up from that meeting believing that Jack had volunteered to make all—not one, all of his sources available to us, not only on the Carr case but on other cases. He mentioned a Lao general and various other people in Thailand and Laos that he would make available to us and agreed that they could also be polygraphed.

We indicated that just having the information without being able to sit down and talk to the sources directly for some extended period of time and getting the details we would not be able to really do much with the general information that we had been getting from him up to that time.

He agreed to all of this, and I thought that here is the man that has the only real leads that we know of to the Carr photograph, the most compelling of the photographs that I have seen, where our experts that have looked at this photograph suggest that it could very well be Carr, and here is our primary access, and he has agreed to work with us and bring the sources in and give us their telephone numbers and let us talk to them, polygraph them.

He indicated in a general way that he was going back to Thailand soon. He then mentioned to the Secretary that he had one major concern. He felt that the whole operation and his sources were going to be undermined by our efforts to investigate using the Thai police and Thai intelligence services.

Let me just mention that the reason that we had to go to the Thai police and Thai intelligence service is because Jack Bailey would not give us any more information.

We had a compelling photograph, the requirement to move with urgency, and nowhere to go. So we were putting together all the bits and pieces we had, and sharing it with Thai intelligence, and saying, "Have you seen this person? Do you know where we can find him, where we can talk to him?"

But, because of Jack's great concern, and because he was the real source of where these people were, I walked out of that meeting. I went back and ordered that all investigations by the Thai police and Thai intelligence cease; if they were going on, stop them.

We also wanted to make sure that the opportunity that Jack was providing us wouldn't be somehow undermined or interfered with, by his being fearful that we were somehow involved with the wrong people.

I will have to tell you that I got a lot of advice that I was making a mistake. Our only credible leads, at that point, were trying to take the bits and pieces we had and let the Thai police and others help us try to find people.

I have to admit that I thought about it, and, in the end, my judgment was that Jack has the best information so far, and he actually talked to the people that took the photograph, or know who took the photograph, and so I called it off.

We then, and Bob Sheetz can go into this in greater detail after the meeting, turned over Jack to my staff and DIA to talk to him in more detail about the information he was providing.

Because of the urgency of the case, and the compelling nature of the case, and because I had turned off our only other investigative efforts, I was obviously concerned about when Jack would be going back to Thailand. He had promised the Secretary very soon, and he suggested it would be the next week.

When he did not appear to be interested in going back quickly, we began to call and suggest, "Why can't you go? I thought you said you were going back to Thailand. We are holding things up for you, Jack."

Finally, it turned out that part of the problem was money, and so we bought him a ticket. When he finally got ready to go, we were prepared to help him as much as we could. We saw this as a cooperative effort.

We sent one person from our staff, a very senior person. Bob Sheetz went, and Col. John Cole, who was already in Thailand, who was there to help with working Jack's information, and helping move forward on the Carr case.

I do not know, other than second- and third-hand, what happened after that, and I will let Bob Sheetz finish the story from there.

Let me just simply go over, in very general terms, that instead of producing all these sources he had talked about, these telephone numbers, this Lao general, we had one person who refuses to be polygraphed who spins a yarn that appears to be untrue.

Then, when they cannot come up with the assurances they have given to me, to the Congressmen, and certainly to the Secretary of Defense, all of a sudden there is this mysterious American that is threatening lives and paying $50,000 for this, that and another thing.

If I have ever seen a cover-up, this is it. The fact is that what is being covered up, for whatever reason, is that Jack Bailey went to Southeast Asia with our assistance, with our hopes, with our prayers, and came up empty.

I am not going to be blamed for that, and I am not going to let my people be blamed for that. If there is an American, mysterious or no, that is threatening lives, we will get to the bottom of it.

If we get a name, we will check it out, but the fact is, that my judgment is, that every time we go and try to pin people down for detailed information, when they do not produce, we get blamed.

They are the ones to blame. They either put up or they shut up, continually coming back and saying, well, it was not my fault, or we were duped, or we had people following us down the streets of Bangkok, I am sorry.

We went the extra 1,000 miles. We went the extra 6,000 miles, and I do not think that Defense, the Secretary, or anybody at this table, or anybody on this committee should be blamed for the failures of Jack Bailey to provide what he promised he was going to provide.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you not informed, Mr. Secretary, who that individual was that is alleged to have interfered?

Mr. FORD. I have been given the name that, I think, was passed on from your staff, and I was shocked. I was shocked that is who they said this American was. We have contacted him, he denies it categorically.

The CHAIRMAN. I was just curious whether there had been a contact there. Was Mr. Bailey at any time polygraphed?

Mr. FORD. No. Not to my knowledge. Certainly not on this particular operation. Sir, that is the end of my formal and informal statement. Thank you very much.

[The prepared statement of Mr. Ford follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF CARL W. FORD, JR.

Mr. Chairman, Senator Smith, members of the Committee, I would like to thank you for the opportunity to return to comment on issues that have arisen during the 3 days of historic hearings that you convened last week on the POW/MIA issue.

First, I would like to clarify a point that came up in last Thursday's testimony concerning the "last known alive" discrepancy cases. The definition of a discrepancy case is:

A case about which the USG has convincing evidence that the Governments of Vietnam, Laos or Cambodia should have specific knowledge.

The term "discrepancy case" includes not only individuals who were "last known alive, but also individuals who were known dead, but for whom the Indo-Chinese Governments should be able to provide information or remains. As you can see, the definition is broad. Within this broad definition, we have identified three subcategories of cases. We did this because over the years a great deal of confusion has developed over what precisely we were talking about—the terms "discrepancy case," "compelling case," "last known alive case," "Vessey case," all meant different things to different people.

The three subcategories of discrepancy cases are:

Last known alive: Those cases in which the US has information that the individual survived the loss incident and fell into enemy hands. In the case of air incidents, this includes cases in which the crew members are believed to have successfully exited their aircraft and to have been alive on the ground. In the case of ground incidents, this includes cases in which the individuals were last known alive, were not gravely wounded, and were in proximity to enemy forces who should have specific knowledge of the incident.

POW at homecoming: A specific group of individuals who, during the Vietnam War, were classified by their commanding officers and Service Secretaries as POW's but did not return during Operation Homecoming. These cases are also known to many families as "last known alive" due to their POW status. There were 97 individuals so listed. Subsequently, 42 "listed POW's" have been accounted for through unilateral SRV repatriation. The remainder are still unaccounted for.

Knowledge of the incident: Circumstances of loss or subsequent information is convincing that Vietnam, Laos or Cambodia should have knowledge of the incident. In some of these cases, there is convincing evidence that the individual did not survive the incident of loss. In many cases, there is convincing evidence that Vietnam also has remains.

With this background, now I will shift to the 119 individuals who have been discussed in the testimony here, called variously "Vessey cases" and the "Vessey discrepancy cases." The first point to make is that, from the beginning, the list was not meant to be all-encompassing. In 1987, DIA, JCRC, General Vessey and the Office of the Secretary of Defense worked together to develop a list of most compelling last known alive cases, as well as other discrepancy cases, i.e., cases of individuals for whom the Vietnamese should have knowledge of the fate of the individual and remains if the individual is dead. The list was not exhaustive, merely illustrative. The primary purposes were to give the Vietnamese cases on which responses could be readily provided and to shed light on the live prisoner issue by asking the Vietnamese to help us solve cases in which there was either hard evidence or a strong possibility that the individual survived the incident of loss, but did not return at Operation Homecoming, and for whom, as of 1987, there had been no accounting. So far, despite our investigative efforts, we have not returned any live Americans or uncovered proof that unaccounted for Americans are alive in Vietnam.

There are additional cases, beyond the 119 individuals, which fit into the discrepancy case definition. Again, not all of the "Vessey" discrepancy cases involve individuals who were last known alive. Some of them involve individuals who are known dead—but the Vietnamese should be able to provide information or remains.

In addition to the 119 individuals whose cases were presented to the Vietnamese by General Vessey, we determined that there are 64 other individuals who meet the "last known alive" definition as well as 13 other individuals who were classified by their respective Service Secretary as a POW at Operation Homecoming in 1973, and who are not included in the "Vessey" cases who are otherwise not accounted for. This group of cases will be the focus of the full time efforts of the Hanoi Office under the USCINCPAC Joint Task Force earlier described to this committee by General Christmas.

DIA AS FAMILY OUTREACH ORGANIZATION

Next, I would like to address an issue that has been implicit in the testimony you have heard from many family members regarding DIA. The issue of family members and DIA analysts meeting directly to discuss individual cases has proved problematic. DIA is an intelligence collection and analysis agency. Their personnel are not trained for family outreach and the function of family outreach is not an appropriate one for that agency. The families' primary point of contact for discussion of their cases is the designated Service Casualty Affairs Office. Those offices are staffed with personnel trained to perform the family outreach role. In the case where a family is dissatisfied with the service received from the Service Casualty Affairs Office, the proper place to redress that problem is with my office.

The problems experienced within DIA that resulted in the changes made by the Secretary's Management Inquiry related to functions assumed by the POW-MIA Office that were not within their mission. Those functions have been removed and placed within my office.

ALLEGATIONS BY DR. O'GRADY

We certainly understand the grief felt by Dr. O'Grady over her family's loss. We have reviewed the O'Grady case file and we believe that Dr. O'Grady's family has been properly served by our casualty affairs process. The O'Grady case is one in which we believe that the family has been promptly and accurately notified about investigative activity and information relating to the case.

Dr. O'Grady's sweeping allegations of Government nonfeasance, malfeasance and misfeasance are without factual basis. For example, Dr. O'Grady states that her family was advised from the time that her father became missing that he was dead. That statement is quite simply wrong. From immediately after his incident of loss, the Air Force believed there was a good possibility he survived. He was seen to eject from his aircraft. He was seen with a good parachute, and his chute was seen on the ground, but he was not in it. All indications were that he survived his ejection. Colonel O'Grady was carried in a missing in action status until 1977 when his status was reviewed, at the express request of his wife, and his status changed to deceased and a Presumptive Finding of Death was entered in his case.

A second, most serious allegation was made by Dr. O'Grady which requires discussion. She alleged in her testimony that "identifications were made with teeth and teeth fragments but when independent forensic anthropologists were consulted, there were no dental records to be compared to. Again, this is absolutely false. There has never been a dental identification rendered by the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory without benefit of dental records. In every case, either a ante-mortem dental X-ray or a dental chart was available to provide the factual predicate for the dental identification. No other forensic laboratory in the world has as many independent procedural safeguards as has the Central Identification Laboratory. Should you have any further questions on this point, I have the Commander, U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory available to respond.

I have a detailed written response to the other allegations made by Dr. O'Grady in her testimony that I would like to submit for the record.

ROBERTSON, STEVENS AND LUNDY RESPONSE

As dissatisfied with the Department's performance as the families clearly are, the Department of Defense has vigorously pursued the investigation of the photo. I have personally made myself available to the families to answer their questions and respond to their concerns, as has my staff and the Director of the DIA Special Office for POW/MIA Affairs. We have been unable to either confirm or disprove the identifications of the subjects of the photo made by the family members. We are continuing to investigate the photograph. Any intimidation by the families that there has been less than an honest effort to investigate and locate the source of the photo is disingenuous. The facts establish otherwise. We have requested assistance from the Vietnamese at the highest levels of Government. We have sent three separate investigative teams to Cambodia to follow-up information and attempt to locate the source of the photograph. We have requested all of our Defense Attaches, worldwide to search for the photo in Eastern-bloc magazines. We have tasked national technical means to obtain information on reports associated with the photographs and have established all-source collection requirements to obtain additional information about the photo, the individuals or the associated reporting. We are continuing to investigate vigorously, however, without some new leads, we may not be able to solve the mystery of this photo.

Finally, and this is an important point, Colonel Robertson's case is not closed. It is still under active investigation and any preliminary judgements made have been set aside pending further investigative activity and information.

I would like to submit a brief written response to the specific allegations contained within the testimony of the families for the record.

DONAHUE ALLEGATIONS

Mr. Donahue stated in previous testimony that he has information about his brother, Captain Morgan Donahue, lost in Laos on 13 December 1968, and relates the fact that the presence in intelligence-reporting of his father's zip code is proof that his brother is still alive in Laos, because only his brother could know the postal zip code of his father. In fact, the postal zip code of Major Donahue's father was contained within a widely circulated flyer that the family prepared and distributed throughout Southeast Asia. It is not unusual that information contained in such flyers later shows up in intelligence reports about American POW's.

LOST RECORDS

There have been allegations made that fingerprint and other records have "mysteriously" disappeared from DOD files. There is no conspiracy to purge records. The Department of Defense does not maintain fingerprint records. The FBI is the sole agency with that responsibility. I request that this letter, from FBI Director Sessions to Congressman Solarz explaining "lost" or purged fingerprint records be entered in the record.

To prevent a recurrence of this problem in the future, I have tasked the Service Secretaries to examine possible alternatives to establish a redundant, independent source for military fingerprints separate from the FBI records. I will report to the Committee and to the families when we have implemented a solution to this problem.

SENATE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE MINORITY STAFF REPORT

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Tracy Ustry of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Minority staff came before this Committee to defend the minority staff report, An Examination of U.S. Policy Toward POW/MIA's, authored in large measure by himself. That report is replete with factual errors. I would like to take just a moment to discuss a few of the most glaring examples of poor research and error.

On page 5-8 of the Report, the staff states:

The original New York Times article, the primary source material, appeared on the front page of the 6 March 1973 issue. The number "5,000" appeared only once in the entire article—quoting an American source who stated at a meeting of the Joint Military Commission the previous day, North Vietnam had demanded the release of 5,000 Communist prisoners held by Saigon.

This 5,000 number cited incorrectly in the report has been oft-quoted by POW activists and is used within the report to lend credence to the allegation that 85% of American prisoners of war were withheld by Hanoi after Operation Homecoming.

A second glaring inaccuracy is found in the Prologue to Part II, page i. The report states:

"In spite of 1,400 unresolved reports of first hand live-sightings, the Department of Defense, remarkably, still believes it has "no credible evidence." How does it dismiss these reports?

In fact, there are numerous inaccuracies in just that simple statement. First, while there have been cumulatively over 1,400 first-hand live sighting reports, only approximately 100 are unresolved. Second, live-sighting reports have not been dismissed. In over 75 percent of the first-hand live sightings received, DIA analysts have been able to establish that the report is true. These reports involve POW's who returned at Operation Homecoming, or have been correlated to other Americans or Westerners, such as missionaries or individuals stranded in South Vietnam when the Communists took control. Almost 300 relate to Private Garwood, who returned from Vietnam in 1979.

There are numerous other factual inaccuracies throughout the report. To catalogue the inaccuracies would require a document of equal length and would be beyond the scope of my testimony here today.

A more important issue that this Committee should address of Mr. Ustry is why he and other staff members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff have withheld from the Department of Defense information relevant to the investigation of the Stevens case and the Borah case. Not only has Mr. Ustry withheld information that would have assisted the Department of Defense in more expeditiously investigating these cases, but he has stood by while Senate staff members directed sources not to provide their information to members of my staff, the DIA, or others within the Department of Defense investigating these cases.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that you will question Mr. Ustry about how long he had the Borah information before July 1991. When the Department of Defense finally received the information, we resolved the case in less than 2 months.

RESPONSE TO JUDGE GAYDEN'S ALLEGATIONS

The Borah and Carr families have been the losers as a result of the allegations made by a number of individuals before this Committee. Family confidence in their Government has been further eroded by the unsubstantiated and specious claims of Government conspiracy. Mr. Sheetz will later discuss the Carr case in detail, however, I would like to spend a moment on the Borah case and the allegations made by Judge Gayden before this Committee.

Judge Gayden's allegation that the Department of Defense would knowingly provide to the family, the Congress and the American people altered photographs of the meeting between our investigator, Bill Gadoury, and the individual is ludicrous. Even more disturbing is the fact that Judge Gayden, an officer of a court, would allege that he had obtained a photo analysis of the photos of the meeting and then assert that the DOD photos are frauds. This Committee can not stand by and let these gross distortions of fact go unnoticed. If Judge Gayden's photo experts believe the DOD photos are a fraud, he should produce their reports, or their testimony, or an affidavit or other suitable evidence.

With the help of the Lao, our investigators made direct contact with the individual photographed in Laos and identified as Lieutenant Borah. The individual is not Lieutenant Borah. The Borah family has been convinced by Judge Gayden's bailiff, Khambang Sibounheuang, that the individual is Lieutenant Borah, and Khambang has accompanied the two Borah sons to Laos. Khambang's blood relative in Laos passed the roll of film containing the Borah photos to Khambang in the United States. Khambang has a long history of providing POW related materials, from as early as 1985; and none—not one—of his leads has ever proven valid.

I have a fact sheet on Khambang that I would request be entered into the record. The Judge Gayden/Khambang connection needs to be thoroughly investigated. I hope that this Committee will undertake that task.

BAILEY COOPERATION

Finally, I would like to clarify a point raised by Lieutenant Colonel Bailey in his testimony. I would like to make clear for the record that the Secretary of Defense did not misspeak nor was he mistaken in any of the testimony he provided to this committee relative to Lieutenant Colonel Bailey.

Bailey's promises of cooperation were made to the Secretary of Defense in the presence of myself, and Congressmen McCloskey and Visclosky in the Secretary's office. The Secretary's testimony correctly reflected who and what Bailey stated he would make available to our investigators. It also correctly reflected what Bailey told our investigators in Bangkok about where the photograph may have been taken. We have a chronology of our conversations with Bailey which I would like to make a part of the record. I have with me the individuals who were involved in the Carr investigation with Colonel Bailey and who will provide you the facts about their investigation. Mr. Bob Sheetz, the Chief of the Special Office for POW/MIA Affairs will address the specifics of the conduct of the Carr investigation of which Bailey was a part.

Thank you Mr. Chairman and Senator Smith. I am prepared now to respond to your questions.

The CHAIRMAN. That is an important statement. Thank you very much. Mr. Quinn, do you want to go next?

STATEMENT OF KEN QUINN, DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EAST ASIAN AND PACIFIC AFFAIRS, CHAIRMAN OF THE POW/MIA INTERAGENCY GROUP

Mr. QUINN. Mr. Chairman, Senator Daschle, I, too, would like to say that I welcome the opportunity to come back.

The CHAIRMAN. Why not just identify yourself for the record?

Mr. QUINN. Certainly. I am Deputy Assistant Secretary of State covering Southeast Asia and Indochina, Kenneth M. Quinn.

Senator I think I have watched an awful lot of it on C-SPAN and some of it at about 4 or 5 in the morning, but I think having this available in such detail for all the American people to see, and have everything laid out, is very, very beneficial.

As a citizen, I sort of grieve over the fact that we have this problem so long after the war. It still is a sore that has not healed and has not been dealt with. I think that what you and the committee are doing is going a long direction in letting our citizens know exactly what is involved.

I would like to respond to some of the statements and allegations that were made during the week. First of all, there was one witness, the author of the book, Kiss The Boys Goodbye, who indicated that the Vietnamese official had made an offer to return 160 U.S. prisoners to the Woodcock Commission in March 1977, while the Woodcock Commission was in Hanoi.

I was a junior officer then. I was on the Woodcock delegation as an interpreter, somebody who is familiar with Vietnam.

I can tell you that no such offer was made at any meeting in which I participated, and I participated in all of the formal meetings. Nor was any such offer ever mentioned or discussed in any delegation staff meeting, or among the delegation staff when I was present. Nor was it included in any of the reports that were sent to the President of the U.S., which I helped draft, encrypt, and translate.

So I just wanted to be extremely clear that there was never any discussion mentioned of anything like that at any time during the period when we were in Hanoi. I assume that you would also be able to talk to members of the Woodcock Commission.

If there was some additional evidence, or suggestion of where this happened or when it happened, I would be happy to try to comment on that.

But just to assure you that this never came up in anything where I was present, and I was present for most all of the talks—

The CHAIRMAN. We intend to reach out, obviously, to all members of the Commission, and to others who were involved in that.

Mr. QUINN. Second, I would like to talk about the charge that Mr. Burch made about the destruction of records. I know you already have a letter from Assistant Secretary Mullins about this, the charge being that the Secretary Baker ordered, and the Department participated in, the massive destruction of POW/MIA records.

We got that charge. The first thing we did was to call Mr. Burch several times to try to find out more detail about this, because we were astounded by it. We thought we would answer this for him.

We have not been able to get any further information from him, so we ordered that a search be made, and that this be investigated.

We went through this once; I got the results, and said, I am not satisfied with this. I want to go back again and be signed off again by a senior official in every bureau that was named, including several others that were not named by Mr. Burch as having participated in this.

We have found no information that would corroborate this charge. The Secretary issued no such order, and no one we checked with participated in or knew of a massive destruction of POW/MIA records this year, or any other kind of destruction.

I can assure that, if such an order would be given, it would come to me—at least in our Bureau. I absolutely received no such order, nor did our people, or I, participate in any type of destruction of POW/MIA records.

Again, if Mr. Burch has some other information he wants to make available to us, we will, of course, pursue that.

There was also a charge, a criticism, of our overall policy, particularly the State Department's role in the POW/MIA effort, that we are at the behest of commercial interests, that we are rushing to normalize relations with Vietnam.

I doubt that those who would charge this have heard from the American businessmen and businesswomen who see me almost every day, and who leave, for the most part, disappointed.

I tell them that we will not have the domestic support system necessary for Government or a business to move ahead with Vietnam until we resolve the POW/MIA issue.

I add that there is hope for the future, because our policy appears to be working; but the embargo will remain in place until the proof is in.

American economic interests have high standing in our foreign policy, but in the case of Vietnam, these interests are weighed against even higher priorities.

It is true we are in a rush, a rush to obtain the fullest possible accounting for the 2,271 American POW/MIA's from the Vietnam War.

The uncertainty has gone on far too long. We are doing our best to energize the process and elicit the cooperation we need from the governments in the region.

We have had some notable success in the past year, but more must be done. As we get results, we will take the commensurate steps that will help put the past behind us.

The response from Vietnam is slow and begrudging. So, too, will be the pace and scope of normalization. At every opportunity, we remind Vietnam of this fundamental reality.

The steps Secretary Baker announced in Paris last month are not, as some have implied, the first moves in an effort to sweep the POW/MIA issue under a rug. Our motive is exactly the opposite.

These steps are being taken to elicit further cooperation on issues of great import to the United States, most particularly, that of POW/MIA's.

In April, when we presented the roadmap, we told Vietnam that if it took certain actions toward meeting our concerns, we would not, in turn, give evidence of our willingness to meet Vietnam's concerns.

In view of the signing of the Cambodian peace agreement, progress on POW/MIA's and other humanitarian issues, we took steps to assure the Vietnamese that we would be true to our word.

We acted, in short, to build the credibility necessary for further cooperation in resolving this issue. We judge the Vietnamese on actions they take, including their response to our requests.

For example, when I visited Hanoi this summer with the photos in which families identified their relatives, Vietnam provided new information and witnesses, publicized the photos, agreed to another excavation of the crash site, and gave us access to prisons for the first time.

Since then, they have agreed to streamline access for our live sighting investigators, approved visits we have requested in the Hanoi area and to offshore islands to investigate live sighting reports.

I read this morning the first report back from our office there about an investigation in the Hanoi area that had just taken place. They provided us additional information from a very useful, but apparently classified military record of aircraft shootdowns, and agreed to a new joint investigation beginning tomorrow.

We also asked Vietnam to agree to try lateral cooperation with Cambodia and Laos. All three countries have now agreed to this. We are working to arrange such meetings for the very near future.

There is a lot more they could do. For example, we expect the Vietnamese to insure that our live sighting investigator can follow up expeditiously on all credible reports, work out with us an agreement on increased helicopter support, once we have proposed a plan; agree to an extended plan for greatly expanded joint activities, including a live sighting plan; and recover and turn over for our review all available remains.

These actions could be done very quickly, and they would do a lot to solidify the base for expanded cooperation and accelerated normalization.

But what the leadership in Hanoi has so far failed to grasp, or at least, failed to act on, is that it could enormously improve the climate for normalization through an all-out effort to help us acquire the information we need to resolve the POW/MIA issue.

It is our task, our challenge to sustain and increase the momentum. We encourage, we prod, we stick to our principles, we point out shortcomings, and we will continue to do so.

In Laos, as you know, President Bush announced this week that we will be upgrading our relations to the ambassadorial level. This decision is made in recognition of increased cooperation, on POW and counternarcotics issues, and in the belief that upgrading will lead to further progress.

This same week, we have seen some positive developments in our POW/MIA effort in Laos. The Lao Senate sent a team up to Xiang Khoang province to pursue a report on the Carr photo, and a joint U.S./Lao team should join them shortly.

The Laos have also agreed to arrange a meeting between—Senator McCain. What was the result of that?

Mr. QUINN. I do not have the results yet. They have also agreed to arrange a meeting between the Borah family and the subject of the photo previously identified as Lieutenant Borah.

We were able to interview Soth Petras, the former Pathet Lao representative, who made a number of statements about American prisoners during the war. And here, Senator McCain, I do have the results.

Petras said he never had any first-hand information on POW's, but relied instead on news reports and messages from Pathet Lao headquarters. Citing the communications problems they face, he expressed doubt that even the Pathet Lao leaders knew how many Americans had been captured.

Petras said his wartime statements that the Lao were holding numerous American prisoners were nothing more than propaganda designed to boost morale. He insisted that the Lao had released all prisoners at the end of the war, and that none were alive in Laos today.

Of course, his recent statements in no way diminish the very highest priority we continue to give to the live prisoner question. I am not saying we take his statement at face value, but we have had access, and I will report to you what he has told us.

On the Soviet connection, I want to say something else about our efforts to take advantage of the changing circumstances there.

The most recent example of our vigorous pursuit of the Soviet connection is that we immediately instructed our embassy in Moscow to dispatch an officer to try and confirm a Soviet press report that an American pilot shot down over Vietnam in May 1967, was brought to Alma Ata in September of that year, and then moved to Saryshagansk, Kazakhstan, where he allegedly still lives.

Our embassy was also asked to attempt to contact the Soviet citizen who was quoted in the article as having been involved in the transportation of American POW's out of South Vietnam in 1962.

Over the past few months, we have raised the issue of American POW's at the highest levels, Soviet and Russian Government officials, requesting any information about American POW's, and access to appropriate files.

President Bush raised the issue during the August summit meeting with President Gorbachev, and Secretary Baker reiterated our information request during his September visit to Moscow, and his October 23 meeting with Foreign Minister Pankin in Paris.

Given the new political realities in the Soviet Union, we have urged officials of the Russian Federation to provide any information that may be available to them, and in meetings I have held with senior Soviet diplomats who were stationed in Vietnam during the past decade.

They have separately, categorically stated that no information ever reached them during that period, indicating that there were live American military men in Vietnam.

This morning, we have gotten a cable back from Moscow, which indicates that our staff has spoken with the journalist who wrote the story. The journalist suggested that the English language version and the Russian version were slightly different in that the ordering of paragraphs was different, and that the English language version gave more certainty to the statements that the American was living in Saryshagansk.

The journalist indicated that this was a second-hand source, and he was not certain that the source that he was getting the information from was indicating that this person was still there.

We will endeavor to pursue it, and have somebody go there. There is not an airfield at that town, we will have to fly into someplace nearby. My understanding is that this town is in an area which has been considered militarily sensitive, and so we will have to ask permission.

I will assure you that we will pursue this; we have been in communication with our embassy in Moscow, and we will keep the committee informed through the staff of all of this as it proceeds.

Finally, I would like to take this opportunity to discuss another charge laid before the committee, that when I went to Hanoi this summer, I provided the Vietnamese Government classified documents pertaining to the Robertson case, documents that were not available to the family and which contain sources of U.S. information.

Let me state categorically that all information I provided the Vietnamese was sanitized; that is, all source information was removed, and this was cleared with the Defense Intelligence Agency, representatives with whom I worked in doing this.

The CHAIRMAN. That does not mean that it was not a classified document. In other words, the fact that you sanitized it means you took a source out, or you took the means out; but the information you gave them still would have been in a document under the title classified, which is not available to people here, correct?

Mr. QUINN. At that time, the whole document was classified. What we did was extract the information, and we made a judgment at that point that the information would be declassified.

The CHAIRMAN. I agree, Ken, and I understand what you are saying. I would concur that it would no longer be classified; but the point is, to the person who made the allegation, the document still was a, quote, classified document not available to that person.

Mr. QUINN. The documents which I—

The CHAIRMAN. You did not sanitize it and give it to the family, correct?

Mr. QUINN. I do not know.

The CHAIRMAN. But you did give it to the Vietnamese sanitized. Mr. QUINN. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. So what the Vietnamese got was sanitized according to you, they got something that was not available to the family. That is the only point the family is making.

Mr. QUINN. The Defense Department is the agency that provides information.

The CHAIRMAN. The allegation that was made is that the Vietnamese were given classified information. And on the face of the paper that they were given might it have been they were classified because of the sources?

Mr. QUINN. I'm not—I don't know what documents were given to the three families or not. But let me make a point. It is my understanding that the Defense Department provides the information that can be attributed to a particular case. The most specific information which I gave to the Vietnamese about the prisons in Vietnam had absolutely no reference to Robertson, Lundy, or Stevens by name in that report. Now, I don't know if that is the reason that perhaps the family didn't see it.

We, in fact—I spent, as I told you the last time, hours and hours with Warren Gray and John Cole, who are both here, and their staffs in Bangkok, poring over all the reports, and we—through this work—identified the report about the prisons, because it originally was not included in the analyses that were done, in the briefing that I had here, as relevant to the case. And, yet, when we read that, we found that it was very specific information. It was about prisons, and it described the photo. Now, perhaps, you can argue it should have been, but it wasn't, and we then acted on that and, of course, got access for the first time ever to prisons in Vietnam as a result of it.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that and I appreciate that, and I am just trying to draw the distinction between—and I just want to intercede very quickly. I think it becomes the family's perception problem and the question of the communication process. It is not inappropriate to you, I think, to be giving that information. I think it is essential to the resolution of this process and nobody would say you should not have done that. It is a question of their perception that they also somehow could not get it.

Mr. FORD. Even their perception in this case is correct. We had not provided them with that document, and when they received it—

The CHAIRMAN. And I think that goes to what the committee has been trying to say.

Mr. FORD. There are explanations for that, but the fact is that their view is correct. They had not received that document from us. As soon as we realized that it should be, we did. But that doesn't make up for it. The fact is that—Senator McCain. But you did give it to them?

Mr. FORD. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Ford, I think that what this underscores, and this is not the first time it has been said, but we talked about this. We had a staff meeting of the committee a day or so ago, and I think one of the most important things that could come out of the early days of these hearings is a new structure, and a new relationship process with the families. I think you have agreed to that and, therefore, I think the sooner—within the next week or so—that we can get that relationship renewed, so that there is no longer this sense that they cannot get things or whatever, and my advice and counsel would be, since those families that want it—they sit with you and they deal with the realities of the information, whatever it is, and you walk them through it and you make it all available. Is there a problem with that?

Mr. FORD. No, sir. And, in fact, we clearly realize this needs to be done and we are going to do it. Whether we can do it in the next week, I hope, but I think that we will begin, and begin to talk to you on this committee. And talking with family members and talking among ourselves, to come up with not just a solution to this problem, but the solution or a better solution to how we interface with the families on everything. And my instructions, my marching orders from the Secretary, basically what needs to be done, we'll do it. And so if that means rather dramatic changes about the way we do business, those will be considered and, if necessary, we will do them.

The CHAIRMAN. I appreciate that. I am sorry to interrupt you.

Mr. QUINN. No, no. I think it is again important to emphasize that on that particular report, that these names were not mentioned in the report at all, and it's quite a long extensive report, and it took a lot of reading to get to the end to where the photo was a very small part of it. And it was only in reading all of this that sitting in Bangkok, at that time, that we made the connection and put the pieces together.

So up until the time I went to Hanoi, there wouldn't have been any reason to connect it to any of the three men involved. In fact, it was at a—it had another name, a different name in the report. It was not a report associated with those three men and was only, in our analysis, and here—credit to Warren Gray and John Cole for their work and bringing it to my attention, and the three of us working together—only because of that analysis, that we put it together and were able to go there and pursue that lead.

I also think it's important that you know that I stayed in touch with Shelby Quast throughout my mission. I phoned her regularly. I phoned her from Beijing, from Bangkok. I briefed her over the phone. When we came back, she came to my office. We spent an hour and 15 minutes together. Members of my staff were there with me. I went through—I told her what the Vietnamese told me. I told her of our approach.

I did not give her the documents, because I didn't think it was appropriate for the State Department to be a source of the documents. That should be done through the Defense Department. So there was an extensive effort, obviously not satisfactory, but on our part to keep them informed and I asked Shelby would she please be the conduit to present the information to the other families, since she was readily available in Washington, DC, and she said that she would on that.

So I—we felt that we were making every effort to do that. But I want to be clear, and I—I have the documents we handed over. I'm happy to give them to you, Senator, and to the committee. Even though they are unclassified, we think handling them sensitively was the right way to do it. There was a cooperative effort, again, building credibility with the Vietnamese on this.

They took us out to the prison. We provided them information about why we wanted to go. When they saw what we had on this, they made the decision—all right, we'll take you—on that, so we saw it as a way of getting access, of following up, of making every effort that we could to try to investigate this.

Now, I guess, just in summary I would say we handed over these unclassified documents with one purpose in mind. To obtain the cooperation necessary to resolve the fate of a missing American and put his family's mind at ease, and that, multiplied by 2,271, is our mission. The Department of State, in full cooperation with the Department of Defense, intends to continue doing all it can to achieve the fullest possible accounting for our POW's and MIA's from Southeast Asia. And, in this way, achieve the reconciliation with the countries of Indochina that's long overdue. So thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much, Mr. Secretary. Mr. Sheetz, do you have an opening statement?

Mr. SHEETZ. I do not. But I came prepared to discuss the Carr investigation. If I could have an opportunity, I'd like to amplify a bit on the topic that was just discussed with Deputy Assistant Secretary Quinn.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be fine, and if you want to share with us any observations on the Carr allegations that were made, we would certainly appreciate it.

Mr. SHEETZ. Surely.

The CHAIRMAN. And then we will proceed. I know members have a lot of questions and we do want to get into those.

Mr. SHEETZ. I would just want the committee to know that I was surprised myself to find out just this last week that the report that Mr. Quinn has been talking about did not get transmitted to the families, up to that point.

That report came in in August 1990. It did not mention Robertson, Stevens, or Lundy anywhere in the report. At the time it came in, it was the first time the photo of the three men had come to the Defense Department. There were no names associated with the photo. Ultimately, as Mr. Quinn has mentioned, we did receive that name correlation thanks to the families' identification of the men in the photo.

Somehow, in the rush of business, and there's been a lot of very frenetic activity on this case, that particular report did not get transmitted to the families. I had Debra Bardsley and Shelby Quast in my office last week. Mr. Kolesnik, an aide to Senator Grassley, accompanied them. I used that opportunity to share that report with her. The reason that we did that was, I have an FOIA request that has been passed to me by Shelby Quast.

The request is rather narrowly drawn, but I asked my staff to consider that request to be for any and everything, without regard to the definition that's in her request. In the context of doing that FOIA review, the report came to my attention. I should have known it before. I will take responsibility for the fact that the report—it was the first time I had seen that particular report, did not have name correlation to the case. As soon as I saw it, I said, my gosh, we've got to get this to the families. So I had it sanitized on the spot and I presented the appropriate part of that report to Shelby when she was in my office last week.

So there clearly was a slipup there. I will take responsibility for it. I'm the manager of the office. Although the report was in, as I said, in August 1990, once we did have a name correlation to the case, which we ultimately did, that report should have been provided to the family and it was an oversight.

For the committee's information, I'll summarize what the report says. Basically, a source provided the photo of the three men that we've come to know as Colonel Robertson, Albro Lundy, and Larry Stevens, and a second photo, that is the Federico Gonzales photo. The source says that his subsource, who passed him the photographs, said that he was given access to the prison camp west of Danang. He said he personally took both photographs, that four men were brought out of a confined location.

Three of them ultimately were grouped together with a banyan tree in the background, and he took their picture and that was the picture that ultimately became known as the Robertson/Stevens/Lundy picture. And the other picture that the subsource said he took was Federico Gonzales, and both those pictures came in to us. Federico Gonzales, as the committee well knows, is one of the fake pictures that came out of Soviet Military Review. It's actually a picture of a lieutenant general in the Soviet airborne forces. They drew a fake mustache on this man, and put a phony collar tab on his collar that says Federico Gonzales.

I have no idea if the source did take the Robertson/Stevens/Lundy photo, but I know for sure that he didn't take the Federico Gonzales photo, because that photo is a fake, unquestioned.

I assume the committee wants to know about where we are with the Carr investigation and I'd like to start out by saying I think there are a couple of Jack Baileys. There's a Jack Bailey who talks to the press and talks about how open and cooperative he's being. There's a Jack Bailey who talks with the Secretary of Defense and makes promises and doesn't fulfill them. And there's a Jack Bailey that I deal with, who bears no resemblance to the first two.

Since August, when I first met Jack Bailey, I have heard him say time after time, after time, in response to very detailed probing questions, "you'll have that information. I'll get it to you. I promise to give that to you. As soon as I get back to Bangkok—that information is over in Bangkok." When our people in Bangkok ask him for the information, he says, "well, that information is in California." And let me give you some specifics so that you can get your arms around this.

When I met with Jack for the first time, it was for 2 days of debriefing in the Pentagon in August of this year. Jack turned over copies of the Carr photos, and some of the negatives. He said that he had information on 16 prisoner-of-war camps in Laos. As soon as I heard that, I sent my staff downstairs to break out a 1:50,000 map. We laid that map down. I said, Jack, help us. Where are these camps? "I don't have those locations with me today. I'm coming in tomorrow, I'll bring them in tomorrow."

Jack came in the next day. We got the map out. Jack, come on, we've got to plot these locations so that we can get investigations rolling. "I wasn't able to bring that information in today. I found out I left it back in Bangkok. As soon as I get back to Bangkok, I'll get it for you." I got with Colonel Cole, who is the chief of Stony Beach. After those 2 days of debriefings we spoke with him, to alert him that as soon as Jack gets back to Bangkok, we've got to get the locations of these camps that he says he has so we can start the investigation. Jack never provided those camps.

On this last trip to Bangkok, in pursuing Jack's promises made to the Secretary in October, after Jack was unable to follow through or failed to make any sources available, and didn't reach any of the agreements that he said to the Secretary, I went back to that prior promise about the camps. "I'll get that for you," and Jack said, "I'll show you a videotape." Well, we saw the videotape. There was no specific information in the videotape, and when pressed to bring forward information that he—says he has about—16 locations where Americans are being held in Laos, we are still waiting.

I'd like the committee to realize how far the Government went in trying to work with Jack. After the October meeting, the day after he met with the Secretary, Jack promised to return to Bangkok promptly. I told Jack that I would personally come to Bangkok, along with Warren Gray and Colonel Jordan, from Deputy Assistant Secretary Ford's office, and that we would form a team and investigate the leads. Jack promised to get over there quickly and get things ready for us.

Well, Jack's departure was delayed. Ultimately, we got on the phone with him out in California, and convinced him he needed to get over there. We went out to California to meet him. The day prior to the flight out Jack informed us that he wasn't going. And why? "Well, I don't have any money to get over there." I said Jack, that's not a problem. I took my personal credit card out of my wallet. I called a travel agency, ordered a ticket and had it hand-delivered to Jack's address so that Jack would not have an excuse not to go over to Bangkok.

Later that day, Jack called and said, well, I have an illness in the family and I can't go. We reminded Jack of the commitments that he had made to the Secretary, of the importance of investigating this case. The most promising of all the photo cases that I have seen in my time in that office, since August. Jack said, "I don't think I can go."

The next morning we called him and said, Jack, please, you have the key to this investigation. You have all the leads. You have all the sources. Our investigative effort has been ordered to be stood down while we wait for you to provide your information, and until you connect with us on the ground, we're basically stymied. Well, Jack told us that his sister had died over the night and we expressed our sorrows to him. He said because of that he had some family arrangements to make and he would make those and join us in Bangkok in a day or so.

So we proceeded on to Bangkok. Jack did show up a couple of days later and, it's a very disappointing tale from that point on.

Over a period of 6 or 7 days he did not provide any leads, he did not provide any sources. The day before I was due to go back to Washington, other members of the team were staying on to continue to work with Jack, but I had to get back to help get ready for last week's hearings, and I told Jack that I was going to have to go back and other people would stay here and work with him.

I was saddened to have to carry back to the Secretary essentially a very disappointing message that we had not been able to make any progress, and I felt bad about that. Jack said well, he felt bad about it too and that he had pulled out all his stops and done everything he could and he felt poorly that he had not been able to come forward with any of his promises.

About an hour or two later at the embassy we got a phone call from Jack. Suddenly, Jack said, "I have got something for you. An individual who works with me," who he called Mario, had now been found. Mario was a critical link because he was the guy who says he introduced Jack to Mr. X, the fellow, if you remember the story, who Jack says actually took the pictures and was given access to the prison camp where Donald Carr is held. That really excited us.

So Jack said we will try to make some arrangements for you to meet Mario before you have to go back to Washington. I had a plane that was leaving at 5:30 in the morning, but nonetheless we ended up meeting Jack in one hotel and then it was like some sort of a cheap spy movie. He said, no this is not really where we are going to meet him. We are going to go somewhere else now, I just wanted to make sure that you did not have CIA guys tailing me.

I assured Jack that we did not, which we did not. But we went to another hotel location. The place where Jack wanted to have this interview take place was in the cocktail lounge of this very nice, modern hotel on the outskirts of Bangkok. It had a typical cocktail lounge, and band that you would never buy the record, but sitting there you will listen to them. The band played very loud. They got us a table, kind of close to the band. It was not sort of the arrangements that—I mean I spent 10 years as a Federal criminal investigator and I know how to do interviewing and I know there are certain environments that are good for it and certain ones are not, and I knew I was in one that was not all that good, but this was their show.

And so I said, well, can we move to a table that is at least a little quieter, and we moved. Mario was introduced to me. I went through a line of questioning to try to bring out Mario's name. And that was made light of the other day during Judge Turner's testimony, but in any case they did not provide Mario's name.

We started into the discussion and I said, well, Mario, I understand from Jack that he dispatched you, up country and into Laos to try to find Mr. X. "Yes, that is right. I looked for Mr. X." I said, "well, how did you do that, Mario?" Mario said, "well, I went to Laos and I went to places where I know Mr. X hangs out and I went to talk to people who know him and I went other places and asked people if they had seen him." And I said, "well, did you have a photograph or something that you could show people and say have you seen this man?" And he said, "no, I did not have a photograph. I described him to people."

And I said, "well, describe him to me, Mario." And Mario, gets this extremely worried look on his face and he looks over at Jack and he kind of goes like this, and Jack starts to talk and I said, Jack, please we are here to talk to Mario. Let us let Mario tell his story. I said, Mario, please, would you describe Mr. X to me? And Mario started rocking in his chair and you could see he was deep in thought and he said, "well, he is a Lao." And I said, Good, Mario, some specifics. And he said, "he is older than I am." Good. "He weighs more than I do." Good. I said, but Mario, if you are going to describe someone to someone who does not know a person, you are going to describe their face. Did he have long hair, or short hair, a long thin face, a round face, did he have a big nose, a thin nose, a fat nose, big ears, little ears, thin lips, fat lips? I said, did the guy wear glasses, and he said, "oh, no, no glasses." Every picture that Jack Bailey has given us of Mr. X he is wearing prescription glasses.

And I said, well, Mario, was Mr. X, did he have a beard or a moustache or was he clean shaven? "Oh no, he is clean shaven." Well, every picture we have of Mr. X, he has got a small moustache. It is not a very full one, but it is definitely a moustache. And we went on then to discuss with Mario how he conducted his search. I have to tell you, as someone who conducted investigations for some period of time in the employ of our Treasury Department, I know an evasive witness when I see one.

Mario was totally unable to provide any kind of embroidery or substantive detail to give me a comfort that this guy had really gone on a search mission. After 15 or 20 minutes I turned the questioning over to Bill Gadoury from JCRC, who was along with Colonel Cole. Bill Gadoury talked to him for about 15 minutes, well maybe half an hour, and basically, we got nothing from Mario; Mario knew nothing.

Mario did relay the story that was testified to last week by the other witnesses, Judge Turner and Jack Bailey, about this mysterious threat against Mario's life and against the life of his family and that large sums of money were offered by people in the U.S. Embassy to convince Mario not to work with Jack Bailey. They would not tell us. We did ask questions, well, what is this all about. And Mario said, I cannot tell you, they will kill me.

He would not give us the identity of this person. Basically we were told to drop that line of questioning. I have to tell you I came away from that period in Bangkok a very frustrated investigator. We went over there with high promise. Promises were made to the Secretary. Jack did give us a phone number that we could perhaps reach Mr. X at in upcountry Thailand. We called that phone number and there was no such working number.

Now, I do not know how other to describe it to you than as a very frustrating experience, without substantive detail. Jack Bailey showed us, he made a very, very excited lead-in to a videotape that he said would provide us substantive detail on U.S. prisoners. We invited him to the embassy to show us that videotape. And the videotape starts with something like this—we asked for a copy and he said we would get it, but like everything else, after numerous follow-ups we still do not have it, but the videotape starts like this:

It is shot from behind the individual who is alleged to be Mr. X. You never see his face. The camera never moves. It is on a tripod and Jack says, "well, I understand you have some information about prisoners in Laos. Will you share that with us?" And they fold out a map. It took them about 15 minutes to get oriented on the map. Where is Bangkok, where is Vientiane. Finally they got oriented on the map.

And Mr. X puts his finger on the map. They do not show you where it is because the camera is back here. And Mr. X says there are 168 prisoners here, and there are 33 prisoners here. And Jack goes, "168 prisoners, boy, that sounds a little preposterous." I am not sure the word was preposterous. I do not want to put that word out but he said, "that sounds a little high to me. Let's not talk about that one. Let's talk about the 33 that are over here."

And then they went through this incredibly long-winded dialogue totally devoid of any substantive detail. Jack says that videotape was shot in 1988 and that information ultimately developed into what we have come to now to know as the Carr case.

We have a memo for the record in the files of Stony Beach in Bangkok, dated March 1989: a phone call from Jack Bailey to Colonel Miki, then chief of the office. "I have some photographs," he called them the Carr photographs. "I am going to bring them in to you"—and he never came in.

The follow-up calls from the people in Stony Beach to Jack were basically like this; "well, I am trying to put together some more information. I want to give you a complete package. I will be in next week." And Jack never came in. The first time we saw those photographs was in July this year when they showed up on national television.

When we interviewed Jack in August I said, Jack, what have you been doing with these photographs? Why are we now just hearing about them, now, on television? "Well, I gave them to the Government over a year ago." Who did you give them to Jack? "To the Senate staff on Foreign Relations." I said, good, this is the first time we have seen them, so let's talk about them. In the interview in October, after the Secretary's visit, I said to Jack, we are kind of frustrated here, you are holding all the cards. You have got all the leads. If we are going to get to the bottom of this you have got to help us and Jack holds up the photographs and says, look, I am frustrated too. I have had these damn photographs over 3 years now and I have not been able to get anywhere with them.

Well, I will tell you why I am frustrated. How am I supposed to be in charge of the office that is conducting investigations, trying to find people, if private individuals are hoarding information and if it is turned into the Government and it is not given to me? I find that very frustrating. I find this whole case frustrating.

But at its core, we are left with the most compelling photographic evidence that the U.S. Government has seen. And there is one more thing that I have to tell you and I know I am being long-winded. But I think the committee needs to know this, and I think the American public needs to know exactly what is going on here.

When we met with Jack in October, he identified the location of this camp where Carr, and he told us 4 to 16 other Americans are held. He said, it is right here, in the northeast corner of the Plain of Jars between Ban Ban and Kon Kai, along where Route 7 runs. We had given Jack a map. At about 25 kilometers, apart, those two towns. The Senator knows this very well because I have been up here on the Hill briefing this information all summer long, telling people what we are doing and trying to get to the bottom of this case. Telling people all the intelligence assets that we have targeted against that location.

In October Jack tells us, "Well, that really was not the location," he said. "I felt like I could not trust you. The relocation is over here on the Burma border, 22 kilometers." So I have spent all summer, according to Jack, in wasted effort because he gave us the wrong location. He told the Secretary a location 22 miles from the Burmese border.

The next day, when we were sitting down talking, Jack says, "well, you know, I really not sure that he has been moved. I think he has been moved. When we get to Bangkok, it is not even the location 22 kilometers from the Burmese border. It is in the next province down, which is another 60 or 80 miles from the border, on a farm that is supposedly owned by one of the former royal princes of the Lao Government."

Through means available to us, intelligence means, we have been able to determine that neither one of the royal princes ever either lived or had a farm or any kind of a vacation or getaway location in that part of Laos. That part of Laos is an extremely hilly, mountainous area, very inaccessible, very poor, it is basically a place that time has forgotten.

One of the royal princes lived in Dien Tiem and one of the other royal princes lived in the eastern part of Laos. Neither of them lived in the western part, near the Burmese border. I do not know where to tell you, if Donald Carr is alive, where he is held. I have now got three locations that I have got to task all the available intelligence assets of the U.S. Government against.

We have made requests of the Lao Government to go in to allow U.S. investigators to come in and personally, physically observe these locations. Well, the only location we knew at the time which was the Plain of Jars, which Jack tells us now is not a real location. Maybe other people would have been more fortunate in getting information from Jack Bailey. Maybe the Senate has had better luck with him than we have, but it has been a very frustrating experience and I do not know how else to characterize it.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I think, Mr. Sheetz, your testimony is very valuable and important and I do not think it long-winded. It was long, but not long-winded. It was and is important for the committee to get the full texture of this.

I do not think a lot of people have a sense of the full texture of it. I have no doubt that Mr. Bailey and others would have a different view. We are going to sweat all of that out in public. We are going to sweat all of it out. And it is going to require some time and energy of sitting down with both of you present and working at it but in a sense also your testimony underscores the extraordinary nature of this issue today.

When you think about the Secretary of Defense assigning an aircraft, personnel, and people flying over personally, a Government official pulling out his own credit card and getting a ticket and traveling that distance and putting all of his intelligence assets on the line and going the route, if you will, and then at the end of it being told, well, I did not trust you. Those months of effort were sort of a test. It really is an incredible statement about where we are in this process 20 years later. Now it is vital that we continue to air this in this way and I think it is very positive, frankly, for people to begin to make some judgments about who is doing what here and how.

Before we begin the questioning let me just say to you that I do not want to diminish how I am sure you feel sitting here and some of the folks behind you. It is no fun, as a Federal official, having your bona fides questioned and the committee is not questioning them in a way that I think some are. The committee is trying to sort out who knows what.

But I want to say to you and others behind you that we are sensitive to that. It is no fun. We get it every weekend or when we go home or wherever we are, but we ask for it. Except you are public officials and the system has come to a grinding gridlock of lack of credibility and we have got a requirement here to sweat it out. You understand that, but I just want you to know that I think there are a lot of extraordinarily dedicated people who are committed to this issue who are working day and night to try to find if somebody is alive and to bring them home and regrettably we are, where we are, because there is a then and there is a now to this issue.

To a certain degree Secretary Cheney, in his testimony here acknowledged this by saying, look, I think some mistakes were made, but it was not on my watch. And I certainly took it as a very significant demarcation point here, which is saying, we are doing our best. We are confident of what we are doing. But we understand that some things have happened in the past.

To the degree we can sort out what happened in the past and understand it, we are going to help to understand this issue today. And that is what I want to begin to get at a little bit here in the beginning of my first round of questioning.

You said we are seeking a full accounting and we begin with this number 2,273. But frankly, I do not know as I listen to testimony and I look at different numbers that are in front of us, what the real numbers are and we have got to ascertain that as to Vietnam, particularly as to Laos and cross check where we are. Now you say that we are still dealing publicly with this magic 2,273 POW/MIA's, but in point of fact, there are not 2,273 today, are there?

Are there not at least 1,000 of those that we could say, with certainty to families, that they are now known to be deceased. Is that not accurate?

Mr. FORD. In fact in just the last day or so we've changed the number to 2,271. Two families have been notified. But you're right, the list is made up of an assortment of different classifications of individuals. And there are a large number of people on the list that were reported by their commander, or someone in the field, that they were killed in action. But their body was not recovered.

And that these people, earlier on, were separated out into a different category. And at some point it was decided that we wanted to account for all of these people. If we couldn't determine and get the family an answer about what happened to the body or what happened the day they died, that they ought to be also included in this list. So they were merged with those that were missing in action. Also with those that were killed in action, body not recovered.

ered. And so that about half of the 1,000 figure is fairly accurate, or listed in our files as killed in action.

The CHAIRMAN. And are there not—I mean some of these reports that I have seen, at least to me as a former combatant—seem pretty valid. I mean they have a texture of two to three people in the unit saw somebody get hit, or there was a significant explosion and somebody was underneath it, and nobody could be recovered by virtue of that. And there were enough witnesses, whatever, that you could really—can you not say with a certainty what happened, as reasonable people look at it?

Mr. FORD. Senator, I'm not sure of all of the background. It was before my time, but my understanding, and I understand it now, is that it was a matter of credibility. This issue has not become a cause celebre or an issue that people were concerned about last year, or the year before. It is through this entire period there has been concern by the families and others about POW/MIA's. And so that at some point people began to question, well, did you really know they were dead? Was the report accurate?

In fact we know—well on the other hand, there were some commanders thinking they were doing the family some good—would know someone was killed in action and had very good evidence of that, and would leave them MIA or POW. And so that these lists were not all that black and white. There was some confusion at the time during the battle, and whatever.

So that as an act of mercy for people with all this uncertainty I think, quite rightfully—the people that still would like to find out what happened to their son, or their husband, or their father on the day he was killed. We also owe them an accounting.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that, and I am not suggesting they should not get the accounting. What I am suggesting is that in many of those cases, at least to this Senator's reading, there is an accounting available. And I am uncertain as to why it has not been laid out in that way. I am going to come back to that.

I also, to take the other side of it, believe that for a significant portion of those numbers on the other side of that ledger, there are some huge questions. Now I am not going to abuse my time here. I want to come back to that in my second round. But there are some very significant questions about Laos and the correlation of people in Laos to those who returned. And we need to get to that.

I want this committee at this hearing, hopefully today, to get some base numbers from you. Some realities about the numbers of deserters alleged, and some realities about where we are in terms of Laos and Vietnam. My time is up, let me turn to Senator Smith.

Mr. FORD. Could I just respond briefly? We would be happy to provide you with the numbers as you request. But I also point out—and just don't want to overdo the issue but the fact is that there are a number of cases in which we have very convincing evidence from a forensic examination, dental and various other things, in which the families are unwilling to accept our judgment. And that we have remains back, we have a story, we have an explanation.

It seems to me understandable that there would be many families out there who at some point or another in the last 18 years or 20 years said, I'm not sure that my son died. Even though—and maybe in their head they know what they remember hearing and reading—but in their heart they don't accept it anymore. Now those numbers, as far as we're concerned, we have to deal with. An accounting for those people is just something that we feel obligated.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, that is part of the tragedy of what has happened here, and obviously the review of all 2,273 and the recommunication process is going to be critical to dealing with that. Senator Smith.

Senator SMITH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Just one question that I would like each of you to answer, if you could, and you can do it with a yes or no if you like. Have you seen, or do you know of, any information, good information, that would indicate that any American was alive? Any American who may have been a POW was alive after 1973. Mr. Quinn.

Mr. QUINN. I have seen information that there was a man named McKinley Nolan who was alive in North Vietnam.

Senator SMITH. I am not talking about hearsay. I understand that. I mean good solid stuff.

Mr. QUINN. I think this was good solid stuff that he was alive. All the reports indicated that he had in some way—was not a prisoner—that he had somehow had—and I don't want to use the words that might characterize him—but that he was somehow in a different status and was moving about more freely, and had some type of different relationship with the authorities in North Vietnam.

Senator SMITH. And so it is yes in the case of Nolan.

Mr. QUINN. Yes, and there was one other report that was attributed to the mortician, who said that he saw some people with Mr. Garwood. And I think DIA and DOD is better to do that, but that report struck me as indicating—I mean it had a lot of detail and he apparently—the mortician was able to identify Garwood. And so I've seen those two that are reports that really ought to be followed up, and that there were some Americans that there is—that are possibly alive after that time.

Senator SMITH. Nothing else.

Mr. QUINN. I can't think of anything else right now.

Senator SMITH. Carl.

Mr. FORD. I have not seen anything that would convince me that there are not some Americans still alive.

Senator SMITH. Anybody alive after 1973.

Mr. FORD. The reports that I have seen suggest that there were. How many I'm not sure, but I think that the reports suggest that there was one for sure, that the Vietnamese didn't tell us about until much later. That was one, but there are also some reports suggesting that people might have been alive we didn't know about. We didn't know where they were—and probably died afterward.

I think that the evidence is not real compelling, but it certainly causes me to pause. The more important question for me—and I accept the importance of the question in 1973 as an important point of saying well, why did it happen? We have focused most of our efforts on are there any alive today and can we find them? And that as we accumulate evidence and as we go through that process, we are able to begin to piece together a little bit better, what happened back in 1972, or 1973, or 1975. And the evidence, as we accumulate it, more and more suggests that there are probably some left alive in 1973.

Senator SMITH. I am trying to get a quicker answer because I want to ask you a couple other questions.

Mr. FORD. I understand. We're here as long as you want us.

Mr. SHEETZ. As Senator Grassley well knows, DIA did a compilation of reports that were received in the period after Operation Homecoming. It is our assessment at DIA that those reports are not definitive—they are not firm, credible evidence. They were reports—they were evaluated at the time.

And one thing the committee might do is, in its future deliberations or investigative efforts, call in the commander or the then commander of the Joint Casualty Resolution Center, which had the responsibility for checking those kinds of reports on the ground. Warren Gray who was on my staff was part of that JCRC in 1973, 1974 time frame.

Senator SMITH. Excuse me. We cannot go into a lot of detail here, but let me just phrase it this way and just ask for a yes or no. You have seen the information that Mr. Bell provided us. Based on having seen that information, do you agree with him or disagree with him—that based upon the information that he provided, that he discussed—that that would indicate that there was some indication of somebody alive other than Garwood. Somebody alive after 1973, not necessarily alive today. Do you agree that that was evidence, at least, that was presented?

Mr. SHEETZ. DIA has held all along that the report of the mortician that he saw three Caucasians who were identified to him by another person as probably being Americans—that that report stands. That there is validity to that report.

Senator SMITH. I want to ask a couple of quick—and I know my time is almost up. Mr. Sheetz—back on the committee, staff and myself, and I am not sure who else was there—did talk to Mr. Bell as well. And we are also trying to sort that out and I think you gave a pretty good analysis of what happened on your end. Just trying to follow up on a couple of points that he made with us. Did he show you photographs that he alleged, or was led to believe—one or the other—of the alleged facility where Carr may have been held. Did he show you photographs?

Mr. SHEETZ. Yes, he did.

Senator SMITH. And in one of those, without being too particular—in one of those photographs was a building—pretty obviously distinguishable building. Do you know where that building is?

Mr. SHEETZ. I do not.

Senator SMITH. So we do not know where that building is.

Mr. SHEETZ. That's true.

Senator SMITH. Are we making an effort to try to find out where it is?

Mr. SHEETZ. Every effort that I know how to make. And generally, we are employing all of the many and varied assets of the U.S. intelligence community, and when we get into closed session I will be happy to brief you at length on that, sir.

Senator SMITH. Finally, a couple of quick points on Bailey. Was there any prior contact by the U.S. Government with Mario, the source that you interviewed in Bangkok with Bailey? Was there any prior to that meeting—was there any prior contact by the Government with Mario?

Mr. SHEETZ. I have no personal knowledge of that. As I understand his allegation—and he was not specific with me—that this contact involved—possibly involved, U.S. Embassy personnel who are working the POW/MIA issue. I have not spoken to them and, to be honest, I've heard two possible names mentioned. I have no personal knowledge of that.

Senator SMITH. Because he did allege that an individual from the U.S. Embassy, as you stated, paid Mario money.

Mr. SHEETZ. I think Jack told us the sum was $6,000.

Senator SMITH. That is what he told us, but you do not have any knowledge of that?

Mr. SHEETZ. I do not.

Senator SMITH. And you tried to check that out.

Mr. SHEETZ. I have not had the opportunity to speak with the two individuals whose names, I think, may be candidates. I would like an opportunity to get to the bottom of that too. I would be happy to work with you on that.

[The information referred to follows:]

The allegations were investigated and found to be fabrications.

Senator SMITH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator McCain.

Senator MCCAIN. Thank you Mr. Chairman. Mr. Quinn, I hope that if some other allegations arise, or information about the whereabouts of an American POW you will notify the committee. We were not happy to read about the information concerning an American in the Soviet Union in the newspaper.

Mr. QUINN. Well we will certainly keep the committee informed, Senator. But I will point out the day after I testified here, I testified on the House side and was asked a lot of questions about the Soviet Union. And I gave a full briefing of everything that we knew at that time. So there is certainly no hesitancy on our part to withhold any information.

Senator MCCAIN. I was not implying that. Ms. Monika Jensen-Stevenson alleged that the Vietnamese offered 260 prisoners to the Woodcock Commission for a sum of money. I believe you were a translator for the Woodcock Commission. Is that true?

Mr. QUINN. Yes, sir, and I addressed that in my opening remarks, Senator.

Senator MCCAIN. And you have no knowledge of any offer.

Mr. QUINN. Absolutely not.

Senator MCCAIN. You would have had knowledge of such an offer.

Mr. QUINN. Unless this was something that was whispered to one person, and that person didn't share it with anyone else. I would have had knowledge of that. I was in all of the meetings. I heard everything that was said, and I was in all the discussions afterward. I was part of writing, encrypting and transmitting Mr. Woodcock's personal messages to the President of the U.S. And there was absolutely no discussion, at any time, of anything like that.

Senator MCCAIN. Mr. Quinn, do you know—or do any of the witnesses know of any of the liaisons between administration officials and identified members of organized crime?

Mr. QUINN. No, Senator.

Senator MCCAIN. Mr. Ford.

Mr. FORD. Senator, I've heard the allegations but I've not seen any evidence yet.

Senator MCCAIN. Mr. Sheetz.

Mr. SHEETZ. No knowledge.

Senator MCCAIN. Mr. Quinn, do you know of any sanctioned rescue missions, or missions by the Department of Defense, after 1973?

Mr. QUINN. No Senator, I don't.

Senator MCCAIN. Mr. Ford.

Mr. FORD. I have been told that there was one mission.

Senator MCCAIN. That there was one mission. Mr. Sheetz.

Mr. SHEETZ. The same information that Mr. Ford has.

Mr. QUINN. Senator, if I could—there was a mission that was described to me after the previous hearing which I had never heard of before—which was described as reconnaissance mission but not a rescue mission. I make that differentiation, but I have no information about any rescue attempts.

Senator MCCAIN. Thank you. The trip that Mr. Usry made in August—that was as a result of information provided by Mr. Khambang—is that correct?

Mr. FORD. That is correct.

Senator MCCAIN. And at the time—

Mr. FORD. There may have been others, but that was the major source of information.

Senator MCCAIN. And Mr. Khambang was along on the trip, and he was going to provide additional information to corroborate the fact that Americans were somewhere alive.

Mr. FORD. He was going to bring in the people that had provided him the information.

Senator MCCAIN. And at the time, did you know that Mr. Khambang—according to the assistant Secretary of Defense for National Security Affairs—Mr. Khambang passed bogus dogtag information to his superiors in the Arlington Police Department where he worked as a clerk? And that turned out to be fabricated. In the fall of 1990 passed a roll of film and other information—the purported Borah photograph—you knew all of that when you decided to have that trip proceed.

Mr. FORD. The details had been accumulated and put into that particular document for the record. At the time, I was aware that Khambang had been very much involved, for a number of years, in this, and that we had considered his information to be unhelpful—incorrect.

Senator MCCAIN. Have you or anyone else in your department—the Department of Defense—falsified any photographs?

Mr. FORD. Absolutely not.

Mr. SHEETZ. No sir.

Senator McCAIN. Mr. Sheetz, what was the result of Mr. Gaudoury's trip back with the individual to meet the individual in Laos?

Mr. SHEETZ. The Laos Government did make Mr. Ahroa available. He was interviewed by Mr. Gaudoury from JCRC, and Mr. Eddie Smith from Stony Beach. Once Mr. Ahroa's story was gotten—a written statement was taken.

Senator McCAIN. Mr. Sheetz, I am talking about the follow-up trip with family members.

Mr. SHEETZ. It's happening right now.

Mr. FORD. The details that I have are incomplete, but Mr. Gaudoury met up with two of Mr. Borah's sons in Tokyo and they flew to Bangkok. There was some delay in getting the arrangements made for the individual in Laos to be made available. My understanding is that that, in fact, is now in process, and I have not heard what the results of that meeting are.

Senator McCAIN. You will let us know.

Mr. QUINN. They're going into Laos tonight.

Senator McCAIN. You will let us know the results. Have you been able to receive any of those affidavits that the judge said proved that the pictures were tampered with?

Mr. FORD. We have not received any, to my knowledge. I am hoping that the committee has and will share it with us.

[The information referred to follows:]

We have determined that the individual in the 1990 photograph is not LT Borah, but a Lao highland tribesman named Ahrao. To assist the family in overcoming their doubts, the Department of Defense facilitated the meeting of the Borah brothers with Mr. Ahrao in Savannakhet, Laos. Mr. Ahrao identified himself in the original widely publicized 1990 photos. He explained the circumstances under which the photos were taken, and he displayed for the two brothers the jacket that he was wearing the day the original 1990 photos were taken. Also present for the meeting was the second individual in the 1990 photo, the individual first identified as "LT Borah's guard." These individuals are obviously the two individuals pictured in the original 1990 photographs purported to depict "Borah and his guard."

We consider the "Borah" photo issue, and the 1990 photos purported to depict Lt Borah, resolved. The case of Lieutenant Borah is, however, an unresolved discrepancy case, and is still under investigation by the Department of Defense.

Senator McCAIN. I do not think we have. Mr. Quinn, I hope that we will continue to exhaust every effort as far as the Soviet Union is concerned. And perhaps from our embassy level—with particularly KGB and Russian defense personnel, we could ascertain—

Mr. QUINN. We have—the embassy has begun that effort and has had several conversations. But obviously there is more to be done and we would like to have access to those records.

Senator McCAIN. If I could slightly refine Senator Smith's question, do you believe there were any American prisoners of war alive in Southeast Asia—or do you have any evidence of that, or do have a belief in that—after 1973?

Mr. QUINN. The reports that I saw—McKinley Nolan wasn't being treated as a prisoner of war. The other report, which is the one that Mr. Sheetz also referred to, is that there were two Caucasians who were with Garwood in 1979, who seemed to also be moving about freely. And these people were identified to the mortician by Vietnamese present as being other American pilots. But the mortician himself didn't know whether they were. But I've not seen any reports of people actually being held in captivity.

Mr. FORD. Senator, when you refine it that way, it certainly makes me answer much more guarded and cautious. I would still have to say that the evidence that I have seen suggests that there could be. But I do not have any evidence that there were.

Mr. SHEETZ. I am unaware of any firm credible evidence that Americans were held against their will after Operation Homecoming.

Senator McCAIN. Thank you. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I want to come back to that, but I will wait until my time. Senator Brown?

Senator BROWN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Secretary Quinn, can you give us a brief summary of what the State Department has done in follow-up on the wire stories, reports of a POW being in the Soviet Union?

Mr. QUINN. Yes, certainly, Senator. As soon as we saw that, we sent an instruction to our embassy in Moscow to immediately follow up on that. Our embassy has sought the journalist who wrote the story as being the first source of information and has had an interview with that individual.

I don't know if you were here before when I made reference to that. Let me repeat that for you. We have just literally gotten this morning the report of that interview, the journalist was a little difficult to find, in which the journalist said that the story carried by this journal, Kommersant, ran in the Russian-language version and an English-language version and that there were some changes to the story in the two languages.

And that, in the Russian version, which the journalist said is the authoritative one, the paragraphs were ordered differently and the meaning conveyed in the Russian-language version was much less certain than any American continued to reside in that city.

In the Soviet Union, a small town in the Soviet Union, where it was identified that an American was living in the English-language version, it is more certain. The journalist told our embassy representative that the Russian version is what he was conveying, that he was not certain. Nonetheless, we are going to send an officer to this town, if we can.

The reason I say if we can is that one, there is not an airfield there. We will have to fly into an area nearby and find a way to get there. We can do that. But it also is in an area which is a Soviet testing range or testing area and therefore is considered militarily sensitive and so we are not certain that we will be allowed to go.

But of course we are going to do everything and push in every way to get there. Now, we are also following up several other approaches with the Soviet Union. We have had conversations with Soviet officials about access to records, and some of this has to do with POW/MIA's from Korea and World War II, which is not an area of my responsibility.

But you mentioned President Bush raised it with General Secretary Gorbachev. Secretary Baker has raised it twice with the Soviet foreign minister. I have had several conversations with senior Soviet diplomats who lived and worked in Vietnam in the period after the war was over.

In one case, one man was there before the war and after the war. And they said to me in two separate conversations that they had never seen any information coming to the Soviet Embassy, and they were in senior positions, indicating that any American remained alive in Vietnam. And they pointed out that the Soviet Union had a very close relationship with Vietnam and there were Soviets all over Vietnam, workers, technicians, assistants, officials. And they felt with a very high degree of confidence that if there was such an American or Americans being held in captivity, that they would have heard about it, that they would have found out about it.

Now they qualify this always to say, well, there always could be something that we did not see or did not hear about, but they were very certain in their judgments and they passed this to us. They said in the spirit of the new relationship which exists between our two countries.

And they also came in conversations where we discussed other issues that relate to Cambodia and the Cambodian settlement, in which we felt that they were being very forthcoming and providing us assessments and information about the current situation there, which we strong reason to believe were accurate. So I judged, in these conversations, that they were giving me a straight answer. That was my impression.

Senator BROWN. Can you give me an idea of what we have done in the way of requests to the Government of Laos and Cambodia for access and where that stands?

Mr. QUINN. Access to?

Senator BROWN. Access to follow-up on live sighting reports to send personnel in?

Mr. QUINN. Yes, sir. Of course in July, I raised the photo cases and well as the Borah and Carr cases at that time and they have been willing to follow-up on these immediately and unilaterally and then to work with our investigative teams and to take them to meet with individuals who are associated with these live sighting cases in Cambodian.

An investigative team from Stony Beach and Bangkok went into Phnom Penh in July and was taken around and actually met and interviewed people who were associated with the handling of the Robertson/Stevens/Lundy photo.

And you know from Mr. Ford's testimony that we also received access to the individual who was the person who was identified in the photo as Lieutenant Borah. And right now we have a mission that is underway in Laos to go to Xiang Khoang Province to follow-up on the Carr case.

Senator BROWN. What about all the other sightings we have had that are located in Laos? Is that something we have made a request on or where does that stand?

Mr. QUINN. We have a number of the other discrepancy cases in Laos and we have had, in the past year, continued increased access to these. And for the first time, we are in Pua Pang Province which contains the site of where the old Pathet Lao headquarters was. We have never been able to get there before.

We have also had cooperation in expanding the number of investigations that we can do each year. I do not want to leave the impression that I think it is perfect. We would like to be able to go out ourselves and not have to ask anybody and just get in our own helicopter and fly out there and investigate without asking anybody's permission or agreement. That is the ideal. That is what we strive for in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. But in the context of continuing—

Senator BROWN. They have turned it down but they have been willing to go with advance notice of where you were going?

Mr. QUINN. What has happened in Laos and Cambodia is when we have particular requests and Vietnam, in the case of the photo case, when we have particular request with information, we are able to get out there, but with them to go and follow it up.

Senator BROWN. I am sorry, I do not mean to be rude, but let me take you back so that I understand. We have asked for, from them, the ability to go through the countryside without a guide and without advance notice and they have turned us down on that request.

Mr. QUINN. I am not sure that we have put the question to the Lao that way, Senator, in those terms, and they have said no, you can not do that, but you can do it this way.

We have, in Vietnam, made the point that we want to have it for our investigators to be able to go out and we have told them that is the ideal. I am not sure that they have said, no, you cannot do that, either.

We have conveyed this. We certainly—I do not think there is any misunderstanding on their part that that is what we would like to do but I do not think it has been done in that we want this and no, you cannot do it. Usually the answer, the Asian style, is never to say no, no, you cannot do that. It is not the way business is done. The way you get the answer back is that you get some other type of increased cooperation.

Let me check, if I could.

Senator BROWN. Would you? I have found over the years that it is difficult to get the answer you want if you do not ask the question.

Mr. FORD. If I might, I think we may not have phrased it exactly as you did, but in Vietnam we have asked to do this and we have been told that we have to submit a request in advance. When we have done that, we have had trouble even getting permission after having requested it. In the case of, obviously what we are concerned about is that if the report we have is of an American in captivity, either by the Government or private sources, that if we tell the Government we want to go and look for somebody in a particular area that it will tip off the people there so that they will move them.

There are other cases in which there are reports of Americans living free and we have been trying to test the system with those cases. But because one, we wanted to test it, and two, we thought it was safer to do it that way, rather than trying to do the cases. Where we have reports of captivity, we have not had much luck.

Now I am concerned and upset about that. I am not particularly surprised. Vietnam is still a Communist country. They do not even let their own people travel freely. And so that what we are asking them is extraordinary. It is an extraordinary situation. And I think that they have indicated to members of this committee and certainly to other people that they are going to, and we just simply think that they ought to let us have the access we need.

Mr. QUINN. I have checked with people who have a better understanding of the full record of our dealings with Laos. And the situation is basically as I said to you, Senator, that we have made the statement that this is what we want. We want unfettered access. They do not say yes, they do not say no. They take note of it and we then get back some other answer and some other, we make some movement.

We have discussed with them the possibility of our own kind of transportation or having U.S. transportation in there, which would be something that if you then had it and you controlled it, you could get out and move. And in both the case of Vietnam and Laos, the indication is that they would be favorable to such an arrangement, but with their pilots, indicating that they want to maintain a degree of control.

Senator BROWN. Thank you.

Senator SMITH. Senator Grassley?

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you. Secretary Quinn, before I ask a line of questioning, I want to ask, I would like to ask about Bill Bell. I had a conversation through staff with Bangkok, the Bangkok embassy, and I understand that he was given a visa in Bangkok but it was not approved by Hanoi. And I guess I would like to have you tell me, if you can, the status of Bill Bell's return to Hanoi.

Now this is 24 hours ago that I had this information.

Mr. QUINN. Well, I had a call last night at 10 from our DCM in Bangkok, who told me that Bill was scheduled to go back, I guess tomorrow morning, that he had his visa. He has his ticket and that the embassy, which has had conversation with the Vietnamese Embassy about this was told that there was no problem of his going back.

Mr. FORD. The information I have is essentially the same but Senator Grassley, what we had heard earlier and I am sure that what you and your staff have heard earlier, is that a middle-level official whom Bill deals with on a regular basis in their unit, that those POW/MIA's indicated to us that they were not going to let Bill back in or give him a visa until he provided certain information, the transcript of testimony, and then not until Christmas. When our official on the ground heard that he said, what are you talking about, you have got to be crazy. Our representative said, well, we would like this in writing and he said, well, this is unofficial but you should understand this is the case. I know Secretary Quinn and I just about exploded when we heard this. And the fact is that the committee was very much involved and we were waiting to see what would happen.

But it looks like it was not official and that it was some mid-level official who was out of sorts with the testimony or whatever and was trying to take it out on the people there in the office.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, your response, as you have stated, you were outraged about it, would be very appropriate from my point of view. If you were not outraged, I would expect you to be outraged.

Because this is some bit of evidence of whether or not the Vietnamese evidence is going to fully cooperate with us. And so we want to make sure that there is obviously no retaliation.

Secretary Quinn, when you were questioned by Senator Kerry about divulging classified information on Vietnamese, I am not sure we are all talking about the same document, so I would like to have a clerk give you a couple pages that I have here and have you take a look at that. And I would like to go back to the Secretary's line of questioning, but I would like to start from a different point.

Now this is no effort on my part to just get some basic information. And if you cannot give the information now, if it is just a case of your willingness to provide the information.

On our first day of hearings last week, I asked you the following question and received the following response. And I would read from the transcript of our hearing.

I asked you, we heard this morning that the U.S. and Vietnam have agreed to certain procedures to investigating live sighting reports.

My question to you, does this include our government turning over classified file information on POW's like sources and methods.

Your response, a partial response, certainly not turning over anything about sources and methods. I couldn't imagine a situation in which we would do that.

And then, skipping a sentence, in the case of the Robertson/Stevens/Lundy photo, we did provide information to the Vietnamese Government, the Cambodian Government and the Laotian Government, which we expect them to investigate wherewith and we asked them to provide us answers. But we certainly didn't turn over anything.

In fact, one of the things Colonel Cole and I did and Warren Gray, until about 2 in the morning, was going through this information to make absolutely sure that in no way was there any compromise of where we were getting our information.

Well, 2 days later then we had Debra Robertson Bardsley testify that she had recently returned from Hanoi and was told that she was the first family member to have met with Vietnamese officials. She stated the following. Either during or after her testimony, number one, a Vietnamese official whom she described as a Mr. Dich, and I spelled that D-i-c-h, and whom she said is the head of Vietnam MRA office, gave her a list of sources and a memo describing locations of live sightings pertaining to Colonel Robertson.

Ms. Bardsley says that Mr. Dich expressed a desire to punish the sources on the list. These lists were provided to the Vietnamese by an American official, according to Mr. Dich. There was a corroborating witness with Ms. Bardsley who heard this. Mr. Dich said that the American official who provided this information was Mr. Ken Quinn.

The name of K. Quinn, as you can see, is written at the top of each page and it is in Vietnamese style script, along with a date of July 26, which I believe is when you traveled to Vietnam.

If this is bona fide live sighting intelligence and if Mr. Dich's statement is true regarding how he received this information, then your statement on November 5 would appear to be erroneous. On the other hand, no one has yet made such an allegation and this committee expects to determine the truth in this matter.

But I wanted your response to that, please.

Mr. QUINN. The two documents that you sent down to me are indeed the two pieces of paper which I gave to Vietnamese officials in Hanoi on the 26th of July of this year. These two pieces of paper were prepared by me, Warren Gray and Colonel Cole in Bangkok. They are not documents that exist any place else in the U.S. Government. They are extracts and I went through information with Cambodian officials and with Vietnamese officials about what we knew and where we wanted to go and why and I spoke that information.

Actually, I spoke it in Vietnamese, in Vietnam and then, gave them this as an aid for them to remember because there was a lot of information going no place on either of these documents. And there is a third document which I gave to the Cambodians which is different than this and which I am happy to provide to you.

On no place on here is there any name or person, or method from which we gained information. This is information about people who were in some way involved with the photos that we wanted to investigate. This was all worked on and cleared by the representatives of the Defence Intelligence Agency who were with me and it also was shown to Mr. Bell before we presented it to make sure, triple check, that there was no problem in doing this.

The reason we did this was that we had the photo. The family members said, these are our loved ones. They had a date on it, 1990, and we had other reports suggesting that the reports in this photo could be alive. We wanted to go and see. We wanted to go and try to find them any way that we could. We could not do that alone. We are not able to go into any of these countries and move around alone by ourselves. Therefore, we can only do it with the Government's assistance. Particularly in the case of Vietnam, they did not take these photos seriously at first. They considered it to be some type of propaganda, operation, misinformation, what you will. And so we wanted, and I wanted to convince them that this was serious and so Mr. Gray and Mr. Bell and I sat down with them for 2 hours and walked through what we knew. This is not all that we know about this. When you see the full report you will see that there is a great deal more information, but this is where we told them we want to go.

Here is why we want to go and we want to go there as fast as we possibly can and it is of crucial importance to the United States of America that we get there. I made the judgment that in doing this that we could accomplish that, and in fact we got into the prisons that are in that area and were able to look and see for ourselves. And we also got access to other information about the Robertson case, as a result of that.

In Cambodia we got to go and talk to many but not all of the people on this list. We got to go, Colonel Cole is here, he can tell you that we actually went to the places where Robertson and Stevens and Lundy were supposedly held. This had never happened before. We had never been in the prison before. We had never been in Cambodia before. We never got to go around and actually go to the places where they were being held and so that is why I did that. In retrospect, if it is considered to be a misjudgment, I take the blame for that, not Mr. Gray, or Mr. Cole. I do not consider it was, I consider it a real advance and frankly, the Vietnamese and Cambodians considered us to be acting in a serious way with them, in a cooperative way and that is important because tomorrow we get another report, another photo, that says here is an American who is alive and well so Cambodia or Vietnam are going to face the same question.

How do we get out there and find out for ourselves. We are not at a point where we can go alone. We can only go if they let us go and we want to do that as rapidly as we can. That is not the best situation. That is not the way I would like it to be. That is not the way that we are working to have it be but to get there. It is, unfortunately, a step by step process.

I consider what we have done a big step, but, I am sorry to go on for long, Senator, but I wanted you to understand.

Mr. FORD. Can I add one brief comment to this. I had a brief conversation with, as I recall, at least the representatives, of the Robertson family and the Lundy family during this period when the photographs and identification of that photograph had just been made.

And one of the subjects that we talked about, because they were urging, not only Ken, but me and others, Go out there. Talk to the Chinese. Talk to the Vietnamese. Talk to the Soviets and I had a discussion about the risks involved and did they understand what they were asking us to do. That if, in fact, these governments were holding back, were holding their loved ones, that this was a certain risk that we were going to have to take and that we were trying to do it more indirectly than they were suggesting.

And they said, you understand the quandary we are in and the pressure we are feeling. And they both—or the people there understood, that we would have to be taking some extraordinary steps. And so, that while in the best of all worlds we would have tried to have done it differently, everyone was aware that this was pushing the envelope way far out and we thought there was good cause.

Mr. QUINN. And I did not take the step of going to work with the Vietnamese on this without consulting the families. I spent 2 hours on July 12, with all families assembled and told them that there were these two choices. And they concurred in our going and working with the governments involved. I wanted to be, sure, I did not want them to come back later and say, you have gone out and messed it up. You should not have done it that way.

I wanted it to be a consultative process, and as I mentioned earlier, Senator, all along and afterward I kept Shelby Quast informed of this. I had an hour and 15 minute debrief in my office about the results. I told her—I did not give her the documents, but I told her what had happened and I told her what the Vietnamese had said.

Senator GRASSLEY. Could you comment for me on the point that has been made to us several times about what I would call the mentality that is presented by the Vietnamese that give us a name so we can punish the sources, punish the people. Now you are looking like that has never been expressed to you.

Mr. QUINN. No that was expressed to me.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, just comment whether or not that is something that is a real fear out there that we have to be overly cautious about, protecting sources.

Mr. QUINN. Obviously, if we have a source who is giving us information the last thing we want to have is the Vietnamese or Cambodians or Laotians or anybody else to know who that is. That has to be protected. I would make the point that these people involved are not sources from whom we got information. They are people who we have information that they would know something about, the photos, or were actually involved in holding the Americans.

Senator GRASSLEY. In this specific case—

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, I need to try to get to Senator Kohl.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, this is in regard to the same point. The people on this list, you see, Mr. Dich stating to Debra that we want to punish these people. You see the people on the list. That was what was expressed to Debra.

Mr. QUINN. I understand, I mean, the Vietnamese do not accept the photo as legitimate and they have said publicly and privately that they believe that people are doing this to impune them and their reputation on this and to thwart better relationship between our countries or they are doing it as a way of just a scam to make money. And so they are concerned about that. So you have to make some judgments if you want it investigated. You have to give them something so you can go out and investigate it. If we want to talk to the only people would know about this, we have to go through them to get to them.

So, in there, we try to separate out anybody who is a source so that they would not come in for any type of punishment but to name the places or the individuals so that we can go and try to find them—

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just say to the Senator that one of the things the committee is going to gain from our trip in February will be an opportunity to really confront some of those things firsthand and to have a sense of some of the difficulties that are being worked with. I mean we tend to forget that this really is a closed society, a Communist country, and I know you do not forget but the reality is that I think a lot of progress has been made in the last months in overcoming some of those problems.

Mr. QUINN. Could I make one last comment on this and I apologize. I had information in a case we thought the Americans would really be alive. My judgment call along the way was, What is it that is going to get us the maximum ability for our country to find out about these people. That was the bottom line decision making and that was always in my mind. What is it that we should do here on the ground and in an evolving situation that will get us the best chance to find out about this photo and these men in it.

Maybe somebody else would come to a different judgment. This is the judgment that I came to. And we got certain results, which I think were clearly things which we had never had before and access we had never had before and was to me, that is a good result.

The one other factor in this case, the Federal case, to keep in mind is that the photo was publicized. I do not know by whom, here in the U.S., the day after the families gave it to us. Certainly not by us and that which put the case into a very different kind of public perspective. We had already made our decisions. We had already approached the Vietnamese Government on this investigation, but in publicizing it like that, we had not provided any of this information where we thought anybody was or who might be involved, called great attention to it in Vietnam before we ever got there and I think probably, in the end, it was not helpful.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Kohl, thank you for your patience.

Senator KOHL. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Gentlemen, I would like to talk just a little about POW's in the Soviet Union, and specifically I would like to talk about a Lt. Robert Reynolds who was shot down while piloting a Navy surveillance plane in the Baltic Sea in 1950. Apparently we were aware that this crew was shot down and that there were some survivors. That and other stories were written up in the Los Angeles Times earlier this year. I wrote a letter to you, Mr. Ford, about this case and you responded very courteously and very promptly and I appreciate that very much.

What you said is that we inquired back in 1950 when it happened and were told that there apparently were not any survivors, but made no further inquiries until 1991. I ask the question: How is it that between 1950 and 1991 we did not go back? The evidence was that there was some indication that some of these people were there and that they were alive. What happens in 41 years that we do not go back and reinquire and ask whether or not there is some information that would be useful.

Mr. FORD. I do not know, Senator. I was not even aware until this particular issue came up that we had made the original inquiry or that there was this person, or there was this information about a person in the Soviet Union. As soon as we knew something about it, we tried to respond to it in various ways in terms of asking and pressing the Soviets for more information and we continue to do that in this case. But why, for 41 years we did not. I think it was simply the people that originally checked it out and were concerned about it did not pass that concern on to others and somehow over the years, we forgot that it even existed.

Senator KOHL. Again I would just make a comment. During this time we inquired about many, many people in the Soviet Union about whom we were concerned: Soviet Jewry, rightfully so, Raoul Wallenberg and many others. Why were we not at the same time asking consistently asking about POW's and missing POW's in the Soviet Union that we did not have any information on or inadequate information on? If your answer is, We did not, and I understand that. But is there some reason? Is there something I am missing here?

Mr. FORD. No, Senator, I think that the organization which has been looking at this issue in the Defense Department, DIA, and in my office and also in Hawaii, we have been focusing on Indochina POW's and it is only in the past year as concerns were expressed, as people's interest on this issue widened.

For example, Senator Smith has been very interested in Korea. We have not really done much on Korea and so that we are widening our scope from my office to these other areas for the first time and in our new organizational structure we are going to have people here for the first time focus on Soviet Cold War POW issues. We are going to have somebody who focuses on Korea and World War II issues, but why was it, why it was not done before I do not know, but we are going to do it now and we have got my office, my office has put out or is in the process of putting contracts to people like Rand to tell us how to do that. How do we go back 41 years and begin the search over again and most of the records either have not been kept or destroyed and a researcher is in fact on his way shortly to the Soviet Union and begin the process of what we might be able to find. So that, it is a small step, but it is at least we have listened and we understand people's concern and we will try as best we can to do something about it.

Senator KOHL. I am very happy to hear that. I was going to ask you if we are now prepared to handle in a systematic, professionalized manner and you are suggesting we are doing that.

Mr. FORD. Yes, sir.

Senator KOHL. I would like to ask again about Lieutenant Reynolds. Could your office help me to get information to his family and to get the release of whatever was formerly classified as top secret or anything like that 41 years ago? Can you see to it that we get all possible information that we have to the family of Lieutenant Reynolds?

Mr. FORD. We will do whatever we can to help them Senator.

Senator KOHL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Robb.

Senator ROBB. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will be very brief. I had to go preside over the Senate the last hour, and I do not want to repeat any of the testimony that these witnesses may have given to the committee. I will review it later on, but I wonder maybe—and I assume you are about to wind up with this panel and go into the next panel.

The CHAIRMAN. Actually, not yet. We are going to have another round.

Senator ROBB. Well, let me just ask a general question. But in light of the information that was being elicited toward the period just before I left, I got the feeling that anyone who has any official responsibility for the handling of any reports or dealings with POW/MIA families is now prepared to give virtually all information—with the exception of those sanitized pieces that might relate to something that could still be regarded as legitimately needing classification—to the families if they request it.

Is that too much of a generalization? Would families of those who have unresolved cases be able to count on virtually all of the information, with the possible exception of very precise information, that might not be available to them at this point?

Mr. FORD. Senator, the current practice—or the practice certainly in the past—has been to provide the families with information that has been correlated specifically with their loved ones—as opposed to all the information that happened in that year, or that area in which their loved one was lost. And so part of that was privacy concerns—of giving information out about other families cases—and partly it was sources and methods.

And I think that over the years, the families have grown dissatisfied with that, and they understand that there is more information there that certainly is not associated directly with their loved one. But they would like to be able to look and see if we missed something. They would like to look back over our shoulder and see if—because they're more personally involved—they would do something a little bit differently than we did.

And, quite frankly, we've got to find a way to satisfy that requirement. And we have got to find a way to give the families more confidence that they're seeing everything that we've got. And if there are some things that are so highly classified and sensitive that we can't show it to them directly—that they can have the committee, or someone with a security clearance—check for them.

And we would like to try to eliminate that as much as possible. We haven't gotten that answer yet, but DIA and DOD and ISA—and we will be working with others. We're going to find in the very short term some sort of an answer for information for the families. We need to do better, and we just simply have to find the answer and do it as quickly as we can.

Senator ROBB. Are you in a position at this time to reassure them in response to any particular question that they might have that either you are giving them all the information you have, or you are giving them all the information sanitized to protect methods and sources, whatever the case may be?

Or there is another body of information that does not relate directly to their particular loved one's case that, for whatever reason, is not available—but so that they have some sense that they are getting as complete an answer and an explanation for why any missing pieces are not provided for them at this time.

Mr. FORD. I can't give you that assurance. That is our goal and objective—that we try to provide them with every piece of information that we can that comes to our attention and that we correlate to their family member. It is then sanitized and provided to the families through their service contacts, the casualty officers. In some cases we have been able to demonstrate that we have done that quite well. In other cases, things have gotten misplaced or weren't done quickly enough.

And some family members are missing bits and pieces. We wanted to go back and make sure that every family has everything they were supposed to have some time in the past—and if they don't have it, get it to them. And second, we want to expand the definition of what family members are allowed to see, so that they have more confidence that they are seeing all of the relevant information. They know we've put this restriction that has to be correlated directly to your family.

That limits, quite frankly, a lot of the information that is available to us—that is not available to families. We've made a judgment that it is not relevant to their case. They would like to test that for themselves and over the years—because of suspicions and reports coming out of Southeast Asia—they don't really believe that we're giving them everything. So we've got to find a way to give them that confidence that we are.

Senator ROBB. But is there not—I mean if there is no rationale for protecting methods or sources—or some other sensitivity or classified reason for prohibiting the release of certain portions of the information. Is there any general reason, other than—I understand the desire not to give everyone increased expectation from the way they would interpret other facts as it might apply to their loved one. But I mean, just simply to make relevant information—tell them we do not think it is relevant for this reason to their loved one, but simply to make it available to them.

If you would make it available to someone who presented an argument that it was relevant to their particular loved one, why will you not give it to some other person who would make a more generic argument about a time, or period, or whatever the case may be?

Mr. FORD. You are right, and what we're trying to look for is a way that gives them some more say in determining what is relevant for their case. And we simply are committed to try to find that. I don't have the exact answer today, but we have already begun to think about it and how we might do it. And I have been trying out ideas on my people, and various others. And hopefully we will have a better way of doing this in the not too distant future.

Senator ROBB. It would seem to me—and this is just straight off the top of my head—it is always dangerous. But a relevant chronology of all of the types of information that are available, that would have some historical purpose, that they could simply go through at length.

Because this is obviously an emotional matter with families and they want to have access to all the information that they think just might be relevant. And I do not see any real harm—other than perhaps their own increased expectations based upon the availability of it—to come from it.

Mr. FORD. Yes, sir.

Senator ROBB. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much, Senator Robb.

With respect to the Soviet issue, the translation of the text says—what happened to the Americans brought to the USSR is unknown—and it says their total number. Which seems to speak with a kind of definitive notion that people were brought there. Do you agree that seems to assert that, Mr. Quinn?

Mr. QUINN. That would be the way that, I think, a reasonable person would read it.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you satisfied—I do not want to go into the detail, but that is the text and so that is a matter of public record. I do not want to go into any of the confidential aspects of the State Department communications, but are you satisfied that all aspects of that particular case—and the other information—are now being followed up with the Soviets?

Mr. QUINN. I am satisfied that is in process. Certainly, that is not complete and I would think as part of this—just beyond this story is the question of access to files, archives, and records, which could affect a great many other individuals. So this is part of a much larger process which has started, but which still has a considerable ways to go.

The CHAIRMAN. Was any of the information that Colonel Bui Tin gave this committee with respect to this Soviet interrogation a revelation to you?

Mr. QUINN. I have to admit I didn't see all of that part and I'm not familiar.

The CHAIRMAN. He acknowledged there were Soviets—particularly along the Laotian borders and in Laos—where that kind of interrogation might have taken place. And there are indications, obviously from the Soviets, that it did.

Mr. QUINN. I guess I'm not familiar with having seen reports earlier that would confirm for me that it did take place. But I always suspected that Soviets somehow would be getting information.

The CHAIRMAN. Does it not stand to reason? I mean, if the Soviet Union is supporting Vietnam to a significant degree, as it was, and they have personnel in the region. And their number 1 enemy is the U.S. and an American electronic plane goes down and they capture people alive. I would assume we are going to think that they are going to interrogate them.

Mr. QUINN. They are pros. They would be out after that as fast as we would be out after it.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me come back to the numbers again for a minute. The 2,273—did that include Bob Garwood?

Mr. FORD. Mr. Chairman, I don't know for sure. I will have to check and see.

Mr. SHEETZ. He was—at the time he was unaccounted for when he came out. He came off the list.

The CHAIRMAN. So as of—let us go back—as of 1973 the accords are signed, our formal involvement terminates, correct? What was the number of unaccounted for POW/MIA at that time?

Mr. SHEETZ. I will have to provide that for the record. I don't have that figure in front of me today.

[See p. 932 of the appendix.]

The CHAIRMAN. Do you Mr. Ford?

Mr. FORD. No.

The CHAIRMAN. What were the number of people shot down in Laos?

Mr. SHEETZ. I think it is roughly 1,300. I don't have the exact number. That can be provided for the record.

The CHAIRMAN. I thought it was about 500.

Mr. FORD. 526, but when you say shot down, those are all of the ones—the total number of POW/MIA category people. The KIA—we have a body recovered.

Mr. SHEETZ. If I could clarify my number. As I understand it, 1,300 aviators were shot down and roughly 800 were recovered through search and rescue mission efforts, leaving the unresolved number that are on the list of unaccounted for.

The CHAIRMAN. Added to people on the ground.

Mr. SHEETZ. This number includes people on the ground and aviators.

The CHAIRMAN. And does not people on the ground include all clandestine personnel lost?

Mr. SHEETZ. To the best of my knowledge, the numbers we're working with—2,271—would include all personnel lost by all means.

The CHAIRMAN. So all personnel lost during the so-called secret war are included in that number.

Mr. FORD. They are now. That was not the case early on, and the reason was because of the security and the fear that those people might be killed because of the type operations at some point. They were added to the list.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know when they were added, because it is very important?

Mr. FORD. I would have to get the exact date for you. It was in the late 1970's.

The Department of Defense is in the process of conducting research on the question. There were employees of the Department of Defense that were operating in another capacity that were added to the list. (This would involve somewhere between 5 and 10 people.)

The CHAIRMAN. So that really sheds an extraordinary—I mean that is in and of itself a very significant kind of disparity that exists here. That is one of reasons people are saying—wait a minute guys, we are not getting the right numbers. Am I accurate?

Mr. FORD. That is correct. That is why people still believe that there's a secret list and—like many stories—there is some truth to it. There was at one point—as all covert action operators and special forces—they were not initially put on the list. But in fact, they have been now and so all of those people are accounted for, and a number of people have been accounted for in terms of remains.

The CHAIRMAN. That is very significant because, in fact, an EC-47 was shot down after the Paris accord, after Operation Homecoming, is that not correct?

Mr. FORD. I do not know that specifically. I take your word for it.

The CHAIRMAN. What about the Cressman case, Peter Cressman? Are you familiar with the details of the Cressman case?

Mr. FORD. I'm not.

The CHAIRMAN. I mean, did we not have information that personnel were taken alive from the EC-47 that was brought down? And Mr. Trowbridge, you are shaking your head.

Mr. SHEETZ. I have an analyst here—our senior analyst for the whole office.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you want to bring him up to the table?

Mr. SHEETZ. This is Robert De Statte. He was the first person in the Hanoi office.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. De Statte, would you raise your right hand, please.

[Witness sworn.]

STATEMENT OF ROBERT De STATTE, SENIOR ANALYST, DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

Mr. DE STATTE. My name is Robert De Statte. I'm with DIA, a senior analyst.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been with them?

Mr. DE STATTE. I've been with the office since September 1979.

The CHAIRMAN. Can you just help me understand this, because this is one of those cases where a lot of people have questions and it keeps arising as an issue. It is my understanding that an EC-47 was shot down. Evidence was found that five people survived that crash. Is that correct?

Mr. DE STATTE. The aircraft was shot down, sir, on the 5th of February, 1973. Over the years there has grown the impression that we had evidence that some members of that crew survived. In fact, a careful analysis of the information that led to that impression reveals that the information did not pertain to that crew.

There never has been any evidence that any members of that crew survived. And I have unclassified summaries of the incident that we prepared back in 1987, and which have been released to the House task force. And we also provided that to Senator Smith back in 1989.

The CHAIRMAN. We will make those part of the record, and you can just give me the summary quickly, because my time is up. But I actually want to pursue these numbers issues because they really leap out as a major component of people's misunderstanding—or real misunderstandings here.

Carl Ford has stepped out, but I would like to ask that this committee have, by next week if we can, a full listing, chronologically, of all those people, as of Operation Homecoming, that we listed POW, MIA, body unrecovered, and so forth—in the appropriate categories.

A cross accounting of all of those returned during Operation Homecoming measured against that list, and a subsequent addition of any personnel now listed known to be lost and not accounted for in the course of that process. And a separate listing of those people known to have been captured in Laos and whether or not they were accounted for in the repatriation process with Operation Homecoming, and if not, what accounting there is for them.

Mr. SHEETZ. We will be pleased to provide that.

A total of 16 Americans are known to have been captured in Laos.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be very helpful in giving us the baseline to begin to determine what numbers we are dealing with and who is really accounted for or not in that process. Now were codes broken—radio codes—in Laos, between the period of 1969 to 1973, which allowed us to track prisoners in Laos?

Mr. DE STATTE. Sir, if I could answer that question. I think that topic should not be discussed in open session. And I think it should be more correctly addressed to a different agency.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there a security reason why—I mean, we now know we broke the Japanese code in World War II. Is there a problem in saying we know we broke the Laotian code of the Pathet Lao, if we did?

Mr. SHEETZ. Sir, that work is all done by another intelligence agency.

The CHAIRMAN. I am just asking whether you know—do you know whether it was broken?

Mr. SHEETZ. I have no personal knowledge of that.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you, Mr. De Statte?

Mr. DE STATTE. Sir, I have only generalized knowledge, and I wouldn't feel comfortable answering.

The CHAIRMAN. I am not putting you on the hot seat. Is it your generalized knowledge we did break some codes, do you know that? Yes or no. And what is the problem here, guys, this was 20-some years ago? Can you articulate it to me?

Mr. SHEETZ. You really need to have a spokesman here from the other agency that does that work.

The CHAIRMAN. But you guys are the Defense Intelligence Agency—you are analyzing this with respect to this issue.

Mr. SHEETZ. And we are given their reports and entrusted to work with their reports under what is called the third agency rule. One agency is not allowed to declassify information from another agency. I mean, it's a law. I'm not allowed to disclose another agency's intelligence. That agency, as you well know sir, very jealously guards their capabilities.

The CHAIRMAN. We have met with that other agency and they have told us they are going to provide everything. But I am having—well, okay, look—if that is the rule, and you cannot break the rule, then we are going to have to get somebody who is going to.

I am going to put this committee in the position of asking you to break the rule. So we will deal with the appropriate people to see that you, in the appropriate circumstances, can answer the question. As I know the Secretary said, and I am not going to put you on the spot for that, you have to follow the rules and I understand that.

Mr. DE STATTE. Sir, if I could just add, speaking on a personal basis on this, I used to do that kind of work, and I had the experience—very early in my career of seeing first hand the expense and the amount of recovering from the compromising of that type of information.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that.

Mr. DE STATTE. I fear I appeared evasive, and I didn't want to appear so.

The CHAIRMAN. I support covert activity. Some people do not like me because I do, and I think we need them. And it is a fact and reality of modern political and modern life. But there is a difference between telling us how we broke the code and whether we did, and there is a difference in just the level of knowledge here. Now you feel that that's a compromise—I am not going to put you on the spot. But I am going to put you on the spot privately and otherwise, and we are going to find out where the reality is of what we did then, and what we knew then. Fair enough.

Senator Smith.

Senator SMITH. Let me just follow up on that just briefly by asking the question this way. Do any of you have any information or knowledge of any American service personnel, whether they be intelligence personnel, military personnel or any other type private citizen personnel, any type of American personnel, lost in Laos after the final shipment of POW's came home in 1973, yes or no?

Mr. FORD. Yes.

Mr. SHEETZ. Yes.

Senator SMITH. So the conclusion—I do not want to put words into your mouth, but we will get into some of this in executive session, but the conclusion therefore is that American military, and if I am wrong, say so, American military personnel were lost in Laos after 1973, after the Paris peace accords were signed and after all of the POW's had come home, correct.

Mr. SHEETZ. My staff reminded me of something I should have remembered myself, that those individuals who were lost after the period that you referenced were civilian employees of the U.S. Government and not uniformed military personnel.

Senator SMITH. Let me ask another question. Did the United States of America or anybody directed by the United States of America, conduct any type of operations in Laos after the last shipment of American prisoners in 1973 came home, any type of operation at all, either directly put on by the United States sponsored by the U.S. or indirectly or any other way? Is there any activity that this country was involved in in any way after 1973 in Laos?

Mr. FORD. I don't know, but we will get that for the record.

[The information referred to follows.]

During a closed session on Monday, 25 November 1991, the subject of operations was discussed at length between members of the Committee and DIA, CIA, and NSA representatives. Since the closed session provided the answer to this question and due to the sensitive nature of this subject, further response is not necessary.

Senator SMITH. I cannot believe that you do not know. Please do not embarrass yourself. You guys are in charge of investigating whether or not there are live Americans in Southeast Asia. Please, yes or no?

Mr. FORD. Senator, the answer, the honest answer is I don't know. I will get you the answer.

Senator SMITH. Do you know, Mr. Quinn?

Mr. QUINN. When I was asked this the other day, I did not—had never heard of any such operation. Mr. Bell then gave his testimony which caused me to ask questions of people who were operating and involved back then who told me that yes, there was.

Senator SMITH. Mr. Sheetz?

Mr. SHEETZ. I don't have personal knowledge. I wouldn't be surprised if such things occurred. I have not been briefed and don't have personal knowledge.

Senator SMITH. So the conclusion, and I am just trying to get stuff for the record, I am not trying to beat on you, but the conclusion here is that the individuals directly responsible for seeking and finding American military personnel in Laos do not know whether or not, except in one case, do not know whether or not there were any military operations or any type of U.S. Government-sponsored operations in Laos after the accords were signed and after the last POW's came home.

And the point is, if we conducted operations in Laos, we can assume you have already stated the personnel were lost, so that first point, we conducted operations, the second point is, personnel were lost. That does not mean anybody is alive but it does mean that you ought to know something about those operations and at least, in two cases, you do not even know whether there were operations.

I want to get into that later. A couple of other questions. Mr. Quinn, I just want to follow up briefly on Senator Grassley's line of questioning and again, this is for clarification only in my mind.

I understand sources and methods. We all do. And I have the list of individuals and I understand your explanation, but it has always bothered me that whether they are called sources or whether they are called information or individuals or secondary sources or whatever they are, that the families who are going over there and looking on their own cannot have the same information.

And I am not going to mention names on the list in public session, but in a couple of occasions, people on the list, one is listed as a General who commands an unidentified prison; another is a General's son who commands an unidentified prison and they name the site of the prison; and another is identified as somebody in the Cambodian Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

I have seen reports that have been gleaned where names of the refugee has been stricken from the report with a conclusion being drawn at the bottom was this guy was a fabricator, but we still keep that individual classified as a source. I do not understand. Please give me an explanation as to why an individual who might be in the Cambodian Ministry, who says he knows something about a photograph, whether that photograph is bogus or not, why is that person less important in terms of protection than a refugee who comes and you have concluded is a fabricator. I do not understand that. Explain that to me, please.

Mr. QUINN. Because the reason the person's name was on here is one, this individual in the Cambodian Ministry of Foreign Affairs nor anybody else on the list, has told us anything. Whereas the refugee who goes into the camp and tells us is the source of our information and therefore we want to protect that person.

The reason we gave these names to the Cambodians is these are the people we wanted to talk to. So to find them, since we couldn't go ourselves, we gave them the names and said, we want to talk to these people.

Senator SMITH. But if, in fact, any of these individuals on this sheet of paper that we have here that was provided by one of the family members, if in fact, any of those individuals deliberately provided bogus information, I could care less what the Vietnamese do to them and the sooner the better. No question about that.

But if they did not and it was accurate and you do not know that, when you provide these names to the Vietnamese, if these people, by any stretch of imagination, any of these individuals here are in fact valid in terms of the information provided and in fact, they did take a photograph, see a photograph, see the individual in the photograph as is alleged, they are dead.

And I do not understand the logic with the way you folks protect stuff and I know how much you protected over the years from me and from others. I do not understand why you feel, I mean, we had testimony this morning from people from CIL-HI, that they contradict a lot of you folks have been saying. They say that we are not, the Vietnamese are absolutely not forthcoming in the information. No way are they forthcoming, as a matter of fact, maybe deliberately providing misleading information in the help of identifying remains.

Yet, when you provide this kind of information to them, I understand your motive for it, I am not questioning that. I understand you are trying to do your job there. But when you provide that information to them, you are kind of assuming, really, in your mind, in your own heart, that it is bogus and we are going to get these guys for doing that.

And you are saying these guys are leveling with me because otherwise you would not provide the source or investigate the source. And these are sources.

The CHAIRMAN. Could I just say one thing. I think in this morning's briefing the assertion was, with respect to the past.

Senator SMITH. That is true. That is true.

The CHAIRMAN. Although, with respect to, but there is an inquiry outstanding in fairness. There is an inquiry outstanding that they still do not get an answer to and we can talk about that privately.

Mr. QUINN. I would like to answer the question. I don't consider these bogus names on the Cambodians at all. They are real and they have the photos and they know something about the photos. And they know where the photos, where they got the photos from and maybe they had a hand in them.

And they, more than anybody else that we know of, could give us the lead.

Senator SMITH. Let me just ask one last question.

Mr. QUINN. If I could finish my point, with all respect. The choice is talk to them or not talk to them. Pursue the only leads that we have to American military men who might be alive in some form of captivity or some state or not to do it.

That's the choice.

Senator SMITH. And if you are dealing with a totally trustworthy, honest government who is sincerely providing information which we have got statements to the contrary, then I can certainly agree with you very much.

And I am not trying to give you a hard time. I am trying to clarify. You mentioned a General and you said, in the information you gave to the Vietnamese, that he commands a prison and you give the site of the prison and you also say that this prison holds, according to the reports, 20 American prisoners and that this photo was taken there.

Now if the Vietnamese are not telling the truth and if the Vietnamese are holding prisoners they are certainly going to have something to say to this General whose name you provided them. Now, I mean, for God's sake, and if he's bogus and he is not providing information, then who cares what happens to him? But you are making that assumption when you provide the information. I think I have made my point.

Mr. QUINN. I would just make the point in return and I take your question in the spirit, Senator, that you have said. Is, that we have to, if we're going to try to get out this, get in touch with, talk to the individuals who are involved. We don't know in the case of the General whether he's a real General or not. The Vietnamese have given us information about how their prison system runs and the rank of people who would be involved in it and the nature of the report would raise questions, I think, in your mind or my mind as to whether this was really a person involved.

But what was important, what was really important, was to get into the prison. If these men are being held in that prison, if the Vietnamese knew in advance, they have the photo, they're not going to leave them there.

Senator SMITH. But you did not get in there.

Mr. QUINN. Yes, we did.

Senator SMITH. They did not allow you to look everywhere in the prison. I know that for a fact.

Mr. QUINN. What is important is to be able to go in and to look and see the descriptions of what's involved, to see if this facility matches up in what it's location was.

Senator SMITH. Did they let you look everywhere in that prison?

Mr. QUINN. I did not go in the prison cells. Bill Bell was the man who went in there himself. But it is important information that we obtained.

The CHAIRMAN. Again, that just underscores the dilemma here. I am sure that nobody is going to be fooled into believing they are going to let you look in a prison where they are holding people and find them.

Mr. QUINN. I think it would be very helpful, Senator, if the committee or members of the committee would give us your best advice as representatives of the American people. What should we do? In that kind of situation, how should we proceed?

We have a name, somebody who has information about, possibly about live Americans. We want to talk to that person. We can't get to him by ourselves by any means that we have. Obviously, if we did have means to get to them by ourself, directly or indirectly, we would do that and we would never provide the name. But when you can't, what should we do?

Should we go to the Vietnamese, the Cambodians and the Laos and say, we want to talk to this person because of that or should we not and do nothing? I think it would be very helpful for us to have your advice.

The CHAIRMAN. Since you are on the lawn, it is fair for us to go out on the lawn. And I will answer that. I think you did the right thing in that situation. And I said that, I said it previously and I do not fault it.

But I think the thing I faulted was the family relationship seemed to be breached and there was a distinction. But I do not, in God's name, know how you can begin to do this process, unless we will trust some people on the ground in Vietnam to build some relationships and make some judgments about those relationships.

And somewhere along the line here, somebody has got to begin to believe that not every American working for the U.S. Government is going to become part of some process to hide Americans in Vietnam. And I am willing to trust that some people are not going to do that, obviously.

I just think somewhere we have got to have a basis of rationality that enters into this and what the committee I hope will do is have the guts to make some choices that are based upon reasonableness and rationality. But again, to do that, we have to have base figures and some basic understanding.

I am a little disappointed that you folks do not have at your fingertips those numbers and the ability to tell me, Senator, here is how many went down. Here is exactly how many were unaccounted for. Here is how many, I mean, this is basic, to be able to put the full story out on this thing. And I just think, look, we are dealing with a different phenomenon than any of us ever wished or thought we might be dealing with.

I think it is 67 percent of all Americans believe that people might be there alive. I mean, you are in a sense, under siege here. And you are going to have to come back with the Desert Storm mentality on this one in order to deal with that. And I think you are beginning to see that and recognize that, that this is not, as I said at the outset of the hearing, something that anyone of us wished upon anyone of us, or this committee or the U.S. Senate.

But it exists because it has this tenacious life of its own. And the only way this committee can avoid becoming tarred by this process is to guarantee that we are opening it up and I think you sense that is what we are trying to do. But my advice to you is that you have got to go at it to a degree but do a better job of bringing people into the process and letting them know they are part of it. I do not know what else you could have done, Ken, and I think you have to do that.

I may have spoken out of turn and alone on that.

Where are we here? Senator McCain?

Senator McCAIN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman and Mr. Quinn. Will you make the details of the road map public, so the families can know it?

Mr. QUINN. We have treated the road map as a confidential document because it is a negotiating document with the Vietnamese and we wanted them to know it was a serious document.

And so, as a result, we have brief extensively on it to the public and to the Congress. We have not made any decision to declassify it.

Senator McCAIN. I would appreciate it if you would, particularly since the Vietnamese have given it to everybody. It is not exactly a secret anymore. We would appreciate that, if you would give that serious consideration.

[The information referred to follows:]

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, DC 20520,
December 10, 1991.

DEAR SENATOR KERRY: During Deputy Assistant Secretary Kenneth Quinn's November 15 appearance before the Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs, he took questions and promised responses on whether the Department would declassify the "roadmap" with Vietnam and on whether French POW's were held in Vietnam after 1954. I am pleased to provide you with the Department's responses.

We recognize the Committee's need to understand clearly the role the POW/MIA issue plays in the process of normalization with Vietnam. As a result, we have decided to provide the Committee with a copy of the roadmap. That copy is enclosed with this letter. Because it is an essential element of our diplomatic exchange with Vietnam, we have decided that it should remain classified. We believe keeping the roadmap classified will increase the likelihood that the Vietnamese will treat it as a serious expression of the U.S. Government's views, particularly with regard to the need for progress on the POW/MIA issue.

We would appreciate it if the Committee would treat the roadmap as a classified document. I hope access to the roadmap will assist the Committee in its study of the POW/MIA issue and its role in our relations with Vietnam.

As for the French experience in Vietnam, the French Government informs us that the Vietnamese repatriated all French POW's prior to the end of 1954. No French POW's remained in Vietnam against their will, though some stayed behind voluntarily and returned to France sometime later. Some 6,900 soldiers from the French Expeditionary Corps, including 2,200 ethnic French, were unaccounted for in 1954, but the French say these men were lost under uncertain conditions and, in most cases, were thought to be dead. They were not prisoners. The French have told us that the Vietnamese have cooperated in the repatriation of remains of French soldiers.

Please let me know if I can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

JANET G. MULLINS,
Assistant Secretary Legislative Affairs.

[See p. 1 of the appendix.]

Mr. Ford, are you familiar with a procedure called computer superimposition?

Mr. FORD. I have to admit, again, I'm not.

Senator McCAIN. Employed by Mr. Michael Charney, a forensic anthropologist at Colorado State University, are you familiar with that?

Mr. FORD. One, I'm not a forensic expert. That term is never, if I heard it at one point, I've forgotten it. I do know a little bit about Dr. Charney's work and what the FBI and what Sandia and Los Alamos think about it.

Senator McCAIN. What is that?

Mr. FORD. They don't think it is scientific and they have disagreed with every—every time we send them one of Dr. Charney's reports, they say they don't think it is very professional or scientifically done.

It certainly would not be used, for example, the FBI report. as evidence in a trial. It would just be thrown out as insufficient evidence.

Senator McCAIN. Would you provide in writing for the record some of those responses and views about Dr. Charney's work. Because we are presented with that as evidence that is rather compelling and I think it is important to clear that up.

[See pps. 475-498 of the appendix.]

Mr. Sheetz, did you want to comment?

Mr. SHEETZ. Senator, I might add, some of the American public might not know that Dr. Charney had a photograph of the photo that was alleged to be Daniel Borah before such time as the U.S. Government was able to identify the individual as the 77-year-old Lao ethnic hill tribesmen. And Dr. Charney performed his analysis and in the report it says, absolutely, positively, this is Daniel Borah.

And within a matter of weeks, we found the individual.

Senator McCAIN. Dr. Charney did state that according to using his procedure that that was, indeed, Captain Borah?

Mr. SHEETZ. Yes. And we can provide that to the record for you.

Senator McCAIN. Thank you very much.

Mr. Ford, did the Department of Defense destroy any of the fingerprint files of the 271 missing Americans?

Mr. FORD. Not to my knowledge, Senator.

Senator McCAIN. Would you please research that and give us a more complete answer? There are allegations, as you know, that fingerprints have been destroyed by the Department of Defense. The response we have gotten from the Department of Defense is that that was done by the FBI. I would like an unequivocal statement about that, if you would, please.

Mr. FORD. Yes, sir. Senator, you're referring to the letter from the FBI suggesting that they were the ones responsible for the fingerprints.

Senator McCAIN. Yes.

Mr. FORD. If you're talking about malicious destruction, the answer is no. Since we're not responsible for fingerprints, what people did with them—officially, I think the answer is still no. But we'll double-check.

Senator McCAIN. I would like you to double-check, and even if it was not malicious, we should know because there is suspicion out there that needs to be resolved. Finally—because we have run way over time, Mr. Chairman, I not want to take up too much more time—is it true, Mr. Quinn, that the French Government has maintained that the Vietnamese repatriated French prisoners from the first Indochina war, as they agreed to? Do you know the answer to that?

Mr. QUINN. I don't know the answer to that.

Senator McCAIN. Would you have the State Department provide that for the record? As you know, there are significant allegations—in fact, most of us believe it is true—that the Vietnamese held back French prisoners of war after the Indochina war, and the counter idea, or statement by the French Government is that those that were left behind, such as those observed by Ms. Monika Stevens' husband, were those who voluntarily stayed behind and did not wish to return. I think it is a kind of an important point in the historical context, if you would provide us a response.

Mr. QUINN. Certainly.

[See letter on p. 669.]

Senator McCAIN. I thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that is a very good request, Senator.

Senator Reid.

Senator REID. I apologize for not being here for most of the morning, Mr. Chairman, but I have been involved in a supplemental appropriation markup and also the Holloway conference which has been time consuming. I do have just a few questions, though.

One of the questions I have developed, in reviewing this material is, why have we not had, for lack of a better word, assets on the ground—people on the ground, spies, whatever we want to call them, wandering around trying to get information. It seems like everything we are doing is, here we come, if you have anybody in prison, show us the prison. Do you understand what I am saying?

Mr. FORD. Yes, sir. But that, quite obviously, any discussion of spies and espionage ought to be done in closed session.

Senator REID. OK. That will be fine. Mr. Chairman, I would like either the staff, when he has gone—I will just tell you myself. I would like next week, someone to come by that knows what has or has not gone on, and I assume that it could be either, and give that to me sometime at my office.

Mr. FORD. I would be happy to do that.

Senator REID. I look forward to that. What would it take, Mr. Quinn, to declassify the so-called road map? Would it take an act of Congress, would it take a Presidential order? What does it take?

Mr. QUINN. I will put this to people who are my superiors at the State Department and it would be their decision.

Senator REID. Their other classified things, how do we unclassify them or declassify them?

Mr. QUINN. The person who classified them in the beginning would make a judgment that the material is—no longer needs to be classified.

Senator REID. Who classified the road map?

Mr. QUINN. The senior most person who worked on it in the State Department at that time was Under Secretary Kimmitt. So he would probably be—

Senator REID. Kimmitt and/or his—is he still there?

Mr. QUINN. He's not. No.

Senator REID. So Kimmitt's replacement could declassify it?

Mr. QUINN. I presume so. I assume there will be a discussion with the Deputy Secretary and the Secretary about that.

Senator REID. That is why it is tough to declassify things. You never know where to go to declassify them. Right?

Mr. QUINN. Well, normally, the documents have an originator, who will be the person responsible for that.

Senator REID. I guess, Mr. Quinn, my question is as Senator McCain—and I think he speaks for the committee—we would like to have that road map be declassified, because everybody knows about it anyway, and there are people who think we are holding it back because there is some secret, conniving, deceitful stuff in the road map, there is not. At least that is my understanding.

So the question that I have and Senator McCain has—we want to get it declassified—how long is it going to take, what does it take?

Mr. QUINN. As soon as I go back, I will raise this issue to my superiors.

Senator REID. When can we expect to hear back from you on that issue alone?

Mr. QUINN. I would hope in a couple of days.

Senator REID. And that is whether or not it is going to be declassified, and if it is not, what would it take to declassify it?

Mr. QUINN. Right.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator, just in answer to your other request on the DIA briefing, we have a briefing set up for next Wednesday, at 2:30, which will be a closed session, secret briefing from CIA. Mr. Gates will be there and other relevant people.

Senator REID. We will cover this issue.

The CHAIRMAN. We will also have NSA and DIA, and we will cover the—at least begin to cover the surface.

Senator REID. I have no further questions. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you. Before we move to the next panel—and gentlemen, I would like to ask you—this stuff kind of percolates out there and so, rather than let it percolate too much longer, what I want to do is have you remain here while Mr. Ustry reports back to the committee, and if there are glaring inconsistencies or problems that you see right away, as they come up we are going to deal with them right away, so we can kind of sift through everything.

A couple of quick housekeeping issues here. On the declassification of records in the POW/MIA cases, in the past you have said you do not want to declassify a lot of those, based on the need to protect the families. Clearly, a lot of the families do not feel they are being protected by it and they want it. Is that changed now or changing? What will happen in the next few days with respect to their requests and to declassification of those records?

Mr. FORD. Senator, to the best of our knowledge, and where we find it's not the case, we change it, we believe that the families have been provided every bit of information that we have in our files that has been sanitized, that pertain to their particular family member.

There is considerably more information available that is not correlated with their particular cases. It may have been 5 years before, 6 months afterward, whatever, but because it doesn't mention their loved one, it's not been provided to them in the past. We are trying to work out a system that gives the families more confidence they are seeing all the information that's relevant to them.

We do not have the details worked out. We are going to try to do that as soon as possible. I would suggest to you that we are thinking more in terms, at least at this point, in terms of keeping things classified, but with greater access than declassifying and providing it in unclassified form. We think that it probably answers their questions about confidence if they see the real material. We've just got to work out the details. Mr. Gates will be here.

The CHAIRMAN. What would you anticipate as a schedule for that?

Mr. FORD. The only schedule that I can give you—and it's not very good—is as soon as possible.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you keep the committee apprised of that effort, No. 1, and No. 2—

Mr. FORD. And before we make a decision, also I will be consulting with you, members of this committee to get your thoughts about it. If we're going to do something, let's do it that everybody, the families, the committee, the intelligence community, everybody feels comfortable with what we're going to do, and so we will not do anything precipitously that you don't know about.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, if, as we proceed along here—as I think you have heard, a number of the committee members say in private meetings with you and publicly, that there is a feeling by the committee that a large amount of this information needs to be made public in order to deal with the questions people have and the doubts they have.

What would be the process, specifically, should the committee feel that there is information that must be made public, because we think it answers certain questions and the committee, as a whole, makes a judgment that we do not view something in there as compromising an interest? Who would we put that to and who will make the decision?

Mr. FORD. I'll have to find out for sure. I mean, the place to start would be to notify me, and then I would find whether it's Duane Andrews, who is the Assistant Secretary over at C3I or whether it's Mr. Gates, or whether it's NSA's director. Ultimately, the DCI is the one responsible for this material, and responsible to the President for its protection, and so that in many cases, we at Defense can't just simply, on our own accord, do that. And so, that—this is going to require discussions among the intelligence community and with us involved in POW/MIA.

I am confident that there is an awareness on the part of all officials that this is an issue that you're very concerned about and that we need to find some answers that resolve the families' concerns and your questions. We hope still that we can do that and, at the same time of course, protect sources and methods.

Our ability to continue to collect information for the families and for other intelligence projects require us to try to keep our sources and methods protected. We've used that more time than I would like to admit as an excuse, rather than as the real answer and I'm just simply telling you that we're going to—that's over. We're going to find a way to do this.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand that. I appreciate that and I take that at face value. Let me make a formal request though, on behalf of the committee, that you could let us know, perhaps next week, if there is going to be the interagency review. Whatever is going to happen here, can we have a very specific statement to the committee of who will be part of that, and what we can anticipate as a protocol between us for that to happen, because we do not want to get trapped into where you have got to talk to them. Oh, well, it is fine by us. You have got to go back to them.

I think everyone on this committee has been through that before and the committee does not have time to do it and the process will not sustain that kind of process. So if you could tell us, Senator, if you have a request for declassification, it must come to me and I will process it through four or five people, and it will be returned to you and we know what is happening.

Mr. FORD. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that will be helpful.

Senator McCAIN. Mr. Chairman, could I just mention again in passing, if the DOD authorization bill is signed by the President, most of those impediments will be removed, because of the amendment concerning the requirement to declassify all possible information.

The CHAIRMAN. I am sure he will sign it. The new position of Deputy Assistant Secretary for POW/MIA Affairs was first announced in July or August. It is now November, and we do not have one. This issue is a high priority. When will we have one?

Mr. FORD. The names of people that are being considered, are being checked and people are commenting on them. A decision is expected soon. We have not waited for him or her. We have, in fact, begun the job of staffing that organization with the people that are also supporting me in our efforts in Southeast Asia and with this committee, in terms of requesting the personnel, getting people office space, office equipment. So it's not a matter of—four people are already assigned to the office. It's just a matter of getting all of that finalized. I wish—by the way, Senator, I wish it had been last week, or the week before. And I say that from the bottom of my heart.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you made the determination with respect to the person alleged to be Mr. Stevens, in the two different photos of him at different times?

Mr. FORD. Do we have a definitive answer?

The CHAIRMAN. As to whether or not those two photos are alleged to be Mr. Stevens. Correct?

Mr. FORD. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Are those photos the same person?

Mr. FORD. I'll let Bob speak for himself. But my indication—the information I've received suggests that they are not the same person, other than the family's identification of them.

Mr. SHEETZ. And Mrs. Fleckenstein, Larry Stevens' mother, says that both are pictures of her son. Our experts that we've had look at it are unable to say conclusively whether it is or whether it isn't. The investigation continues nonetheless, as it has ever since the original photo was identified by the family members and the new photo came forward this summer. The investigation is continuing.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just say to Mr. De Statte also, we did not take in the full evidence with respect to EC-47 and we want to do that, and the record will reflect the summary that you have. But in addition to that, I would like to be able to just follow up on that so that is part of the record. We do not need to deal in that now completely. But we do need to go back to that particular area.

With respect to the Soviet issue, does DIA routinely debrief Soviet defectors, to ask them about the possible presence of American POW's?

Mr. SHEETZ. I can't honestly answer that question. I've not been personally involved in debriefs of Soviet emigres.

The CHAIRMAN. This is not a matter of the protocol of the office, I mean, you do not do this automatically?

Mr. SHEETZ. We have not.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any reason you have not? Do you take the Soviet issues seriously?

Mr. SHEETZ. I do.

Mr. FORD. To be fair, Senator, Mr. Sheetz's office is focused on Indochina and not the Soviet Union.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, what about the allegations that people went from Indochina to the Soviet Union? Is that not being treated under the POW/MIA category?

Mr. FORD. Yes.

Mr. SHEETZ. And, indeed, we have done quite a bit of work with other intelligence agencies that have information on that topic. That might be another topic that we can get into at next Wednesday's session at 2:30.

The CHAIRMAN. We would appreciate it. I hope you will be prepared to bring us up to speed on that. That would be very helpful.

Mr. SHEETZ. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This will be my last question. The then and now issue. We have a huge apparatus operating now on the POW/MIA issue. We have a lot of intelligence assets devoted to it. We have personnel devoted to it. The Secretary of Defense has personally interceded to fly people over to try to bring somebody back and so on. Bob Garwood did show up, after the fact and so, I guess, the question really is—and it is on a lot of people's minds—to what degree do you now state that the Defense Department's policy of 1973 was either in error, or a misstatement of one kind or another, that everybody was dead and they are all home?

I mean, if that policy were accurate, then why are we doing what we are doing today? It seems to me you cannot have it both ways. Either we say the likelihood is not only good, but it is real that we left some people behind and that is why we are doing it today, or this is a charade. It is one or the other.

Mr. FORD. Mr. Chairman, I think that the history of this issue suggests that in the late 1970's, early 1980's, there was a clear—even then, there had begun to—evidence appear, that we had not, in hindsight, done all the things that we probably should have done at the time. And there was a new focus put on POW/MIA in the early 1980's. That the basic assumption of it was that there were, in fact, people alive in 1973, after Homecoming. And that—

The CHAIRMAN. What do you base that less than doing all we should have on? Was that exclusively America's desire to put it behind us, or was there more to it than that?

Mr. FORD. Now, that part of it I, personally, have not looked at. And the fact is that that is very important and relevant for this committee to look into. It is obviously a very historical interest.

The fact is that our efforts today are focused on are there still any alive Americans? And as I said earlier, as we go through the countryside—remember, we did not have much access to Indochina, directly, really prior to 1987. There were bits and—there were times when we had a little bit. But sustained since 1987 we have had considerably more access than we had before, both in Vietnam, and also to Laos, and now, more recently, Cambodia. As we have been able to get more information, talk to more people, begin to put the pieces of the puzzle together with 20/20 hindsight, each time, each year, more information becomes available it looks like there was, in fact—the evidence suggests that there were people, probably alive in 1973.

And it is certainly whether or not there were or not, we have, since the early 1980's, operated under the assumption that there were. And that since we cannot know for sure—although the evidence may lean one way or another—we operate that there could be Americans there. And if that is the case, they were left after 1973. And we are going to continue to do everything we can to find if that is the case.

In fact, for most of us, of course we hope it is—despite all the hardships that they may have—lived through.

The CHAIRMAN. Now if that is true—and I accept—I mean we are all operating under that presumption—should not the Secretary of State or somebody be sitting down with the Laotian Government and saying hey, folks, you know, give us an opportunity to fly over—to have a—I mean join us in this—they want something for it. Is there not a capacity here to put some kind of a negotiation on a higher level, and a more urgent basis that resolves this for America?

Mr. QUINN. The Secretary of State has done just that, Senator. In my testimony on the first day of hearings, I tried to go through and list all of the meetings that he has had with the Vietnamese Foreign Minister, with the Laotian Foreign Minister.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, particularly with Laos is what I am saying. Because Laos seems to be the bigger question in many people's minds.

Mr. QUINN. The other side of that is that we are still viewed with very considerable suspicion by the governments in Laos and Vietnam. And particularly what has happened to Communist states in Eastern Europe, and, indeed, in the Soviet Union itself, is attributed by some of the leadership of those countries to actions by the United States of America—I mean that we somehow caused that to happen.

And so we find when we push for more access and to do those kinds of things—to fly around and fly over—a hesitation which I believe comes from many of the security agencies—this is my personal assessment—from the security agencies in those two countries, who would see, taking steps like that as being very dangerous for the survival of their party and control of the country.

The CHAIRMAN. I appreciate that. I just wanted to lay it out for you, to give you a chance to answer what everybody asks as a question here. And we are obviously going to try to sort out that earlier part, and emphasize again there is a then and there is a now. And we are going to try to make judgments about both pieces of it, to the degree that we can.

Senator Smith, do you have anything else?

Senator SMITH. I think the conclusion that we all have to draw here, excepting your willingness, and I believe you to work with the committee to try to provide answers. As we move along, we also have to, I think, to do that. And picking up on what Senator Kerry said, if, in fact, statements were made by then-Government officials in 1973 that in some cases some people who were around then are still here. So there is some continuity still working the issue.

But if Government officials said that in 1973 that everybody is dead, and then we are now taking the position that we are not making that assumption. We are assuming some may be alive. Or, we are operating under that impression. Then I think all of you have to recognize in your position that there may be some who have a great deal at stake.

And I am not saying that people are alive today or not. But I am saying that they would have a great deal at stake, or a great amount of embarrassment to suffer if, in fact, they were wrong in 1973.

We already know they were wrong, because Garwood came out. But if we have to prove it again and again by having more people, at least, whether they are discovered dead or alive after 1973, there would be some type of embarrassment obviously, to say the least.

And I think you should all keep that in mind as we proceed through this. And let me just, again, to tell you how I experienced it first-hand when I went to North Korea last summer. The first American of Senator or higher rank to set forth in North Korea, to the best of my knowledge. Government official, Mr. Kong, said to me, where have you been for the past 41 years? We have information on your missing.

He then turned over 11 sets of remains, and gave us—as I have already briefed both State and the Defense Department—he gave us substantial other information which you are moving on, and you are. And I give you credit for that.

But I think it is very important that we understand. And I think the question that Senator Kohl asked regarding the pilot, I think it is important to look back. I think we are going to have to do that. And the committee is going to have to do it. And I think you are going to have to do it. And I realize it is a big task. But I think that is going to have to be done.

Just a quick question, and it is meant only in terms of trying to show some spirit of cooperation—one of the things that Colonel Peck said, and again, it kind of refers to what you said, Mr. Quinn—he said one of his points was that we were divulging sources to the Vietnamese.

Is it not reasonable to assume that based upon the kind of answers and information that Mr. Grassley gave, and that I also asked you about, is it not reasonable to assume that reasonable people could conclude that that was, perhaps—that they were perhaps sources, even though under the definition as you have explained it, and I understand what you said, that they would not be sources under your definition?

But is it not reasonable to assume that that conclusion could be drawn by reasonable people; that that difference could be seen?

Mr. QUINN. I do not know what other information Mike Peck, or Colonel Peck could have been referring to. He, of course, had left the job by the time—

Senator SMITH. He simply said sources were provided to the Vietnamese.

Mr. FORD. If he did that, it was his responsibility. If source information was released to the Vietnamese today, this man right here, at least in a management sense, would be responsible for it. And he holds Colonel Peck's job. So that if Colonel Peck says sources and information were passed, he was our expert on deciding to make sure that did not happen.

Senator SMITH. Well, Mr. Quinn testified he did that on his own and accepted responsibility for it. So I do not think you can blame Colonel Peck for that.

Mr. FORD. That was after Colonel Peck left.

Mr. QUINN. Just real quickly, if I could say, I did not give one word of information to the Vietnamese that the Defense Intelligence Agency people said I should not. Every word that was given to them was cleared with the DIA.

Senator SMITH. I understand that. You made that clear, and I agree with you.

I have two, quick points. I want to touch on the fingerprints, but I just want to ask Carl Ford one question.

You said on September 3, that no information from U.S. intelligence sources indicates that a movement of POW's from Vietnam to the U.S.S.R. occurred. Subsequent to that date, there have been a number of dramatic revelations, I guess, if you will. Whether it is true or not, we still have to determine.

But Terry Minarcin said a former national security analyst is being—is saying that he—that they tracked 22 Americans taken from Hanoi to the Soviet Union between December 1977 and January 1978; Jerry Mooney has made similar statements; the Soviet POW story in the Washington Post this week; the L.A. Times story about the KGB connection; comments from former KGB; and the fact from Bui Tin that Russians did interrogate.

So are you moving toward taking another look there?

Mr. FORD. We already are, Senator. We are taking a look, in fact. I tell my colleagues, this is one that is very personally important to me. My wife has recently read the Charm School and she does not even believe me anymore when she asks me about this. And so this is one that we definitely are following up—every particular lead that we get.

At the time I made that statement, that was my belief—that there was no information that demonstrated that to be the case.

Senator SMITH. A final point on that, and my final question of the afternoon to this panel is the issue of fingerprints.

You entered into the record a letter that came to Congressman Solarz from Bill Sessions of the FBI. And I have read that. And you offered it as a kind of an explanation of what happens in fingerprints. And I asked some questions at the last hearing about fingerprints.

It would seem to me that if we have 2,200 roughly, missing people, some are listed as KIA/Body not returned; some are POW's—there is only one, actual POW, but they are missing. And we are operating under the assumption that they may be alive, some of them may be alive.

Why would it be a policy—and I know this happened before your watch, but I am asking—and you did not do it, and I want to make that very clear, you did not do this—why would it be the policy of any of your predecessors to turn over fingerprints to the FBI for the purpose of keeping them 7 years and then destroying them on people that are missing? I mean what is the rationale for that?

Mr. FORD. There is no credible explanation, other than human error.

It was done—some of this was that we probably never did have all of the fingerprints simply because, as has been explained to me, some of them were not good enough. And when they were not good enough, they were not entered into the computer.

There are other cases that they may have made mistakes because they were KIA/Body not recovered. They may have said well, we do not need them anymore. I cannot, as far as I am concerned, every way I have looked in this I cannot find an explanation of why anybody would ever even think about destroying these fingerprints.

Senator SMITH. And again, I know you did not do it. And I want to make it very clear, and I want to talk—and I plan to talk to the FBI about this as well. And I will be very brief here, Mr. Chairman.

In the letter from Bill Sessions, he indicated that the 2,483 names furnished to the FBI by DOD in 1984—and they were identified to DOD as being—by DOD as Americans unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

Those records were provided in 1984. Assuming they did not break the law and stuck with—the FBI, that is—and stuck with the law of destroying those fingerprints in 7 years, that means that those fingerprints were destroyed in 1991—which is as the height of all of the controversy on photographs and people. And I guess I would ask if you know whether or not the FBI did, in fact, destroy those 1984 files. If you do not, fine. We will take it up with the FBI. That is—

Mr. FORD. I do not know exactly, Senator. We will ask the FBI. But my staff points out that last year over 700,000 fingerprints last year were rejected by the FBI, that they were not legible.

Senator SMITH. That point is so interesting, and again, it has to be taken up by the FBI. But they are sending the fingerprints back to you because they are illegible fingerprints that they plan to destroy in 7 years. So they are not legible enough to destroy.

Mr. FORD. My understanding is that these should not have been destroyed after 100 years. I mean the fact is that these were people that were clearly unaccounted for, and would be in a crucial part of the identification process. If they were destroyed, it seems, my guess—not knowing all the details—that there were a number of these, unfortunately, fingerprint cards that were not legible. And they did not get entered into the computer.

Senator SMITH. A final point, I guess I just do not understand whoever made that decision in 1984.

Mr. FORD. We would like to find it, whether it is in Defense or wherever, we would like to find that, too.

Senator SMITH. As I understand it, what happened—I mean what would have happened—what would have had to have happened is that somebody would go through, assuming these files were all sent over there, 2,100-and-some files, personnel files, and literally, leaving everything else out, just pick up the files and saying look. Where are the fingerprints? Let us see. And then taking them out, taking the fingerprints out and destroying them, or at least identifying them to be destroyed 7 years hence.

It just seems to me a bizarre thing. I mean to me, a fingerprint is just as important as some other data that may be in the file.

Mr. FORD. Even more important.

Senator SMITH. Exactly. So I will take this up with the FBI. And I appreciate your candor on it. I just do not understand the rationale. But I assume it is not being done now, correct? We are not sending them any fingerprints to the FBI? Well, we have already done it, so you do not have any more.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you, Senator.

As sometimes trivial as some of the areas may seem to some, they are the stuff that has given credence to people's sense of either wrongdoing, or conspiracy, or confidence, or whatever it is people may feel about this.

And again, I think if the committee is going to be true to its charter to try to leave no stone unturned, we are going to spend the time to go through that, and ultimately, hopefully, be able to just show what is appropriately debunkable, and what is human error, and what is not. And those are the judgments we are going to have to try to make.

My final comment as we break with this panel is a reiteration of what I said previously. I know it is unpleasant. I know that all of you and the people that work with you sit here and say this is, you know, kind of crazy to be going through this 20 years later, and to have to make your credibility a certainty to people.

But I want you to know that I think it is important. We all understand why we are here. And I think the process will be strengthened by virtue of it.

So as uncomfortable as it may be, I think it will ultimately contribute to people's faith, hopefully, depending on the job we do, and the judgments that we make, that we have put this thing back on the level that it ought to be.

So I appreciate it. And I want to thank you for that. I do ask you to stay, because we have allegations and perceptions that are going to be forthcoming. And we want you to be able to respond to those. And I think it is very important to the committee to try to sort that out also. So if you would—could we call Mr. Usry back? Tracy Usry, and if you gentlemen could just stay, because if we come to the point here we would like to ask some questions, we would like to be able to.

The reporter has been going for hours. I have almost—and we have gotten so carried away with this we have not even broken for lunch, and we have barely even had a moment for people to have a personal moment. So why do we not take a 5-minute recess here while the reporter changes tapes and people have a chance to take a breather.

We will stand in recess for 5 minutes.

[Whereupon the committee recessed for 5 minutes.]

The CHAIRMAN. The hearing will come to order. Will you raise your right hand?

[Witness sworn.]

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Usry, welcome back. We are glad to have you back and appreciate your responding to the committee's request and Senator McCain's request for additional detail.

I must say I do wish on the committee's behalf that we had had your statement before 10 this morning so that we could have perused it a little more. Obviously, each of us has been here at the podium the whole time, so none of us will have read it and had a chance to really go through it.

Notwithstanding that, we will try to do the best we can, and I have asked—I do not see them here at this moment, but I take it they are out there and they will be here for your testimony so that we can have some response, and so do you have an opening statement that you want to make today?

Mr. USRY. Yes, sir, I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Fine. Go right ahead.

[The prepared statement and exhibits of Mr. Usry may be found on pps. 53-105 of the appendix.]

STATEMENT OF TRACY USRY, STAFF MEMBER, SENATOR HELMS

Mr. USRY. Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, let me again thank you for this opportunity to address you today. I will address your questions from last week in the order they were asked, citing the page and line number of the transcript of last weeks' hearings which correspond to each request to us, and then I will prepare or provide the appropriate answer.

Question 1, Senator Kerry: "But in fact, it is true, is it not, that nine Americans were turned over to the U.S. in 1973 from Laos who were nominally Pathet Lao prisoners? Those were as repatriated from Laos."

Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record a copy of a document from the Defense Intelligence Agency dated 7 December, 1977, addressed to Capt. Raymond A. Vohden, U.S. Navy, Principal Advisor Office of POW/MIA Affairs, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense, and the subject is Pathet Lao knowledge on U.S. prisoners, and basically the correspondence provides a summation of information held by DIA regarding the degree of knowledgeability possessed by the Pathet Lao on U.S. personnel unaccounted for in Laos.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is the document?

Mr. USRY. It is enclosure A to your copy of the report.

The CHAIRMAN. Where would that be? Can you help me out?

Mr. USRY. In the back, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It is the first document, enclosure A?

Mr. USRY. Yes, sir. Should I continue?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes. Go ahead.

Mr. USRY. The nine U.S. personnel who had been captured in Laos and who were released in Hanoi during Operation Homecoming were all captured by North Vietnamese forces operating in Laos and moved to North Vietnam for detention.

The CHAIRMAN. That is sort of the same thing I was saying, is it not?

Mr. USRY. I'm not disagreeing with you, sir. I'm just providing the documentation we used to state what we did in the report.

The CHAIRMAN. But what you had said was that none were turned over.

Mr. USRY. Excuse me?

The CHAIRMAN. The reason I had asked the question is I thought you had said in your report that none were turned over.

Mr. USRY. No, sir. What we said was that the nine people that were released during Operation Homecoming were not in the hands of the Pathet Lao but in fact had been taken by the North Vietnamese and released to—captured by the North Vietnamese and transported to Hanoi and released by the North Vietnamese during Operation Homecoming.

There was nothing in our report that would indicate that the Pathet Lao themselves had ever released any American POW's that they had captured. So those nine people that are referenced routinely were in fact, according to the document that we read, captured by the North Vietnamese, transported to Hanoi at some point in time, and then eventually released during Operation Homecoming by the North Vietnamese.

Senator McCain. The only point is, they were officially released by the Pathet Lao at the Homecoming. They were given to the Pathet Lao, even though the witness is correct when he states they were captured by the Vietnamese. They were carefully and categorically placed as releasees by the Pathet Lao.

The CHAIRMAN. Go ahead.

Mr. USRY. Question 2, Senator McCain: "So your allegation that the two Thai special forces identified Dooley's photograph as a fellow inmate is false?"

Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record a declassified sanitized U.S. Air Force message date and time group 052635 Zulu March 1973 from 13th Air Force Clark Air Base, Philippines to AIG7819. This is a Homecoming Air Force message, special report 007, subject, debriefing.

The message relates to the debriefing of two Thai military returnees by U.S. personnel. The returnees identified North Vietnamese personnel who dealt with POW's. The identifications were made by picking out photographs from the DIA publication, North Vietnamese Personnel Associated With U.S. POW's. The Thai identified 13 North Vietnamese who dealt with American prisoners of war as guards, interrogators, or those who were involved with the torture of U.S. prisoners.

The second portion of the document references the two Thai personnel selecting photographs of approximately 300 U.S. personnel with whom they were imprisoned. The photographs were selected from Volume 1 of the DIA pre-capture photographs of missing in action in Southeast Asia. The photographs identified, according to the message, were of personnel all listed as returnees during Operation Homecoming.

In Section 3 of the report it states that the Thais also identified personnel from the photograph volume provided by DIA who were not listed on the list of returnees. They are as follows: Charles E. Shelton, Edwin B. Templin—

The CHAIRMAN. We can read those.

Mr. USRY. And, of course, James Dooley.

Question 3—

Senator Reid. Mr. Chairman, I am sorry. Explain to me, I guess—and I don't mean this to be facetious, but so what? I mean, tell me what you are saying here.

Mr. USRY. Well, what I'm doing, sir, is replying to the questions that were asked.

Senator Reid. I understand that, but what is your reply. Just tell me.

Mr. USRY. Well, in essence the question was whether or not the information we had concerning Dooley that we referenced in our report was available, or was it just a false accusation on my part, and all I was doing now is presenting that documentation in which we used to formulate the position that we took.

Senator McCain. Do you think it would have been fair to mention the fact that it was in a list of many other names, none of whom have ever been reported, or who have been found or returned? Do you think that would have been a more complete picture of the situation? Because obviously the Thais went through hundreds of pictures and picked out, what, a dozen there, none of whom have ever been accounted for. Do you think that would have been more appropriate and a fair presentation of the facts?

Mr. USRY. I think what was appropriate was the position that we put out initially, Senator, which was there was some concern for the accuracy of the intelligence analysis concerning the whole Dooley and Hickerson issue, and the specific question or statement made to me last week is that the information I was providing was false, and all I'm simply trying to do is present that information that is available, or that was available at the time we drafted the report that we did.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just say, you're saying they picked out a group of people among whom was Dooley, is that accurate?

Mr. USRY. Yes, sir, that is my understanding from reading the document.

The CHAIRMAN. The document, again, is where?

Mr. USRY. That would be enclosure B in the back of my statement that you have.

The CHAIRMAN. I don't understand. Do I have all of document B?

Mr. USRY. I'm going to look and see exactly what was provided to you right now.

Senator REID. Document B has three pages—enclosure B.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, I have a document B.

Senator REID. It has three pages.

Mr. USRY. On the second page of enclosure B is a list of names.

The CHAIRMAN. OK, I am with you. I have got a list of names, all right. Where does it say that the Thais identified anybody on that list?

Mr. USRY. If you go back to the previous section, and I will read it verbatim to you—

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I can read it. At least, I think I can read. I am just trying to find—

Mr. USRY. On the second page, on section 2, it starts with SNF. During this debriefing the two returnees were also shown Volume 1, and in there it indicates that they picked out the listed personnel as also individuals they had seen, and these personnel were not reflected on the returnee list on Operation Homecoming.

The CHAIRMAN. I see. Paragraph 2, during the debriefing of two returnees, and those returnees are?

Mr. USRY. Those were Thai special forces personnel.

The CHAIRMAN. OK. I just want to understand it.

So it says they were cooperative and enthusiastic in establishing a ready—or a reliability by identifying nearly 300 personnel who were on a list of returnees from the DIA photo album.

Senator REID. Maybe that word isn't, reliability. What is that word?

The CHAIRMAN. A ready ability by identifying nearly 300—the following personnel were identified by photos and do not appear on the list, and that was Dooley. So in other words—OK, fair enough.

Senator REID. Apparently, somebody saw a bunch of prisoners or pictures, and some of these people in the pictures supposedly didn't come home, is that the story?

The CHAIRMAN. That's interesting. So these folks were picked out as having—they recognized them, who they were, but that they hadn't come back on the list of returnees in Operation Homecoming.

Mr. USRY. I would basically state both you and I are making the same assumption. This is the assumption we drew from the documents.

The CHAIRMAN. OK.

Mr. USRY. Question 3, Senator McCain: A U.S. POW who had been repatriated said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell in Hanoi. Who was that POW? Let me go on. So his allegations, basically, Mr. Chairman, has been relayed to him with no basis of fact.

Again, what facts do you have to back up your allegation that a U.S. POW had been repatriated who said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell in Hanoi, and under enclosure 3 there is an electrical message or a copy of that which puts forth the information that we related. Enclosure C.

Senator MCCAIN. Do you not think, Mr. Usry, again, as with the previous statement, it would have been more appropriate for you to report that he said he either read it on the wall or heard the name? Wouldn't that have been more appropriate in your report?

Mr. USRY. No, Senator, I don't necessarily agree with that statement.

Senator MCCAIN. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. Where does it say that?

Mr. USRY. I'm going to read that to you.

The CHAIRMAN. He either saw the name on the wall or was told about the name.

Mr. USRY. Now, what I would like to make interesting—

The CHAIRMAN. Can I ask you something? Let me just follow up, because I don't want Senator McCain to be alone in sort of questioning that. I mean, my reaction is, that's pretty significant, if you're going to say something was seen on a wall, but his memory was that somebody might have mentioned it to him. I'm not saying it puts everything in doubt here. It's just a question of how you come at this.

Mr. USRY. Well, I would like to reference our basic report again to see exactly what the wording was, and I will pull a copy if you will just wait a moment. I believe that was Section 5.

[Pause.]

Mr. USRY. That is Section 6.

Senator MCCAIN. It says he saw Dooley's name on the prison wall in Hanoi, period, 6-3, the second paragraph.

Mr. USRY. I'm sorry, paragraph what?

Senator MCCAIN. The second paragraph from the bottom on page 6-3.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think that has an impact whether he heard the name from another person or saw it on a wall? I mean, isn't there a fundamental distinction in fact there?

Mr. USRY. No, I don't believe necessarily there is. I honestly believe that what we're doing here right now is basically splitting atoms. May I continue for a moment?

Senator McCAIN. While we are here, could I go down one paragraph while we're on the same subject. In the next paragraph, it says in April 1989 former POW Hickerson: and therefore he could not have been swimming out to sea when he was captured.

I talked to Captain Hickerson last night and he was swimming out to sea, Mr. Usry, and I understand that is also in his debriefing. So there's not nitpicking here. Your statement is he could not have been swimming out to sea when he was captured. He landed on land, he ran into the water and was swimming, and then turned around and came back. That is his words, and I understand that that's part of his debriefing when he came out. I hope you will correct that in future reports.

Mr. USRY. Well, Senator McCain, if you look at what was provided to us by the family members, and there are enclosures in my statement that concern that where Commander Hickerson—or, I'm sorry, Captain Hickerson landed and was basically on the end of more or less a peninsula, and when he went swimming, he went swimming back toward the land area, not actually out to sea. Anyway, this is the information we worked on.

Senator McCAIN. You say he could not have been swimming. He did go swimming.

Mr. USRY. I will grant you that, and I will ask you this question. Is—if—the issue whether he went swimming the important issue, or is the issue that the accuracy of the analysis does not match what happened to him by his own words in a letter that he provided to a family member?

Senator McCAIN. I think it's very important that the JCRC later after review indeed said that it was not the case that the refugee was confused in the shoot-down between Hickerson and Dooley. Did you know that?

Mr. USRY. I don't understand what you're saying, actually.

Senator McCAIN. After further evaluation, the analysis of the refugee's report by JCRC, after their initial finding that the refugee had been confused with Captain Hickerson's shoot-down, the JCRC later issued a reevaluation saying that they did not believe that he was confusing it with Captain Hickerson's shoot-down and capture. Did you know that?

Mr. USRY. I think we're talking about the same documents that we have, but what I don't understand is are you saying—and I'm not playing—

Senator McCAIN. What I'm saying is the initial analysis, we're saying this refugee had confused Mr. Hickerson, that it might be Dooley. Later they thought it was Hickerson.

Mr. USRY. So the refugee—

Senator McCAIN. The refugee was even a year off, Mr. Usry. You don't highlight that. He has it in 1968. I mean, he thought it happened a year later.

Mr. USRY. So what are you telling me? Are you telling me the final decision by JCRC is that shoot-down does not apply to Commander Hickerson?

Senator McCAIN. No. I'm saying that they originally said that it was Dooley, and then they reevaluated it and said that it was probably not. It's my understanding that there was a broad spectrum of information that they have to go by.

Mr. USRY. I agree with you, but what I'm trying to point out is when they made the final evaluation and said what they had said initially was that it was Dooley, or could have possibly been Dooley.

However, their final decision or determination was that it was Hickerson is what we take exception to, and we base that exception on what was provided to the family members and as well as what Commander Hickerson—or, I'm sorry, Captain Hickerson provided in a letter to the family members, and that's why we're saying that there is a difference.

The CHAIRMAN. But you see, the reason it's important, Mr. Usry—and I want to absolutely assure you you are not being singled out here, but you've got very specific stuff you're putting in front of the committee, and if somebody is asserting that it is not in fact, fact, and that it is specific, we have got to sort out, because it bears on the particular case interpretation, and I accept, I'm impressed by the Thai observation and that the Thai makes a statement, and that's good documentation.

The problem is here in the report, which is what a lot of people have been going on lately, you really do have a couple of statements there that vary from what somebody who is looking at this neutrally or something might say.

I mean, if I read that they either saw his name written on a wall of the cell or heard it from someone else, I'm going to have less weight attached to that particular case analysis, because, or hearing it from somebody else means it's 50-50 or less that he saw it on a wall.

You have asserted that he saw it on the wall, and I read it to the family, he saw it on the wall. I mean, that was part of my judgment that it was a strong point. But in fact, that's not so.

Likewise, swimming out to sea. When I read this and it said, he could not have been swimming out to sea when he was captured, I have no notion that he might have been swimming elsewhere. I just have a sense that he wasn't swimming out to sea, he was elsewhere, and in fact your report sort of infers that when he was shot down he was in a different locale sort of altogether.

In his statement, Hickerson pointed out he landed on the inside of the peninsula and therefore couldn't have been swimming out to sea. I mean, do you see what we're saying? It leaves you questioning whether you really have facts here or you have tidbits of evidence that might, with further investigation, lead you to be able to draw the conclusion you've drawn but don't yet allow us to. That's the issue.

Senator McCAIN. And Mr. Chairman, could I just add one other thing. Again, would it be more appropriate in a statement of a report to say that the Thais identified this man as having been seen along with 10 or 11—I have not counted the other names—none of whom we have ever been able to account for?

I think that that puts it in a kind of a context the Thais were looking at volumes and volumes of pictures, and so I just think that it might be a clearer picture if it was mentioned that they identified him along with about 10 or 11 others, none of whom, unfortunately, tragically, we have ever heard from again. But please respond, Mr. Usry.

Mr. USRY. I don't really know if I have a response. I think what we're discussing here, especially in this last instance that you brought up, is a style of writing. If you take exception to the style of writing that is in this report, there's really very little that I can do to answer that. This was a final report that was approved, and that is what was published.

Senator McCAIN. I'm sorry, I wasn't talking about a style of writing, Mr. Usry, but if that's the conclusion you draw, I think you've answered the question.

Senator REID. The question I have, though, are you talking about style of writing, your writing? Is that what you're talking about?

Mr. USRY. This is a cumulative report worked on by several persons.

Senator REID. Let's talk about style of writing here on page 18.

Mr. USRY. Of what?

Senator REID. Of your statement.

Mr. USRY. Just a minute.

Senator REID. And that is on this organized crime business. Is there any—how are we going to find out about this organized crime figure? I mean, one of my prior lives I spent a lot of time dealing with organized crime, and I know a little bit about it. Now, who is this organized crime person?

Mr. USRY. I would be more than willing to discuss that in a closed session, if you like. I've no objection to that. I think that would be best addressed at that time.

Senator McCAIN. Why is that necessary?

Mr. USRY. Because as we indicated these were problem areas that we were not able to finish investigating. It, however, came up during the time frame we were conducting our inquiry, and because of that mentioning these people—and I really have no problem with the known organized crime figure, because this person has been linked with organized crime, but in discussing that, then we're going to get into the member of the White House National Security Council and a high-ranking member of the POW family—POW family organization, and I think it really would be best for all considered to discuss that in a closed session.

Senator McCAIN. If we do not—though if we do not talk about it in open session, then anyone who is a member of the White House National Security Council staff is now under suspicion, and any prominent and high-ranking member of the POW family organization is now under a cloud of suspicion.

Would it not be more fair to identify the document and identify these people rather than make—I mean, if I were a member, a high-ranking member of a POW family organization or a member of the National Security Council, I think I would want to get this resolved publicly.

Mr. USRY. Well, I will defer to the chairman at the time, and I believe that would be Senator Smith. I'm more than willing to provide that information in closed session and let you make the decision as to whether or not you want to discuss it openly, unless you tell me I have to discuss it openly, and then I will.

Senator McCAIN. I do not say you have to do anything. I just think it is fair.

Senator KASSEBAUM. Well, this was a question I wanted to pursue. I came in late, so I did not know whether we were going through this front to back, but by this inference and these conversations I guess I am trying to understand why organized crime would be involved. Is there a drug connection here somewhere, do you think, or what is the implication of all of this?

Mr. USRY. Senator, we have no idea why they're involved. We only know the individual that maintained the diaries and what he had done in another issue, as far as what may be the reason that they're involved, but again, we were not able to look into this totally simply because the assets were not available. That is why we listed it as a problem area that we had not finished looking at, and I don't really know whether it's drugs or anything else, honestly, but there is information that exists that shows exactly what I had indicated in my statement.

Senator KASSEBAUM. Well, I am sure that at some point we will take a look at it simply because I think once this kind of statement is made publicly, then everybody does try and second-guess either who is involved or why, and I find it really very hard to have these sort of things on television with, sort of, an unclear focus on how we are going to handle it, or what is out there.

Senator REID. Mr. Chairman, if the gentlelady would yield, I can say that if we do this in closed session, I am going to make this public anyway.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, let me ask a question.

Senator REID. Senator McCain, because this is in relation to a question that you posed, if we do have this in closed session I am going to make this public anyway, because we cannot have the State Department, the White House National Security Council, and one of these POW family organizations being part of organized crime. I think it would be to everyone's best interests if it were made public now.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just ask a question, if I can, before I try to make a judgment on that. A "known organized crime figure," by whose judgment is that determination made?

Mr. USRY. That was information provided to us by personnel from the Department of Justice as well as the individual who provided the information to us initially, and I might add that all of that information is presently available in the archives of your subcommittee, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. I am familiar with that, but I want to know—you see, we did not make it public.

Mr. USRY. No, sir, I understand that.

The CHAIRMAN. So that is one reason that my mind has gone clickety here is that there is a reason why we did not, and therefore I am a little reluctant here now to do this. I want to ask, is that as a result of investigative work that was done by Jack Blum?

Mr. USRY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And that is a memo to the file that Mr. Blum made, is that what you have taken this from?

Mr. USRY. I guess you would call it a memo to file, yes, sir. I mean, we saw excerpts.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand, but it was not part of any final report that my subcommittee issued?

Mr. USRY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So for whatever reasons we chose, that we did not have enough information, or it wasn't relevant, or for some reason, it wasn't included in the report.

Mr. USRY. I would imagine so.

The CHAIRMAN. The known organized crime figure is so designated by the Justice Department?

Mr. USRY. That's the information that I was provided when I asked about the name.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, look—

Mr. USRY. And I'm just going again by what we were told, and that is why we put it in as a problem area that we were not able to pursue.

The CHAIRMAN. It seems to me, so that the committee is not put in the position of doing injury to some member of the administration who met with somebody who might not be, in fact, an organized crime figure, and then their name is dragged into this and the person's name is, or that it isn't relevant somehow to this particular inquiry, I would really like to see the committee look at that particular file, without doubting what Mr. Usry is saying, but make a sensible judgment about it.

This inquiry doesn't end here today. There's no reason that we have to rush to put people's names in the spotlight if they don't belong there, and I'd like to see the committee be cautious about that, and so I'd rather wait, if you don't mind, but I agree in principle with what the Senator from Nevada is saying, which is that if it is relevant, and if there is some reason that the meetings took place and they had something to do with what Mr. Usry is saying, obviously it ought to be public at that point.

But why don't we make a judgment on that, if the Senator is willing to. I don't want to cut the Senator off at all, but I think it would be wise to do that.

Senator SMITH. I would concur with that. I think it is better to err on the side of caution.

The CHAIRMAN. And then we can proceed. I think this is your inquiry at this point in time. I do not have any questions now.

Senator REID. We interrupted Mr. Usry.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Usry, you were going through, I believe, your presentation point by point. Is that accurate?

Mr. USRY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And the Senators are going to take liberties as we go on, just so that it is all clear, so if you would pick up where you left off, that would be fine. I am going to let Senator Smith Chair here.

Mr. USRY. I'm on Question 4, Senator McCain: "I see, and finally a communist propaganda photograph of captured U.S. pilots in Hanoi, dated after Dooley was shot down, shows a partial profile of a person that strongly resembles Dooley. Do you have knowledge of that further, and yet the DIA and no Government agency has that photograph, according to them?"

Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record the following, and again, that is an attachment or an enclosure to my statement. It is the next enclosure.

Senator SMITH [presiding]. Is that D?

Mr. USRY. Yes, that would be enclosure D. What I offer is a DOD Vietnam information form dated September 17, 1970, showing that Mr. Henry E. Dooley and wife identified photograph number 46, shown to them by DOD personnel as possibly being their son, Lt. James Dooley; a second document entitled, photo comparison analysis results of a Christmas 1969 photo dated 1 February, 1971, reflecting a comparison of two pre-capture photographs of Lieutenant Dooley with the same photo identified as Christmas 1969 film number USN number 46, the results of which were inconclusive, unable to judge.

Senator MCCAIN. So would it not, again, have been helpful that if you had put down in your report that the results of the analysis of the photo were inconclusive?

Mr. USRY. I don't believe I said that the results of the photo were conclusive, just that there was a questioned photograph.

The question that was put to me was that—or the statement that was put to me was that the Government, the DIA, nor any other Government agency, had that photograph, and what I'm submitting is that photograph originated with the Government.

Senator MCCAIN. And that photograph was inconclusive, and so therefore they don't know whether that photograph was of Mr. Dooley or not, so how could they carry it as being of Mr. Dooley?

Mr. USRY. Senator, I was addressing the question you asked me.

Senator MCCAIN. About the picture, which is supposedly—which some people believe might have been Mr. Dooley. After analysis by DIA it was ruled as inconclusive, isn't that correct?

Mr. USRY. Which to me would mean that there it either is or isn't. There's really no way to tell.

Senator MCCAIN. So if it wasn't, or it either is or isn't, then they can't attribute it as being of Mr. Dooley, since it was inconclusive. Please proceed.

Mr. USRY. I am told that the DIA also maintains a complete casualty file of each individual missing. If that is, in fact, true, then the position that that photograph did not come from either DIA or any other Government agency is not an accurate position, and that, again, more than demonstrates part of the problem that exists concerning the POW issue—that there are inaccuracies from the Government.

Now, even more so. The Dooley family was shown the photograph in the latter part of 1970. There was no analysis requested by the Department of the Navy until February 1971, which is over 4 months after the initial viewing. It is our position that certainly is not what we would call an expedited concern, and also as far as we're concerned shows a lack of compassion for the families, or it certainly did at that time.

Question 6, Senator McCain: "Like your trip to Thailand that you just took. Tell me about your trip, would you, Mr. Usry?"

Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, during the latter part of July of this year Congressman Clement arranged for one of his constituents to provide to myself and staff of Senator Grassley what Congressman Clement's constituent felt was compelling information concerning live Americans being held in Southeast Asia.

Judge Hamilton Gayden provided documentary and physical as well as photographic evidence depicting what he thought were live

American POW's being held in Southeast Asia. The most compelling evidence was that of a photograph of a caucasian male and oriental female which according to Judge Gayden was Lt. Comdr. Larry J. Stevens. Stevens was declared MIA during the war in Southeast Asia.

Since the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Grassley's staff had already initiated some photographic comparison in the case of Capt. Donald Carr based on photographs submitted by Mr. Jack Bailey, we felt that this evidence could also be analyzed in a similar way.

This information was discussed with the Minority staff and between July 30 and August 2, 1991 I traveled to Fort Collins, CO, to provide Dr. Michael Charney, a forensic anthropologist at Colorado State University with the questioned photograph as well as pre-loss photographs of Lieutenant Commander Stevens.

Dr. Charney, utilizing a procedure called computer superimposition, determined that the pre-loss photographs of Stevens matched the forensic profile of the questioned photograph provided by Judge Gayden. The computer superimposition process creates a computer-enhanced image of the face in question and the image of the pre-loss photographs. The images were then overlaid, or superimposed upon each other.

According to Dr. Charney, they aligned. Therefore, he determined the two individuals in the two photographs were the same person. According to Dr. Patrick Fitzhorn, a professor of mechanical engineering at Colorado State University who created the computer images of Carr and Stevens, these images were exact to 1/100th of an inch. Based upon this identification, on the 2nd of August I provided a briefing to Senators Helms and Grassley as well as to another Member of Congress.

Through the efforts of this other Member, a briefing for the Secretary of Defense was set for 5:30 p.m. on August 5 at the Pentagon. At 5:30 on August 5, myself and another Senate staff member and a House staff member were present at the briefing I provided to Secretary Cheney and two of his staff.

At this time, I would like to provide the same briefing that I did for Secretary Cheney.

Senator McCAIN. I think the first two charts are self-explanatory. Could I ask that chart 3—the defense witnesses say that Mr. Charney analyzed the photograph of Lieutenant Borah the same as he did the others, is that correct?

Mr. USRY. At the time we provided the briefing to Secretary Cheney, the analysis of Lieutenant Borah and the questioned photograph had not been completed.

Senator McCAIN. Has it been completed?

Mr. USRY. Yes, it has.

Senator McCAIN. He said that it is the same.

Mr. USRY. He later rescinded that and said he was incorrect.

Senator McCAIN. Well then, he rescinded it.

Mr. USRY. Yes, he did.

Senator McCAIN. After it became known that the photographs were probably fake?

Mr. USRY. No, not at all.

Senator McCAIN. And you did, of course, take into consideration when you presented this evidence the view of the—according to the Department of Defense people, the view of Sandia, the view of the FBI and the view of others, that Mr. Charney's work was not acceptable as evidence in their view.

Mr. USRY. At the particular point in time, Senator, that we provided this briefing, that other information was either not done, or if it was done, it certainly had not been made available to us.

Senator McCAIN. Well, do you have any opinion of the view of the FBI and Sandia and others about—since now you know that they believe that his methodology is not credible, at least that is the words of the Department of Defense, does that affect your opinions at all?

Mr. USRY. I agree totally with the Defense Department position that the photograph of Lieutenant Borah, or the alleged photograph of Lieutenant Borah, is not Lieutenant Borah, which was my position from the beginning, when I first dealt with the families.

Senator McCAIN. Now I would like you to answer my question. Does it change your view of the validity of Dr. Charney's conclusions due to the opinion that has been voiced by the DIA as reflecting the views of the FBI, Sandia, and others?

Mr. USRY. Not totally, no, sir. May I continue with my briefing?

Senator McCAIN. Please do so.

Mr. USRY. Chart 1, pre-loss photograph of Capt. Donald Carr, as well as a photograph provided by Mr. Jack Bailey which he indicates was taken in Laos and believes to be Donald Carr. Also on that particular page is another photograph showing what is purported to be the cage or area that Donald Carr is held in.

Senator McCAIN. Mr. USRY, I believe we are now going into our sixth hour. I am not sure that we really need for this intensive a review of what you presented to Secretary Cheney. I asked you to tell us about your trip. I think maybe that's a better response, if you just told us about your trip and got through the rest of this.

Mr. USRY. That would be fine, Senator. We traveled to Thailand. The team that we had requested be put together was in fact put together. The source was located after 3 days, I believe, and was ultimately polygraphed by a Department of Defense polygraphers. There were two there, so that everything would be finished at the particular point in time as the polygraph examination was completed.

Once the polygraph examination was completed, it was determined that basically the individual had no valid information and was lying about everything with the exception of him being Laotian and having two children. At that particular point in time, we departed the following day, came back, and that was the end of the trip.

Senator McCAIN. Thank you.

Mr. USRY. I would also like to add that the information that was provided to us, as well as the briefing that was provided to Secretary Cheney, was such that everybody was in agreement that the evidence as it was presented at that time was compelling enough to act upon and therefore it was, in fact, acted upon.

Do we want to continue with the discussion of Commander Hickerson, or have we pretty well resolved that?

Senator McCAIN. I am certainly satisfied.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just ask whether DOD or DIA folks had any questions or comments raised by the answer. Have they had a chance to read it?

Mr. SHEETZ. I have a fact sheet on the Dooley-Hickerson case that I would be pleased to make available at the appropriate time. [The information referred to follows:]

Attached is a Fact Sheet on the Dooley-Hickerson case based upon the Senate Foreign Relations minority staff report.

THE CASE OF LTJG JAMES E. DOOLEY, USN

BACKGROUND

On 22 October 1967, LTJG James E. Dooley was flying an A-4E aircraft which was hit by antiaircraft fire following a strike mission in Haiphong. Witnesses reported that LTJG Dooley's aircraft was streaming fuel and headed toward the Gulf of Tonkin, where it descended and crashed into the water just east of the Do Son Peninsula. There were no signs that LTJG Dooley ejected from the aircraft, no beepers were heard, and a thorough search revealed no sign of survival.

CLAIMS MADE IN THE MINORITY STAFF REPORT

The Senate Foreign Relations minority staff report claims that: a) DOD correlated a sighting report of the capture of an American pilot to returnee Capt. James Hickerson, USN, instead of LTJG Dooley, so as to consider the report resolved; b) "In 1973, a U.S. POW who had been repatriated said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell in Hanoi"; c) "Two Thai special forces' soldiers released from North Vietnamese custody in 1973 identified Dooley's photograph as a fellow inmate" and; d) A communist photo of captured U.S. pilots in Hanoi shows a partial profile of a person who "strongly resembles" LTJG Dooley.

FACTS

- The refugee report clearly describes the capture of CAPT Hickerson, whose own debriefing account of his capture closely follows the source's reporting.
- No returnee ever claimed to have seen LTJG Dooley's name on a prison wall.
- The Thai POW's did not identify Dooley's photograph as a fellow inmate.
- LTJG Dooley is not depicted in any post-capture photographs.

ANALYSIS OF CLAIMS

The minority staff's "analysis" of the fore mentioned live-sighting report is a classic example of how raw reporting, without access to a data base of facts, can be misinterpreted. In this instance a Vietnamese refugee source interviewed by the Joint Casualty Resolution Center (JCRC) in December 1986, reported firsthand information on the capture of a U.S. pilot in what he believed was October or November 1968. The source described seeing a man in a parachute land on the beach and attempt to evade by swimming out into the water. The source says the Vietnamese shot at the swimmer to limit his movement, and local forces swam out to capture the man. He also says that the pilot began firing at the Vietnamese and attempted to talk on a hand-held radio, but was unable to do so due to waves. He goes on to report that the pilot wore a one-piece uniform with a long zipper in the front and that the POW was blindfolded and his arms bound behind his back before he was loaded into a sidecar. He adds that he was later put in an automobile and driven away.

Based solely upon the loss location, time of day and month, JCRC originally believed the report could relate to LTJG Dooley; however, when the facts of CAPT Hickerson's capture were later brought to their attention (JCRC did not have access to his debrief) they reevaluated all reports from that area and rescinded their tentative correlation to LTJG Dooley, concluding that the source's information described CAPT Hickerson's circumstances of capture.

The minority staff says that CAPT Hickerson has provided a written statement of his capture, claiming "he could not have been swimming out to sea when he was captured," and refuting other points in the source's story. They say that "Hickerson was taken to prison riding on the back of a bicycle, not in a jeep as the fisherman described."

While DIA does not possess the alleged written statement from CAPT Hickerson to which the Senate staff refer, we do have the returnee's 1973 debriefing in which he details the events of his December 1967 capture. Upon returning to the U.S., CAPT Hickerson told debriefers . . . "he collapsed his parachute, he found himself face-to-face with about 100 civilian personnel. He immediately separated from the parachute and started running out into the shallow water, after going a short distance he detached his seat pack and commenced swimming seaward. About this time rifle shots started splashing in the water around him . . . "At this point Hickerson saw he was about to be captured so he pulled out his survival radio and sent the message . . . to his wingman. He then stopped, put up his hands and surrendered to the DRV swimmers." In his debrief CAPT Hickerson goes on to describe how he was stripped of his clothing, blindfolded, his hands tied behind his back and how he was put on the fender of a motorcycle and taken to the fishing village. Later that day he was also moved in the sidecar of a motorcycle, during which time he was seen by crowds of people who threw rocks and sticks at him.

While there are slight differences in the source's account and CAPT Hickerson's as reported in his debrief, the refugee report clearly refers to the former POW. It is noteworthy that the source was only 13 years old when he observed the event, and 19 years passed between the time he saw CAPT Hickerson's capture and the time he reported it to U.S. authorities.

As to the other points raised by the minority staff, DIA is not aware of anyone claiming to have seen Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell. This story appears to stem from a returnee who reported that another POW had mentioned seeing Dooley's name on a wall; however, the POW to which the story was attributed never mentioned Dooley in any manner in his debriefing or later interviews.

When shown a photo of LTJG Dooley, the two Thai soldiers released from Hanoi in 1973 were uncertain, saying they saw a similar face in 1968 at a prison known as the "Zoo." Based upon other information they furnished, it is clear that they saw another individual who subsequently died in captivity, but who bore a physical resemblance to the preloss photograph of LTJG Dooley they were shown. There is no information that points to LTJG Dooley's capture or to his being imprisoned at the "Zoo" or any other prison.

The minority staff also allude to a communist photograph of a profiled POW who resembles LTJG Dooley. We have no clue as to which photo they are referring. With one exception, every POW photograph from the war has been identified, and the one remaining unidentified photo is clearly not the missing Naval aviator. The plain facts are that DIA possesses no post-capture photographs that even remotely can be attributed to LTJG Dooley.

Senator SMITH. You in your travels, Mr. Usry, you were looking at both photographs, correct, both cases—both Carr, and who was the other one, Stevens?

Mr. USRY. No, sir, that is not correct.

Senator SMITH. I mean, Borah.

Mr. USRY. No. The only reason we went to Thailand was to deal with the Stevens photograph. The information that came to us concerning Stevens came to us from Judge Hamilton Gayden. The information that came to us concerning Borah also came from Hamilton Gayden, but since we had no firm identification at that time, it was felt to deal with that which looked most promising.

The photographs of Carr were provided by Colonel Bailey. However, Colonel Bailey was not forthcoming with any information concerning where Carr might be, and so we did not go to Thailand with any intention of determining anything about Carr. We provided the briefing to Secretary Cheney with the Carr photographs to show him the process. Our whole intent was to deal strictly with Stevens.

Senator SMITH. What is Charney's opinion of the Carr photographs?

Mr. USRY. According to Dr. Charney the photographs are of the same person.

Senator SMITH. And Mr. Ford indicated, I forget the exact language that was used, but compelling resemblance, but you had not ruled that out in this particular photograph and that that is a match, is that correct?

Mr. SHEETZ. That is right.

Mr. USRY. Would we like to continue. I would like to continue with those areas that I pointed out in my initial statement, that were areas that we were not able to proceed to because of asset problems. The first one which were attempts by the administration to infiltrate private activists groups, I believe the testimony of Mr. Sampley to this committee last week supports our position. However, I am offering additional documentation to support that position. This documentation will also support our next problem area list.

Two, illegal surveillance and investigation.

The CHAIRMAN. What page are you on?

Mr. USRY. 14.

The CHAIRMAN. Now you say, and I am just reading your testimony on page 14, it says this live sighting report is definitely not that of Hickerson, as the Defense Department indicates. Correct. That is page 14 of your statement?

Mr. USRY. Yes sir. That is also what Captain Hickerson says in his letter and in his statement to me.

The CHAIRMAN. I understand. Can I ask who is responsible for the evaluation of that? Is that you Mr. Sheetz?

Mr. SHEETZ. That is my office.

The CHAIRMAN. Can you come up, do you mind. I am just trying to understand this. It inevitably puts both of you on the spot a little bit and I apologize for that, but I am truly trying to understand this, so the committee can really grapple with this, I mean what we have got here. And I just read it and I have a statement from JCRC to Commander naval military personnel, SOCOM, Special Operations Command. And that is an evaluation which was for NSC from Mr. Childress in January 1987 of the Dooley incident.

The next page, here on page 13, let me go back one page before that, excuse me. Go back before that report that has the evaluation. You had the Hickerson letter, To Whom It May Concern, my name is Capt. James Hickerson, USN, so forth and then he says, I do not believe the captured American pilot subject to the report was me. There are too many discrepancies between the JCR report and my capture.

(1) I was not shot down on 22 December—I was shot down on December—I think he means I was shot down—he says I was not, but I think he means, I was shot down on 22 December, not October or November. (2) My parachute was all white, not red, white and blue. (3) If I had landed 50 meters from an air field I would have been aware of it. (4) I swam no more than 50 yards, not 200 meters. (5) I did not attempt to use my pistol. (6) There were no waves. (7) I was transported away on the back of the bicycle, not in a side car and I was never in an automobile. (8) I was wearing marine fatigues, two piece, not a one-piece flight suit. (9) There was a solid, approximately 800-foot, overcast in the area, making it unlikely that five or six jets plus a helicopter would have been flying under an overcast that close to Do Son.

Despite the fact that the location and date of the described capture was approximately mine, considering the above, I do not believe that the captured pilot reported in JCRC report was me. Very respectfully, J.R. Hickerson, Captain, USN.

Now, has he ever changed that testimony? Are you aware of that?

Mr. SHEETZ. I have not seen this letter before. We've been working with his official debrief and that was done right after he came home when his memory was fresh. And that is the source material that has been available to us.

Senator McCAIN. Mr. Chairman, could I just add a little bit to this. I did talk to him last night. He is a friend of mine, and he said he was asked various questions. Was your parachute red, white, and blue. He said, no, et cetera. The fact is that the refugee cites this incident as being in 1968 and both Dooley and Hickerson were shot down in 1967. So I think it is a little bit hard and I believe that the refugee's reporting was some 19 years after the alleged incident.

The CHAIRMAN. This is what I am trying to get at.

Mr. SHEETZ. The refugee was 13 years old at the time of the incident.

Senator McCAIN. 13 years old at the time of the incident?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the refugee, I am less concerned about. I am just trying to get to the letter.

Senator McCAIN. This is based on a refugee report. He was 13 years old at the time he made the report, 19 years later. So I think it is very understandable that there might be some problem.

The CHAIRMAN. Was this letter drafted by Captain Hickerson?

Senator McCAIN. It was solicited.

Mr. USRY. I believe it was solicited by the individual it was addressed to.

Senator McCAIN. By a family member.

Mr. USRY. I would like to comment, if I may, on Senator McCain's point. I think it is well taken. This is some 19 years later and this was our concern, that the individual was confused to a great degree. Yet it was finally determined to be Captain Hickerson, when it could just as easily have been someone else.

And that is our point. We are not necessarily saying, that this is, or that what the refugee saw was, in fact, a shoot down of Dooley. What we are saying is that what the refugee saw may not have been a shoot down of Hickerson.

The CHAIRMAN. Hang on one second, Mr. Usry. These folks know how many shoot downs there were at Do Son within that period of time. I mean, we know how many aircraft we lost. We know when a pilot went down. So it is either Dooley or Hickerson, I presume. Do you have another pilot that it might be?

Mr. USRY. I believe at that point in time there were four lost in that area from the documentation I reviewed. And they were able to determine in two of those instances, those referred to, there were two crashes in which there, and again, I am recalling from memory there were no bodies recovered or it was assumed that the pilot had, in fact, crashed because there were no parachutes seen.

Senator McCAIN. Was this 1968 or 1967, because the refugee said it took place in 1968?

Mr. USRY. Again, I would have to refer specifically to the document which I would be more than willing to do. I just don't have that particular document in my hand. But the point I am trying to make is, that I understand, there are some inconsistencies, as Senator McCain has pointed out.

The position we are trying to make is that, with those inconsistencies, it was still attributed the shoot down finally, final analysis by JCRC or the DIA, was that it was Hickerson. Our position is that that analysis was not correct and it could have been Lieutenant Dooley because that is still an unresolved issue.

Senator MCCAIN. In fact in your report you state that the description of events more closely resembles the capture of Hickerson.

Mr. USRY. That is based upon the preliminary findings of the JCRC in which they state other than the timeframe in which the shoot down was described by the source it closely resembles that of Dooley.

The CHAIRMAN. Now what do you say to that, Mr. Sheetz?

Mr. SHEETZ. Well, I would like to read a very short piece of text here, that is an extract from his debriefing report. I will give it to you in basically what are Hickerson's words. Upon returning to the United States, Captain Hickerson told de-briefers, "He collapsed his parachute. He found himself face to face with about 100 civilian personnel.

He immediately separated from the parachute and started running out into the shallow water. After going a short distance he detached his seat pack and commenced swimming seaward. About this time rifle shots started splashing in the water around him. At this point Hickerson saw he was about to be captured so he pulled out his survival radio and sent a message to his wingman.

He then stopped, put up his hands and surrendered to the Vietnamese swimmers. In his debrief Captain Hickerson goes on to describe how he was stripped of his clothing, blindfolded, his hands tied behind his back. How he was put on the fender of a motorcycle and taken to a fishing village. Later that day he was also moved in the sidecar of a motorcycle during which time he was seen by crowds of people who threw rocks and sticks at him."

The CHAIRMAN. That is his own words. His own recollection right after he came back?

Mr. SHEETZ. That's correct.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, what is there about the Dooley record that makes it similar from DIA's perspective. Originally DIA thought it was Dooley's shoot down?

Mr. SHEETZ. JCRC.

The CHAIRMAN. What was it that made them come to that conclusion?

Mr. SHEETZ. Based solely on the loss, location, time of day and month. JCRC believed the report could relate to Lieutenant Dooley. However, when the facts of Captain Hickerson's capture were later brought to their attention, they re-evaluated all the reports from that area, rescinded their tentative correlation to Dooley, concluding the source of the information described Captain Hickerson's circumstances of capture.

The CHAIRMAN. Now Mr. Usry, let me ask you, do you not think there are sufficient parallels between Mr. Hickerson's own account and a refugee of 13 years' ago account, that it would be improbable that another pilot had almost the exact same experience from shoot down into the water, capture, bicycle, so forth, bicycle slash sidecar; I mean is there not a probability of fact here that has to enter into this?

Mr. USRY. I believe with the probability factor that it could have been Hickerson, it could equally make it Dooley, I do believe.

The CHAIRMAN. What makes you say that?

Mr. USRY. Because when Captain Hickerson indicates to us, or to the family members, at the time he was asked, that he was not placed in a sidecar, he was not transported across an airport or an airfield, he was not put in a car, but in fact was taken a prisoner on a bicycle. That is an extreme difference. And because of that.

The CHAIRMAN. Well Captain Hickerson's own words were just read to you. That is his own debrief. This was Captain Hickerson's own de-brief.

Mr. USRY. So then do we make the assumption that in 1989 he made a mistake and again on the 6th of March, 1990, when I spoke to him that he again made a mistake. I think the easiest way to resolve this particular issue concerning Captain Hickerson would be to ask him, exactly what he remembers now. If, in fact, we are incorrect, then we are incorrect, but if in fact we are not incorrect, then the question is still there.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me ask you this. Did—I do not see Captain Hickerson's signature on this letter.

Mr. USRY. I have it on the bottom in mine. It says, Very Respectfully, J.M. Hickerson, Captain USN, Retired, then it has J.M. Hickerson signed on it. You are looking at the text of my statement. If you look under enclosure F you will find an actual copy of the letter, with his signature.

Senator MCCAIN. Let me just point out Mr. Usry, that I think, frankly, Mr. Chairman, we are spending way too much time on this. We have got a lot of other areas to cover but the reason why we debrief immediately upon release, immediately before we go home, before we see families, you should know, this, Mr. Usry, is so that they can get the freshest facts that they possibly can about our experience in prison.

Now I am not saying that Mr. Hickerson is not telling the truth. In fact, I am convinced, I know absolutely that he is saying whatever is to the best of his recollection, but I would have a strong tendency as he would to rely upon his initial debrief back in 1973, rather than a recollection nearly 20 years later. I think that is the only point.

The CHAIRMAN. Well it is something we ought to try to nail down. Let us move on. We will try to reconcile it as we go along here. Does DIA have any questions about whether or not it might be Dooley today?

Mr. SHEETZ. No. We are confident that it is Hickerson.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you.

Senator MCCAIN. From what I see, Mr. Chairman, I am not sure.

Mr. USRY. No. 2. Illegal surveillance and investigation of individual activists of this issue by the Department of Defense. Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record several pieces of correspondence either originating from Mr. John R. Mead or addressed to him. The correspondence from Mr. Mead, in all instances, is addressed to various individuals within the U.S. Government to include the Attorney General of the United States, the Public Integrity Section of the Department of Justice, the Counsel to the President, as well as the Internal Revenue Service.

The correspondence to Mr. Mead is from various Government agencies indicating that they have received this correspondence and are acting upon it. Mr. Mead's correspondence addresses his concern with the administration (1) utilizing private organizations to spy on him, (2) conducting character assassination on him, and (3) the Defense Department conducting surveillance of him. He specifically identifies, at that time, Mr. Richard Childress of the National Security Council, as well as individuals affiliated with the Center for POW MIA Accountability Incorporated.

I would also like to introduce for the record a memorandum prepared by Dr. Harvey Andrews, a former member of Senator Grassley's staff, dated September 11, 1989. The memorandum addresses, Dr. Andrews has reviewed the file concerning Mr. Mead's allegations. I wish to also point out that Dr. Andrews is a retired defense criminal investigative service special agent with over 30 years of criminal investigative experience.

[See p. 48 of the appendix.]

Senator McCAIN. Excuse me, Mr. Usry, when were these letters written to Attorney General, Public Integrity Section, Department of Justice, et cetera and Counsel to the President and IRS?

Mr. USRY. They started in May 1984, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is that in your report?

Mr. USRY. That is enclosure I.

The CHAIRMAN. No, your report originally.

Mr. USRY. No, sir, what we are addressing at this particular point in time, are those issues in my statement of last week, that we were not able to look into due to the non-availability of assets.

Senator McCAIN. Mr. Usry, have there been any investigations conducted concerning these instances that Mr. Mead refers to?

Mr. USRY. Yes, that is what I was going to address now Senator.

Senator McCAIN. What has been result?

Mr. USRY. The resolution was, as far as we are concerned, incomplete simply because it was not referred to the proper agency. The Department of Defense did not deny that they had, in fact, conducted their surveillance. However, they said nothing illegal had occurred. The Civil Rights Violations were never referred to the appropriate agency for determination to begin with and that is what I would like to read to you.

Senator McCAIN. Since 1984 they have not been—

Mr. USRY. That is my, our understanding. May I read the document. On August 28, 1989, the Office of Public Integrity, Department of Justice was asked to produce its file on the investigation of a complaint filed by John R. Mead. Reference a local surveillance by DIA, et cetera, Mr. Jack Keeny produced a three-page declaration of prosecution based upon Mead's complaints stating that this paper summarized our enquiry.

Mr. Keeny would not allow the paper to leave this office. Upon review the declination paper was found to be a superficial enquiry of the complaint by Mead which was conducted by Defense Department's Oversight Office. DIA, through the Oversight enquiry never denied a surveillance of Mead but stated it had done nothing illegal. The portion of the complaint dealing with the Civil Rights Violation was not referred to the Federal Bureau of Investigation or was their any evidence that any other potential criminal violations in Mead's complaint were ever investigated by the FBI.

The paper was a self-serving document that cleared DIA of any wrongdoing. Mr. Keeny was asked to provide the full file on this matter and he said he would have to take it up with some unidentified office. Subsequently Mr. Keeny called and said the complete file would have to be withheld because of the Third Agency Rule and so after that time, to my knowledge, there has been no further pursual of Mr. Mead's allegations.

Senator McCAIN. And one of his allegations is that Mr. Childress was associated with an organization called the Center for POW/MIA Accountability, Inc., a supposed tax-exempt organization and they and individuals associated with the Center have engaged in attempted blackmail and extortion. After receiving approval from Mr. Childress for their travel, that is the allegation, here, that I read.

Mr. USRY. Those originated from Mr. Mead, Senator.

Senator McCAIN. The obviously very serious part of his allegation is that Mr. Childress, who was then a member of the National Security Council directed the Center for POW/MIA Accountability, Inc., and individuals to engage in blackmail and extortion of Mr. Mead, is that correct?

Mr. USRY. As Mr. Mead put it, yes. That is one of several documents that he offers indicating what he felt were improprieties or illegalities.

Senator McCAIN. Do you know anything about this Center for POW/MIA Accountability, Inc.?

Mr. USRY. I know very little about them, Senator. I do believe that, that is the same organization or corporation that Mr. Sampley also referenced that had hired him, but I am not sure on that. I believe it is the same one.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the gravamen of your allegation regarding this?

Mr. USRY. Simply that it was not proceeded to its logical conclusion. It is my understanding that Civil Rights Violations are the principle responsibility of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The CHAIRMAN. You are not vouching for the authenticity or validity thereof?

Mr. USRY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are just saying it was not investigated?

Mr. USRY. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. That should be easy enough to ascertain.

Senator McCAIN. Do any of the DOD witnesses here know anything about the Center for POW/MIA Accountability, Inc.?

Mr. SHEETZ. I do not, but there is something else I would like to say. I do not have any knowledge of that organization, but if I could I would like to point out that DIA is a foreign intelligence organization and we do not do domestic surveillance. If indeed there were any surveillance of Mr. Mead, I can tell you categorically it would not have been done by DIA.

I do not know where this notion of unlawful surveillance by DIA came from, but we are not authorized by our charter to do enforcement surveillance or any of that kind of work in the United States, except under extremely limited context and I have seen nothing here that would lead me to believe that this would be one of those type cases.

Senator McCAIN. Mr. Usry, were you aware that DIA does not surveil Americans, anyone domestically?

Mr. USRY. I am aware that the DIA has no charter to do so, yes, Senator.

Senator McCAIN. But you believe they did?

Mr. USRY. I have no belief one way or the other.

Senator McCAIN. You say in your statement there was illegal surveillance and investigation of individual activists of this issue by the Department of Defense?

Mr. USRY. I believe I also state those are problem areas we were not able to look into due to restriction of assets and that those were areas that were left unresolved.

The CHAIRMAN. What page is that on?

Senator McCAIN. Page 14 is the illegal surveillance, the Center for POW/MIA Accountability Inc., and also there is allegations about Mr. Armitage.

The CHAIRMAN. Within your original report to the committee, the subcommittee report, the Minority report, what page is that on?

Mr. USRY. Senator, again, I believe that what we are discussing right now are those seven issues that are referenced.

The CHAIRMAN. Just deriving out of your statement?

Mr. USRY. Yes sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Not out of the report?

Mr. USRY. No sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Where you alleged in your opening you were unable to complete?

Mr. USRY. Yes sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Because of—I think I recall that. I do not have a copy. I seem to recall that I read it in the context that you said they were, I suppose it depends on how you read it. All right.

Why do you not proceed? I think what we want to try to do here—and I have read through the others—I think they are pretty self explanatory, with perhaps one or two questions that might arise. Well, that was the illegal surveillance. That was the last one; is that accurate?

Mr. USRY. That was the last one we addressed, yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any of the other areas that Senators want to survey and then ask questions about, rather than go through each and every one? If you have questions on them, otherwise they can stand as their own explanation.

Senator BROWN. Mr. Chairman. I do not believe you have covered this in depth, but I was looking on page 20, item No. 3. Certain U.S. Government officials who testified before the House Congressional Hearings lied. Documentation which I will provide for the record in the form of personal correspondence from various personnel employed clearly showed this duplicity. Who were the Government officials?

Mr. USRY. What we have is personal correspondence between former and present employees of CIL-HI, in which they indicate that some of the statements they made, during, I believe it was a House Hearings a few years ago, were not, in fact, correct, and that they were purposefully misrepresented or misstated.

Senator BROWN. I am sorry, the question I asked was, who were the people?

Mr. USRY. If you will allow me to look in my files here, I will be more than happy to provide it, or if you would submit it for the record I will be more than happy to give you the names. Why do we not just go through the files here.

Senator BROWN. My understanding of the purpose of this was for you to present the documentation for the statements that have been made.

Mr. USRY. That is correct. And so would you like to take a 5-minute break while I go through those.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you have the personal correspondence here.

Mr. USRY. Yes, sir, I do.

The CHAIRMAN. Why do you not pull that out. That would be helpful. And let me just ask you, while you are doing that. Did you read the foreign relations committee file, the file with respect to the so-called organized crime figure?

Mr. USRY. No.

The CHAIRMAN. You did not read the file itself?

Mr. USRY. No, sir. You mean what was provided to us or what may be in there in total?

The CHAIRMAN. Well what was provided to you.

Mr. USRY. An abstract of—what we were looked at was an abstract of the notations on various date diaries by one of the individuals.

The CHAIRMAN. In writing? You saw that?

Mr. USRY. I saw it. It was basically a computer print out.

The CHAIRMAN. But you did not see the file itself.

Mr. USRY. No sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And the abstract was provided you specifically by whom?

Mr. USRY. You had mentioned his name earlier.

The CHAIRMAN. By Jack Blum.

Mr. USRY. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. He gave you the abstract?

Mr. USRY. He let us view it.

[Pause.]

Mr. USRY. Let me refer to your question, Senator Brown. I have some of it here right now. I am still going to have to search for all of it, but what this is, it is a synopsis of correspondence between various personnel that in fact were involved in the operation of CIL-HI and there is a 17 March 1987 letter by Mark Frankel, to Mark Frankel, from Dr. Sam Dunlap, who at the time was employed at CIL-HI. Actually, he was employed at CIL-HI from 2 January, 1986 to 8 August, 1986.

By March 1986 I learned from Dr. Norman J. Sauer of Michigan State University and Dr. William R. Maples, the State Museum, that most of the Pot Set Laos cases, identified in June 1985 were fraudulent and that his assistant, Ms. Marla Mahoney had told Drs. Gail, Maples, and Charney, in February 1986, New Orleans American Academy of Forensic Sciences meeting that skeletal identifications appeared more believable than they really were.

15 May 1986 she told Dr. John K. Lundy, at CIL-HI, same information. Maples informed Dr. Sauer that a former CIL-HI employee had told him that the Commander of CIL-HI changed identification reports on a regular basis. Alice Curley, personal friend of Mr. Furooey, since 1950's and has consulted for the Army off and on for years. And then it goes on and on, so one of the people that did, in fact, lie during the hearings was Ms. Mahoney, when she was asked certain questions during the hearing and I also have transcripts of that hearing that I am more than willing to provide to the committee.

Senator BROWN. You quoted a letter from Dr. Dunlap. The question I asked was, who was it?

Mr. USRY. Marla Mahoney, she was an employee at CIL-HI at the time. She testified at the hearings.

Senator BROWN. If you are willing to, Mr. Chairman, what would be helpful to me to have are the names of all the U.S. Government officials that lied.

Mr. USRY. Could I give that to you on the record or do you want me to do that right this moment?

Senator BROWN. Well I think the Chairman has some other things he would like to go through but what I would like you to do if you would submit for the record, one, the names of everyone who lied and two, the dates on which they testified, and the page reference within the transcript and four, the quote which they gave that is not accurate and five, the documentation that shows that what they said was incorrect. I think that would give us the specifics we need to evaluate that. Is that satisfactory, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Absolutely Senator. I think that is a good suggestion and a good way to proceed. Do other Senators have other specific areas of enquiry?

Senator GRASSLEY. Are we at the end of this testimony?

The CHAIRMAN. What I am trying to do, Senator, is speed the process up a little bit because some of this is self-explanatory it stands on its face. But Senators have a specific question about one of these areas, I want every Senator to have an opportunity to ask and then if the administration wants to respond to any particular assertions in any of these areas, they will have an opportunity to do so.

Senator GRASSLEY. I think I had better ask, at this point, a couple of questions, not quite as specific as what you wanted, but I would like to have, Mr. Usry explain as he sees it what was the purpose behind the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Minority Staff Report?

Mr. USRY. The purpose of the report was to put forth that information that we had developed that showed there is a problem. And that there is a concern on the part of the public, specifically those families, that their best interests have not been served. Also, to create that which was necessary in a public forum to cause this committee to actually be chartered and that was basically the reason behind this. There were formulation meetings, if you will, some time ago attended by various staff personnel of some of the people here on this committee and at that particular point in time we provided them with information we had concerning our enquiry.

It was after the publication, I believe, of our first report and that would ultimately might be the end result, part of which would certainly be that there was no way, certainly with the assets that we had, that we could cover this problem in total. It just was not possible. So what we tried to do was bring out that which we found to be questionable so that this committee would eventually formed, and in fact, that is what has occurred.

That was the purpose behind the report, knowing that there was no way that people that were involved in the formulation and writing of this report were the right people or enough people or the right kind of people in every instance to look at this problem from beginning to end. So what hoped would occur, or in fact did, and that was the reason for this report.

Senator GRASSLEY. On a more specific point, in regard to something that Mr. De Statte said in response to an earlier question about Peter Cressman. I would like to have you tell me any commentary on that, or any information you have on it.

Mr. USRY. Prior to my opening my statement I provided to the Chairman of the committee a document concerning Peter Cressman and his shoot down. What is interesting is that Peter Cressman was, in fact, shot down over Laos, after the U.S., I believe, signed the Peace Treaty with North Vietnam and in the documentation that I have presented, and I am by no means an expert on the Peter Cressman shoot down, I only go with what was provided to me, there are partial Intelligence Reports that indicate that shortly after the shoot down there were Americans seen as prisoners within 65 kilometers, I believe it was, of where that plane crashed.

It would also indicate to me, based upon what was provided to the family members, and again, that is who we are working with, that the question you asked earlier, whether or not we were aware, or had broken the code of either the Vietnamese or the Laotians, either the Vietnamese or the Laotians were transmitting in open text and normal language, or the code was broken because there are copies of the text of radio messages in which they discuss four pilots, four criminals which Americans were routinely referred to in Laos and would lead one to believe that the possibility from what was presented to us by the family members, that some people may have actually survived the Cressman, that Baron 52 was the call sign of the particular plane, may have survived that plane crash.

Again, I am no expert on that, but I offer and provided the committee everything we had concerning that particular shoot down.

The CHAIRMAN. Let me just ask, Mr. Sheetz, maybe you could come back up for a second, or the appropriate person, maybe Mr. De Statte. And you have already been sworn Mr. De Statte. Let me just ask you now. Picking up a bit on where we were earlier today, do you have definitive evidence that what he is saying is not accurate, that everybody in that aircraft was killed?

Mr. DE STATTE. Yes sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Definitive, conclusive?

Mr. DE STATTE. That is the way I would characterize it.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it necessary to share it with the committee now or just submit it?

Mr. DE STATTE. Sir, it is relatively brief.

The CHAIRMAN. Why don't you share it with us.

Mr. DE STATTE. The aircraft was an EC-47Q. It is usually referred to by the call sign for the aircraft, which is Baron 52. It had eight crew members. It was lost over Laos in February of 1973. And I might add, the mother of one of the co-pilots is a personal friend of mine, and I used to work with his father. And so I know something about this. Four days later a search team inspected the records and located the remains of four of the eight?

The CHAIRMAN. Whose search team?

Mr. DE STATTE. U.S. One of the members of that search team was, in fact, a personal friend and had worked with some of the people, the crew in the back of the aircraft. Two of the remains were in the pilot and co-pilot position, the third was in the engineer's compartment. The team was able to recover a portion of this body which was identified as the other co-pilot. The fourth body they found was near the engineer's compartment.

Normally, in this type of aircraft there are two positions immediately behind the engineer's compartment. One of these two positions would have been occupied by S. Sgt. Todd Melton. The other by either Sergeant Matejov or Sergeant Cressman. Due to the physical and time constraints and hostile forces in the area, the team was not able to lift the fuselage to search for additional remains.

The search team also found what appeared to be anti-aircraft artillery shrapnel holes in part of the wreckage. They found no evidence that the crew were preparing to bail out when the plane crashed, and it did not appear that the aircraft attempted a controlled landing or a controlled crash-landing. Disposition of the wreckage and other features of the crash site, for example, the absence of skid marks, indicated the aircraft had plunged in nearly vertically to earth, bounced once and landed upside down and burned.

Although operating outside the range of ground radar stations during most of its mission, Baron 52 had frequent contact with other aircraft in the area. For example, the commander made routine half-hourly contacts with, and reported all unusual occurrences to Moonbeam, an airborne command control center which is another aircraft in the area. They also had radio contact with specter 20 and a HC-130 gunship working in the same area.

Electronics warfare crew members, these are the people in the back of that aircraft, also used separate communications equipment to maintain contact with another EC-47, Baron 62, flying in the same general area. The last reported position of Baron 52 was 8 to 10 minutes flying time from the crash site.

Following a review of facts associated with the crash the commander, Eighth Tactical Fighter Wing, in coordination with the commander, 56 Special Operations Wing, they were the commanders of the flying crew and the electronics crew respectively, recommended that the status of the crew members be changed to "killed in action."

The next of kin were informed of this status change, and the facts supporting the decisions, in a series of letters dated between 4 February and 17 February, 1973, which summarized the events of Baron 52's last mission and the evidence obtained by the search team. The commander added that in view of the capabilities of the radio communications equipment, Baron 52's frequent contact with other aircraft and the extensive training of the crew, in case of emergency at least one of the crew would have instinctively used the radios unless the aircraft crashed as a result of some catastrophic incident, that immediately and completely incapacitated the crew members.

Having reviewed the available facts, the field commanders reported that they believed, quote, there was no reasonable doubt that all the members of crew of Baron 52 were killed in the crash, close quote.

Now as for the Intelligence information that Mr. Usry referred to. Although the observations of the search team and other facts constituted what the field commander believed to be compelling evidence that none of the crew members survived, four sets of Intelligence Reports, portions of which were declassified for release to the next of kin, led others to speculate that four electronics specialists could have survived. Two of the documents were dated 5 February, 1973 and another 17 February 1973, 12 days later, and the fourth, 2 May 1973. I might add that I believe Mr. Mooney, who has testified before your committee, claims to have written that particular document.

Through longstanding misinterpretations of these sanitized documents, an erroneous impression of survivors, was preserved. Yet in fact, the four reports do not relate to the loss of the EC-47.

(1) The initial 5 February report originated in the area of Vinh, North Vietnam, about 240 miles by road, north of the EC-47Q crash site. In that report, which was issued as an unevaluated spot report as soon as the information was acquired, a North Vietnamese unit near Vinh said it was holding four prisoners who were not further identified.

(2) The later 5 February report based on and issued after a review of the information in the earlier 5 February report provides no additional insights into the origin or the identity of the prisoners. Now I might add for clarity, both of those documents refer to the same initial report, so these are not two separate reports. They are simply two pieces of intelligence information. The two reports based on the same item of intelligence.

(3) The 17 February document is a report by an enemy unit of the alleged downing of an aircraft in the area immediately south of demilitarized zone which separated North and South Vietnam, and as such does not relate to the EC-47 or its crew.

(4) The 2 May report is yet another analyst interpretation of the 5 February reporting and is neither new information nor a new report. DIA's review of the evidence shows that the analyst who prepared the 2 May report made a number of arbitrary and erroneous assumptions, and speculative assertions all in an attempt to infer that the 5 February information originated from a location much closer to the EC-47 crash site and that some of the crew survived.

The 2 May report therefore actually provided no more conclusive information than did the original 5 February report. However, the unwarranted personal speculation tends to draw attention away from this fact. In conclusion it should be emphasized that the four documents cited above were never conclusively correlated to crew members of the Baron 52.

The documents initially were entered into the files of the crew members only because the information was acquired shortly after Baron 52 became missing and it was anticipated that future reporting might permit the DIA analyst to make a definitive correlation to the Baron 52 incident.

No such reporting was ever received. It is further emphasized that following the loss of Baron 52 none of its crew members were ever seen alive and there is no intelligence whatsoever which would indicate any of the crew survived the incident of loss.

The CHAIRMAN. I appreciate that, that is helpful. Mr. Usry, what do you say to that?

Mr. USRY. Mr. Chairman, as I stated previously, one, I do not profess to be an expert on the Cressman shoot down. I simply offered to you what we had on Cressman and asked that you review it and compare it with what DIA has just provided you or what they will provide to you at a later time. There is a very good argument made here, in the report, from what I can see, but again, this is not something we spent a lot of time on. It was in the documents I brought with me today. And when I heard it being discussed by you, I provided it for you.

The CHAIRMAN. I appreciate that. Let me ask you, Mr. De Statte, very quickly, this plane had destructive mechanisms in it, did it not self destruct so it would not fall into enemy hands?

Mr. DE STATTE. Sir, I am not aware of that.

The CHAIRMAN. Did not our electronic capable aircraft have that kind of destructive capacity?

Mr. DE STATTE. I do not know the answer to that question. I can find out.

The CHAIRMAN. I would be confident it did.

Mr. DE STATTE. I just do not know that for certain.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, assuming it did, what was left, I mean why was there so much left of it? Was the electronic equipment in fact intact when the crew visited it. Did they make a determination.

Mr. DE STATTE. They did not go inside the fuselage, as I recall.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, how did they find the remains they found?

Mr. DE STATTE. Looking in from the outside.

The CHAIRMAN. Only looking in from outside? Now is it possible somebody could have bailed out before the crash?

Mr. DE STATTE. I am working from a summary here, not the total record, but no, it is not possible. This aircraft . . . I know the aircraft, it is particularly tight and configured in a way, it is very difficult to move and when you are in your position you were kind of there.

The CHAIRMAN. But I gathered there were a couple of slots from which you could bail relatively easily, is that incorrect? Do any of the military folks here have data on that? Well, we will look into that. Let us not get bogged down with the details now. We have got a presentation on both sides, it is interesting and we will evaluate it. Do any Senators have further questions?

Senator SMITH. Mr. Usry, can you tell me the rationale or the reason for doing the report? Why did you do this report. This is obviously very comprehensive and as you have seen, controversial, but why did you take this task on. For what purpose? Did someone direct you to do it? Whatever information you could provide the committee in that regard?

Mr. USRY. In November 1984, while I was still in the service. As a criminal investigator I was assigned to Korea and shortly before the end of the year I was given an investigation which I foolishly thought would only take 6 weeks.

Basically what it was, it was a series of allegations levied by a major then in the service by the name of Mark Smith and his name has come up repeatedly in here. And the allegations ranged from things such as utilizing these special forces detachment in Korea as a transshipment point for high-dollar value items that they could escape Customs and then give to high-ranking Korean officials; two, the failure on the part of the U.S. Government to act on information concerning live POW's.

Well, I investigated that from 1984 basically to March 1986 and what I found during that time frame was that in every instance where Major Smith, at the time had indicated that he knew something, as a fact, it was in fact a fact and there was credibility to his allegation. When he said he had heard something, and he did not really know whether it was factual or not, that is what he reported. Also, during that time frame of course I felt like I was the messenger or bearer of bad tidings and as I have felt here on occasion, it was more-or-less, let us shoot the messenger.

What I would do is I would come back to the United States and provide briefings to the Pentagon concerning the allegations that Major Smith had made, and in many instances, substantiated, that there were problems with high-ranking Korean officials at that point in time.

There seemed to be little or no interest to substantiate that or to report that; the interests seemed to be at the time to discredit Major Smith and I was asked repeatedly did I find anything that might indicate that Major Smith had done anything wrong and the allegations ranged from cross-border operations into Laos, dealing with guns or smuggling guns and gold throughout Southeast Asia, to bouncing a check.

And again, no real concern as to the allegations and substantiated criminal conduct that Major Smith had reported so when it all boiled down the big issue left was whether or not Major Smith had reported to a general officer information that Major Smith felt was valid information concerning live Americans as POW's.

My charter was never to determine the validity of that information, just whether it had been acted on. And I reached an impasse, where basically it was one person's word against the other and when I briefed my senior officials concerning what had been a routine way to determine who was telling the truth, or at least offered the opportunity, for either one to undergo a polygraph examination, there was no problem at all offering Mark Smith a polygraph examination, but I was not to offer the general a polygraph examination. Keeping in mind that that is a routine procedure that one would do in this type of investigation.

At the end there was some deliberation as to how this report would finally be written as well as what offenses would be reflected on the part of each individual who I identified as conducting or committing a criminal offense. The final decision was to list Major Smith as an individual who had uttered a worthless check, when the circumstances of which were very honest and there was every reason as to why he did what he did.

There was no interest at all to determining the validity of the POW information or anything else and then, of course, the particular investigation was classified.

At that particular point in time I saw that there was a real feeling amongst the people that I dealt, within the Pentagon, as well as the other commands that I transcended through my investigation, that nobody wanted to touch the POW issue and they were more intent on shooting the messenger.

Now, I will be the first to admit that Maj. Mark Smith is an extremely controversial individual and I know for a fact that he has invited a Senator out to the parking lot when the Senator referred to him or alluded to the fact that he might be lying. But what I saw at that particular point in time was a man who had provided a list of allegations to which I had substantiated and there was no argument about that; and there was more importance in discrediting him than there was in reporting and acting upon the particular allegations that he substantiated.

Based on that, it, I guess, more or less, picked up my curiosity as to whether or not there is something valid to the POW issue so in 1989, when I was contacted by the Staff Personnel of Senator Grassley and asked if I would come over and brief Senator Grassley, on the result of the Mark Smith investigation, because some people referred to that as a bench mark in this issue, I said I was more than willing and explained to them the process they needed to go through in order for me, at the time, being in the military, to come over and brief a congressional Member.

Well, some 30 days later I was still over at my headquarters and I had not provided the briefing. I had been over to the Department of Defense, I am sorry, the Pentagon IG office to discuss the issue and the questions as to what I thought the Senator might be interested in and I laid out that information for both the Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel that I spoke to at the time and they told me that I would be made available to the Senator at such time as we had an opportunity to look at the report and then determine what the Senator wanted to ask me about and I said, fine.

The next thing was when Senator Grassley came and got me and I provided to him within a 3- or 4-day period of time, a briefing as to what had occurred in the Mark Smith investigation and at that time he asked me if I would like to continue looking at the POW issue.

Naturally, as an investigator, this is quite an interesting issue, based upon my previous dealings with the system concerning the POW issue, I felt it was something that at least needed to be looked at and that is how I got initially involved in this issue.

What I saw was a definite act to shoot the messenger concerning the issue of POW's and other embarrassing issues for the Defense Department and as Senator Kassebaum asked me last week, have I ever seen the government lie, I saw more lying on the part of the government in cover-up, at least in the Defense Government area that I dealt with, concerning the Mark Smith investigation than I had seen in some time.

I still feel to this date. I feel that that man, as controversial as he is, certainly was not given the benefit of an opportunity, in one instance, to be promoted like anyone else, because of this investigation; certainly was not given the benefit or the opportunity to provide the training to younger soldiers that he was capable of providing, as was pointed out by his superiors. And, on the part of the Defense Department, again, that I dealt with, too scurry and bury this rather than to deal with it as they should. I would be more than willing to discuss that particular issue at any time.

Senator SMITH. I have just a quick follow-up point. Is there, in your opinion, is there a line of demarkation in terms of where you feel people have not followed through or malfeasance, or whatever terms you want to apply. Is there a demarkation point where this does not go on any more? Or do you feel it has gone all the way through, from the days of the Vietnam War to today?

As a final follow-up point, there is that we have had a lot of testimony from individuals, lately, in the hearings, who appear to be very cooperative and who have indicated a willingness to be cooperative, so are you seeing the same thing, say post-1988 and 1989 that you saw, not in terms of contemporary time but in terms of your investigation say in 1973, 1974, 1975?

Mr. USRY. I am confident that the administration that has been represented here, which is the Defense Department and I think the State Department, really wants to do the right thing. I do not necessarily believe they want to do the right thing because that is where their heart is.

I believe that they want to do the right thing now because it is a public issue and there is a committee here that is going to look at them and perform oversight to ensure that they are going to do the right thing.

As an investigator, I would also have to say that the point of departure probably is, the date of these hearings. That would be the safe bet, from an investigative approach, and anything that is before these hearings needs to be looked at to determine whether, in fact, the right thing in every instance has been done, as I said last week, and I hope I have made clear, and, if not, I will try it this time.

I do not believe that everything the Defense Department did was wrong. I believe, in many instances they did good work, but in those instances when they were wrong, we are dealing with human life, or the possibility of a human life, and for whatever reason, those need to be looked at. Whether it was just through an evolution of learning, on how to deal with POW issues, or how to deal with the analysis of information, or because it was an embarrassment, and I do not really have an answer one way or the other, regardless of the reason, the point of departure if I were looking at this would be the day these hearings started and everything before that should be reviewed.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much.

Senator BROWN. Just one quick question. On pages 5 to 8 of your reports you reference the fact that a report in the New York Times, that there were 5,000 POW's held by the North Vietnamese. In testimony earlier today, by Mr. Ford—

Mr. USRY. Senator, I think I can save you time. We were incorrect. There is no two ways about that. There was a misquote. It has been corrected and that is in the new edition of the report. However, I would like to offer that. We still do not feel that it changes the content of the point we are trying to make, but it is an error. I will not argue that.

Senator BROWN. I appreciate you setting that straight. Thank you Mr. Chairman.

Senator KASSEBAUM. Mr. Chairman, I would just like to offer a comment. It is not particularly pertinent except to speak for the fact that you were an investigator for the Republican side, or the Minority side of the Foreign Relations Committee. This was not something undertaken by—and I am a Republican Member of the Foreign Relations Committee—all of the minority side of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Mr. USRY. Agreed.

Senator KASSEBAUM. I just wanted that for the record.

The CHAIRMAN. The Minority of the Minority, Report. Senator McCain?

Senator MCCAIN. Thank you. It has been pointed out to Mr. Usry that your statements in your first report, in spite of 1,400 unresolved reports of first-hand live sightings, the Department of Defense remarkably still believes it has, quote no credible evidence, unquote. How does it dismiss these reports? Was it not important for you again?

Mr. USRY. It was a typo. I agree.

Senator MCCAIN. Was it not important to mention that 75 percent of those were live sightings of people who were alive at the time, then later came home, so there were not 1,400 unresolved reports of first-hand live sightings. There was only 25 percent. of 1,400 reports of first-hand live sightings that were unresolved, is that not correct?

Mr. USRY. Senator, I take no exception to what you are saying, again. This is the way we wrote the report. It was reviewed and this was the determination as to the way it would be published. I think it is very easy to look at something in retrospect and Monday morning quarterback it and say, it should have gone this way. I am certainly not going to argue with that point. I am simply stating that this is what was the final product at the time and it stands as it is.

I would also say that it was not 1,400 unresolved. It was 1,400 resolved, and that is a typo. That has also been corrected. However, the point of fact we are trying to make is that there are 1,400 reports and all I am asking anybody to do and all I have ever asked anybody to do since the day I started on this is go, look at the intelligence yourself, look at the conclusions, reached by an analyst, and then read the raw intelligence that they used to derive their conclusions.

See for yourself whether I am totally incorrect and if I am, I will freely admit so. Or, what I am saying is, in fact, correct, which is, there are bad analysis.

Senator MCCAIN. Please do not suffer under the impression that I am alleging that you are incorrect in any way. I am just pointing out that a statement that says there are 1,400 unresolved reports of first-hand live sightings is far, far different and frankly, I think, a typo is not the description of it, where 75 percent of these live sighting reports were true and verified, but they happened to be individuals who were there at the time and have since come home.

Let me move on to the Borah pictures. When did you first obtain the pictures that were alleged to be Lieutenant Borah?

Mr. USRY. July 13 or 14 I believe. It would have been the weekend of the National Alliance and National League of Families Convention here in Washington, DC.

Senator MCCAIN. What year?

Mr. USRY. This year.

Senator MCCAIN. That is the first time you have ever had copies of the Borah pictures?

Mr. USRY. Yes, sir, to my knowledge.

Senator MCCAIN. The Department of Defense seems to think you had them since 1989. Do you know why they would think that?

Mr. USRY. No I do not. And if they would like to tell me I would be more than interested in hearing. I received the photographs, to the best of my recollection, from the family members themselves, when they were attending the National League of Families Convention on the weekend of July 12, I believe, was what it was.

Senator MCCAIN. Did anybody else on the staff have these pictures that you know of prior to July 1991?

Mr. USRY. As far as I am aware, there was no-one else on our staff that had those. In fact, when I saw the photographs that were provided to me by the family members, I indicated to them at this time, or at that time, it was my belief that that was not their son or brother, but in fact a Laotian. However, I also indicated I was by no means an expert and we would try to get it analyzed.

Senator MCCAIN. Maybe somebody here from the Defense Department can clarify, why they believe. Can you, Mr. Sheetz—why you believed the information was—can you clarify from the microphone, so that we can have it on the record.

Mr. SHEETZ. I think from the interview of Mr. Ahroa, we know the pictures were taken some time in 1990, early in 1990. All the Defense Department knows is the first time they came to our knowledge was when they were shown on nationwide TV. Jack Bailey indicated to us, in an aside, in our debriefing with him in August of this year, that he had turned over copies of the Carr pictures to the Senate, approximately a year previously.

Senator MCCAIN. That was an incorrect statement on the part of Mr. Bailey. Was that an incorrect statement on the part of Mr. Bailey, to your knowledge, Mr. Usry?

Mr. USRY. I do not know. I know I did not come into possession of any of the Carr photos at that particular point in time. In fact the first time I was even aware of Carr photos is when I saw a telecopied copy of the Carr photos in Senator Grassley's office.

Senator McCAIN. I am speaking of Borah photos.

Mr. USRY. I believed you asked me about Carr photos.

Senator McCAIN. I am sorry, but you know of no-one else who had, besides those family members who gave you that picture, you know of no-one that works on the Hill that had copies of those pictures, before you did in July 1991.

Mr. USRY. It is my understanding that those photographs were sent to the FBI some months before for analysis by another member on the Hill. But again, that is secondary information. I am not aware, personally, of that occurring. That is just information I have heard.

Senator McCAIN. Thank you. I hope we can clear that up because obviously you share my view that we want any information to be brought to the proper authorities; any and all authorities that can act on any information that we have both government and nongovernment, as rapidly as possible and clearly we would want to bring any information we had to the Department of Defense and the DIA, I am sure you agree with that. Before your trip, and I guess the basis of your trip, please correct me if I am wrong, was primarily based on information that was brought forward by Khambang, correct?

Mr. USRY. It is our understanding, the information was funneled or channeled through Khambang to the Judge. I would also like to add that, and this was in fact discussed with Secretary of Defense that we were not comfortable, totally, with the information, but due to the limited amount of time in which the sources or alleged sources could stay in Thailand, since they were Laotian we were more or less forced to act in the time frame, that we did. I mean under ideal circumstances certainly there would have been a different situation, but because this was more or less put upon us at the last minute we felt that it was compelling enough that we had to act.

Senator McCAIN. Thank you, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Senator SMITH. Mr. Chairman, I think I can help clarify that for Senator McCain. And I do not know whether other contacts were made to other Senators or Congressmen by Mr. Gayden, but I did receive, he came, and Mr. Gayden came to my office and I am trying to remember whether I was in the Senate or the House at the time, but I believe it was the Senate. And I would stand corrected if that is not accurate, but I believe it was around the time that I took office, which would have been in December 1990 or January 1991, and he indicated that he had a photograph of somebody that alleged to be Borah and refused to provide that photograph to me, but indicated that, he showed it to me. Subsequently, a number of weeks or months later, he did bring Mr. Gayden did bring those photos in, at which time I provided them to General Vessey, in my office, so that would just clarify what happened as far as my involvement with those photographs.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Usry, if no other members have questions, let me summarize before I ask the administration if they have any further word and before the close today. Let me ask them first of all if they do, Mr. Ford, do you have anything that you want to respond to? You do not and Mr. Sheetz? No.

Mr. Usry, let me say this to you. You have sat here and appropriately sort of taken some heat, I think, and questions and people saying, is this a fact, is that a fact, and in effect have had to say, well that was a mistake or this was not, on some items, which makes you like DOD, DIA, and a lot of other folks who are here, it makes all of us in the same boat, in a sense. We are all capable of that. I think it has been helpful. My personal opinion is, it has been very helpful because it sets a standard, if you will, for how this committee is going to have to proceed for whatever we put out in a report. But I want the record to show that I believe your intentions here are of the highest order. I think you want this issue resolved and I think you are absolutely concerned, legitimately, about having this resolved and I think your motivations are appropriate to want to get answers where you ought to get them and while, I and others, might have some differences with you as to how some material was presented, I do not think any of us would doubt your sincerity and your commitment and the extraordinary time you have put in to try and help us resolve it.

It does underscore the committee's responsibility to do this responsibly and carefully, without injury to people who are working hard in the field, who do not bear culpability for things that took place 15 years ago, or 20 years ago, which they did not decide, and which they did not do and it is important to try and separate that as we go along here.

Part of the effort that I view this committee charged with is to try to show that Congress can do something well, rationally and reasonably and that we can have a good work product and government does not have to mess things up but rather it can shed light and restore credibility. And so, we have helped scratch the surface of that today.

We are going to have to go through your report and you are going to have to help us go through the report to separate not all of it in public like we did today but to separate what stands up and what does not and what stands up we are going to go after and we are going to look at. So when ultimately we do it we are going to have to deal with your report and the prior reports. Now, I take it that you are prepared as you said you were last week, to turn all the material over to the Committee and work with the staff and you will be working with the staff in an effort to help us sort that out, am I correct?

Mr. USRY. Absolutely.

The CHAIRMAN. And I also take it Mr. Ford, the administration is prepared to get back to us on the request I made with respect to the declassification process at issue?

Mr. FORD. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. And third, you are prepared to set in motion this new relationship with the families. So that we can all work to guarantee their getting the information that they desire.

Mr. FORD. That is correct. Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. I thank you for that. I think that is a very important first outgrowth of the committee's effort if you will, I think it is going to be very important to helping resolve this.

We will be meeting as a closed committee on Wednesday of next week to hear from CIA, NSC and DIA and meanwhile the committee will be fanning out in a number of directions, talking with people and seeking information. I think we crossed an important divide, if you will, in the course of the last 4 days' hearings, not consecutive days, but in these hearings. And I just want to summarize this before we proceed to the last witness, but I think that Secretary Ford and Secretary Cheney and others have basically acknowledged, not basically but have acknowledged, that it appears as though some folks were left behind and that is what this is all about.

There are various degrees of evidence about that, not the least of which is somebody like Bill Bell asserting it, as well as others who have asserted it, some not before this committee. I want to again emphasize that this committee is not seeking to become a forum for finger pointing. If the Soviet Union can make an announcement about huge numbers of people being killed by their troops during the war then others can acknowledge things that happened, surely 20 years later, we can make some admissions of error and move on.

I would be much happier if this process enables people to do that. So that we can understand the truth and clear the air and move on, rather than get caught in some exercise of flagellation about that past. I think we have heard a considerable amount in these first 3 days, and I appreciate Senator Grassley's comments on the floor last night. I am glad he has found these first few days valuable. I think we have had a good beginning. Let me thank you, Mr. Usry, now if you could make those materials available and begin to help us catalogue them and so forth, we need to get to work through that and I appreciate your testimony.

Mr. USRY. Senator, can I give you one more document?

The CHAIRMAN. Sure.

Mr. USRY. You had asked the Department of Defense, and I am certainly not trying to usurp them again. That is certainly one of the things that I had. It is just basically a number-crunching of casualties from between January 1961 and December 2, 1973, and its origin is the Department of Defense, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense Comptroller Direct for Information Operations and is dated December 5, 1973.

The CHAIRMAN. That will be very helpful to us and that is part of the record and that will be very helpful because part of what will be submitted next week or so will be our own numbers-crunching of DIA and others in an effort to really ascertain once and for all what the chart is on this and we will factor that in.

Mr. USRY. What I wanted to point out in this and again, I am sure that the numbers have changed because of information that has been provided since 1973, but as of the December 2, 1973, still carried in a technical status of captured or interned were 59 people, and I believe that that is something that does need to be explained as I am sure that it can be again. This was faxed to me, and I said that I would get it in and I would assume that the document is a valid document which is easily checked but it is certainly is a starting point.

The CHAIRMAN. We have a number of other documents that bear on this and we will be working on those.

Senator MCCAIN. As you know, Mr. Usry, those were people that we had photographs, communication with, and clear evidence that they were alive, at least at the time of their capture, and in some cases they were resolved because we knew what had happened to them and others have never been resolved, so I think we are aware of that and that is why we have started through this process, as flawed as it may have been from time to time. Thank you.

The CHAIRMAN. We have one final panelist, this will be a very very brief presentation, but one that is important also and I would ask Mary Backley, the director of operations for the National League of POW/MIA families if she would come forward, please. Thank you, Mr. Usry.

Mr. USRY. Thank you.

STATEMENT OF MARY BACKLEY, DIRECTOR OF OPERATIONS, NATIONAL LEAGUE OF FAMILIES, WASHINGTON, DC

Ms. BACKLEY. Mr. Chairman, I realize it has been a very long day and I will be as brief as I possibly can. Prior to beginning I must say, and thank the committee for their desire and their persistence in terms of declassification of the road map which I heard earlier today, that is something that our League Board has unanimously approved and would like to see, declassification of the road map.

We believe that a great deal of confusion will be cleared up if that document were to be made public and so I thank the committee for that.

Mr. Chairman, and members of the select committee. Thank you for the opportunity to provide an official response to Patricia O'Grady's accusations against the National League of Families during her testimony before this committee on November 7. The League fully supports the committee's insistence on substantiation of all assertions and requests the committee's consent to examine Ms. O'Grady's purported documentation, if received.

Since Ms. O'Grady neglected to provide any specific examples to support her allegations, it is difficult to decipher the basis for her claims. However, I will address each accusation individually, clarifying League positions and policies as adopted by the annually elected board and/or membership.

According to Ms. O'Grady the National League of Families does not represent the interests of the men.

Founded in 1970, the National League of Families is the only national organization comprised solely of close relatives of Americans still prisoner, missing and unaccounted for in Southeast Asia, as well as Vietnam POW's, returned POW's.

As stipulated in the Articles of Incorporation, previously submitted to the committee, the League's threefold objective has been and is first, the return of all prisoners; second, the fullest possible accounting for the missing; and third, repatriation of remains of those who died while serving our nation in Southeast Asia. This threefold objective recognizes as it has since our founding, the relationship between the live prisoner issue and ending uncertainty. In keeping with these objectives, the League has strongly advocated and supported increased U.S. Government efforts which have thus far resulted in the return of over 300 Americans to their families and to their homeland.

It is our position that Americans are still held in Indochina. Therefore, the League continues to press for their return. At the same time, the fullest possible accounting is crucial to achieving answers for the families and directly impacts on the live prisoner issue. The two tracks must be pursued simultaneously.

The return of any and all live Americans is our highest objective, and the League cannot and will not discriminate when it comes to obtaining answers. We accept and appreciate all information provided by the Indochinese Governments. Though critics have expressed their differences with the League, even Ms. O'Grady does not disagree with the League on this point.

According to Ms. O'Grady, there is a deliberate plan within the League to undermine the issue and thwart efforts to return live prisoners. Mrs. Griffiths has extensive investment and personal interest with the U.S. Government.

I believe that these three accusations in particular represent the core of misinformation which has circulated from time to time over the past 5 years about the League and its leadership, including the board of directors and executive director. The League's objectives have been and remain crystal clear. Strategies to achieve our goals have changed dramatically through the League's history depending upon the level of U.S. Government attention and commitment, or lack thereof, with which the families have had to deal.

For the first time, we have recently looked at our accomplishments since 1982. As you can see and confirm, the League is responsible for many of the changes in U.S. Government policy on the POW/MIA issue, particularly concerning live prisoners of war. As the only nongovernment, active participant in the official POW/MIA Interagency Group, Mrs. Griffiths, as the families designated representative, is not only in a position to help develop POW/MIA policy and constantly monitor implementation, but tracks family member concerns to the policy-formulating body.

The League will only maintain its position on the IAG as long as we feel it is productive; this is a view shared by the vast majority of the families in the League. Should the families blindly trust that the abandonment policy of the 1970's will not again become the policy of the 1990's? If U.S. policy potentially endangers resolution of the issue, Mrs. Griffiths is in a position to criticize and work internally to rectify problems to ensure that the best interests of those still missing, the families and the issue are protected.

While League criticisms do not appear on the front pages of The Washington Times, Spot Light, Stars and Stripes, National Tribune, or in some veterans' publications, it is inaccurate to assume that there is always agreement between the League and the U.S. Government. There is disagreement, often at times; however, there is also the ability to work together to resolve differences. Publicity of disagreements, as we have seen, is in Hanoi's interest, not ours, unless U.S. policy and priorities were dropped.

As for the allegation concerning Mrs. Griffiths' personal interest and extensive investment with the U.S. Government, I am compelled to agree with Ms. O'Grady that as a family member, with her own brother still missing in Vietnam, Mrs. Griffiths does have a personal interest, as do the other 2,270 families.

Ms. O'Grady's inference is false by the fact that Mrs. Griffiths requested that her name not be considered to serve in a senior DOD post in the 1985, 1986 time frame. In fact, Mrs. Griffiths has served for 13 years as executive director of the League, acting on behalf of all the families, per the policies and positions adopted by the membership and board of directors, not her own.

According to Ms. O'Grady, Mrs. Griffiths chooses members of the board of directors to her liking and rigs elections of the board of directors. Mrs. Griffiths goes beyond approach; she deliberately blocks the democratic process and refused board member access to the League's family member list.

The League's balloting process for board election and resolution consideration by the membership is approved by the board of directors and implemented by the staff, under my personal supervision and control. Mrs. Griffiths has never assisted or participated in the ballot distribution, collection and tabulation process, which I will outline as follows:

In order to be a member of the League, thus eligible to vote or serve on the board, criteria as set forth in the bylaws must be met and a signed application must be on file.

Ballots are individually numbered and distributed to all eligible League members. The ballots are then inserted in the envelope and mailed to all eligible family members.

A self-addressed, pre-posted return envelope is enclosed with the ballots to ensure that ballots are returned to a contracted certified public accounting firm, not sent to the League office. Any ballots received in the League office are immediately forwarded to the accounting firm which inputs each ballot number into their computer to ensure ballots are not duplicated.

Upon completion of tabulation, a letter certifying the results is forwarded to the League office.

Prior to the spring of 1986, the League enjoyed the voluntary services of a division in The American Legion, to receive, tabulate and certify all League balloting. The time and effort devoted to tabulating incoming ballots were provided to the League on a voluntary basis.

In the spring 1986, three board members who were seeking re-election questioned the integrity of the process performed by The American Legion. As a result, a CPA firm was and has since been contracted to receive, tabulate and certify all balloting by the League membership, including on policy questions.

It should be noted that a process which was performed with accuracy and at no charge for many years now costs the League a substantial amount of money per contracted tabulation. In addition, questions on the validity of the balloting process performed by The American Legion were initiated by those who were subsequently defeated by the membership to serve on the board.

As for access to the League membership list, a poll of the entire membership was conducted in 1986 regarding continuation of League policy to hold in confidence the names and addresses of League members. By over two-thirds majority, the voting members elected to retain this policy which was reaffirmed in September of this year by the elected board of directors.

According to Ms. O'Grady, Mrs. Griffiths controls the flow of information to the families and participates with the U.S. Government in the concealment of information from the families.

As stipulated in documents previously submitted the League, to include Mrs. Griffiths, has consistently pressed for complete disclosure of information to the primary next-of-kin. In 1982, per the League's recommendation, the Reagan Administration adopted a policy of full disclosure to the primary next-of-kin of all information which pertains, or may pertain, to their missing relative. In 1988, Senator Smith, as a Member of the House of Representatives, submitted an amendment to the Intelligence Authorization Act which codified this policy into law. Obviously, the League was and is in full support of this policy and appreciated Senator Smith's actions on the families behalf. It is up to appropriate U.S. Government agencies to fully implement this policy in a timely manner. That is their job, as dictated by law, not the League's and certainly not Mrs. Griffiths' responsibility.

Five, Mrs. Griffiths' definition of resolution is different than that of the families.

According to Ms. O'Grady, on a number of occasions, to include in all national media, print, radio and television, Mrs. Griffiths has publicly stated her personal belief that Americans are still alive in Indochina, most recently last Wednesday she stated the same before this committee. In addition, Mrs. Griffiths has repeatedly stated that she is in complete agreement with the threefold objective of the League. This threefold objective was formulated by the families when the League was incorporated and remains the same today.

Ms. O'Grady has insinuated that Mrs. Griffiths' self-interest supersedes the recovery of live Americans.

To be quite honest, Mr. Chairman, I was very taken aback by this slanderous allegation. I believe the issue of self-interest was appropriately addressed earlier, as well as Mrs. Griffiths' position regarding live Americans.

However, I would like to conclude my testimony with personal thoughts based upon over 8 years' experience of working with her. While my tenure with the League has been one of amazement and frustration for various reasons, it has also been one of admiration for the incredible dedication, persistence and perseverance exhibited by Mrs. Griffiths despite some very unpleasant circumstances based on orchestrated attempts to discredit the National League of Families.

I have worked closely with Mrs. Griffiths for 6 of my 8 years. All allegations I have thus far either heard or read concerning her or her performance as executive director are false. In her position as executive director, she is not looking for accolades and she is not looking to be liked. She is trying to do her job and press all responsible avenues to obtain answers for the families.

There has never been such a more critical time on the issue than now. In a sad irony, it is somewhat reminiscent of the war. Domestic divisiveness clearly influenced our Nation's view of the Vietnam war. Unfortunately, that divisiveness has returned. Serious cooperation from the governments of Indochina could resolve this issue and opportunities to obtain that cooperation are available, with unified support behind them.

Deliberate attacks against any individual, circulation of rumor rather than fact, and calculated condemnation of the League's leadership and executive director based on lies have once again created mistrust, which in my view could shortly destroy the issue. Though much remains to be done, the League and its membership should be extremely proud of the accomplishments thus far achieved due to its persistence.

I believe that when this issue is resolved, it will be due to the steadfast determination of this organization to press forward, rather than backward. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and Members of the committee, I look forward to any questions you may have.

[The prepared statement of Ms. Backley follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF MARY BACKLEY

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Select Committee:

Thank you for the opportunity to provide an official response to Patricia O'Grady's accusations against the National League of Families during her testimony before this Committee on November 7. The League fully supports the Committee's insistence on substantiation of all assertions and requests the Committee's consent to examine Ms. O'Grady's purported documentation, if received.

Since Ms. O'Grady neglected to provide any specific examples to support her allegations, it is difficult to decipher the basis for her claims; however, I will address each accusation individually, clarifying League positions and policies as adopted by the annually elected board and/or membership.

1) According to Ms. O'Grady, the National League of Families does not represent the interests of the men.

Founded in 1970, the National League of Families is the only national organization comprised solely of close relatives of Americans still prisoner, missing and unaccounted for in Southeast Asia, as well as returned Vietnam POW's. As stipulated in the Articles of Incorporation, previously submitted, the League's three-fold objective has been and is first, the return of all prisoners; second, the fullest possible accounting for the missing; and third, the repatriation of remains of those who died while serving our nation in Southeast Asia. This three fold objective recognizes, as it has since our founding, the relationship between the live prisoner issue and ending uncertainty. In keeping with these objectives, the League has strongly advocated and supported increased U.S. Government efforts which have thus far resulted in the return of over 300 Americans to their families and to our country.

It is our position that Americans are still held in Indochina; therefore, the League continues to press for their return. At the same time, the fullest possible accounting is crucial to achieving answers for the families and directly impacts on the live prisoner issue. The two tracks must be pursued simultaneously.

The return of any and all live Americans is our highest objective, and the League can not and will not discriminate when it comes to obtaining answers. We accept and appreciate all information provided by the Indochinese governments. Though critics have expressed their differences with the League, even Ms. O'Grady does not disagree with the League on this point.

2) According to Ms. O'Grady, there is a deliberate plan within the League to undermine the issue and thwart efforts to return live prisoners. Mrs. Griffiths has extensive investment and personal interest with the U.S. Government.

These three accusations in particular represent the core of misinformation which has circulated from time to time over the past 5 years about the League and its leadership, including the board of directors and executive director. The League's objectives have been and remain crystal clear. Strategies to achieve our goals have changed dramatically throughout the League's history dependent upon the level of U.S. Government attention and commitment, or lack thereof, with which the families have had to deal.

For the first time, we have looked at our accomplishments since 1982. As you can see and confirm, the League is responsible for many of the changes in U.S. Government policy on the POW/MIA issue, particularly concerning live prisoners of war. As the only nongovernment, active participant in the official POW/MIA Interagency Group, Mrs. Griffiths, as the families designated representative, is not only in a position to help develop POW/MIA policy and constantly monitor implementation, but brings family member concerns to the policy-formulating body.

The League will only maintain its position on the IAG as long as we feel it is productive; this is a view shared by the vast majority of the families in the League. Should the families blindly trust that the abandonment policy of the 70's will not again become the policy of the 90's? If U.S. policy potentially endangers resolution of the issue, Mrs. Griffiths is in a position to criticize and work internally to rectify problems to ensure that the best interests of those still missing, the families and the issue are protected.

While League criticisms do not appear on the front page of The Washington Times, Spot Light, Stars and Stripes, National Tribune or in some veterans publications, it is inaccurate to assume that there is always agreement between the League and the U.S. Government. There is disagreement, often at times; however, there is also the ability to work together to resolve differences. Publicity of disagreements, as we have seen, is in Hanoi's interest, not ours, unless U.S. policy and priority were dropped.

As for the allegation concerning Mrs. Griffiths' personal interest and extensive investment with the U.S. Government, I am compelled to agree with Ms. O'Grady that as a family member, with her own brother still missing in Vietnam, Mrs. Griffiths does have a personal interest, as do the other 2,270 families.

Ms. O'Grady's inference is false by the fact that Mrs. Griffiths requested that her name not be considered to serve in a senior DOD post in the 1985-86 time frame. In fact, Mrs. Griffiths has served for 13 years as executive director of the League, acting on behalf of all the families, per the policies and positions adopted by the membership and board of directors, not her own.

J) According to Ms. O'Grady, Mrs. Griffiths chooses members of the board of directors to her liking and rigs elections of the board of directors. Mrs. Griffiths goes beyond approach; she deliberately blocks the democratic process and refused board member access to the League's family member list.

The League's balloting process for board election and resolution consideration by the membership is approved by the board of directors and implemented by the staff, under my personal supervision and control. Mrs. Griffiths has never assisted or participated in the ballot distribution, collection and tabulation process, which is as follows:

In order to be a member of the League, thus eligible to vote or serve on the board, criteria as set forth in the by-laws must be met and a signed application must be on file.

Ballots are individually numbered and distributed to all eligible League members. The ballots are then inserted in the envelope and mailed to all eligible family members.

A self-addressed, pre-posted return envelope is enclosed with the ballots to ensure that ballots are returned to a contracted certified public accounting firm, not sent to the League office. Any ballots received in the League office are immediately forwarded to the accounting firm which inputs each ballot number into their computer to ensure ballots are not duplicated.

Upon completion of tabulation, a letter certifying the results is forwarded to the League office.

Prior to the Spring of 1986, the League enjoyed the voluntary services of a division in The American Legion, to receive, tabulate and certify all League balloting. The time and effort devoted to tabulating incoming ballots were provided to the League on a voluntary basis.

In Spring of 1986, three board members who were seeking re-election questioned the integrity of the process performed by The American Legion. As a result, a CPA firm was and has since been contracted to receive, tabulate and certify all balloting by the League membership, including on policy questions.

It should be noted that a process which was performed with accuracy and at no charge for many years now costs the League over $2,000 per contracted tabulation. In addition, questions on the validity of the balloting process performed by The American Legion were initiated by those, including Ms. O'Grady, who were subsequently defeated by the membership to serve on the board.

As for access to the League membership list, a poll of the entire membership was conducted in 1986 regarding continuation of League policy to hold in confidence the names and addresses of League members. By over 2/3 majority, the voting members elected to retain this policy which was reaffirmed in September of this year by the elected board of directors.

4) According to Ms. O'Grady, Mrs. Griffiths controls the flow of information to the families and participates with the U.S. Government in the concealment of information from the families.

As stipulated in documents previously submitted, the League, to include Mrs. Griffiths, has consistently pressed for complete disclosure of information to the primary next-of-kin. In 1982, per the League's recommendation, the Reagan Administration adopted a policy of full disclosure to the primary-next-of-kin of all information which pertains, or may pertain, to their missing relative. In 1988, Senator Smith, as a member of the House of Representatives, submitted an amendment to the Intelligence Authorization Act which codified this policy into law. Obviously, the League was and is in full support of this policy and appreciated Senator Smith's actions on the families behalf. It is up to appropriate U.S. Government agencies to fully implement this policy in a timely manner. That is their job, as dictated by law, not the League's and certainly not Mrs. Griffiths' responsibility.

5) Mrs. Griffiths definition of resolution is different than that of the families.

On numerous occasions, to include in all national media, print, radio and television, Mrs. Griffiths has publicly stated her personal belief that Americans are still alive in Indochina, most recently last Wednesday before this committee. In addition, Mrs. Griffiths has repeatedly stated that she is in complete agreement with the three-fold objective of the League. This three-fold objective was formulated by the families when the League was incorporated and remains the same today.

6) Mrs. Griffiths' self-interest supersedes the recovery of live Americans.

To be quite honest, I was very taken back by this slanderous allegation. I believe the issue of self-interest was appropriately addressed earlier, as well as Mrs. Griffiths' position regarding live Americans. However, I would like to conclude my testimony with personal thoughts based upon over 8 years experience of working with her. While my tenure with the League has been one of amazement and frustration for various reasons, it has also been one of admiration for the incredible dedication, persistence and perseverance exhibited by Mrs. Griffiths despite some very unpleasant circumstances based on orchestrated attempts to discredit the National League of Families. I have worked closely with Mrs. Griffiths for 6 of my 8 years. All allegations I have thus far either heard or read concerning her or her performance as executive director are false. In her position as executive director, she is not looking for accolades and she is not looking to be liked. She is trying to do her job and press all responsible avenues to obtain answers for the families.

There has never been such a more critical time on the issue than now. In a sad irony, it is somewhat reminiscent of the war. Domestic divisiveness clearly influenced our nation's view of the Vietnam war. Unfortunately, that divisiveness has returned. Serious cooperation from the Governments of Indochina could resolve this issue, and opportunities to obtain that cooperation are available, with unified support behind them. Deliberate attacks against any individual, circulation of rumor rather than fact, and calculated condemnation of the League's leadership and executive director based on lies have once again created mistrust, which in my view, could shortly destroy the issue. Though much remains to be done, the League and its membership should be extremely proud of the accomplishments thus far achieved due to its persistence. I believe that when this issue is resolved, it will be due to the steadfast determination of this organization to press forward, rather than backward.

Thank you. I look forward to your questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Thank you very much, Ms. Backley.

I do not have any questions. I am going to make one statement and then I will turn to Senator Smith.

I am sorry for any hard feelings or sense of abuse that any member of the League or anyone has felt in this process. But as you know, and as everybody knows and is coming to know, there are tensions around this issue and there are deeply-felt opinions.

This committee's job is not, one of the jobs we are not going to assume and I think we have assumed most of the jobs that have come to us in the course of the last days, but one of the jobs we are not going to assume is a resolution of the internal politics of the League.

I wanted to obviously afford you and Mrs. Griffiths particularly, whom I respect and who I have worked with, any opportunity to respond as we thought it was appropriate to afford people who have criticisms the opportunity to voice those criticisms. They are part of the dynamics of this issue. And they are very much a part of the attitudes and the conditions and people's feelings and suspicions.

What you have really articulated here, what the whole League dispute articulates and the reason I think it is very important in understanding this issue, is the degree to which there is a division which has even entered among the families and that is, in its own way, a very sad commentary on the whole process. It underscores why it is so important for us to get the League so that it feels like one again, so that we get the Senate and the various administrative departments working together as one on this and so that we are resolving it and not carping at each other.

Ms. BACKLEY. I understand, Senator.

The CHAIRMAN. I think your points are well taken and I think it was appropriate for you to come here and set the record straight on that.

Ms. BACKLEY. I agree, Senator, and it is not so much a matter of feeling as though the League took abuse or Mrs. Griffiths took abuse, there were statements that were simply inaccurate and false and wrong. And it is with regards to divisions, they do occur, they occur almost in any organization. Not everybody is going to agree. The organization, I think has, as I stated, has brought about a tremendous amount of change with regards to how this issue is addressed.

The organization also now consists of the highest membership it has ever consisted in its history and there are disagreements, yes. However, we also agree on everything, in terms of the important aspects of the issue. We believe there are Americans alive in Southeast Asia and we, as family and organization, want to expedite all efforts to get them back, whether it be alive and dead, or dead.

And that is what I wanted to obviously clear up today and I think the organization has taken some very unjustifiable criticisms based upon personal views.

However, I think, yes, you could use the organization as an example, unsubstantiated allegations have been made not only on us but on the issue as a whole, in Government efforts as well as private efforts and it is something that we are firmly behind, is documentation, and I am extremely encouraged by your continued reference to that. I think that it is very important.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I think you have done what you set out to do today and I think you are been a good spokesperson for it. I also think the League deserves enormous credit and respect for the remarkable way in which it has moved the issue, moved the Departments that are dealing with it and really stood up for what it believes and for what has to happen here.

My request to you is that, as we go along here, this committee will need the League's help and the committee will need you to help apply to this whole thing, a standard of reasonableness as we look at documentation and as we do open up the process, that it not be the parent to further dissension and conspiracy, but rather it becomes the parent to, you know, a resolution of the process.

Ms. BACKLEY. Absolutely. We want to help in whatever way we can.

The CHAIRMAN. And we look forward to working with you on that.

Senator Smith.

The CHAIRMAN. Senator Smith.

Senator SMITH. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and thank you, Mrs. Backley.

I said in my opening statement when we began hearings that I thought it would be in the best interest of all that we try to work together—whatever the past has been, that we try to work together and hold the same harness, and try to get the answers that we are all seeking.

I think we all admit that we have all made mistakes in that regard in the past, for whatever reasons, and I think we have heard witnesses say, and the senators say from the top, from the Secretary of Defense on down, that the goal here is to try to work together to resolve this.

And in that spirit, I just want to point out a couple of things that I think might be helpful. And I would offer them just as that.

Jeff Donahue has stated, and has written—and these are his words—that dissenting opinion has no forum within the League. Members are forbidden access to the membership roster of the League mailing list. Questions at the annual meeting are severely limited, and no press is allowed during the general session of the annual meeting.

And I agree with Senator Kerry. I am not here to debate the internal workings of the League. They are none of my business, and I do not want to do that. And I am not trying to embarrass you by bringing that up.

What I am trying to say is that I think if those accusations are true, or they are even perceived to be true, it is not a good image for the League. As Senator Kerry has already stated there are many, many differences of opinion in the Senate, as well.

And I found that out this morning when I got beat 80 to 20 on an amendment. But I think there is room for that. The question is, is that accurate—that in your opinion, I mean are those points that I made accurate?

Ms. BACKLEY. Well, I do not believe they are accurate, Senator. I clarified the position with regard to the membership list. Confidentiality of the membership list was originally voted on in 1986, I believe. Ms. O'Grady's husband, Mr. Parsons, was even a member of the board of directors who made that motion to have that confidential. It has been repeatedly reaffirmed by the board throughout the history of the organization.

And as I pointed out in 1986, the families were polled on the League's position with regards to withholding or maintaining confidentially on the list. And 2/3rds majority of the voting members voted to maintain that. So it is the membership, the family's position that they want that maintained, in our confidence.

With regards to no press at the annual meeting, I understand, and I appreciate the opportunity that you are giving me to clarify that. Because my big problem, to be quite honest with you, Senator, is why do these begin? I do not understand, if that is the way families feel, they have an elected board of directors that they can write to.

Now I am extremely encouraged by the fact that over the past few months we have been getting letters in—not a great number—but the families have a right to write to their elected officials. As your constituents write to you, family members can write to their elected officials.

And the League board does sit down and they do discuss. That is their job. They have to. If they did not, I would be outraged as a family member. But they do. And there is a process in place.

Senator SMITH. There is, well, obviously as there is in any organization, there is a—there is deviciveness. That is not a criticism. We are going to have that.

Ms. BACKLEY. Absolutely.

Senator SMITH. I think though some of it relates to—if you go back, and I think there is enough documentation on this to say what I am saying is not controversial—if you go back to some of the memorandums, the Haldeman memorandum, for example. When you go all the way back into the Nixon years, during the war the League—when the League was beginning to organize—POW families were becoming a bit of a nuisance to the conduct of the war to use the, not my words, but the words of those who are running the Government as you saw.

So they had to deal with that. And I think evolving from that, and I think some of the criticisms—this is just my personal opinion, having talked to people on both sides—when the League director moves into the inter-agency group and you begin to get the perception that they are part of the, quote unquote "Government" not that the Government is working toward a different end—that is not the point.

But because of that past, where there was an attempt to use the family members to the benefit of the conduct of the war, which is obviously the case as we saw in the documents, there comes that criticism that why is your League director a part of the inter-agency group? Is she, in fact, part of the Government or does she represent the League?

And I think even when she testified, when Mrs. Griffiths testified here, I felt—as I believe Senator Kerry said—that her remarks were more Government-oriented than they were family oriented.

So I think that is the reason why some of these comments, these criticisms come about. And let me—and I will give you a chance to respond. I just want to say, from my own, personal experience over the past 6 or 8 years that I have been in the Congress, 7 years, there have been three things that I have been involved with, three times that I have been involved with. One was what you mentioned, the 1988 codification of information to the families; another one was the forerunner to that was H.R. 2260, which was a little bit more controversial, because I think it was misinterpreted, which involved publicizing information.

And the last one, of course, was this select committee. In all three cases, I personally, through either personal through a conversation or through a staff person, asked to address the League, or to have somebody from my staff address the League to discuss those issues.

And the one that—the 1988 codification was kind of a last—it was a result of 2260. It was a last-minute decision, almost made on the Floor, so we did not have much chance to address that. But 2260 and the select committee, which was my bill, I was denied the opportunity to—or any of my staff—to address the League on those issues in asking for their support.

From a personal perspective, personal perspective, the League can do what it wants. I am not a member of the League. I felt that that was wrong. I think that you ought to be open-minded enough to be able to accept the comments on legislation which I feel was an attempt to try to help resolve the issue.

So, you know, I bring it up only to say that I think all of us could make some changes. And if you would like to respond to it, please do.

Ms. BACKLEY. Well, the decision with regards to addressing the board, so to speak, I know during July, this past July, I believe your staff assistant, Dino Carluccio was outside of one of our board meeting doors in which it was brought up that you did want to address the board. The board was going to—the chairman of the board was going to draft and send you a letter inviting you to address the next session of the board about this Senate select committee.

What happened before the board convened or met in September is that this was established, it passed. So it was really a moot point to send a letter inviting you to address the board on the merits of the Senate select committee when it was already formed.

Senator SMITH. But you were opposed to the select committee, your board, correct?

Ms. BACKLEY. Absolutely, the last year's board was—

Senator SMITH. Can you give me a reason why you are opposed?

Ms. BACKLEY. Well, I can give you several. One, in particular, is diversion of assets, resources which the League had fought—and the families—for an incredible amount of time to get the number of assets and resources focused on the issue. We were not sure the charter and direction that the committee was going to take. It was very unclear. And we were afraid that it was going to turn into another conspiracy and cover-up, just focused on that.

We also, obviously, Senator Smith, have experienced select committees in the past. And frankly, it devastated the issue and almost destroyed the issue. And we have referred to them or they have been referred to earlier by the committee, and that was the House committee, as well as the Woodcock Commission. Both committees were forced to make a conclusion. They were temporary, and they concluded that no Americans were alive in Southeast Asia.

Senator SMITH. And they were both wrong.

Ms. BACKLEY. Absolutely, and thank you—but the ironic part about it is that the House select committee also concluded that there was little to no chance of further accountability of Americans.

Well, the organization obviously did not sit down for that. We kept on pressing. And ironically, over 230 Americans have been accounted for since the committee issued that statement.

So there is—obviously there is experience from past that led us and obviously caused us great concern. We did not want to see that committee, or this committee to take that direction.

The CHAIRMAN. And now you are filled with admiration and confidence about this committee's ability to come to resolution. [Laughter.]

Senator SMITH. I just want to say in conclusion, I appreciate your candor. And hopefully we can work together and put the past behind us.

And just from a personal standpoint, I think a lot can be done to involve some of those who, quote "have been dissentors" unquote in the process. And I think it would be profitable for all.

Ms. BACKLEY. I know the board looks forward to working with the committee in whatever capacity they can—as does Mrs. Griffiths. Again, she fully concurs with your statement in your opening remarks, Senator, as I think everybody does.

The CHAIRMAN. We have been here a long time, folks. We got here at 8:30 this morning for the committee session. And with the exception of a vote we have not left here. And so this has been a long day.

I appreciate very much your testimony. The committee now has a significant amount of work cut out for it. We will proceed, in the next weeks to have a hearing if the committee feels it has sufficient reason to have a public hearing. But a great deal of our work in the next weeks will be depositions and interrogatories and private work, and data work and so forth.

And so we will make an announcement when we will next have a public session. I want to assure all those who follow the work of this committee on a day-to-day basis—and there are many—and I want to ensure all people who are sort of interested in the public aspect of this inquiry that the fact that we are not having a public hearing does not mean we are hiding anything, nor does it mean that we are not doing anything. It means we are going to proceed to do our homework.

And there clearly will be public sessions as we proceed down here. And all data that we can conceivably make available to the public—with the exception of compromising national security as a judgment made by 12 U.S. Senators—will be made public as we proceed.

So on that note, I thank my colleague, the Vice Chairman, for his help in these early days, and cooperation. And we have a good, solid working relationship with a lot of entities going here.

And we will stand adjourned until further notice.

Mrs. BACKLEY. Thank you.

[Whereupon, at 4:15 p.m. the committee adjourned.]

A US-VN normalization road map

Vietnam's cooperation in resolving POW/MIA cases and progress in the implementation of the Paris agreement on Cambodia have been prominently in one version of the US State Department's four-phase "road map" toward normalization of relations with Vietnam, which was obtained by The Nation from a reliable source.

PHASE I

Phase I would begin with the signing of the Paris Conference/UN agreement on a Cambodian political settlement (which took place in Paris on Wednesday night).

Conditional on the agreement to implement the following steps:

Vietnam would:

- sign the Paris Agreement and support its full implementation;

- encourage Phnom Penh to sign and fully implement the Paris Agreement, including cooperating fully in facilitating the UN's arrival and its operations throughout the transition period;

Begin, no later than the date of the signing of the Paris Agreement:

- the release of those remaining Vietnamese detainees eligible for the Orderly Departure Programme, re-education reformation programme, and permit their departure if they so desire;

- encourage fully to resolve quickly the remaining unresolved but known alive discrepancy cases through bilateral efforts, to include providing the necessary witnesses and historical records to facilitate joint investigations;

- implement an agreed plan to resolve expeditiously live sighting reports on which the US requests assistance;

- rapidly repatriate all recovered and readily recoverable American remains;

- by the time of the signing of the Paris Agreement, formally agree to expand and accelerate unilateral, bilateral and bilateral (with Cambodia and Laos) cooperation to resolve as fully as possible all remaining POW/MIA cases with a target of completing the work in the next 24 months and longer if the US determines it would be helpful to achieving the fullest possible accounting.

- encourage the Phnom Penh authorities to agree formally to cooperate on POW/MIA matters in areas where they carry out administration during the period of submission to UN supervised elections.

At the time of signing of the Paris Agreement and with concrete evidence the above steps are being implemented, the US government will immediately:

- lift the 25-mile travel ban on Vietnamese diplomats accredited to the United Nations in New York;

- begin talks in New York concerning the status and modalities associated with normalization of diplomatic relations between the United States and Vietnam, including the issue of claims resolution;

- change the US rules on the trade embargo to permit US-registered travel to Vietnam by US individuals, business groups such as American chamber of commerce, trade groups and other organizations including Vietnam groups;

- begin preparations to establish a liaison office in Phnom Penh to be opened at the time UN Transitional Authority in Cambodia (UNTAC) arrives;

- encourage that it will take steps to normalize US economic relations with Cambodia, including lifting the US trade embargo toward Cambodia and supporting IFI (International Financial Institutions, such as IMF, World Bank, and ADB) projects that ease trade in place, a scenario has been implemented, and commitment of forces has been made;

- press publicly our concerns about genocide in Cambodia, and our determination to actively support those elements of the Paris agreement designed to prevent its recurrence;

- the first steps would thus represent the beginning of normalization talks and would be marked by actions by both sides to begin a step-by-step process of putting differences behind the two countries on the basis outlined above.

PHASE II

Phase II would include the United States' representatives arrived in Cambodia to establish talks and are to monitor the formal, UN supervised transition to democracy in Cambodia. A scenario would come into effect, the commitment of forces would begin and the verification of the withdrawal of foreign forces and advisers would begin.

The US will initiate steps to normalize US economic relations with Cambodia, including a lifting of the US trade embargo toward Cambodia and support of IFI projects there. During this phase, we would expect the Phnom Penh authorities to afford their fullest cooperation to cooperate on POW/MIA matters.

Regarding US-Vietnamese relations, Phase II would begin after Phase I is fully implemented.

Vietnam would have to do the following:

- fully support the implementation of all parts of the Paris Conference UN agreement, and influence Phnom Penh to do the same;

- continue resolving with highest priority discrepancy cases of Americans last known alive with a target of completion by the end of Phase II;

- continue the rapid repatriation of Americans remains readily available to Vietnam;

- begin implementing the 24-month programme in a fully cooperative manner through regular bilateral negotiations of remains, productive joint investigations and cooperative research activities.

The United States would be prepared to take the following actions, one step at a time, as this substantial progress on POW/MIA cases occurs:

- send a high level delegation to Hanoi to continue normalization talks;

- grant an exemption to the embargo to allow US telecommunications links with Vietnam (with funds to go into bilateral account pending full lifting of the trade embargo);

- permit US firms to sign contracts to be executed when the embargo is lifted;

- lift all restrictions on non-governmental organizations and non-profit organizations programs in Vietnam;

- grant an exemption to the embargo for US commercial transactions to meet basic human needs (medical, agricultural, etc.);

- work cooperatively with other countries as a programme to help Vietnam citizens to return in the B-71;

- grant a further exemption to the embargo by establishing a World Banking policy to permit US firms to carry out the following commercial transactions related to commerce: opening offices in Vietnam, hiring staff, writing and designing plans, and carrying out preliminary feasibility studies and engineering and technical surveys.

Phase II could move very rapidly depending on progress on POW/MIA.

PHASE III

We will enter this third stage once the Cambodian settlement process is well in place. This stage will begin once the following steps have occurred:

- Vietnam and Phnom Penh have supported the implementation of the Paris Agreement for six months.

- All Vietnamese military forces and advisers have been withdrawn from Cambodia.

Commitment of forces is completed successfully.

- Cambodia — as agreed to by all four Cambodian factions — has begun and is proceeding on schedule.

Vietnam has implemented the agreed plan to resolve live sighting reports, has resolved the last known alive discrepancy case, and has repatriated the remains readily available to Vietnam.

In this regard, we call attention to General Vang's remark to Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach last October that the US believes "hundreds of men" could be recovered within a few months' time.

Substantial progress has been demonstrated in the 24-month programme on POW/MIA through productive joint investigations and repatriation and cooperative research activities.

Phnom Penh authorities have been prepared to begin to cooperate in efforts to support for missing American personnel.

The US will then do the following:

- open a diplomatic liaison office in Hanoi and permit Vietnam to establish one in Washington;

- fully lift the trade embargo;

- favorably consider voting for loans by international financial institutions (World Bank, ADB, etc.) for basic human needs projects;

Phase III is that the period in which tangible results are achieved, particularly in regard to Vietnam's economic and financial needs, on the assumption that the specified steps on Cambodia and POW/MIA have occurred.

PHASE IV

This final stage would occur when:

- A free, democratic election, as certified by the UN, has taken place in Cambodia.

The new Cambodian national assembly has been formed and is meeting in a new session.

Demobilization of all former Cambodian military forces — as agreed in the Paris agreement by the four Cambodian parties — has been fully accomplished.

The US and Vietnam agree that previous POW/MIA pledges have been met and the 24-month POW/MIA programme has achieved significant results and is coming to a close.

At this point, the US would be prepared to do the following:

- establish full diplomatic relations with Vietnam and exchange ambassadors;

- consider granting MFN (most favored nation) status to Vietnam, consistent with Jackson-Vanik requirements;

- favorably consider non-humanitarian needs loans in the various stabilization and development banks and international financial institutions — assuming, as required by US law, that Vietnam's human rights record permits.

This is an unofficial version of the road map, published in "The Nation," an independent newspaper in Thailand. The State Department road map is classified.

To: Senator John Kerry, Mass. 202-224-
From: Monika Jensen-Stevenson 2155

October 6th, 1991

Dear Senator Kerry,

Thank you for your letter of Nov. 25th requesting responses from me by Dec. 6th. Thank you, too, for the courtesy and kindness you extended toward me on the day I gave testimony. It is unfortunate that, probably because of the Christmas mail rush your letter reached us just this morning. We are about to depart on our journey back to the far east with a few stops on the way. I will, however, do my best to answer your questions.

1. I have already turned over the information about Casino Man (with his permission) to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Minority Staff KIA/POW investigation. Since you first made your request I have also tried to contact him to get his permission to reveal his name to you. I have received no response and am not certain that he has gotten the message. I am certain, however, that you can get what you need on this from Senator Grassley, since his staffers investigated charges related to Casino Man's findings that were brought to the Justice Department. If you remember, both Senator Grassley and Helms agreed to cooperate with you on this matter. Another knowledgeable person is Colonel Earl Kopper who has a taped record of his conversations with the same person.

2. I have never personally received a letter from Congressman Gilman about our book or anything else. I found out during the hearings that the League of Families was distributing a letter allegedly from Congressman Gilman complaining about the fact that we had not interviewed relevant people like the Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency. This letter was full of errors—the most blatant being the charge that I did not speak to DIA. I did have a lengthy meeting with DIA Director Lenny Perrotto when he still held that office. That meeting was set up with the help of Captain Eugene (Red) McDaniel through the auspices of Congressman Ike Skelton, the Chairman of the Armed Forces Committee. As I pointed out in a letter to the same person Congressman Gilman addressed his letter to, the Congressman could easily have checked with his colleague Ike Skelton to find out if I was telling the truth. In order to do that, however, he would have had to read the book Kiss the Boys Goodbye which by his own admission he did not. I find it difficult, frankly, to answer such legally liable, obviously made-up charges brought by someone who has not read the book.

3. I appreciate Senator McCain's sudden return of memory on the Norman Gaddis case. The fact, however, is that just about a year ago, on a national television program, Senator McCain stated that he had no quarrel with our book and disputed nothing except the fact that we did not lay proper blame at the feet of the Vietnamese. Captain McDaniel also participated in that program and has a copy of the tape which he will be happy to make available to you. Any investigation I found that it was a common belief among a good number of former POWs that there was more than one case like that of Gaddis. This particular case was as well known that Larry O'Daniel also mentioned it in his 1979 book Missing in Action: Trail of Deceit. N.Y.: Arlington House 1979.

3. Our book was vetted by former POW Captain Eugene (Red) McDaniel. As you know, he has done extensive research on this issue and had an outstanding record as a prisoner. I encourage Senator McCain and the Committee as a whole to invite him to testify.

4. I explained during my testimony that I am unable to break the promise of confidentiality given to this particular witness. I know, however, that Colonel Al Shinkle is trusted by people who can testify to this fact to such a degree that they will come forward if he guarantees their safety. I urge you to work this out with him. I will also do my best to persuade everyone who spoke to me confidentially to come forward and speak to the committee. If you would like to find out how the Vietnamese, in the past, have made offers and requests, not necessarily in the presence of Deputy Secretary Quinn, perhaps it would be useful for you to speak to my husband, the co-author of KISS and to Mr. Ross Perot as well as to former National Security Advisor Richard Allen.

5. The names of individuals knowledgeable about this are in the files of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Minority investigation. They include a well known and high ranking Laotian officer. (former). I am sure you understand why I cannot transmit them to you in this fashion. I urge you, however, to speak to Mr. McCoy. Not only is he the most knowledgeable person about this, the information in this book has been confirmed by many high ranking Thai officers. Another excellent source of information about this is Michael Levine the former DEA group supervisor for its New York office and the winner of the prestigious International Narcotics Enforcement Officer Association Octavio Gonzales Award.

6. Former Deputy Director of DIA, Admiral Cutler, ²⁴ have already turned over to Committee staffers the confidential name of the person who worked closely with Colonel Nick Rowe. A primary source of this information spoke to us only through the assistance of Mr. Chris Kolesnik who works for Senator Grassley. I am therefore obligated to ask you to reach the same source through Mr. Kolesnik. The CIA papers from the Ron Oswald case in Hawaii (whose chief prosecutor was publicly identified as a CIA official) are also very informative about this issue. Again, I have given Committee staffers the name of the person who has access to them. In addition I have made available to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee investigation the DIA file on one recent rescue effort. I have also given your staffers the name of lawyers involved in deposing some of the government officials involved.

I hope that you find this helpful. As you know I am more than happy to cooperate with you further. I must tell you though that I was gravely concerned about the fact that Senator McCain in his questions to me referred not to the published version of our book but to the copy of a manuscript that we can only assume was stolen from our first publisher who opted not to publish it. This copy was deliberately distorted by an inexperienced editor who joined the staff of the publishing house after our book was already completed. He went to "radicalize" the book, but instead changed facts to rumors and just generally changed the tenor of it to make it unacceptable to us. When our lawyers made it clear that, in no way would we allow that version to go forward, the publisher opted not to go forward with publication. It is common knowledge that we then sued. The case was later settled and as you know other publishers published the book in three countries, including the U.S. Senator McCain referred to a chapter of our book that is not in the published version, but was in the distorted version that should have been returned to us or destroyed. We would like very much to know how Senator McCain got access to it.

Thank you again for your courtesy.

Sincerely,

TESTIMONY SUBMITTED BY CONGRESSMAN LANE EVANS (D-IL)
TO THE SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE ON POW/MIA AFFAIRS

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Select Committee:

Thank you for the opportunity to submit testimony for the record. At the onset, I would like to commend the entire committee for its efforts to finally resolve this issue. As Members of Congress and citizens of the United States, it is our responsibility to do everything possible to account for our missing service and civilian personnel.

As a Marine, I was taught that we were never to leave anyone behind, dead or alive. This simple rule is drilled into all our military personnel from boot camp until discharge. Nevertheless, there remain 2,273 U.S. service and civilian personnel unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. The fate of these brave men and women continues to be one of the most divisive and painful legacies of the Vietnam War. The U.S. government owes it to these individuals, their families, and the country as a whole to account for our POWs and MIAs.

Despite the fact that Presidents Reagan and Bush have called the POW/MIA issue our "highest national priority," there is no question that the American government has handled the issue poorly. Even today, virtually all reliable information remains classified so that the American public still remains in the dark about what progress has been made since Operation Homecoming. We also owe all of those affected an explanation of what the U.S. government has done and what it desperately needs to do to conclude this painful chapter in our nation's history.

The American public's trust in the government's handling of this issue has never been lower. The recent storm of controversy over the allegations of Col. Millard Peck, former head of the Pentagon's POW/MIA office, and the surfacing of alleged photographs of POW/MIA's has only added fuel to the fire. I hope that in addition to stirring the government to do a more complete and thorough job on answering the POW/MIA question, we can also convince the American people that its own government will pursue this issue as truly one of its "highest national priorities". I think that the creation of this Committee, along with the hearings you are now holding, will help accomplish this goal.

While we cannot forget or excuse the failure of the Vietnamese and American governments to resolve this issue, we have to recognize that we are now faced with a tremendous opportunity. When I traveled to Vietnam last July, I noted that with its recent change in leadership the Vietnamese government is far more willing than ever before to help us account for our missing personnel.

They promised that our government, veterans organizations, and families will be able to go anywhere at anytime without prior notification to investigate both crash sites and live sighting reports. They have also promised access to previously classified military records in their military libraries, archives, and museums. We need to take these promises seriously and we ought to push other governments of Southeast Asia for the same kind of access.

Congress has and can continue to play a vital role in our attempt to resolve the issue. I am sure that your committee will prove to be an important step in this process. The committee will allow Congress to fully examine to problems that have plagued our efforts to resolve the POW/MIA issue. It will also provide us with a forum to explore the best strategy to pursue from here on out. Similarly, legislation such as the "Truth" bill, of which I am a cosponsor, would establish formal procedures in the investigative process and also serve as a check on the process.

As you know, the "Truth" bill, H.R. 1730, would establish a thorough procedure of investigations to analyze the evidence pertaining to the missing person before the finding of death can be made. This legislation would also give the families of POWs and MIAs from the Vietnam conflict the right to review the circumstances surrounding the disappearance of their loved one. H.R. 2208 would provide procedural due process in determining the status of missing persons. It would also require the Secretary of Defense to review the procedures regarding the determination and resolution of the missing status. The bill also directs the heads of Federal departments or agencies which hold or receive records and information which could possibly have been correlated to U.S. personnel listed as POWs and MIAs after 1940, including from World War II and the Korean and Vietnam conflicts, to publicly disclose such records and information.

I am happy to say that the President and his staff are now following Congress' lead by paying more attention to this important issue. The Department of Defense has recently opened a new office in Hanoi to deal with POW/MIA issues. DOD also has authorized a new deputy assistant secretary of defense for POW/MIA affairs and plans to expand the staff assigned to this issue from 138 to 240.

Finally, as a former Marine and a member of both the House Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on Veterans' Affairs, I assure you that I have and will continue to do all that I can to seek ensure a full accounting of our military personnel that have died or been detained in other countries. It is in the interest of all Americans, and it is certainly the obligation of this nation, to locate these individuals who have sacrificed so dearly for their country.

The Honorable John Kerry
Chairman
Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs
SH - 705
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear John:

I am pleased to transmit to you and the members of the committee the attached report that several of my colleagues and I who served in the Vietnam War - Representatives Skaggs, Peterson, Kolbe, Rhodes, and Glichrest - compiled as a result of our recent mission to Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos in August, 1991, for the November 5, 6, and 7 hearing records of the Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs.

In returning to Southeast Asia for the first time since the Vietnam war, we reviewed the POW/MIA issue; the need for a comprehensive, international accord on Cambodia; the prospect of normalization of relations with Vietnam and Cambodia and upgrading relations with Laos; and the lifting of the economic embargo against Vietnam and Cambodia.

The Administration has stated that it would begin the process of normalization of relations with Vietnam once a comprehensive settlement for Cambodia is signed. Now that an agreement has been signed, discussions can begin pertaining to normalizing relations between the United States and these Southeast Asian countries and lifting the U.S. economic embargo against Vietnam and Cambodia.

I hope this report will be of value to you in reviewing these issues.

Sincerely,

*John, many thanks for your willing to meet with us in August prior to our COBOL'S departure for S.E. Asia. Collectively, we've done some good, I think.
Obviously, more remains to be done, and we look forward to working with you*

REPORT
CONGRESSIONAL DELEGATION

TRIP TO

SOUTHEAST ASIA

August 3 - 11, 1991

FOREWORD

In March 1991, Congressman Pete Peterson and I began discussions which grew into a month-long fact-finding probe into the long-unresolved controversy over the fate of America's missing-in-action servicemen who are still unaccounted for more than 15 years after the Vietnam War. Our review and analysis led us to organize a Congressional delegation, unique in composition and mission.

We enlisted a bipartisan delegation marked not only by its members' common bond of military service in Vietnam, but by their open spirit of inquiry. As we began planning what was to be our first trip back to Vietnam since the war, each brought longstanding questions about the fate of fellow servicemen. Only weeks before our trip, the publication of a photograph of three individuals identified by family members as their long-missing loved ones provoked sharp reactions across the country.

Over the years, our country's views of the POW/MIA issue have been influenced by conflicting forces. The hopes of loved ones have been manipulated -- by governments of the region, by profiteers, by sensationalists. Many have questioned our own government's role in resolving the POW/MIA dilemma. Was there a coverup, as some alleged? Has resolution of the issue been a real governmental priority? Was the failure to make more progress a symptom of mismanagement or incompetence? Was the secrecy which shrouded our government's efforts to gather information frustrating its aim of winning public understanding?

The announcement, in April, 1991, that our Government would address the POW/MIA issue as part of a "roadmap" which would govern the pace and scope of any normalization of our relations with the government of Vietnam gave added focus to our agenda. Despite the State Department's apparent unwillingness to share the text of its roadmap with the CODEL, the Department and many government and nongovernment officials urged us to reinforce its message to those leaders we might meet in Vietnam and Cambodia.

Perhaps ironically, the roadmap fused two of the most haunting remnants of conflict in post World War II Southeast Asia -- the genocidal devastation and civil war in Cambodia and the unresolved fate of America's missing in action.

We set out for Southeast Asia in August, therefore, to study all facets of the POW/MIA issue as well as the process of settlement of the civil war in Cambodia, both key elements of the roadmap. We did so on the premise that an "on-the-ground" analysis might be not only more telling, but that it might differ substantially from "findings" reached in Washington, D.C.

We framed our inquiry to focus on four subjects: (1) the intensity and effectiveness of our own government's efforts to resolve the POW/MIA issue; (2) the level of cooperation we are receiving from governments in Southeast Asia; (3) progress toward a comprehensive, lasting peace in Cambodia; and (4) the process for normalizing relations between our country and both Vietnam and Cambodia, and for moving toward full diplomatic relations with Laos.

This publication reflects our findings. It reflects the rich, diverse backgrounds of the members -- experience in military service, foreign affairs, intelligence, international trade and economics, organization and management, and veterans' issues. Most importantly, it reflects the objectivity with which the CODEL members confronted the vexing questions they studied. Despite differences in their backgrounds, the members had a common commitment to conduct a studied, independent analysis of the issues. That open spirit of inquiry and the debt we owe to those who did not return from this war, as well as to the anguished families of the missing in action, have, in my view, forged a commitment far more compelling than party or philosophy of government. It is my hope, and that of the members of this delegation, that this report will help move us closer to the answers we all seek.

TOM CARPER

INTRODUCTION

On August 3, 1991, a bipartisan group of members of the House of Representatives began an eight day trip to Southeast Asia to complete an examination into the fate of servicemen unaccounted for in Southeast Asia; progress on the search for a satisfactory settlement of the civil war in Cambodia; and the process of improving and normalizing relations between the United States and Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia, respectively. The delegation consisted of Representatives Carper, Peterson, Kolbe, Rhodes, Skaggs, and Gilchrest. The delegation met with officials of the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the State of Cambodia, and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. The trip also included a series of en-route briefing and fact-finding sessions with Department of Defense officials at the Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii, and with State Department and Defense Intelligence Agency personnel at the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok, Thailand. (See attached schedule.)

This report incorporates current information furnished by officials of the countries we visited, as well as our own analysis and recommendations, based on extensive study, briefings, and observations. We hope this report will be helpful to the Congress as it is called upon to consider legislation or to review policies on the issues discussed. We take the liberty of directing this report as well to the Executive Branch in view of the paramount importance we, and, we believe, the American people, attach to these issues.

This delegation was privileged to travel to this region and study these issues at a critical point in time. We respectfully offer our views to those entrusted with responsibility to shape and execute national policy.

DISCUSSION

In one sense, our journey to Southeast Asia began long before we boarded our C-135 at Andrews Air Force Base. In some measure it began with our service in the Vietnam War more than twenty years ago, representing, as we do, the experience of Army and Marines on the ground, Navy in the air and inland waterways, and Air Force in the skies. This journey was a genuine quest for answers, and each of us had been seeking those answers long before this CODEL was conceived.

Our search had its roots in the Vietnam war, a conflict which shaped each of us as individuals, and from which each of us returned a stronger person.

Just as the war affected us as individuals, the conflict and its aftermath altered us as a nation. As a society, we have grown from that experience, and largely put the war behind us. We in the Congress have helped bring about that closure -- through the establishment and funding of veterans' programs, the development of a framework for resolving claims based on "Agent Orange" exposure, and many other ways.

Vestiges of the war have continued to haunt us, however. None has had more troubling effect than the wrenching questions evoked by the letters "POW/MIA."

As veterans of the Vietnam War, we feel a special poignancy in the question -- what happened to our missing in action? Grappling with that question as a group, though, has taken us in many directions. In this effort, we have re-walked paths a number of our colleagues in Congress had charted, reviewing their hearing records, reports, and studies. Over several weeks, we met with virtually every available expert -- inside the U.S. government and out, from spokesmen for, to the most vigorous opponents of, Administration policy.

Pursuing questions methodically and analytically, we continued to confront voices of skepticism and distrust. Allegations of "government coverup" continue to find their way into a national debate which has come to be referred to as "the POW/MIA issue". Is there substance to the "conspiracy" theory? If not, how would one overcome such perceptions? Travel to Southeast Asia, see things on the ground! You'll see all we're doing to get this issue behind us," we were told. However, we found the view on the ground in Southeast Asia almost as obscured as the view from Washington.

It is clear that resolving the POW/MIA issue is a matter of national policy. It is equally clear, however, that the policy has never had the "top" priority our chief executives have rhetorically assigned it.

We salute the many dedicated, talented professionals -- linguists, anthropologists, forensic analysts, technicians, and others -- who have devoted years, and often much of their professional working lives, to searching for hidden answers. We want to provide that acknowledgment because they seldom if ever win medals or public accolades for their painstaking work. Like so much of the work associated with this "highest national priority" it is a story that has never been fully told and thus not understood. Their work has helped to unravel the mystery for many families of missing servicemen, and ended years of doubt and uncertainty. They deserve the praise and admiration of all Americans for their selfless work under extraordinarily difficult conditions.

Policymaking

We have certainly seen considerable energy and a high level of U.S. government concern devoted to POW/MIA matters in recent months. Over the years and up to the present, however, dedicated and focused central management, direction, and consistent coordination of POW/MIA activities has seemed as much fortuitous as planned. This sweeping charge is not made lightly or without due regard to the complexity of the job.

Reluctantly, we have to question the leadership directing those efforts. We question whether, at the highest level, there has been the kind of ongoing, hands-on direction needed to carry out a compelling national priority.

It appears that policy on the POW/MIA issue is not set by any one single responsible official. Instead, policymaking regarding the POW/MIA issue is "coordinated" through an interagency body -- the POW/MIA Interagency Group (IAG). That group's membership includes representatives of the Defense Department, the National Security Council staff, the State Department, the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) and the National League of POW/MIA Families. The IAG reportedly meets relatively infrequently.

We have not attempted to make any judgment regarding past decisions to use an interagency mechanism to carry out policymaking on this issue. But after evaluating existing arrangements, we believe a new direction is needed. In our view, more aggressive efforts must be taken to find any American servicemen who may still be alive in Southeast Asia, and to locate and identify remains of others. We do not believe an interagency coordinating group provides the best framework for carrying out this mission.

Such an effort requires more than simply "coordination." Indeed it may be that our government has been "coordinating" too long and not managing enough. In any event, we find no basis to believe that the IAG is -- or could be -- singlemindedly devoted to achieving the mission we believe must be established. By virtue of the composition, and the coordinating role it plays, the IAG's members necessarily owe their first loyalty to their parent organizations. As a result, it would appear that the MIA issue itself has become, or perhaps has always been, driven by competing interests, subordinate to and overshadowed by national security, diplomacy, protection of intelligence assets, and other government and private interests.

In examining the operation of the IAG as currently structured, we find no precedent for a representative of a nongovernmental organization, the National League of Families, participating as a member of a high-level governmental working group. It is of utmost importance that our government act with sensitivity to the families of those missing in action. That sensitivity should be balanced, however, with a sensitivity to distinctions between the grant of advisory authority and that of decisionmaking authority. It is not clear that such lines have been appropriately drawn here.

Priority

Our government has identified resolution of the POW/MIA issue as a high national priority. But it has not organized and managed that effort commensurate with its rhetoric. No administration has devoted to this issue the level of resources that would presumably attach to our "highest national priority." Even setting aside the rhetoric, our government has simply not done a good job of basic management.

We have not, it seems to us, identified with sufficient clarity and focus just what the POW/MIA mission is. Indeed there are different missions, and we question the assignment of priorities among them.

It remains our Government's view that it can not rule out the possibility that Americans missing in action remain alive in Southeast Asia. Our own visit, while providing no indication that any government is holding American prisoners of war, gave ample evidence of why the American public has come to doubt its own government's effort to resolve these questions. One must question the priority that has been given to finding these men.

Our Government's policy holds, in pertinent part, that "actions to investigate live-sighting reports receive and will continue to receive necessary priority and resources based on the assumption that at least some Americans are still held captive." (Emphasis added.) It is noteworthy that the "cannot rule out the possibility" position was only adopted in 1987. From 1973 to 1987, the government position was that "no living MIA/POWs remained in Southeast Asia."

As to current policy, the precise meaning of the phrase "necessary priority" is not clear. Our own observations lead us to conclude, however, that our government's primary energies and resources -- such as they are -- are being devoted not to any aggressive effort to find the living, but instead to locating remains and accounting for the deceased. Since 1987, the method of search for live Americans has been essentially "reaction" rather than "action" oriented. More specifically, the search has been largely an exercise in rejecting evidence: disproving the validity of photographs and debunking reports of "live sightings", rather than aggressively trying to determine if they are true. The presumption seems to lie on the side of hoax and falsehood.

It is simplistic, and bordering on the evasive, for our Government to declare that "[o]nly the communist governments of Indochina know the answer." (See DoD's POW-MIA Factbook, July 1991.) One could infer from that statement that our own government is under no real obligation to act, let alone take heroic measures. In any case, the facts belie the "only they know" proposition. This DoD rhetoric ignores the fact that Laos, for example, is a desperately poor country whose infrastructure is so fragile that its major cities are not linked by a highway network. Travel from point to point may take two weeks. If one of the more than 500 pilots downed over Laos (only nine of whom were among those released in 1973 in Operation Homecoming) survived and fell into the hands of forces other than the Pathet Lao, for example, might he be alive today in one of the many remote parts of Laos not subject to the control of the central government? In terms of what is known and knowable, we have to consider that possibility seriously. Indeed knowledgeable U.S. Government officials found reason to believe that recently released photos, one set initially thought by some to be of Navy Lt. Daniel Borah and another strongly resembling Army Captain Donald Carr, were taken in Laos. (Our delegation urged the Lao to give all possible assistance and access to U.S. efforts to investigate those cases. The Lao did follow through aggressively. That effort, however, led to the finding in the first case that the photos thought to be of Lt. Borah, compelling as they appeared to be, were not of an American.)

Organizational Structure

Just as the POW/MIA mission on which our Government is embarked appears to suffer from a lack of focus and misdirection of purpose, its execution is hampered by what could be characterized as a byzantine organizational arrangement.

After reviewing our Government's POW/MIA operations, we found ourselves asking the question, "who's in charge here?" One finds no satisfactory answer to that question. Indeed the answer seems to be "everyone", and, thus, "no one". Why that is so becomes readily apparent: the organizational landscape is crowded with different offices. These include a POW/MIA office in the Defense Intelligence Agency, the Joint Casualty Resolution Center (JCRC), the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory, Hawaii (CILHI), the Special Presidential Emissary for POW/MIA; and the POW/MIA Interagency Group.

Certain responsibilities among these offices overlap. Each reports to a different authority. Information-sharing among them is uneven. Coordination among them appears to be a matter of practice, but is not organizationally assured. Some are dedicated exclusively to POW/MIA issues; others are subject to being diverted from that effort to address entirely unrelated responsibilities. Finally, the authority of the entity dedicated to coordinating policy on POW/MIA matters, the Interagency Group, is simply undefined.

The missions of the various offices and agencies with responsibilities for POW/MIA matters vary widely in scope. For example, the able Special Presidential Emissary, General Vessey, has a very narrow formal mission: resolution of 119 "discrepancy cases." Nevertheless, the perception in America and abroad is that this official heads the entire POW/MIA investigative effort. We can only speculate as to whether this is due to his identification as a Presidential representative, the high esteem in which General Vessey is held, or some other reason.

An effort to pinpoint the various offices involved in the POW/MIA issue, their respective missions, and their reporting arrangements is, frankly, confusing. What then, do the families of those missing in action, or the foreign governments whom we are pressing, make of it?

While we have concluded that no one is really "in charge" of the government's POW/MIA effort, the command structure of the organizational components of that effort suggests too that it is not a high profile, high priority effort. For example, what the Defense Department reports to be "the only government organization which has as its sole mission resolving the status of U.S. military and civilian personnel who remain unaccounted for as a result of the Southeast Asian conflict" (i.e. JCRC) is headed by a lieutenant colonel.

The services have signalled the priority they assign to the issue both in the ranks at which these command positions are maintained and in the manner they have been filled. Instead of a regular rotation of command and the new vision and incentives for mission success that go with it, the services have permitted officers to remain in command slots for as much as a decade. These positions have become truly "dead end" slots, due, apparently, to the priority placed on the mission. As such, they have not attracted the best managers and commanders.

The services should not be singled out for blame. If we are correct in believing that the services have not assigned POW/MIA operations a high priority, we are saying no more than that they reflect an attitude which has been prevalent in other parts of our government. And yet the relatively low ebb at which these operations are carried out is at shocking variance from the expectations of the American public, let alone the families of the missing. At its most basic level, the relative lack of priority means the work of our people in the field is seriously hampered by poor support. JCRC personnel working in the field, for example, asked our assistance to acquire ordinary field equipment.

We were all impressed with, and touched by, the dedication and sacrifice of the men and women working in the field in such demanding work as investigation and excavation. We certainly don't want this report to impugn those who have given so much of themselves to the POW/MIA effort or to denigrate the fine work they're doing. Our call is for more focused leadership, and better organization and management. To call for a more aggressive effort is not to characterize ongoing activities as unimportant. To the contrary, we are sensitive to the commitment and efforts of those who labor to excavate remains, to interview refugees, to track down live-sighting reports, to find archival records, to catalogue endless fragments of information, and to piece together bone and dental remains.

What is clearly missing is a single high-level office with responsibility to manage resolution of POW/MIA affairs, armed with the recognized priority, resources, and sense of urgency to accelerate and amplify ongoing efforts.

Allegations of "Coverup"

In view of the many-faceted effort involved in compiling a full accounting of the fate of the missing-in-action, it is profoundly disturbing that a number of Americans still cling to notions of government "cover-up". While it should go without saying, it is clear to us that our Government is not engaged in any conspiracy or "cover-up" on the POW/MIA issue. Unfortunately, the government's mishandling of the issue -- the lack of priority assigned to it and the organizational problems in the command structure -- has provided grist for the mills of the conspiracy theorists.

Significantly, an aura of clandestine secretiveness surrounds the entire POW/MIA operation. It is difficult to disassociate that secretiveness from the perception that a government operating in darkness must have something more to hide than its sources of information. The need to weigh carefully the value of maintaining the confidentiality of sensitive information against the public's right to know takes on extraordinary significance in the context of POW/MIA affairs especially with all the misinformation and perception of government wrongdoing.

When Americans question whether they can trust their own government, as many do regarding the POW/MIA issue, we should take notice. But the secrecy surrounding its POW/MIA operation compounds the credibility problem our government has in claiming "this is an issue of the highest national priority."

We believe it's time to bring the POW/MIA issue as fully as possible out into the open. To demystify it, it is imperative that we declassify much of it. Communicating completely, objectively, and accurately is never an easy task for government. But such communication is an important part of what is needed to win public confidence that everything possible is being done to render a full accounting of the missing in action.

In urging that our Government take steps to restore public confidence, we also emphasize the importance of continued sensitivity to the depth and volatility of feeling on the POW/MIA issue. Some groups and individuals continue to charge that governments in Indochina are holding large numbers of Americans against their will. We have found no evidence to corroborate such charges. However, it is important that U.S. public officials avoid actions that would fuel such speculation.

Ultimately, we call on the government to assure not only that its efforts are as open as possible, but that its focus be clear and unequivocal. That focus must, as a first priority, be on finding any Americans who may still be alive in Southeast Asia. A prescription for aggressive action is needed. It is clear that time is running out -- and future efforts will be measured against that reality.

Foreign Cooperation on POW/MIA Issues

In reviewing with U.S. officials the cooperation we are receiving from the governments in the region, it became apparent -- just as is the case with other aspects of the issue -- that only part of the story is "getting out". Rather than "stonewalling", as many have believed to be the case, we found that cooperation by these governments, particularly Vietnam, is improving. Of course, only a few years ago we confronted a very different attitude in the region. Those working in the Departments of Defense, State, and other tasked agencies deserve credit for their collective efforts which have helped to bring the Vietnamese, particularly, to the current level of cooperation.

This is not to say that we should be satisfied with the levels of current cooperation. In fact, we pressed that point consistently in high-level meetings throughout this trip. This is an important message, and one that should be raised repeatedly in all our contacts with those governments. In fact, Vietnamese officials gave promises of even more cooperation and allocation of resources; these assurances should be tested quickly.

At the same time, recognition should be given to the cooperation and assistance we are receiving. It is ironic that our government should have diplomatic relations with Laos, a country which, until recently, has provided relatively limited assistance in POW/MIA matters despite the widespread view that most of the unanswered questions concerning the missing-in-action lie in Laos, while maintaining a trade embargo against, and diplomatically isolating, Vietnam, a country which has substantially increased its cooperation on a range of POW/MIA issues. The question must be raised whether beginning the process of normalization of relations with Vietnam and lifting the economic embargo is likely to enhance or diminish Vietnam's cooperation on POW/MIA issues.

By contrast, Laos, while saying the right things, has done less than Vietnam. Laos has agreed to a "one-year plan" for investigating crash sites. The U.S. has made proposals to the Laotians aimed at increasing the resources -- materiel and personnel -- devoted to these efforts. Our delegation urged Lao officials to do so. We do find noteworthy the support the Lao furnished U.S. investigators this summer, which ultimately produced disappointing findings in the case of photographs family members had identified as being of Navy Lt. Daniel Borah.

Laos, which has diplomatic relations with us, seeks to elevate relations to the ambassadorial level, and to win most-favored nation trading status. But the Laotian government clearly understands that future relations with the U.S. depend on improved cooperation on MIA issues.

It is important, however, that we not focus too narrowly in our efforts to secure the fullest possible cooperation overseas on POW/MIA matters. The Vietnam War, we know, saw many East bloc countries, from nearby China to far-off Cuba, lend support to the North Vietnamese. That support ranged from materiel assistance to stationing military advisers in-country. The effort to resolve the POW/MIA issue is ultimately a search for information, and we must seek that out wherever it may be. Indeed the radically changed or changing geopolitical climate in many of North Vietnam's former wartime allies suggests that the opportunity to secure cooperation and information from such governments may be greater now than perhaps ever before. We appreciate that the Department of State has pursued such inquiry with the Soviet Union, China, and other governments. We do not question the aggressiveness of that pursuit. We simply urge the Department to continue to explore these channels, consistent with the priority this search demands.

Vietnam

It is clear that all the countries in the region want improved relations with the United States. They realize that the Soviet Union, their former patron, has more pressing domestic concerns, and they are anxious to avoid domination by Japan or China. Voices in this country have urged our Government to forge a lasting trading relationship with Vietnam, a country which seems to be seeking to put enmity behind it. In our view, both nations could potentially benefit in the long term from a closer political and economic relationship.

Vietnam is a country of roughly 70 million people. It is noteworthy that that population has climbed substantially since the war's end and the country's unification in 1975 when, according to United Nations census data, the combined population of North and South Vietnam totalled 48 million. Also, that population is relatively young, with a median age of 20.9 years, and its labor force is estimated to number 35 million. Domestically, Vietnam has instituted major economic reforms which have begun to improve the quality of its people's lives. Still Vietnam remains a desperately poor country with dramatic needs for infrastructure improvement and for economic development. The U.S. can play a major role in that nation's economic "blossoming" or we can cede those opportunities to international competitors.

Our State Department's formula for the process of normalization with Vietnam is set out in a "roadmap" which ties normalization of diplomatic and economic relations to continued progress on POW/MIA efforts and to Vietnam's carrying out our policy goals for achievement of a Cambodian peace settlement. The "roadmap" concept can be helpful, in our view. And our Government must be prepared to honor its stated commitment to "immediately" proceed on the path toward normalization as soon as the conditions stipulated in the first phase of that understanding are met.

A roadmap can provide more than a single route to the destination, however. In other words, the "roadmap" should not become a "roadblock." While we see merit in conditioning full normalization of diplomatic and economic ties to certain actions by the Government of Vietnam, we believe that that government has taken steps which warrant our giving consideration to review and possible relaxation of certain aspects of our trade embargo. The relatively rapid progress toward a peace settlement in Cambodia also suggests the need to reassess the precise formula reflected in the "roadmap."

Vietnam's recent 7th Party Congress suggests both a continuing emphasis on market-based economic reform and a "tilt" toward China. These developments also suggest the value of a positive signal from the United States. Vietnam faces deep financial problems with the elimination of Soviet aid, and with Japanese and European companies poised to reap opportunities there for trade, our Government's posture ultimately may place U.S. firms at a competitive disadvantage.

In our view, a first step at least is warranted -- to grant an exception to our country's trade embargo to permit telecommunications links between our countries. If we can re-establish telecommunications links with Iraq as we have recently done, we should do no less in Vietnam. It would appear that the bar to such links takes its heaviest toll not on the Government of Vietnam, but on our own Vietnamese-Americans, who are denied the means to speak with loved ones who remained behind as well as on U.S. personnel operating in Vietnam. A second element could be to eliminate the 25-mile travel restriction on Vietnamese officials working at the United Nations. We have called repeatedly on the Vietnamese to ease travel restrictions on U.S. officials and citizens traveling in that country. Our calls would be more credible if we eliminated what appears to be simply a punitive restriction. In that connection, it would be helpful for our Government to allow American businessmen to travel to Vietnam to explore commercial possibilities. Such a step, well short of actually conducting business, would also enhance search efforts by placing more American feet in-country and fostering more spontaneous travel to isolated regions. In taking such initial steps vis-a-vis Vietnam, however, it is important to avoid creating the perception that they represent elements of a quid pro quo. To that end, these steps could well be taken without fanfare or pronouncements; the message would be easily understood by the Vietnamese.

This delegation witnessed the promising working relationship which has developed between members of our POW/MIA office in Hanoi and their Vietnamese counterparts. The opening of that office, the access our people are getting to pertinent military archive materials, the Government's willingness to permit American officials to begin visiting prison facilities, and other actions taken in response to recent requests in connection with the publication of the "Robertson/Lundy/Stevens" photo, for example, are not insignificant acts. This is particularly so in light of the more hesitant and limited cooperation we have enjoyed in some of our dealings with the Lao.

Vietnamese officials characterize their cooperation in accounting for the fate of our missing-in-action as "humanitarian." Surely, it is in our interest to respond in a similarly humanitarian manner by opening telecommunications links. Although this step is currently contemplated only in the second phase of the "roadmap", favorable action at this time, reflecting some flexibility, seems appropriate.

Still, there is very credible evidence that, although Vietnam has turned over remains in the past, it continues to hold the remains of additional Americans. In discussions with Government officials, the delegation emphasized the importance of "unilaterally" returning recovered remains, and suggested that such action would benefit both of our countries. As the roadmap itself makes clear, the repatriation of remains in Vietnam's possession is an issue which must be resolved before we consider full normalization. In that regard, the Vietnamese can take still further action to repatriate remains. In our discussions, we requested the Vietnamese to institute appropriate steps to waive or alter laws which bar or inhibit Vietnamese citizens from bringing forward or identifying the whereabouts of remains of U.S. servicemen. While we obtained no commitment on this point, it is an issue we would urge our Government to pursue further.

Cambodia

We cannot overstate the importance to the region of achieving real peace in Cambodia. The "roadmap" is right, in our view, in calling on Vietnam to use its influence to press for a comprehensive peace settlement. The Cambodians themselves have taken important steps in that direction. Here, too, our Government can reach its objectives along more than one road.

In our discussions, we urged Cambodian officials as well as the Vietnamese -- who can play an important role -- to work toward a comprehensive, lasting settlement. We pressed them to follow the general framework, if not the blueprint, of the Cambodian peace plan endorsed by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council. There are certainly limits to the leverage which the Vietnamese can exert, particularly given the well-founded Cambodian concern that the formula for a settlement not provide any opening for the Khmer Rouge to seize power. Nevertheless, there appear to be common interests within Cambodia -- and in the region in achieving a comprehensive, lasting settlement which ensures the right of the Cambodian people to elect their own government and which protects against the return of a genocidal regime in Phnom Penh. Resumption of relations between China and Vietnam points in this direction.

Differences remain on the nature and extent of a U.N. role in disarming and demobilizing the armed forces of the warring factions. These differences stem from an enormous and justified mistrust of the motives and plans of the Khmer Rouge. While we have encouraged adherence to the U.N. plan, one should not be surprised to see the nations most affected -- Cambodia, Vietnam, China, and Thailand -- reach their own understanding. As long as such an understanding is comprehensive in scope, and guarantees the Cambodian people self-determination, while checking foreign interference in Cambodian internal affairs, we do not believe such an accommodation should adversely affect the process of normalization of relations between the United States and Vietnam.

Stability in this region is clearly linked to stability in Cambodia. With that perspective, we note that Cambodian peace talks continue to progress at a pace which gives a real basis for optimism.

Laos

Like Vietnam and Cambodia, Laos is clearly a state in transition. It is progressing methodically, with substantial economic reforms, to develop something closer to a free-market economy. The country has only recently adopted a new constitution. It is a country with great needs. Understandably, Laos' concerns vis-a-vis the United States occupy a relatively lower priority than those of many other nations. In regional terms, however, it should not be overlooked. Its peasant farmers' production of opium-producing poppies, alone, demands that it not escape our attention. And certainly our Justice Department's Drug Enforcement Agency has real concerns. Laos may also hold answers to the MIA riddle, given its rugged terrain over which more than 500 pilots were lost, only a handful of whom were among those released by Hanoi in 1973. One must also acknowledge the vast humanitarian needs facing this country. U.S. Government-provided humanitarian assistance, frankly, is meager in scope.

Until recently, the Lao have appeared to move warily to meet our urgings. Some ascribe this to culture, others to limited resources -- materiel and human, others to the question "why should they?"

One need not have confidently answered that question, however, to conclude that our Government can and should do more in Laos.

Regional Issues and the United States

We welcome the State Department's efforts to link improvements in cooperation on POW/MIA developments to easing in our relationships with these countries. Our extensive travel throughout Indochina provided graphic evidence, however, of the poverty of this region, of the toll of decades of war, and of the need for humanitarian and technical assistance. Each of these countries remain fascinated with America and looks to us with hope. Each wants to put war behind it.

A common pattern of commitment to economic reform holds some promise for improving the lives of the peoples of the region, as well as for cementing better relations between these nations and their neighbors and with the West. The question can be raised whether beginning the process of normalization with the countries of Southeast Asia, especially Vietnam, would encourage or discourage economic reform. From our study, the answer appears to be that economic reform would be encouraged by beginning the process of normalization.

In considering the question of improved relations with these countries in the future, it is important to appreciate that these are all states in transition. We can only speculate on where that transition will ultimately take them. At this point in time, though, one finds striking the contrast between the spirit of economic reform manifest in each of these countries, on the one hand, and their apparent ideological rigidity, on the other. The degree to which real political reforms take root will, of course, ultimately color the depth and nature of future relations with us.

There are other important issues to be considered -- issues regarding the plight of Cambodian refugees, political detainees in Vietnam, humanitarian and discrimination issues related to the treatment of those who served with us in the South Vietnamese armed forces, and narcotics control and interdiction. We pressed the respective governments on these and other issues, and urge the State Department to continue to do so.

There is much that can be done in this region, perhaps in part by our Government and certainly by non-governmental organizations. Solely by way of example, one opportunity for important work lies in the humanitarian program for Amerasian youngsters and family members who pass through a transit center in Vietnam on their way to the United States. Thousands more will pass through its doors. While this center provides housing, often for many months, only very rudimentary English instruction and sewing and jewelry-making classes are available to the in-transit residents. The scene cries out for assistance to arm these people with the language and employment skills for the difficult transition ahead.

The region has seen much suffering. And, its needs are great. But we also found reason for hope -- in the domestic changes underway, in momentum for peace in Cambodia, in the search for a more positive relationship with this country.

RECOMMENDATIONS

In light of our findings, discussed above, we believe that progress in both accounting for the fate of America's missing-in-action in the Vietnam War and moving toward a comprehensive peace settlement in Cambodia can be advanced by a number of actions on the part of our Government. Accordingly, and with due regard to the expertise in, and jurisdictional authority of, several committees of the Congress, we offer the following recommendations for appropriate executive and legislative consideration. We recommend that:

1. the U.S. Government clarify the priority it attaches to resolving the POW/MIA issue -- which, we urge, reflect that it truly considers it a high priority -- and that it allocate a commensurate level of resources to that effort;
2. (a) responsibility for policy formulation, coordination, and operations be vested in the Secretary of Defense; and (b) that the POW/MIA Interagency Group be disbanded;
3. in carrying out such responsibility for POW/MIA affairs, the Secretary of Defense establish a single office -- headed by a highly motivated and able officer of at least one star rank, such position to be rotated at appropriate intervals -- to be in charge of all POW/MIA activities and to whom all elements carrying out those activities report;

4. the Secretary reorganize those elements carrying out POW/MIA activities, particularly JCRC and CILHI, to assure integration and uniform reporting within a single command structure; and immediately replace current incumbents in command/director positions who have served in that capacity for five or more years;

5. the Secretary take all possible steps, coordinating as necessary with other involved Departments, to accelerate efforts to achieve as full an accounting as possible of the fate of America's missing in action, to include such specific measures as:

(a) deploying in Vietnam and Laos, particularly, (rather than in Hawaii or Bangkok) such additional personnel as are deemed to be needed to expand efforts currently carried out under the auspices of the JCRC and CILHI; pressing Laos, Vietnam, and Cambodia for the right to assign such personnel for extended in-country stays of up to six months; and assigning certain of those personnel to work independently to clear landing zones near crash sites to reduce the time required by excavation teams to reach remote sites;

(b) strongly encouraging the governments of Vietnam and Laos to designate personnel for the United States to train to assist in our excavation efforts in those countries;

(c) pursuing aggressively an arrangement under which in-country teams can increase their access to excavation sites and the safety of such transportation (through negotiation to permit the use of U.S. helicopters and pilots, or in the alternative, arrangements for training Vietnamese, Lao, and Cambodian pilots to fly U.S. owned or leased helicopters which could be given to those governments upon completion of our Government's efforts);

(d) stimulating further cooperation from the governments of the region through increasing the school-building activities of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (through the Corps and possibly also through other Department assets such as Navy Seabee units) in Laos, and possibly replicating those efforts in Vietnam and Cambodia, (consideration should also be given to such humanitarian assistance as construction of health clinics); and

(e) developing more reliable mechanisms for ground transportation of U.S. personnel in the field in Vietnam (to include consideration of deploying utility vehicles donated by the Japanese during the Persian Gulf crisis if they are readily available and could be serviced by dealers in Vietnam in lieu of the current practice of using vehicles which must be flown to Guam to be repaired);

6. the Secretary limit to an advisory role the involvement of nongovernment entities in the area of POW/MIA affairs, and that the Secretary consider establishing a Federal advisory committee through which such nongovernment entities might provide guidance;

7. the Secretary (a.) review the classification procedures applicable to intelligence-gathering in POW/MIA affairs, and take all necessary measures to declassify information on, and gained through, such intelligence-gathering, to the maximum extent possible; and (b.) strive to reduce the clandestine character of POW/MIA search activities (recognizing that that secretiveness may have more to do with the professional backgrounds of those assigned to such missions than to the requirements of the search itself);

8. the Secretary, after carrying out the above recommendations and any other actions to further efforts to provide as full an accounting as possible of the fate of those missing in action, personally communicate with the American people through electronic and print media, to the extent possible, to explain in full the means through which the Department is working to resolve the issue and the degree of success it has had, with the aim of enhancing public confidence in that process and minimizing the suspicions which have clouded that effort;

9. the Secretary, in coordination with the Secretary of State, develop a coordinated "master" plan for carrying out POW/MIA operations, which identifies the precise roles, responsibilities, and interaction of and among the respective Governments, agencies, and officials involved;

10. the Secretary prepare for the Special Presidential Emissary to Hanoi for POW/MIA Affairs (General Vessey) a follow-up list of additional compelling cases for resolution to be taken up upon completion of the original list of 119 "discrepancy cases" (with an eye to dispelling concerns that still more compelling cases were not included among the original 119);

*11. the Secretary of State consider -- in light of both the progress already made toward realizing a comprehensive, lasting settlement of the civil war in Cambodia and actions taken by Vietnam -- recommending to the President taking a first step or steps (consistent with the Secretary's assessment of the progress achieved) toward normalization of relations with Vietnam (to include our Government's carrying out the steps outlined in Phase I of the "roadmap"), and particularly toward recommending (a) the grant of an exception to the trade embargo to permit telecommunications links between the two countries, taking into account how that step is in our own country's best interest, its humanitarian significance, as well as Vietnam's substantial progress toward development of a market economy; and, (b) lifting the 25-mile travel ban on diplomats representing the Socialist Republic of Vietnam at the United Nations and easing the travel restrictions on officials of Vietnam and Cambodia who seek to visit the United States;

12. in light of the steps already taken by Vietnam, the Secretary -- upon the signing of a Paris Conference/United Nations agreement on a Cambodian political settlement -- begin immediately the process of normalizing relations with Vietnam as set forth in the April 1991 "roadmap", to include speedy action to facilitate telecommunication links as described in recommendation number 11, above; and

13. The Secretary of State consider any other steps within that official's control which might further U.S. Government efforts to hasten the process of obtaining as full an accounting as possible of the fate of America's missing in action as well as public confidence in that accounting, to include:

(a) determining whether provisions of Vietnamese law may deter or inhibit some Vietnamese citizens from relinquishing or identifying the whereabouts of remains of U.S. MIA's, and, if so, exploring with the Government of Vietnam legal remedies to encourage such citizens to return such remains to include consideration of our Government's instituting a policy of providing modest financial rewards in instances where the remains were subsequently identified as Americans; and

(b) coordinating with officials of the governments of Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia to request their assistance in enabling family members of U.S. MIA's/POW's to move freely about those countries, and to encourage and facilitate the efforts of family members so interested to do so.

*The delegation recognizes that progress toward, and potentially imminent signing of, an agreement on a Cambodian political settlement may make this recommendation moot.

STATEMENT

Tracy Usry, Chief Investigator, Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Republican Staff

*Before the Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs
November 15, 1991*

Mr. Chairman, members of the Committee, let me thank you again for this opportunity to address you today.

I will address your questions from last week in the order they were asked, citing the page and line number of the transcript of last week's hearings, which correspond to each of your questions.

1. (9-20); Senator Kerry: "But in fact, it is true, it is not, that nine Americans were turned over to the US in 1973 from Laos, who were nominally Pathet Lao Prisoners? Those were counted as repatriated from Laos."

Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record, a copy of a document, from the Defense Intelligence Agency, dated 7 Dec 1977, addressed to Captain Raymond A. Vohden, USN, Principal Advisor Office of PW/MIA Affairs, OASD/ISA, Room 26252, The Pentagon, Washington DC 20301. Subject: Pathet Lao Knowledge on U.S. Prisoners.

The correspondence provides a summation of information held by DIA regarding the degree of knowledgeability possessed by the Pathet Lao on U.S. personnel unaccounted for in Laos. Page five of the document states in part: "...the nine U.S. personnel who had been captured in Laos and who were released in Hanoi during Operation Homecoming were all captured by North Vietnamese forces operating in Laos and moved to North Vietnam for detention."

2. (15-9) Senator McCain: "So your allegation that the two Thai Special Forces identified Dooley's photograph as a fellow inmate is false."

Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record a declassified, sanitized, U.S. Air Force Message, date and time group 052635Z Mar 73, from 13AF/JHRC Clark AB Phil, to AIG 7819. This is a Homecoming Air Force Message, Special Report 007. Subject: Debriefing. The message relates to the debriefing of two Thai military returnees by U.S. personnel. The returnees identified North Vietnamese personnel who dealt with POWs. The identifications were made by picking out photographs from the Defense Intelligence Agency Publication, North Vietnamese Personnel associated with U.S. POWs (AP-355-8-1-70 INT) dated 1 Jun 70. The Thais identified thirteen North Vietnamese who dealt with American Prisoners of War as guards, interrogators or those who were involved in the torture of U.S. prisoners.

The second portion of the document references the two Thai personnel selecting photographs of approximately three hundred U.S. personnel with whom they were imprisoned. The photographs were selected from Volume I of the DIA Pre-capture Photographs of Missing in Action in Southeast Asia (u) 4DI-367-2-72. The photographs identified, according to the message were of personnel all listed as returnees during Operation Homecoming. In section three of the report, it states that the Thais also identified personnel from the photograph volume provided by DIA who were not listed on the list of returnees, they are as follows:

DIA ID NO.	NAME	CURRENT STATUS
S134	Shelton, Charles E.	Captured
T204	Templin Edwin B. "Skip"	MIA
M010	Mamiya, John M. "Charley"	MIA
W026	Watkins, George H.	MIA
F075	Fr??tag, John (uncertain)	MIA
D033	Dooley, James B. (Camp Unity)	MIA
T025	Teague, James E.	Captured
M019	Mason, William H. (Camp Unity)	MIA
00670	Olson, Betty A. (Uncertain)	MIA
C158	Carrol, Roger W. (Zoo)	MIA
M602	Mitchell, Archie E.	Unreadable

3. (16-3) Senator McCain: "A U.S. POW who had been repatriated said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell in Hanoi, who was that POW?"

(16-16) "So his allegations basically Mr. Chairman, has been relayed to him with no basis in fact."

(16-20) "What facts do you have to back up your allegation that a U.S. POW had been...repatriated said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell in Hanoi."

Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record an unclassified electronic message, date and time group 022148Z Apr 73.

This is a Homecoming Army Message

Subject: Homecoming Army Debriefing Report No. 31

Returnee: Deleted

Category 5

Name: Dooley, James E.

Date of LAST INFO: Nov 1971 Date Qualifier EST

Source Info: Either saw name on wall at Plantation gardens or was told.

Last Known Status: POW

Details of Last Contact: No contact: either saw name on wall or was told about name by another returnee.

Mr. Chairman, the family of LCDR Dooley has never been provided the name of the returnee who provided this information, other than this one report. As far as the family is aware, LCDR Dooley was never declared a POW, but is carried as MIA. I must add, that this report has never been cleared up, as far as the family is aware.

4. (19-8) Senator McCain: "I see and, finally, a communist propaganda photograph of captured U.S. pilots in Hanoi, dated after Dooley was shot down, shows a partial profile of a person that strongly resembles Dooley." Do you have knowledge of that?"

(19-18) "Yet the DIA and no government agency has that photograph, according to them."

Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record the following:

A. A DOD Vietnam information form, dtd September 17, 1970, showing that Mr. Henry E. Dooley and wife identified photograph No. 46, shown to them by DOD personnel as possibly being their son, LT. James E. Dooley...

C. A copy of the same photograph No. 46 depicting three men, one oriental and two occidental. His parents identified the man to the far right of the photograph possibly as being LT. James E. Dooley.

D. A copy of Memorandum for Navy, dtd 12 Feb 1971, Subject: Results of Photo Comparison No. -- the Number is left blank, but the document shows it is an analysis of photo 46.

5. Request from NOK of LT. James E. Dooley, unsigned, utilized to transmit the results of the analysis.

Mr. Chairman, these documents clearly indicate that the Department of Navy was aware of the photograph prior to September 1970, as well as later, since they showed it to the Dooley family. The information I have just cited, all came from LCDR Dooley's casualty file, a copy of which was provided to the family.

I am told that the DIA also maintains a complete casualty file of each individual missing. If their position is that this photograph does not exist, or that they nor any other government agency has that photograph, I would submit this as a further example of the poor quality of work done by the DIA. This certainly is an indicator of sloppy case management, as well as inattention to detail.

Even more tragic, is the failure to expedite this matter in 1970, when the Dooley family was first shown the photograph. The request for analysis by the Department of Navy was not forwarded for action until February 1971, over four months after initial identification. I believe that this example also shows the lack of concern for timely reporting to the families, as well as DOD's lack of compassion for the families.

6. (20-1) Senator McCain: "Like your trip to Thailand that you just took" ... "Tell me about your trip would you Mr. Usry?"

Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, during the latter part of July of this year, Congressman Clement (D-TN) arranged for one of his constituents to provide to myself, and staff of Senator Grassley, what Congressman Clement's constituent felt was compelling information concerning live Americans being held in Southeast Asia.

Judge Hamilton Gaden provided documentary and physical, as well as photographic evidence depicting what he felt were live American POWs being held in Southeast Asia. The most compelling evidence was that of a photograph of a Caucasian male and Oriental female, which, according to Judge Gaden, was LCDR Larry J. Stevens. Stevens was declared MIA during the war in Southeast Asia.

Since the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Grassley's staff had already initiated some photographic comparison in the case of Cpt. Donald Carr, based on photographs submitted by Mr. Jack Bailey, we felt that this evidence could also be analyzed in a similar way. This information was discussed with the Minority staff and between July 30, and August 2, 1991, I travelled to Ft. Collins CO, to provide Dr. Michael Charney a Forensic Anthropologist at Colorado State University, with the questioned photograph as well as pre-loss photographs of LCDR Stevens.

Dr. Charney, utilizing a procedure called computer superimposition, determined that the pre-loss photographs of Stevens matched the forensic profile of the questioned photograph provided by Judge Gaden. The computer superimposition process creates a computer enhanced image of the face in question, and the image of the pre-loss photographs.

The images were then overlaid or superimposed upon each other. According to Dr. Charney, the images aligned 100%, and therefore he determined the two individuals in the two photographs were the same person. According to Dr. Patrick Fitzhorn, a Professor of Mechanical Engineering at Colorado State University, who created the computer images of Carr and Stevens, these images were exact to one hundredth of an inch.

Based on this identification, on the 2nd of August, I provided a briefing to Senators Helms and Grassley, as well as to another member of Congress. Through the efforts of this other member, a briefing for the Secretary of Defense was set for 5:30 pm on August 5th at the Pentagon. At 5:30, on August 5th, myself and another Senate staff member and a House staff member were present at the briefing I provided to Secretary Cheney and two of his staff.

At this time, I will provide the same briefing that I did for Secretary Cheney:

Chart 1:

Pre-loss photograph of Cpt Donald Carr, as well as photograph provided by Mr. Jack Bailey, which he indicates was taken in Laos and believes to be Donald Carr.

Photograph of the two computer enhanced images of both photographs.

Photograph of superimposition of both photographs.

Based on this process, Dr. Charney stated that in his opinion, the photographs were of the same person, Cpt. Donald Carr.

Chart 2:

Pre-loss photograph of LCDR Larry J. Stevens, as well as a photograph provided by Judge Gaden, which he indicates was taken in Southeast Asia and believes to be LCDR Stevens.

Photograph of the two computer enhanced images of both photographs.

Photograph of superimposition of both photographs.

Based on this process, Dr Charney stated that in his opinion the photographs were of the same person, LCDR Larry J. Stevens.

Chart 3:

Pre-loss photograph of LT. USN Daniel Borah, as well as a photograph provided by Judge Gaden, which he indicates was taken in Southeast Asia and believes to be LT. Borah.

At the time of the briefing, the complete analysis of this photograph was not complete.

Chart 4: Proposal

1. Interview/Polygraph Sources
2. Utilize DOD Polygraphers of choice
3. OSD Observer
4. Audio tape entire interview and polygraph examination.
5. Use private interpreter (If not available, coordinate with JUSMAG Thai.)
6. QA determination of charts prior to departure from Thailand
7. Secure/remove sources from Thailand
8. DOD Provide support, Transportation and Funding.

Chart 5: Areas of Concern

1. Sources will not work with DIA/DOS
2. Sources are Laotian with limited time in Thailand
3. Photographs are dated
4. Excessive activity related to POW issue in Thailand, both official and private.

At the conclusion of the briefing, Secretary Cheney remarked that the evidence was compelling and instructed his staff to arrange the support requested in the briefing.

On August 7th, the team departed for Thailand. On August 14th, the source was polygraphed. The test results indicated that he was lying. He had never seen, talked to, or photographed any American POWs in Southeast Asia. The origin of the photograph therefore is unknown.

For the record, even though these leads did not pan out, it was the opinion of the Senators involved, as well as that of Secretary Cheney that the information I just provided you, had to be acted upon.

However, Mr. Chairman, as you are aware, an examination of the Carr photograph by DOD indicated several similarities between each of the Carr photographs. In fact, Department of Defense personnel have publicly stated on numerous occasions that there are striking similarities between each of the Carr photographs. All information concerning the Carr and Stevens photograph was released to the Defense Department.

7. (48-22) Mr. Chairman, in reference to your statement concerning the shootdown of Commander Hickerson, let me read to you from a live sighting report and subsequent evaluation by the JCRC.

SUBJ: EVALUATION OF RPT HK86-102 [Redacted]
NSC FOR MR. CHILDRESS

A. JCRC LIAISON BANGKOK TH 151000Z JAN 87

1. [Redacted] ANALYSIS OF INFORMATION PROVIDED BY [Redacted] SOURCE OF REF A, REVEALS A PROBABLE CORRELATION TO REFNO 0872-0-01.

2. [Redacted] REFNO 0872: ON 22 OCTOBER 1967, LIEUTENANT, JUNIOR GRADE, JAMES E. DOOLEY WAS FLYING AN A-4 ATTACK BOMBER. THE AIRCRAFT, SERIAL NUMBER 150116, CRASHED IN THE GULF OF TONKIN IN THE VICINITY OF GRID COORDINATES XH860693, APPROXIMATELY 2000 METERS SOUTH OF DO SON, HAIPHONG PROVINCE, VIETNAM. NO PARACHUTES WERE SEEN AND NO ELECTRONIC BEACON SIGNAL WERE HEARD. A THOROUGH AERIAL SEARCH OF THE AREA WAS CONDUCTED, BUT THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE OF SURVIVAL. UPON HIS REPATRIATION AFTER BEING HELD PRISONER OF WAR, ONE AMERICAN SERVICEMAN STATED THAT HE HAD EITHER SEEN LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S NAME WRITTEN ON A PRISON WALL OR HEARD IT WHILE A PRISONER IN HANOI. A FOLDER DETAILING THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S CASE WAS PRESENTED TO OFFICIALS OF THE SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM BY JCRC DURING A POW/MIA TECHNICAL MEETING HELD IN AUGUST 1984. LIEUTENANT DOOLEY IS CARRIED IN THE PRESUMPTIVE STATUS OF DEAD, BODY NOT RECOVERED.

3. [Redacted] LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S INCIDENT OCCURRED WITHIN FOUR KILOMETERS OF GRID COORDINATES XH879916. THE TIME OF DAY AND MONTH CORRELATE TO LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S INCIDENT; HOWEVER, THE SOURCE REPORTED THE INCIDENT AS OCCURRING IN 1968 AND THE ACTUAL YEAR OF THE INCIDENT WAS 1967. THE SOURCE'S REPORT OF AIRCRAFT SEARCHING FOR THE DOWNED PILOT CORRELATES WITH THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF LIEUTENANT

DOOLEY'S INCIDENT.

4. (U) THIS EVALUATION MAY BE RELEASED TO NOK BY COMNAVJLPERSCOM UPON DELETION OF SOURCE'S NAME FROM PARAGRAPH ONE. A SANITIZED COPY OF REF A FOR RELEASE TO NOK BY COMNAVJLPERSCOM WILL BE FORWARDED VIA REGISTERED MAIL.

5. (U) THIS IS A PRELIMINARY ANALYTICAL POSITION AND NOT A FINAL EVALUATION. EVAL - JAC.

Mr. Chairman, this sighting report was correlated to the shootdown of Navy Pilot James Hickerson, who was repatriated during Operation Homecoming during 1973.

Now, for the record I will read to you a letter from Mr. Hickerson, to a LCDR Dooley family member. The verbatim et literatim reproduction of Mr. Hickerson's letter follows:

Ms. Pam Hicks
[Address deleted for Privacy]

To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Captain J. M. Hickerson, USN (Ret) - POW 22 December 1967 to 14 March 1973. I do not believe that the captured American pilot, subject of JCRC Report HK86-102, was me. There are too many discrepancies between the JCRC Report HK86-102 and my capture:

- 1.) I was not shot down on 22 December, not October or November;
- 2.) My parachute was all white, not red, white and blue;
- 3.) If I had landed 50 meters from an airfield, I would have been aware of it;
- 4.) I swam no more than 50 yards, not 200 meters;
- 5.) I did not attempt to use my pistol;
- 6.) There were no waves;
- 7.) I was transported away on the back of a bicycle, not in a sidecar, and I was never in an automobile;
- 8.) I was wearing Marine fatigues (2 piece), not a one piece flight suit;
- 9.) There was a solid, approximately 800 ft. overcast in the area, making it unlikely that 5 or 6 jets plus a helicopter would have been flying under an overcast that close to Do Son.

Despite the fact that the location and date of the described capture was approximately mine, considering the above, I do not believe that the captured pilot reported in JCRC Report HK86-102, was me.

Very Respectfully,

(signed)

J.M. Hickerson
Captain, USN (Ret)

Mr. Chairman, I will now read to you from my notes of a telephone conversation between myself and Mr. Hickerson, which transpired at 2:45 PM on Mar 6, 1990. The verbatim et literatim reproduction of my notes follows:

-Landed on Beach

weapon in gear, no radio overcast that day - under overcast

- no airfield in sight!

- no transport across hard

No Airplanes circling - heard none all afternoon shot at him - 37 mm

1. This is in response to Mrs. Elizabeth H. Dooley's questions she had at the National League of Families Conference in July. She has discrepancies about some of the facts concerning her son's case. Would you review the file on Lieutenant Commander Dooley and check to see if any of her claims can be validated. Please send your response directly to us. The questions are listed below.

(1) Please check to see if there is any pattern to the crash site investigations in the Hanoi/Haiphong area.

(2) In reference to JCRC msg 251800Z Jul 88; In reference to para #7 - CDR Hickerson stated that the report referenced was not his and he would rewrite the deposition, was the reinterview conducted? If so what were the result. Was the source mentioned proven to be reliable?

(3) Check to see if LCDR Dooley is on the top priority 70 name discrepancy list, have there been any negotiations attempted since 1967 on LCDR Dooley case?

(4) Do we need official deposition of this fact to have report possibly correlated to LCDR Dooley?

2. If you have any questions, please feel free to reach me toll-free at 1-800-443-9298.

3. Thank you very much for your assistance.

(1) JCRC unclassified msg dtg 251800z dtd Jul 88

Mr. Chairman, to date the finding that JCRC message 251800Z Jul 88 pertains to Hickerson has not been changed, although CPT Hickerson's statement maintains the live-sighting report does not pertain to him.

Mr. Chairman, I again state as we stated in the Minority Staff Report, DIA has a mindset to debunk. As cited previously, this is a fine example of faulty analysis. This live sighting report is definitely not that of Hickerson as the Defense Department indicates. Whether or not it is of Dooley is another matter. Since the shutdown has not been properly correlated to anyone to our knowledge, it could very well be that of Dooley. This evidence, plus the evidence outlined in answer to Senator McCain's questions, make a case that LCDR Dooley was in fact captured by the North Vietnamese, and that he was not released during Operation Homecoming.

Mr. Chairman, I will now address those seven problem areas mentioned in my previous statement to the Committee on November 7th, 1991, that the Minority staff investigation did not have the budgetary resources to properly pursue.

1. Attempts by the Administration to infiltrate private activist groups.

I believe that the testimony of Mr. Sampley to this committee last week supports our position. However, I am offering additional documentation to support that position. This documentation will also support our next problem area listed.

2. Illegal surveillance and investigation of individual activists of this issue by the Department of Defense.

Mr. Chairman, I offer for the record several pieces of correspondence either originating from Mr. John R. Mead, Suite 106, 333 Cobalt Way, Sunnyvale, CA 94086 or addressed to him. The correspondence from Mr. Mead in all instances is addressed to various individuals within the US Government, to include the Attorney General of the United States, the Public Integrity Section of the Department of Justice, the Counsel to the President, as well as the Internal Revenue Service.

The correspondence to Mr. Mead is from various government agencies indicating that they have received his correspondence and are acting upon it. Mr. Mead's correspondence addresses his concern with the Administration:

- 1) utilizing private organizations to spy on him;
- 2) conducting character assassination on him; and,
- 3) the Defense Department conducting surveillance of him.

He specifically identifies Mr. Richard Childress of the National Security Council as well as individuals affiliated with the Center for POW/MIA Accountability Inc.

I would also like to introduce for the record, a memorandum prepared by Dr. Harvey Andrews, a former member of Senator Grassley's staff, dated September 11, 1989. The memorandum addresses Dr. Andrews' review of the file concerning Mr. Mead's allegations.

I wish to point out that Dr. Andrews is a retired Defense Criminal Investigative Service Special Agent, with over thirty years of criminal investigative experience. The verbatim et literatim text of his memorandum, which evaluates Mr. Mead's allegations, follows:

September 11, 1989

MEMORANDUM

TO: KRIS KOLEŠNIK
FROM: HARVEY ANDREWS

SUBJECT: Review of Public Integrity file, Department of Justice

Ref: Mead complaint

On August 28, 1989, the Office of Public Integrity, Department of Justice, was asked to produce its file on the investigation of a complaint filed by John R. Mead, re: unlawful surveillance by Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA), ect [sic]. Mr. Jack Keeny produced a three page declination of prosecution based on Mead's complaint, stating that this paper summarized their inquiry. Mr. Keeny would not allow the paper to leave his office.

Upon review by both Kris Kolesnik and myself, the declination paper was found to be a superficial inquiry of the complaint by Mead which was conducted by Defense Department's oversight office. DIA through the oversight inquiry never denied a surveillance of Mead, but stated it did nothing illegal. The portion of the complaint dealing with a civil rights violation was not referred to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), nor was there any evidence that other potential criminal violations in Mead's complaint were ever investigated by FBI. The paper was a self-serving document that cleared DIA of any wrongdoing.

Mr. Keeny was asked to provide the full file on this matter and he said he would have to take it up with some unidentified office. Subsequently, Mr. Keeny called and said the complete file would have to be withheld because of the "third agency rule."

3. Questionable identification by the Armed Services Graves Registration Office (ASGRO).

Mr. Chairman, I have before me a synopsis of an ASGRO board determination, as well as documented evidence concerning the identification of Mr. Mark V. Dennis. Mr. Mark V. Dennis was a member of the Naval Services who according to the Defense Department was killed in action during the Vietnam conflict. The government's position, both the Central Identification Laboratory-Hawaii and the ASGRO board feel that the remains are those of Mr. Dennis. However, Mr. Dennis' family submit compelling evidence that the remains are not Mr. Dennis' remains, and may not even be caucasian, but mongoloid.

The principal area of difference, besides unscientific examination by CIL-HI, is that the height does not fit that of Mr. Dennis. The Government's contention is that the remains are those of an individual who is 67 1/4 inches in height. They base the identification in part on Mr. Dennis' medical records which reflect his height as 67 1/4 inches tall.

However, his enlistment form reflects his height as 69 inches tall and his family has submitted sworn documentation, to include affidavits as well as photographs indicating that Mr. Dennis was indeed 71 to 72 inches tall. The difference if one were to accept the medical examination of the remains at face value, is 3 3/4 inches minimum. Considering that the determination of the height of remains is approximately 67 1/4 inches tall, this minimum difference could be far greater.

I would like to cite a second example which I viewed in the files of Dr. Michael Charney, a Forensic Anthropologist at Colorado State University. He showed me a photograph of remains, of the upper portion of a skull at about the hair line, and a lower jaw. From this, the government expert reconstructed a face and determined it to be the remains of an individual listed as missing in action.

The ASGRO board supported the identification. I grant you, that facial reconstruction from remains is an established scientific procedure which has been around for some time. In fact, this procedure has even been used in the past in various states by law enforcement authorities, to make identifications of remains.

However, in order to be able to reconstruct a face from remains, enough of the skull must exist to recreate the face. The skull has certain landmarks on it which are required in order to do facial reconstruction. Some of these landmarks are: eye sockets; nasal passage; brow ridge; cheek bones; upper lip area as well as the lower jaw.

These skull landmarks are required in order to determine such things as distance between eyes in relation to the nose; size and shape of nose; fullness of face as well as the shape of the lower portion of the skull from the nose down. Granted that even if some of the landmarks are missing, re-construction can still be accomplished; however when none exist, I would submit accurate facial reconstruction cannot be accomplished. Yet, in this case, ASGRO accepted the identification. Therefore, in this example, the individual has now been "accounted for," his case "resolved," and his name removed from the Missing in Action list.

4. Questionable liaisons between administration, activist and identified members of organized crime.

Mr. Chairman, a staff member of one of this committee's members and myself, were allowed to review an extract of certain documents. These documents came into the hands of the Foreign Relations Committee majority staff, while Congress was conducting its Iran-Contra investigation in 1987. This extract of documents recorded numerous meetings between:

- 1) a member of the White House National Security Council's staff;
- 2) a prominent and high-ranking member of a POW family organization; and,
- 3) a known organized crime figure. C L O S E D

The documents we reviewed recorded numerous meetings between these three people. Upon completion of the meetings, in many instances, the known crime figure would depart to another state, to meet with other identified members of organized crime. The extract reflected that the crime figure referred to the other individuals by name as well as initials.

The appointment diaries of this individual were provided to a Congressional Staff member, after they were seized by the Washington, D.C. Police who were involved in an investigation of harassment against a media person. This known crime figure was in fact involved in a harassment campaign against the media individual. We were told that these diaries are maintained in the archives of the Foreign Relations Committee Majority Staff.

5. The failure of DIA to address the MIA/POW issue for World War II and Korea.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to submit for the record, this binder containing all reference material in our report that deals with World War II and Korea. After reviewing the DIA files for those three hundred some unaccounted for personnel in Korea, I must state that these documents are a lot more complete than their files.

For the record, as of the date of publication of our minority report, no active work was being done concerning World War II personnel, according to the DIA POW/MIA office.

For the record, on three separate instances, I offered not only to the DIA, but to the Office of the Vice President, all information we had concerning those unaccounted for in World War II and Korea. They expressed no interest in the documents.

6. Sanctioned rescue missions by the Department of Defense after 1973.

Mr. Chairman, I believe you yourself during the hearings indicated that you were going to check into this area. I can tell you that the Minority staff has interviewed individuals whom have either:

- 1) reviewed extensive signal and photographic intelligence for planning purposes of such missions;
- 2) trained for; or
- 3) deployed for such rescue missions, which have never been made public.

The Minority staff will share this information with the Committee in an appropriate setting. However, Mr. Chairman, for the record, the implications of our sources information are:

- 1) that the knowingly United States abandoned men in Southeast Asia after the war;
- 2) into the 1980s, the United States government had extensive and high quality intelligence of the location of at least some of these prisoners; and,
- 3) that despite having this intelligence, the United States government publicly, as well as privately to members of Congress, maintained that there was "no credible evidence" that POWs were alive and being held in Southeast Asia.

7. Problems with the Central Identification Laboratory -Hawaii (USACIL-HI) including:

- 1) Unscientific methods used to identify remains;
- 2) USACIL-HI personnel lying to previous Congressional committees; and
- 3) Premature closure of a criminal investigation by the United States Army Criminal Investigation Command.

The substantiation of even a portion of the allegations would have been an embarrassment to the Department of Defense.

Mr. Chairman, I have already addressed some of the problems that exist within CIL-HI. Let me address them further.

Although there was a Congressional hearing concerning the CIL-HI's operation, certain issues were never resolved. These include:

1. Review each of the remains identifications made through the utilization of a procedure called "Morphological Approximation" which has no scientific foundation, and is not a recognized procedure by the United States Anthropological community.

2. What were the results of the preliminary inquiry conducted by the United States Army Criminal Investigation Command with regard to Dr. Sam Dunlap's complaint. Dr. Dunlap testified before Congress that the investigation was shut down prematurely, by order of the Secretary of the Army.

The House Congressional committee did not follow-up on Dr. Dunlap's allegation, but merely accepted U.S. Department of Army testimony that the investigation was not prematurely closed.

In subsequent interviews I conducted with the CID investigators who ran the investigation of CIL-HI, and with the case officer for the CIL-HI investigation, who was stationed at the Headquarters of the CID Command, confirmed Dr. Dunlap's allegation that the investigation was closed prematurely.

The consensus of opinion of the CID investigators and case officer involved in the CIL-HI investigation felt the reason the investigation was prematurely closed was that the results would have embarrassed the US Government.

3. Certain U.S. government officials who testified before the House Congressional hearings lied. Documentation, which I will provide for the record, in the form of personal correspondence from various personnel employed, clearly show this duplicity.

(B) Finally, the "examination" of CIL-HI procedures conducted by a panel hired by the Department of Army may have reached an invalid conclusion. The participants of this "examination" made a basic, and perhaps, faulty assumption about each of the identification of remains they reviewed.

The assumption this panel made was that the examination results reviewed were accurate, based on a review of case documents, not the actual remains. It was assumed by this panel that all relevant medical information for each case was accurate.

However, when one of the panel members at a later date had the opportunity to actually review remains of some these cases, he found great inconsistencies in the data in the case files, and the actual remains. Therefore, this panel member has asserted that the conclusion that the panel which he sat on, may possibly be invalid. The panel's conclusion was that while they recommended some changes in CIL-HI's operations, they felt that the integrity of CIL-HI's identifications was sound.

Mr. Chairman, members of the committee, again let me thank you for this opportunity to address the committee.

SUBJECT: Pathet Lao Knowledgeability on U.S. PWs

1. The enclosed report provides a summation of information held by DIA regarding the degree of knowledgeability possessed by the Pathet Lao on U.S. personnel unaccounted for in Laos.

2. In part four of the report, it is indicated that Appendix H displayed an ID card showing only the top portion of an individual's head. It has now been determined that this individual is [REDACTED], USA (killed-in-action/body not recovered), who was a member of the C-47 crew downed over the Plaines des Jarres area of Laos on 23 March 1967.

PATHET LAO KNOWLEDGEABILITY
REGARDING U.S. UNACCOUNTED-FOR PERSONNEL

This document summarizes information held by DIA regarding the degree of knowledgeability possessed by the Pathet Lao (PL) on U.S. personnel unaccounted for in Laos. This information will be presented in three major sections: (1) Past Pathet Lao Statements regarding U.S. PW/MIAs; (2) Recent (after 1973) Pathet Lao Statements concerning Knowledgeability of U.S. PW/MIAs; (3) Recent Information reporting PL Efforts to Obtain Information on, and Remains of, U.S. Personnel. Additionally, a detailed evaluation of recently acquired Pathet Lao films which demonstrate PW/MIA knowledgeability will be presented.

Prior to the cessation of hostilities in Laos, the Pathet Lao had, on many occasions, made statements which tend to indicate that they had knowledge of U.S. PWs in that country. Enclosure 1 provides a compendium of such Pathet Lao statements.

In sharp contrast to these pronouncements, the Pathet Lao have, since the termination of Operation Homecoming, claimed to have no knowledge of U.S. personnel unaccounted for in Laos. Enclosure 2 illustrates and briefly evaluates recent (after 1973) Pathet Lao statements concerning their knowledgeability of U.S. unaccounted-for personnel.

Within the past year, a number of reports have been received which indicate that the present Lao Government has initiated efforts to search for the remains of unaccounted-for U.S. personnel. Enclosure 3 provides a summary of the information contained in these reports.

Recently, Pathet Lao propaganda films were obtained through intelligence channels. A few of these films contained very short segments which show that the Lao possess information on U.S. personnel lost in Laos. Enclosure 4 provides a summary of the information depicted on these films.

PAST PATHET LAO STATEMENTS REGARDING U.S. PWs

- In September 1968, Soth Petrasy, who was at that time, the permanent Pathet Lao representative in Vientiane, told a U.S. official that "pilots are generally kept near the area in which their plane is downed and therefore may be found throughout Laos from the south to the north."

- During a conversation with U.S. personnel and Soth on 1 May 1971, Soth was asked if the Pathet Lao had not released a list of prisoners similar to that released by North Vietnam. Soth said that the situation in Laos was different from that in North Vietnam because bombing of North Vietnam had ceased. He added that in Laos there is no means of communication between villages even under normal conditions. Soth stated that it was often not possible because of U.S. air activity to reach the site of a downed plane to ascertain the fate of the pilot. For these reasons, Soth ventured, it was impossible for the Pathet Lao to compile a complete list. At this meeting, he further stated that prisoners were being held in various regions of Laos and were well treated.

- In the course of a February 1972 interview, Soth made a statement to the effect "that some tens of prisoners are presently being held" by the Pathet Lao.

- During an April 1972 interview, Soth spoke about prisoners, including many U.S. airmen, being detained in secured areas inside various caves in northern Laos.

- On 21 April 1972, Soth reportedly stated that "there are many American PWs held in liberated areas of Laos," but he would not provide specific figures.

- During an April 1972 interview with a Swedish correspondent, Prince Souphanouvong, formerly the Chairman of the Lao Patriotic Front Central Committee and currently the President of the People's Democratic Republic of Laos, was asked to comment on the Pathet Lao policy toward captured enemy soldiers and American pilots. In response, Prince Souphanouvong made the following statement:

"The LPP (Lao Patriotic Front) has made public a concrete policy toward enemy soldiers or agents captured or giving themselves up, including GIs. All the American pilots engaged in bombings or toxic chemical sprays of Lao territory are considered criminals and enemies of the Lao people. But once captured, they have been treated in accordance with the humane policy of the LPP. The question of enemy captives, including U.S. pilots, will be settled immediately after the U.S. stops its intervention and aggression in Laos first, and foremost, ends the bombing of Laos territory."

Prince Souphanouvong's statement, together with statements made by Soth Petrasy, indicate that the Pathet Lao held American prisoners.

RECENT PATHET LAO STATEMENTS CONCERNING THEIR KNOWLEDGEABILITY OF U.S. UNACCOUNTED-FOR PERSONNEL

*at 5th Avenue +
Hiroshi
Hiroshi*

- On 6 April 1973, after the completion of Operation Homecoming, a U.S. Senator met with Soth Petrasay, who was the permanent Pathet Lao representative in Vientiane. During the course of their discussion, Soth stated: "The LPP (Lao People's Forces) has released all U.S. prisoners captured in Laos." However, the nine U.S. personnel who had been captured in Laos and who were released in Hanoi during Operation Homecoming were all captured by North Vietnamese forces operating in Laos and moved to North Vietnam for detention. There were a small number of U.S. personnel who were known to have been captured by the Pathet Lao who were not accounted for during Operation Homecoming. There is no information on these individuals to indicate they were alive subsequent to 1968.

- The only U.S. prisoner acknowledged by the Pathet Lao since Operation Homecoming was Mr. Emmet J. Kay, a U.S. civilian, who was captured on 7 May 1973 and released on 18 September 1974. On 6 September 1974, Phoumi Vongvichit, the PL Deputy Prime Minister, stated categorically to then U.S. Ambassador Charles Whitehouse that Mr. Kay was the only prisoner being held by the PL. However, it was subsequently ascertained that another U.S. civilian, Mr. Charles Dean, and his Australian companion, Mr. Neil Sharnan, had been captured in Laos in early September 1974. To date, the Pathet Lao have denied any knowledge of these two individuals although there was conclusive evidence that they were still alive as of February 1975.

- On 19 and 20 March 1977, the Presidential Commission on Missing and Unaccounted-for in Southeast Asia visited Vientiane. At that time Noupban Sithpassay, Lao Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs made the following statement:

- "Now I wish to assure you that there are no Americans who have been captured and are alive in Laos. The Americans that the Lao have captured during the war have all been returned to the U.S."

However, as was previously mentioned, the latter part of his statement is definitely contrary to known facts.

REPORTS OF LAO EFFORTS TO SEARCH FOR THE REMAINS OF UNACCOUNTED-FOR U.S. PERSONNEL

Information received over the years indicates that the Pathet Lao did not have an organized system to account for enemy crash/gravesites. However, during the Presidential Commission's visit to Vientiane in March 1977, Lao officials stated that there was great difficulty in finding MIA information and remains in the rugged terrain, particularly in view of the country's small population and lack of material means. The Lao Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs assured the commission that "the Government of Laos has ordered before and will order again for the people of Laos to seek information and remains." During both formal and informal meetings, responsible Lao officials agreed to receive further MIA case files and other pertinent material to assist in their search.

In recent months, information has been received through intelligence channels which report that the Lao have initiated efforts to locate and exhume the remains of unaccounted-for U.S. personnel in various areas of Laos. These reports indicate that the Pathet Lao investigations have been primarily concentrated in traditionally Pathet Lao controlled territory. An analysis of the information appears generally accurate with relation to the type of aircraft involved and the incident locations.

SUBJ: EVALUATION OF RPT MK86-102
MSC FOR MR. CHILDRESS

4. JCRC LIAISON BANGKOK TH 151000Z JAN 87

1. ANALYSIS OF INFORMATION PROVIDED BY SOURCE
OF REF A, REVEALS A PROBABLE CORRELATION TO REFNO 0872-0-01.

2. REFNO 0872: ON 22 OCTOBER 1967, LIEUTENANT, JUNIOR GRADE, JAMES E. DOOLEY WAS FLYING AN A-4 ATTACK BOMBER. THE AIRCRAFT, SERIAL NUMBER 150115, CRASHED IN THE GULF OF TONKIN IN THE VICINITY OF GRID COORDINATES XNR60693, APPROXIMATELY 2000 METERS SOUTH OF DO SON, HAIPHONG PROVINCE, VIETNAM. NO PARACHUTES WERE SEEN AND NO ELECTRONIC BEACON SIGNALS WERE HEARD. A THOROUGH AERIAL SEARCH OF THE AREA WAS CONDUCTED, BUT THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE OF SURVIVAL. UPON HIS REPATRIATION AFTER BEING HELD PRISONER OF WAR, ONE AMERICAN SERVICEMAN STATED THAT HE HAD EITHER SEEN LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S NAME WRITTEN ON A PRISON WALL OR HEARD IT WHILE A PRISONER IN HANOI. A FOLDER DETAILING THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S CASE WAS PRESENTED TO OFFICIALS OF THE SOCIALIST REPUBLIC OF VIETNAM BY JCRC DURING A POW/MIA TECHNICAL MEETING HELD IN AUGUST 1984. LIEUTENANT DOOLEY IS CARRIED IN THE PRESUMPTIVE STATUS OF DEAD, BODY NOT RECOVERED.

3. LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S INCIDENT OCCURRED WITHIN FOUR KILOMETERS OF GRID COORDINATES XNR791163. THE TIME OF DAY AND MONTH CORRELATE TO LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S INCIDENT; HOWEVER, THE SOURCE REPORTED THE INCIDENT AS OCCURRING IN 1968 AND THE ACTUAL YEAR OF THE INCIDENT WAS 1967. THE SOURCE'S REPORT OF AIRCRAFT SEARCHING FOR THE DOWNED PILOT CORRELATES WITH THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF LIEUTENANT DOOLEY'S INCIDENT.

4. (U) THIS EVALUATION MAY BE RELEASED TO NOK BY COMNAVHILPERSCOM UPON DELETION OF SOURCE'S NAME FROM PARAGRAPH ONE. A SANITIZED COPY OF RFP A FOR RELEASE TO NOK BY COMNAVHILPERSCOM WILL BE FORWARDED VIA REGISTERED MAIL.

To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Captain J. M. Hickerson, USN (Ret) - POW 22 December 1967 to 14 March 1973. I do not believe that the captured American pilot, subject of JCRC Report HK86-102, was me. There are too many discrepancies between the JCRC Report HK86-102 and my capture:

- 1.) I was shot down on 22 December, not October or November;
- 2.) My parachute was all white, not red, white and blue;
- 3.) If I had landed 50 meters from an airfield, I would have been aware of it;
- 4.) I swam no more than 50 yards, not 200 meters;
- 5.) I did not attempt to use my pistol;
- 6.) There were no waves;
- 7.) I was transported away on the back of a bicycle, not in a sidecar, and I was never in an automobile;
- 8.) I was wearing Marine fatigues (2-piece), not a one piece flight suit;
- 9.) There was a solid, approximately 800 ft. overcast in the area, making it unlikely that 5 or 6 jets plus a helicopter would have been flying under an overcast that close to Do Son.

Despite the fact that the location and date of the described capture was approximately mine, considering the above, I do not believe that the captured pilot reported in JCRC Report HK86-102, was me.

Very Respectfully,

 J. M. Hickerson

1. This is in response to Mrs. Elizabeth H. Dooley's questions she had at the National League of Families Conference in July. She has discrepancies about some of the facts concerning her son's case. Would you review the file on Lieutenant Commander Dooley and check to see if any of her claims can be validated. Please send your response directly to us. The questions are listed below.

(1) Please check to see if there is any pattern to the crash site investigations in the Hanoi/Haiphong area.

(2) In reference to JCRC msg 251800Z Jul 88; In reference to para #7 - CDR Hickerson stated that the report referenced was not his and he would rewrite the deposition, was the reinterview conducted? If so what were the results. Was the source mentioned proven to be reliable?

(3) Check to see if LCDR Dooley is on the top priority 70 name discrepancy list, have there been any negotiations attempted since 1987 on LCDR Dooley case?

(4) Do we need official deposition of this fact to have report possibly correlated to LCDR Dooley?

2. If you have any questions, please feel free to reach me toll-free at 1-800-443-9298.

Dear Mr. Jarrett:

The following information is provided in response to your telephone request and Mr. McDowell's letter.

The attached documentation should be reviewed first to establish the general background. It represents part of the records that have been accumulated since March 1983 through the present date. Much of the supporting documentation is in the hands of other persons; however, can be obtained on reasonable notice.

It was not until January 1984 that I reluctantly accepted the probability that individuals at the responsibility level of Mr. Childress were involved in the activities described herein. Since that time I have had occasion to be in a position to verify that Mr. Childress is an active, willing participant in these activities.

During my analysis of events over the last eighteen months one thing has become very visible. There is a serious misuse of official position and authority by Mr. Childress and by other persons within the Department of Defense including Mr. R. L. Armitage, Assistant Secretary of Defense.

The following is a general breakdown of some issues and general supporting information for each. Names and contact information of witnesses to each point and supporting documentation is available and can be obtained on reasonable notice as needed.

In the following breakdown when I state Childress, I am referring to Mr. R. T. Childress of the National Security Council, his associates and persons under his direction and/or control.

Illegal Political Relationship - Childress and 'Center for POW/MIA Accountability'.

An illegal political controlling relationship exists between Mr. Childress and the Center for POW/MIA Accountability in such a manner that the 'Center' acts for Mr. Childress and is his private force. The 'Center' is described as a Non-profit Tax-exempt corporation based in Washington, DC. Some of the activities of the 'Center' are described herein.

Supporting Information:

Representatives of the 'Center' acknowledged that they were political in nature with a political mission and scheduled to go out of business in November 1984. This statement was made during a question and answer session after a presentation to 'Project Freedom' in Phoenix, Arizona.

Representatives of the 'Center' stated that they had access and approval at the highest level including the NSC with instant access to an unnamed individual on the White House staff. This statement was made several times but specifically during their trip to California in July 1983 and in Las Vegas during October 1983.

Childress acknowledged on January 13, 1984 that the 'Center' was his investigative group and his Public Awareness Briefing team.

Childress acknowledged on January 13, 1984 that representatives of the 'Center' visited his office and he approved their travel to California to talk to my associates and me.

See the attached documentation for more information on this trip.

Release of Classified Information

Childress has willfully, knowingly and illegally authorized the release of, released or provided information that was classified and furnished in confidence to the Defense Intelligence Agency to persons without a need to know and who did not hold a valid security clearance.

Supporting Information:

On his trip to California in July 1983, Allen could quote 'word for word' information provided in confidence to DIA. When queried, he said he had received it from his 'high level' contacts within the USG.

Childress stated on January 13, 1984 that personnel of the 'Center' were provided with all reports from all sources to evaluate and investigate as appropriate. This apparently included whatever reports were prepared by DIA during my discussions with them during June 1983.

I have been assured by representatives of DIA that they did not give out the information provided to them however they had no control over the information after it left their office.

Other cases of selective release have been reported and appear to be true.

Misuse of Office and Authority

Mr. Childress has used his office for political purposes to interfere and intervene in the activities of private organizations.

Supporting Information:

Mr. Childress has condoned and possibly approved the use of attempted blackmail, threats of official prosecution, threats of physical harm and other actions by his agents (Personnel of the 'Center', its advisors, associates and consultants) against myself and others. Threats of physical harm were made by Mr. Monaghan and others against myself and my associates. Threats of prosecution were made by Mr. Allan and Monaghan. Mr. Allen stated that if we did not do as they wanted we would be ruined.

Mr. Childress has used his position, office and authority to deliberately interfere with and influence the actions of private non-profit organizations interested in the POW/MIA issue. This has apparently been done to suppress any independent inquiry or publicity that may not support his public position on the matter. Mr. Richard L. Armitage, Assistant Secretary of Defense has also been involved in this matter.

Childress has used personal intimidation and threats of governmental sanctions against the League in an effort to insure that Ann Griffiths remain as the Executive Director of the National League of Families (A paid position as an employee of the League). Mr. Richard L. Armitage, Assistant Secretary of Defense has also used this approach.

See attached documentation for additional information.

Violation of Civil Rights of myself and others

An extensive Character Assassination has been conducted against myself and my associates thru several sources but they appear to be coordinated thru the 'Center'. Everyone involved is associated with the 'Center'.

Supporting Information:

Representatives of the 'Center' (Butler and Allen) have told third parties (in person and via interstate telephone) not to do business with me or my company as we were under investigation by the FBI for illegal acts and anti-American activity.

Representatives of the 'Center', their advisors and consultants have deliberately, knowingly and willfully conducted a character assassination campaign against my associates and myself. They have repeatedly told third parties that we are 'under investigation for illegal, criminal and un-American acts'. This has occurred from September 1983 until the present date.

See attached documentation for additional information.

Threats of Damaging Official Actions:

It has become apparent during the last few months that the threats expressed by Mr. Allen and other persons associated with the 'Center' had merit and that I should have been more aware that they were serious.

Supporting Information:

During their trip to California in July 1984 Mr. Allen and Mr. Hebert stated that they had 'arrangements' with both the FBI and IRS. The FBI would perform checks on all personnel they were interested in and perform other services as needed. IRS would 'take care' of them and insure that they had no tax problems and provide other services that were not named.

Allen stated several times that if we did not do what they wanted that things would go very bad for us.

From the events of the last few months it is apparent that there is an attempt to carry out these threats.

See attached documentation for more information.

Illegal Surveillance

Several times during the last few months I have been informed by different persons that Mr. Childress and/or DIA Representatives have approached people known to be interested in POW/MIA activities and asked them to join groups and report back on the intentions and actions of these groups.

Supporting Information:

It is my understanding that this type of 'undercover' activity is unlawful in general and that the military in specific is not allowed to infiltrate civilian groups or conduct undercover investigations of same.

Statements of individuals approached are available.

Comments

It has become evident that if a person (or group) does not embrace the position expressed by current USG Representatives (Mr. Childress and DIA)) and they are active in the issue of POW/MIA affairs that they are then in for trouble. It apparently does not matter if a person is acting in good faith or is just expressing a political position.

Character assassination appears to be a standard tactic employed by the USG Representatives and their agents. The comments made about myself and others with whom I have come into contact over the last few months have ranged from 'Liars' to 'Anti-American Radicals' to 'Senile' and worse.

The charges I am making are serious and are not being made without a lot of thought and investigation. It is my intention to continue until the matter is resolved regardless of expense or time.

Additional information is available to fully support all charges I am making however is in safekeeping at this time.

I sincerely hope that your office will be able to determine who is responsible for these illegal actions and can take appropriate action.

Please advise me if I can provide any additional information.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Fred Fielding
Counsel to the President
The White House
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. Fielding:

Your assistance is respectfully requested in having the matters described in the attached material investigated. Basic documentation on these matters has been provided to DOJ and DIA.

The events over the last year have forced me to accept that some officials of the USG are willfully and deliberately maintaining a policy of deception and self interest which is not in accordance with the expressed policy of the current administration nor in the interests of the United States.

This policy includes preventing information and reports from reaching the president; taking aggressive reprisal action against those who express disagreement or do not support their position; suppressing data which is not in agreement with their interests and illegal political interference in the affairs of private organizations.

The reprisal actions have included threats of prosecution, character assassination, violation of civil rights, intimidation, interference in commerce and other criminal acts.

For over six months I have been trying to work within the established legal channels to have an official investigation started. Until my TELEX to the Attorney General I could not even obtain acknowledgment that I had made a complaint.

With all due respect to the Attorney General's office and personnel I feel that my complaint will be buried and that no action will be taken unless I continue to press the matter thru every channel possible.

As the current focus of my complaint is within the NSC and DOD I hope that any action you may consider would be by persons who are not under the control of nor subject to review by persons within the NSC or DOD.

YOUR ASSISTANCE IS RESPECTFULLY REQUESTED IN OBTAINING AN ANSWER TO MY PREVIOUS REQUESTS MADE VIA MAIL ON MAR 10 1984, ON APR 6 1984 AND AGAIN ON MAY 17 1984, FOLLOWED BY MANY PHONE CALLS DURING MAY, JUNE, JULY AND AUG.

MY REQUESTS WERE: 1) THAT I BE ADVISED IF 'THE CENTER FOR POW/MIA ACCOUNTABILITY' HAD A VALID TAX-EMPT STATUS AND, 2) THAN AN INVESTIGATION BE CONDUCTED INTO THE POLITICAL CONTROLLING RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN MR. R.T. CHILDRESS OF THE N.S.C. AND THE CENTER; AND INTO SPECIFIC CRIMINAL ACTIONS TAKEN BY HIM AND/OR HIS AGENTS.

I REGRET TO SAY THAT THERE HAS BEEN NO RESPONSE OF ANY TYPE TO MY REQUEST BY YOUR SERVICE.

AS PROVEN BY RECENT HISTORY 'STONEWALLING' AND 'COVERUP' ARE NOT NEW TO OUR GOVERNMENT BUT POLITICAL MISUSE OF THE IRS WAS SUPPOSED TO BE 'IN THE PAST'.

MANY PERSONS HAVE ADVISED ME OF THE VINDICTIVE ACTION YOUR SERVICE MAY TAKE BECAUSE OF MY COMPLAINT BUT I WILL PURSUE THIS MATTER BY ALL POSSIBLE LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL MEANS WITHIN MY POWER.

I ONLY HOPE THE CONSTITUTION STILL MEANS WE HAVE THE RIGHT TO SEEK REDRESS OF A WRONG AND THAT IT DOES NOT PLACE 'PUBLIC SERVANTS' ABOVE THE LAW.

YOUR ASSISTANCE IS RESPECTFULLY REQUESTED IN OBTAINING INFORMATION REGARDING MY COMPLAINT OF CRIMINAL ACTIVITY BY MEMBERS OF THE ADMINISTRATION AND/OR THEIR AGENTS.

MY REQUEST WAS THAT AN INVESTIGATION BE CONDUCTED INTO THE POLITICAL CONTROLLING RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN MR. R CHILDRESS OF THE N.S.C. AND A NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATION AND ALSO INTO SPECIFIC CRIMINAL ACTIONS TAKEN BY HIM AND/OR HIS AGENTS OR ASSOCIATES.

THERE APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN NO ACTION TAKEN BY YOUR DEPARTMENT. AS FAR AS I CAN DETERMINE NO PERSON WITH DIRECT KNOWLEDGE OF THE ACTIONS DESCRIBED HAS EVER BEEN ASKED A QUESTION OR INTERVIEWED. IT HAS BEEN OVER SIX MONTHS SINCE MY FIRST WRITTEN COMPLAINT ADDRESSED TO YOU WAS MAILED. ALSO I AM NOW INFORMED THAT MR. JARRETT 'IS NOT AND WILL NOT BE AVAILABLE' WHEN I CALL TO CHECK ON THE STATUS.

THE ILLEGAL ACTIONS (POLITICAL AND CRIMINAL) CONTINUE AND THE PERSONS INVOLVED REMAIN IN THEIR POSITIONS AND CONTINUE TO ABUSE THEIR OFFICE AND POSITION OF TRUST BY THEIR ACTS.

AS PROVEN BY RECENT HISTORY 'STONEWALLING' AND 'COVERUP' ARE NOT NEW TO OUR GOVERNMENT BUT THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT IS SUPPOSED TO BE IMMUNE TO 'POLITICAL MISUSE' - AT LEAST IN THIS ADMINISTRATION.

IF THE ACTIONS I HAVE BROUGHT TO YOUR ATTENTION DO IN FACT REPRESENT THE POLICY OF THE USG THEN WE NO LONGER HAVE A 'GOVERNMENT OF LAW' OR CONSTITUTIONAL PROCESS.

MANY PERSONS HAVE ADVISED ME OF THE VINDICTIVE ACTION THAT MAY BE TAKEN AND THE PERSONAL DANGER INCURRED BECAUSE OF MY COMPLAINT BUT I WILL PURSUE THIS MATTER BY ALL POSSIBLE LEGAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL MEANS WITHIN MY POWER. MEMORANDUM

TO: Kris Kolesnik
FROM: Harvey Andrews
SUBJECT: Review of Public Integrity file, Department of Justice
Ref: Mead complaint

On August 28, 1989, the Office of Public Integrity, Department of Justice, was asked to produce its file on the investigation of a complaint filed by John R. Mead, re: unlawful surveillance by Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA), etc. Mr. Jack Keeny produced a three page declination of prosecution based on Mead's complaint, stating that this paper summarized their inquiry. Mr. Keeny would not allow the paper to leave his office.

Upon review by both Kris Kolesnik and myself, the declination paper was found to be a superficial inquiry of the complaint by Mead which was conducted by Defense Department's oversight office. DIA through the oversight inquiry never denied a surveillance of Mead, but stated it did nothing illegal. The portion of the complaint dealing with a civil rights violation was not referred to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), nor was there any evidence that other potential criminal violations in Mead's complaint were ever investigated by FBI. The paper was a self-serving document that cleared DIA of any wrongdoing.

Mr. Keeny was asked to provide the full file on this matter and he said he would have to take it up with some unidentified office. Subsequently, Mr. Keeny called and said the complete file would have to be withheld because of the "third agency rule."

ENCLOSURE J

The Chairman: Thank you very much, Mr. Usry.

Let me just say that I think that everyone respects your commitment to this issue. You have certainly put a lot of time and energy into it.

One of the questions I have, having looked at the report, is, and I do not want to say this sweepingly about the report, but there are some statements that I think make some sort of leap to a conclusion that may be sort of all encompassing in its nature.

Let me give you an example, for instance. On Page 5-3 to 5-4 you talk about the issue of the prisoners left in Laos, and you make the following statement, quote, "Notwithstanding the fact that no U.S. POWs held by Pathet Lao forces have ever been repatriated." I believe that is on Page 5-4, down in the last paragraph.

"These statements were made notwithstanding the eighty men cited by Henry Kissinger held by the North Vietnamese, and notwithstanding the fact that no U.S. POWs held by the Pathet Lao forces have ever been repatriated."

But, in fact, it is true, is it not, that nine Americans were turned over to the U.S. in 1973 from Laos, who were nominally Pathet Lao prisoners? Those were counted as repatriated from Laos.

Mr. Usry: Sir, it's my understanding that the nine people -- the nine prisoners that were repatriated were, in Dooley, they would have communicated it to us?

Mr. Usry: No, sir, I'm not aware of it.

Senator McCain: You were not aware of that. Well, if you were not aware of that fact, Mr. Usry, you did a very incomplete job, because you could have asked any one of the POWs, former POWs, or asked anyone who was involved in the issue, that our primary goal was to keep track of all the names of anyone that we had any information about.

So your allegation that the two Thai special forces identified Dooley's photograph as a fellow inmate is false.

"Finally, a propaganda photograph of captured U.S. pilots in Hanoi dated after Dooley was shot down shows a partial profile of a person that strongly resembles Dooley." What photograph was that?

Mr. Usry: Sir, if you would submit that question for the record, I would be more than happy to answer it after I consult my notes.

Senator McCain: You made a very serious allegation here, Mr. Usry, and I am surprised that you would not even know what photograph it is.

Mr. Usry: Well, I think the difference between your information and my information, sir, is, one, your information is firsthand and mine is secondary, dependent upon other people.

However, you have only brought in two examples or two

1 instances concerning the Dooley issue and there are more than 2 those that caused us to come to the conclusion that we did.

3 Senator McCain: "A U.S. POW who had been repatriated
4 said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell
5 in Hanoi." Who was that POW?

6 Mr. Ury: That information has not been provided to us
7 because the Department of Defense, at the time we were doing
8 this inquiry, would not share any information concerning POWs
9 with us unless there was a Senator present with us at the time
10 we were going through the documents.

11 The Senators' schedules precluded us from looking at 12 those documents for more than a four-day period.

13 Senator McCain: So your allegation --

14 The Chairman: Will you yield for a minute? I'm confused 15 by that?

16 Senator McCain: So his allegation basically, Mr.

17 Chairman, has been relayed to him with no basis in fact.

18 Mr. Ury: I don't agree with that statement at all, 19 Senator.

20 Senator McCain: What facts do you have to back up your 21 allegation that a U.S. POW had been -- who had been 22 repatriated said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a 24 Mr. Ury: Besides that information, which was provided

3 Do you have any factual information on that?

4 Mr. Ury: With me?

5 Senator McCain: Any knowledge of that fact.

6 Mr. Ury: Again, I will address the statement I made

8 Senator McCain: I see. And, finally, "A Communist

12 knowledge of that?

13 Mr. Ury: I have the photograph.

14 Senator McCain: You have the photograph?

15 Mr. Ury: I do.

16 Senator McCain: Where is that photograph?

17 Mr. Ury: It's up in my office.

18 Senator McCain: Yet the DIA and no government agency has 19 that photograph, according to them.

20 Mr. Ury: Well, that may very well be the case, keeping 21 in mind that not all information concerning all missing
22 prisoners goes to DIA because there's a lack of the faith in 23 the way they have operated in the past.

24 Senator McCain: I see. It goes to you?

8 Senator McCain: I would like for you to answer the COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

WASHINGTON, DC 20510-6225

May 23, 1991

Dear Colleague:

On October 29, I released an interim report prepared by the Minority Staff of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations based upon an on-going investigation of the POW/MIA issue. That investigation has continued. It was not, and was never intended to be, a search for specific POW/MIAs.

Such an effort would be beyond the scope of the resources available to the Minority. Rather it was an attempt to ascertain whether the agencies of the U.S. government responsible for POW/MIAs were doing the job they were supposed to do—that is, to find any POW/MIAs who might still be alive.

The interim conclusions are very disturbing. After examining hundreds of documents relating to the raw intelligence, and interviewing many families and friends of POW/MIAs, the Minority Staff concluded that, despite public pronouncements to the contrary, the real, internal policy of the U.S. government was to act upon the presumption that all MIAs were dead.

As a result, the Minority Staff found, any evidence that suggested an MIA might be alive was uniformly and arbitrarily rejected, and all efforts were directed towards finding and identifying remains of dead personnel, even though the U.S. government's techniques of identification were inadequate and deeply flawed.

These conclusions, although welcomed by the families and friends of POW/MIAs who had direct experience with the U.S. government's POW establishment, were hotly rejected by that establishment.

However, on February 12 the Chief of the Special Office for Prisoners of War and Missing in Action (POW/MIA) resigned. Colonel Millard A. Peck, a man who had accepted the position with high motives and a sense of deep dedication, felt that he could no longer fulfill the demands of duty, honor, and integrity under the policies which he was asked to implement.

In a detailed and forthright letter, which did not become public until May, Colonel Peck confirmed that a "cover-up" has been in progress. He spoke of a "mindset to debunk." He said that there was no effort to pursue "live sightings." He stated that "any soldier left in Vietnam, even inadvertently, was, in fact, abandoned years ago." Lastly, he criticized the U.S. government's treatment of the families and friends of the POW/MIAs.

The entire text of Colonel Peck's letter appears — verbatim — at the end of this report.

The fact that Colonel Peck's conclusions were so similar to the conclusions of the Minority Staff is a matter of regret, rather than a vindication. I had hoped that the Minority Staff investigators would be able to alter their preliminary findings, because the implications of a deliberate effort by the U.S. government to deceive the American people is a matter that all of us would prefer to believe unthinkable.

However, as the Minority Staff pursued its investigations, it became clear that the U.S. experience with the Vietnam POW/MIAs is not unique in history. Echoes of similar experiences in dealing with other, and earlier Communist regimes on the subject of POW/MIAs came up with increasing frequency. Although substantial portions of the current report had already been prepared, I directed the staff to track down the historical precedents. I felt that these precedents were absolutely necessary to an understanding of the present problems, even though it necessarily delayed the release of the report.

Of course, this fundamental historical research required a massive undertaking to find the original documents, most of them formerly classified, in the National Archives and in the issuing agencies. Accordingly, readers will find in this report something which has never before been attempted: An historical analysis of the fate of U.S. POW/MIAs in the hands of the Bolshevik regime after World War I, the Soviet regime after World War II, the North Korean regime after the Korean War, and the Vietnamese regime after the Vietnam War.

In each case, the same dismaying scenario appears: On the Communist side, the regimes denied holding U.S. prisoners, contrary to many credible reports, while in fact they were holding the U.S. POW/MIAs as slave laborers and as reserve bargaining chips to get diplomatic recognition and financial assistance. On the U.S. side, our government downplayed or denied the reports of POW/MIAs, and failed to take adequate steps to prove or disprove the reports, while elements in our government pursued policies intended to make diplomatic recognition and financial support of the revolutionary regimes possible.

I find this evidence convincing; doubters should examine the cables and classified memoranda cited in Part I which tell the full story. Part II examines anecdotal evidence which the Minority Staff has chosen to illustrate the massive problems with the U.S. government's handling of the POW/MIA issue — problems which were only suggested in the Interim Report.

While investigation into the present problems continues, it is evident from the work already done by the Minority Staff that more time and more resources need to be devoted to the work. Senator Bob Smith (R-New Hampshire), a long-time stalwart in the ranks of those dedicated to the POW/MIA cause, has introduced S. Res. 82, to establish a Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs. S. Res. 82 has already attracted wide bipartisan support, and deserves the support of every Senator.¹

¹ Since the first printing of this report, the United States Senate unanimously agreed to create a Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs to further investigate U.S. Policy toward POW/MIA matters.

This report has required many hundreds of hours of work, not only from the Minority Staff, but from many dedicated persons who shared their experiences and research with the Minority Staff. I would be especially remiss were I not to mention Dr. Harvey Andrews, Thomas Ashworth, John M. G. Brown, and Mark Sauter of CBS affiliate, KIRO-TV, Seattle, Washington. Needless to say, the conclusions are those of the Minority Staff, and not necessarily of those of Messrs. Andrews, Ashworth, Brown, and Sauter.

Sincerely,

Jesse Helms

PROLOGUE TO PART I

Throughout this century, the United States, as a nation, has anguished over the plight of American prisoners of war, both known and missing. The emotional ordeal of the families, the debt which the nation owes to those who have put their lives on the line for their countries, and the human dignity of each and every single soldier, or sailor, or airman ought to have an incalculable bearing on our national policies and our honor.

On the record, the U.S. government has professed to give these concerns "the highest national priority." Off the record, this priority vanishes. Instead, other considerations emerge: Grand visions of a foreign policy of peace and reconciliation; desire for a new economic order of trade and investment; ideological imperatives to downplay the hostility of antagonistic systems; and the natural tendency of the bureaucracy to eliminate its workload by filing cases marked "closed" instead of finding the people.

Last October, the Minority Staff published an Interim Report based on hundreds of interviews and reviews of raw intelligence data in Department of Defense (DOD) files. The Interim Report suggested that DOD was more interested in manipulating and managing the issue than in finding living POWs listed as missing. But as the investigation proceeded, the weight of evidence of failure—a failure of the U.S. Government to meet its sacred trust—became overpowering.

Was it really possible that officials in the Executive Branch charged with the solution of POW/MIA issues could have failed so miserably to respond to the needs of the American people? Was it simply that the emotions of the POW/MIA- concerned community were making an objective appraisal of DOD's work impossible?

The resignation of the director of DOD Special Office for POW/MIA Matters, Col. Millard A. Peck, submitted on February 12, but made public only last month, offered unexpected and extraordinary support for the findings of the Interim Report. (Col. Peck's memorandum of resignation appears verbatim as the Epilogue to this report.) But the question remained: Was it credible that such a failure could occur? To answer that question, it was necessary to turn to history.

PROLOGUE TO PART I

THE GULF WAR

The Gulf War is not yet history, but the brief span of fighting provided several examples of the inability of the U.S. Government to cope with the problems of accounting for the missing--examples which are still fresh from the newspapers.

Inaccurate battle casualty reporting resulted in the next-of-kin of Daniel J. Stomaris and Troy A. Dunlap being officially notified by DOD that the soldiers had been Killed in Action (KIA); in fact, these men were slightly wounded or taken prisoner by the enemy. Several other soldiers--Army Major Rhonda L. Corum, for example--were taken prisoner by the enemy but were not listed as POW or MIA or KIA; their subsequent release by the Iraqis came as a surprise to the American public and the national media.

But the most bizarre case was that of SPC Melissa Rathbun-Nealy. SPC Rathbun-Nealy and SPC David Lockett were co-drivers of a HET (Heavy Equipment Transport), captured by Iraqi soldiers after their HET and another one became separated from a convoy. As the two vehicles proceeded north, they came under enemy fire. The second vehicle managed to escape, but Rathbun-Nealy and Lockett were surrounded and captured.

After her capture by Iraqi forces, Rathbun-Nealy's duty status was initially listed as "unknown," then changed to "missing." However, she was never listed as "missing in action" (MIA) or "prisoner of war" (POW). It should be noted that "missing," under U.S. Army regulations, is quite distinct from MIA. "Missing" is reserved for personnel unaccounted for in non-combat operations. From the Army's point of view, the convoy was a non-combat operation, even though it was under heavy enemy fire. Therefore, Rathbun-Nealy and Lockett were never listed as MIA or POW, even though the Army had information that they had been captured under fire. This distinction is an important illustration of how DOD uses technical distinctions to avoid a finding of POW/MIA.

In a letter to Mr. and Mrs. Leo Rathbun, Lt. Colonel J. G. Cole, Chief POW/MIA Affairs, demonstrates how DOD, even in real-time cases, fails to follow up obvious leads or to ask obvious questions. In the narrative that follows, it should be kept in mind that Rathbun-Nealy and Lockett must have been an astonishing pair of prisoners to the Iraqi mindset because Rathbun-Nealy is a Caucasian female, and Lockett is an African-American male. Since Corum was the only other U.S. female prisoner, it should not have been hard in Iraq to seek out a pair of prisoners fitting the description of a white female and a black male.

Colonel Cole wrote:

At approximately 3 pm, (January 30, 1991) just north of Khafji, the convoy drove by a Saudi M-60 tank that had recently received extensive battle damage and was partially blocking the road. The occupants of the second HET then heard two explosions and the sound of debris striking their vehicle, observed what they perceived to be enemy troops ahead near the archway into town, and immediately initiated a U-turn along the road. At this time they estimated that they were 100-150 meters behind the lead vehicle, which was continuing north. After completing the turn, the crew looked back and saw that the other HET (driven by Rathbun-Nealy and Lockett) had tried to turn about, but had become stuck. Melissa and SPC Lockett were observed to be still in their vehicle as the enemy troops approached. There was no indication that they attempted to return fire or flee.

PROLOGUE TO PART I

Last seen being surrounded by enemy troops, Rathbun-Nealy and Lockett were listed as "missing." But DOD had more information as well. Colonel Cole wrote further:

There were no signs of fighting or blood, but personal gear had been scattered around the area, and weapons were missing. As the Marines were searching around the vehicle shouting for the soldiers, they were confronted by several Iraqi foot soldiers at the HET and an armored personnel carrier approximately 50 meters north, headed in their direction. No shots were exchanged by the Marines who departed the area and called in attack helicopter support which destroyed the APC within 30 meters of the HET....The Marines returned to the area the following morning where they collected some of the personal equipment and found the vehicle running but found no trace of Melissa or SPC Lockett....During the battle in and around Khafji several Iraqi soldiers were captured.

One would assume that the capture of Iraqi soldiers in the area would have given the opportunity to find out positively whether or not the pair had been captured. And indeed the Iraqi soldiers gave such information:

Following interrogation of the enemy prisoners of war by Saudi forces, two reports were received. One concerned information provided by an Iraqi lieutenant who said he had witnessed the capture of an American male and female. He further stated that both had been injured and that the white female had sustained an injury to her arm. The second report received from Saudi forces concerned two other Iraqi prisoners of war from a captured patrol who indicated they had seen a white female and a black male near the city of Basrah, Kuwait [not far from the site of the abandoned HET].

To the lay observer, this sounds like a good "live-sighting" report, based on circumstances that almost exactly dovetail with the circumstances of the missing soldiers. But when Mr. Leo Rathbun asked Colonel Cole why his daughter was not listed as MIA, Cole replied that the Iraqi officer could not make "a positive identification"--as though there were hundreds of pairs of white female and black male soldiers captured in the area.

Colonel Cole explained further that the U.S. interrogators had no current picture of SPC Rathbun-Nealy to show the Iraqi officer (although of course her picture was appearing in every newspaper in the Western world.) Had they thought of it, no doubt DOD would have demanded that the Iraqi witnesses produce the fingerprints of the captured pair before accepting the live-sighting report as genuine.

Because there was no "positive identification" Rathbun-Nealy and Lockett could not be listed as POW/MIA. Had there been an extended war and extended negotiations to secure the return of prisoners, the name of neither one would have appeared on any list of POW/MIAs being sought. They were listed only as "missing," that is, unaccounted for but not known to be in enemy hands. Had a difficult negotiation been required to secure a return of listed POW/MIAs, Iraq need never have returned Rathbun-Nealy and Lockett because they were not on the list. Fortunately, the war was so brief and so powerful that all prisoners were returned without question.

The case of SPC Rathbun-Nealy and SPC Lockett is a vivid illustration to keep in mind when considering the bureaucratic mindset that refuses to go outside of artificial restrictions in order to find real people. If the case had been prolonged, if the report had come months or even years later, if the vivid memories of the event had gathered dust in DOD files, the same facts would have true.

 PROLOGUE TO PART I

But DOD would have dismissed the reports as unverified live-sightings and stamped their cases "presumed dead." This is an important case to keep in mind when examining the fragments of other cases left over from other wars.

THE HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

This report originally proposed to study the problem of POW/MIAs from the Vietnam War—or more properly, the Second Indochina War. Yet as more and more information became available, it became obvious that the concerns raised in the Interim Report released last October—the policy that there was "no evidence" of POW/MIAs, that all POW/MIAs should be presumed dead, that evidence to the contrary should be discredited and dismissed, and all of these combined with the determined pursuit only of remains of the dead, while dismissing hope of finding anyone alive—all formed a pattern with an uncanny similarity to earlier wars of this century.

Moreover the negotiating techniques of the adversary in the Vietnam War—a denial that POW/MIAs existed, a demand for diplomatic recognition and financial aid from the United States, a suggestion that POW/MIAs might be found if recognition and money were forthcoming—all of these had been seen before. And all of them had emerged in U.S. dealings with Communist regimes since 1917.

As a result, it was necessary to broaden the scope of this investigation to study the historical background. The study that follows is based upon an examination of hundreds of once-secret cables, instructions, and memoranda now in the National Archives and the files of appropriate agencies.

The study begins with a largely forgotten page of American history—the U.S. Expeditionary Force in Siberia in 1917-1919. The sudden rise of the Bolshevik regime, the creation of the Red Army, and the perceived threat to Allied armies and territory in Eastern Europe led to furious fighting near Murmansk, and the capture of thousands of Allied, including American, soldiers by the Red Army. The attempt to get them back in the face of the intransigence and deception of Bolshevik diplomacy faded as the U.S. Government itself lost interest in their fate.

A series of parallel events occurred after World War II when the government of Joseph Stalin seized control of hundreds of prisoners of war, including Americans, and millions of displaced persons caught in Nazi prison camps as the Red Army was allowed to move into Eastern Europe. The anguished secret cables of Ambassador Harriman and the classified accounting provided by General Eisenhower made it clear that Stalin refused to account for either POWs or civilians once they fell under Communist control, while nevertheless demanding that Russian or Eastern European prisoners "liberated" by the West be forcibly returned to the Soviet Union.

The Korean War is closer to present memories, yet documents from that period also suggest the abandonment of 944 American prisoners, and a disinclination by the United States to follow up on their disappearance.

Finally, the fate of POW/MIAs of the Vietnam war may be tied to the diplomatic history of the Paris Peace Accords of 1973. Some may agree, as Col. Peck indicated, that the real abandonment of the American POW/MIAs took place at the Paris Conference, and that the present POW/MIA policies of the U.S. Government are merely an implementation of flawed decisions taken at that time.

Part II of this report presents a more detailed analysis of present POW/MIA policies with selected concrete examples.

HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE

U.S. POWs IN COMMUNIST CUSTODY

The war that Americans call the Vietnam War is really, from the standpoint of history, the Second Indochina War. The French have the dubious distinction of having fought the First Indochina War—a most important fact to know in order to understand that the Communist Vietnamese act out of an acquired experience of warfare with Western countries. Moreover, the Vietnamese, as Communists, have had the additional benefit of the experience of other Communist regimes in dealing with the United States and European powers. Therefore, it is not surprising to learn that the problems which the United States has had in dealing with prisoners of war and the missing in action are not the result of chance, but of historic Communist policy.

Indeed, history reveals that policy. In the years after World Wars I and II, the Soviet regime, and later their North Korean cohorts, held American soldiers and citizens captive in the aftermath of these wars. A 1954 New York Times article gives some insight into Communist attitudes towards POWs. In January, 1954, three Americans, two held by the Soviets and one by the Chinese Communists, were repatriated. The New York Times reported:

All three confirm that the Soviet bloc and the Chinese Communists are holding in their jails and slave camps many foreigners, including soldiers, and civilians, women and children...according to State Department figures, the total number of Americans held by the Soviets and their European satellites exceeds 5,000...Many of these Americans, like many Europeans, were residents in the Iron Curtain countries caught by the Communist tide; others were deported from German war prisoner camps; some, like Cox were simply kidnapped.¹

The fact is that Soviet and Asian Communist regimes view POW/MIA's, living or dead, not as a problem of humanitarian concern but as leverage for political bargaining, as an involuntary source of technical assistance, and as forced labor. There is, therefore, no compelling reason in Communist logic to return POWs, or their remains, so long as political and economic goals have not been met. The logic of the Vietnamese position requires them to conceal, to dissimulate, to titillate, and to dole out actual information grudgingly, piece by piece, but always in return for very practical results.

This perverse thinking is shocking to Americans who are straightforward and honest in interpersonal dealings. Yet we should instead be surprised if this were not the case. Indeed, the policy began with Lenin. From the time of the Bolshevik treatment of POWs from the American

Expeditionary Force in World War I, to the Soviet treatment of POWs in World War II, to the North Korean actions in the Korean War, and finally in the First and Second Indochina Wars—POWs, including MIAs, were used by Communist regimes as cynical bargaining tools in contravention of international law.

In 1973, the Vietnamese used POWs in an attempt to blackmail the United States into providing nearly $5 billion in so-called "reparations." Both the United States and Vietnam asserted in that year that "OPERATION HOMECOMING" brought home all known prisoners. The Vietnamese believed that they had a deal—a dirty deal, to be sure, in which prisoners would be exchanged for cold cash. It was a deal brokered by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger via a secret hand-carried letter. It would be perfectly consistent with the historical Communist policy to hold back prisoners against their will, and even the remains of the dead, to exchange for dollars at a later date. The evidence of this investigation, therefore, must be weighed against the probabilities of the historical background.

Most of this information is not well-known by the American public; however, all of it is based on open-source material, including official U.S. Government documents that have been declassified and collected from official agencies through Freedom of Information Act requests and through research from the National Archives, Washington, D.C.

THE AEF AND WORLD WAR I

U.S. problems in accounting for POW/MIAs did not suddenly emerge in the Second Indochina War; in fact, the basic Communist tactics were already evident at the birth of the Soviet Union in the Bolshevik Revolution.

Today, most Americans have forgotten that there were two main fronts during World War I—the Western Front, which was the center of Allied attention, and which today still receives the most focus; and the Eastern Front, which occurred when the Bolshevik Regime signed the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk with the Germans and withdrew Russian forces from participation with the Allies. Thereupon, the Allies grew apprehensive about the German threat to the ports of Murmansk and Archangel, and sent the Allied Expeditionary Force to Siberia to protect the rear.

As a result of the fighting against Soviet Bolshevik forces around Archangel in 1918-1919, there were many casualties, and eyewitness accounts of hundreds of U.S. and British and French personnel who disappeared. Nevertheless, official cables from the U.S. military attache at Archangel cited much lower numbers than the eyewitness reports of missing personnel. The U.S. government policy concerning these and others in the two categories of missing in action (MIA) and killed in action, body not recovered (KIA-BNR) from the American Expeditionary Force in Russia, as detailed in a November, 1930 memorandum from the U.S. Acting Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, stated the following:

An administrative determination has been placed on each of their records that they were killed in action on the date they were reported as missing.¹

In other words, all of the men who were MIA were determined to be KIA-BNR on the date they were reported as missing.

Public outcry over this practice resulted in the formation of the 1929 VFW/U.S. Graves Registration Expedition, which was able to identify or account for 86 sets of remains. Many others were never identified. However, given the technical and scientific limitations of forensics in 1929, the amount of time elapsed and the number of nationalities involved, some of the remains may have been misidentified.

¹ Memorandum "To: Acting Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, Subject: Alleged confinement of American Officers and Soldiers in Russian prisons," November 12, 1930.

THE AEF AND WORLD WAR I

In 1921, the New York Times reported that the American prisoners held by the Soviet Government of Russia have been told by the Bolsheviks that they are held because the United States government has not made vigorous demands for their release....²

It was widely known that the Bolsheviks held many American POWs and other U.S. citizens against their will. In fact, the new Soviet Government attempted to barter U.S. POWs held in their prisons for U.S. diplomatic recognition and trade relations with their regime. The United States refused, even though the Soviets had at one time threatened "...that Americans held by the Soviet government would be put to death...."³

President Harding's Secretary of State, Charles Evans Hughes, in response to the Soviets demand for recognition and trade relations in return for U.S. prisoners, said that the United States will not consider any suggestions of any character from that government until the Americans now held as prisoners are permitted to leave the country.⁴

But several months later the United States concluded the Riga Agreement with the Soviet government to provide humanitarian aid to starving Russian children. The Riga Agreement had specific requirements that the Soviet authorities must release all Americans detained in Russia, and to facilitate their departure. The U.S. Government was expecting 20 prisoners to be released; but U.S. authorities were surprised when 100 Americans were released.⁵

In fact, not all American prisoners held by the Soviets were released. The Soviets held some back, presumably for leverage in any future negotiations with the United States. However, in 1933 when Franklin Delano Roosevelt recognized the Soviet government, these prisoners were not released, and other than the apparent recovery of 19 sets of remains, no satisfactory accounting of the MIA/POWs that were held by the Soviets was made by the United States.

Since an administrative determination had been placed on each of their records that they were killed in action on the date they were reported as missing, as far as the United States government and laws of the United States were concerned, these men were legally dead. Other than to a small number of U.S. government officials with access to the intelligence about these men in Soviet concentration camps and prisons, these men were legally, and otherwise generally considered, to be no longer alive. One such intelligence document dated November 20, 1930 cites an affidavit taken by the U.S. Justice Department of Alexander Grube, a Latvian-American, who was identified as a "Russian seaman." He had been imprisoned in the Soviet gulag, including in the infamous Lubianka Prison, where he states he saw four American Army officers and 15 American soldiers, and was then transferred to Solovetz Island Prison where he met "many" American soldiers and civilians. Grube further warned the U.S. government that any inquiry made to Soviet officials of specific individuals will result in their immediate execution.

This episode in the history of World War I illustrates succinctly the major problems which still affect attempts to account for and ensure the repatriation of U.S. military personnel captured by Communist regimes in the aftermath of World War II, the Korean War, and the Second Indo-China War: 1) The bureaucratic and legal assertion by the U.S. Government that the men who were MIA were killed in action on the date they were reported as missing or sometime thereafter; 2) the attempts by the Communist regime to use prisoners as barter for economic and diplomatic benefits; 3) the dissimulation and lies of the Communist regime about the existence and location of prisoners; 4) the on-again, off-again return of remains; and 5) where there is no clear military victory over the Communist enemy, the vulnerability of U.S. POW/MIAs who are at the mercy of the reluctance of the enemy and U.S. government to pursue a clear, open policy for their repatriation.

THE AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE AND THE EASTERN FRONT

During World War I (1914-1918), military personnel captured by Germany and the Central Powers on the Western Front were returned home when the U.S., British, or Western European allies liberated the POW camps, or after the capitulation of Germany and its allies in November, 1918. An accurate, detailed accounting of these POWs in Europe was possible because the United States, as a member of the Allied Forces, was the victor. Victory afforded American officials complete access to the German records of American POWs and the territory in which they were imprisoned.

However, Russian prisoners who were still held in Central Powers prison camps presented a problem for the Allies after their victory. At the beginning of the war, Russian forces fought with the Allies. But after the Bolshevik revolution of 1917, the Bolsheviks withdrew Russian troops from the fighting after signing the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk with the Central Powers in March, 1918. Some of the Russians held in German camps had Bolshevik sympathies, while others did not. The Allies hoped to sort out the Bolshevik soldiers, and recruit the anti-Bolsheviks to fight against the new regime in Russia. According to a War Department cable:

It is believed that a period of one or two months would suffice to discover which of the soldiers could be used for the work in question and which ones would be too thoroughly imbued with bolshevist [sic] ideas to be trusted. The former could then be sent to the Ukraine and the latter left in concentration camps.⁴

However, once defeated, the Germans could no longer manage the camps, and attempted to turn the Russian POWs loose, letting them head east for the Russian border. But the Allied

Commissioners were still afraid of turning them loose for fear that the Russians would join the Red Army, and in February, 1919, the Allies took control of these German camps.⁵

France, in particular, did not want any liberated Russian POWs from Germany "to go into the interior of France, possibly on account of the Bolshevik [sic] danger."⁶ In fact, when the Germans released the Russian prisoners of war, 50,000 of them found their way to France. They expected a warm welcome from their former allies; they were interned without delay.⁷

The Allies also were apparently concerned about American, British, and French POW/MIAs who might still be held prisoner as a result of combat with the Bolshevik Red Army in northern Russia, and may have wanted the Russian prisoners for bargaining leverage.

After Brest-Litovsk took the Bolshevik forces out of the war, German and Austro-Hungarian forces were free to move into the Ukraine and Baltic states. The German action was perceived by Allied forces as a threat to the northern Russian ports of Murmansk and Archangel, where tons of Allied war material were still stored. Further, the U.S. government wanted to provide for the safe evacuation of Czechoslovak forces who had been fighting with Russia against the Central Powers.

The group of soldiers numbered over 5,000 volunteers and draftees, mostly from Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. The troops were placed under British command, and, in violation of their stated mission, were used in combat operations in support of the British and French plans to secure that part of Russia from the Germans and the Red Army.

A report from Colonel J.A. Ruggles, the U.S. military attache in Archangel, dated November 25, 1918, lists casualties divided into categories such as Killed In Action (KIA), Missing In Action (MIA), etc.⁸ These were casualties from the 339th U.S. Infantry Regiment which had been sent to Archangel in the late summer and early fall of 1918 to serve under British command.

During the winter of 1918, after a series of poorly planned and executed Allied military operations, the Red Army finally prevailed on the field over the heavily outnumbered Allied forces. There were a few spring and early summer victories for the Allies, but in the summer of 1919 Allied forces began to withdraw from Archangel. The 339th Regiment returned to the United States via Europe in the summer of 1919. By the spring of 1920, all U.S. and allied troops were out of Soviet territory. During their withdrawal, British forces seized a number of Russian Bolsheviks as hostages to trade for British POWs and MIAs who were still held by the Bolsheviks, and made room for about 5,000 White Russian emigrants who wanted to leave their homeland before the Red Army overran the territory. When Archangel was finally taken by the Bolshevik forces, 30,000 citizens¹¹ were executed by the Cheka¹² forces.

"HUNDREDS WERE MISSING FROM OUR RANKS"

It is difficult to accept the official U.S. accounting of U.S. casualties of the 1918-1919 Northern Russia Expedition, particularly because all men who were MIA were officially determined to be KIA-BNR on the date they were reported as missing. According to several accounts, several hundred U.S., French, and British soldiers were left unaccounted for during the fighting in Northern Russia. Indeed, the official history of the Expedition states there were "hundreds missing from our ranks."¹³ However, official cables from the U.S. military attaché at Archangel cited approximately 70 MIAs, excluding French and British missing personnel.

Negotiations with the Bolsheviks for the repatriation of the missing failed. Col. Ruggles stated:

Negotiations for the exchange of prisoners have been terminated by orders from General Pershing, after having been delayed, although under discussion from both sides, through failure of the Bolshevik commander to obtain authority from Moscow.¹⁴

In fact, the Bolsheviks wanted diplomatic recognition in return for the release of Allied POWs; at the suggestion of the U.S. Secretary of State, the U.S. Secretary of War reminded the U.S. Military Attaché at Archangel of this fact in a May 12, 1919 letter: "the United States has not recognized the Bolshevik regime as a government either de facto or de jure."¹⁵ The negotiations never resumed.

¹² The Cheka was the all-Russian Extraordinary Commission to Combat Counterrevolution and Sabotage, the Bolshevik's secret police; it was the forerunner of the GPU, the State Political Directorate, which in turn preceded the NKVD, the People's Commissariat of Internal Affairs, which became the KGB, the Committee for State Security.

¹³ Two Company I officers, 1st Lieutenants Dwight Fister and Albert May, met with Bolshevik officers in an attempt to secure the release of captured Allied servicemen. They recorded the meeting: "We had 500 Russian prisoners. They had seven of ours. We were worried about hundreds of missing from our ranks and arranged a truce to effect an exchange...Negotiation was difficult. Interpreters were not very efficient. But the Reds learned what we were up for, and haggled. The end was, they traded us two of the seven Americans for the 500 Russian soldiers, and we had to toss in a round of cigarettes to seal the bargain. We never did learn what had become of the missing."

Polk, from the U.S. Secretary of War: "I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter ('NE-M'), dated April 28, 1919, regarding the negotiations with the Bolshevik government in Russia for the exchange of Allied prisoners, referred to in cablegram No. 230 from the Military Attaché, Archangel, Russia. In accordance with your suggestion, a cablegram was sent to the Military Attaché on May 1, reminding him that the United States has not recognized the Bolshevik regime as a government either de facto or de jure."

THE AEF AND WORLD WAR I

Throughout the summer and fall of 1919, 3,315 replacements were sent to Siberia to rotate out many of the original U.S. troops.¹⁶ The 1919 and 1921 reports of the Secretary of War records the casualties for the Archangel fighting and the Siberian expedition as follows:

Killed in Action.....	137 (including 28 presumed killed)
Died of wounds.....	43
Died of disease.....	122
Died of accidental causes..	46
Suicide.....	5
Total deaths.....	353

The totals listed above from the combined 1919 and 1921 official annual reports of the Secretary of War conceal the fact that out of the 144 combat deaths of American soldiers officially reported in 1919 in Northern Russia, 127 of those deaths, or 88% of those official combat death figures were made up of some 70 MIAs declared dead, and another 57 soldiers who were declared KIA-BNR.¹⁷

This fact was left out of the official Secretary of War report on U.S. casualty figures from combat in Northern Russia. The vast majority of these missing men never received a proper accounting. Further, the practice of the Secretary of War of lumping the MIA and the KIA-BNR figures together as those killed in action necessarily calls into question the general credibility of these official figures. One historian makes note that ten U.S. POWs from the Archangel Expedition were repatriated through Finland and Sweden.¹⁸

LUBLANKA PRISON

In fact, there is evidence that some of these men were actually alive and held in prisons and concentration camps in Russia by the Communists. A November 12, 1930 memorandum which detailed an affidavit taken by the U.S. Justice Department from a "Russian seaman" stated:

He arrived March 1, 1927 in Lublanka Prison at Moscow where he saw four (4) American Army Officers and fifteen (15) American soldiers who had been there since 1919...that he subsequently was transferred to Solovetz Island Prison where he met many American soldiers and civilians, and names two of them as Mr. Martin or Marten and Mr. G. Heinsainkrut, both of whom he thinks are American Army Officers sent to the island from Vladivostok. He also mentions one Roy Molner whom he states had been a sergeant in the U.S. Army at Archangel from which place he had been sent as a prisoner.¹⁹

¹⁹ War Department Memorandum, "To: Acting Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, Subject Alleged confinement of American Officers and Soldiers in Russian prisons," November 12, 1930.

An internal U.S. government letter which evaluates the information provided by the Russian seaman states:

I have looked into this question and find that at least one case that has an important bearing on it, namely the case of William J. Martin, Company A, 339th Infantry, which regiment served in Archangel or North Russian Expedition. Under date of Feb. 3, 1919 a report from Archangel showed Martin missing in action. Under date of March 14, 1921 we made a determination showing: "Was killed in action January 19, 1919. This determination was no doubt predicated on the unexplained absence of the soldier for about two years [until the KIA-BNR determination was made]. I also found another case which may possibly be involved, it is that of Lindsay Retherford, up in my mind because of the mention by the Russian sailor of Alfred Lindsay. Lindsay Retherford was reported missing and a similar determination [KIA-BNR] was made in his case."²⁵

"THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT IS HOLDING AMERICANS"

Three years later, in 1933, the United States recognized the Bolshevik government. In 1934, 19 sets of remains were reported as "identified" by the U.S. Graves Registration. In the separate 1929 VFW/Graves Expedition 86 remains of the 127 missing or KIA-BNR from battles fought by the American Expeditionary Force at Archangel were claimed to have been identified. This left 41 unaccounted for from the Archangel post. Further, that of the 86 remains "identified," it is likely that a number of these "identifications" stretched the capacity of forensic science at that time.

Refugees from Russia fleeing into Europe during the late 1920s continued to report that a number of Americans were still held by the Soviet government in forced labor camps. It is noteworthy that some of the U.S. troops sent to Archangel were themselves U.S. immigrants from Eastern Europe, or the sons of U.S. immigrants from Eastern Europe who had been drafted into the American Army. It has been speculated that the Soviets kept them because of their national origins, or the national origins of their families.²⁶

The U.S. Government did not publicly admit that U.S. military personnel remained in the custody of the Red Army in Russia upon the return of the American Expeditionary Force in Russia. However, on April 18, 1921, the New York Times reported:

It has been demonstrated that the Soviet government is holding Americans in the hope that the United States will agree to recognize the Soviet [government] or enter into trade relations with it or release communists from prison in this country....²⁷

²⁷ "Captives Released Repeatedly Bought," The New York Times, April 18, 1921.

Three months later, President Harding responded to an appeal from Moscow for "bread and medicine" for the "children and the sick." He instructed a member of his staff, Herbert Hoover, to cable a reply to Moscow that the American Relief Administration would undertake relief for one million Russian children and provide some medical supplies for their hospitals—but subject to certain conditions.²⁸

August 20, 1921, a formal agreement between the Soviet Union and the United States, the "Riga Agreement," was concluded. Among the conditions for U.S. aid to the Soviets was the following:

The Soviet Authorities having previously agreed as the absolute sine qua non of any assistance on the part of the American people to release all Americans detained in Russia and to facilitate the departure from Russia of all Americans so desiring, the A.R.A. [American Relief Administration] reserves the right to suspend temporarily or terminate all of its relief work in Russia in case of failure on the part of the Soviet Authorities to fully comply with this primary condition....[emphasis added].²⁹

The United States government expected the repatriation of approximately 20 U.S. citizens; but, in fact, more than 100 Americans were repatriated as a result of this agreement.

As Herbert Hoover wrote in his autobiography:

The provision for release of American prisoners was suggested by Secretary Hughes, who informed me the Department knew that there were about twenty of them. More than a hundred American prisoners in Russian dungeons were released on September 1, [1921].³⁰

Even so, reports continued to be received by the Department of State that more Americans were still held in Russia. The discrepancy between the official information in the hands of the U.S. government—20 Americans held, and the actual number of more than one hundred released—gave the U.S. Government its first taste of negotiating for Americans held against their will by Communists.

WORLD WAR II

World War II was a great military victory for the United States Armed Forces. In both the European and the Pacific theaters, the enemy unconditionally surrendered. However, despite the total victory in Europe by Allied forces, thousands and thousands of U.S. soldiers—perhaps as many as 20,000—were never repatriated from prisoner of war (POW) camps, prisons and forced labor and concentration camps.

These American soldiers were being held in Nazi prison camps, along with other Allied POWs and some Nazi captives, when they were overrun by the Red Army. Thus, hundreds of thousands of Allied POWs who had been held by the Nazis, as well as millions of Western European citizens, or Displaced Persons, came under Red Army control. Indeed, this number increased because General Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, decided to stop the U.S. and British drive eastward into Germany, in order to wait for Soviet forces driving West, so that U.S. and Soviet forces could meet in Berlin.

"CREDITS" FOR REPATRIATION

One such American GI was Martin Siegel, who was held prisoner in Stalag IV-B, Muhlberg (a Nazi POW camp in eastern Germany overrun by a Red Army tank battalion).¹ Siegel was the U.S. POWs' intermediary and translator with Major Vasilii Vershenko, the officer in command of the Red Army tank battalion that overran the camp.

The first question the Siegel asked Major Vershenko was, "When were the U.S. POWs to be repatriated?" Vershenko said he was primarily concerned with the "Russian prisoners held in a separate compound at Stalag IV-B" as "they had to be interviewed individually since they felt that there were many cowards, traitors and deserters among them and they had to be dealt with expeditiously."² Secondly, with regard to the repatriation of U.S. and Allied POWs now under Red Army control, the Soviet Major stated "the Russians and the Americans had agreed to a pact wherein the Russians would receive 'credits' for each American POW returned," and the Soviet officer told Siegel, the repatriation of U.S. POWs was a "complex logistical matter."

The Russian Major's view of the repatriation process for U.S. and Allied POWs under Red Army control for financial or economic 'credits' probably accurately reflected his view of Soviet repatriation policy. In fact, the Russian Major's view paralleled the assessment of the Soviet's repatriation policy by U.S. Major General R.W. Barker. Barker was the Allied Chief Negotiator for the repatriation of Allied POWs under Red Army control. Barker wrote in a report to the Chief of Staff of the Supreme Allied Headquarters that after more than four hours of discussions with his Red Army counterparts the SHAEF [Supreme Headquarters of the Allied European Forces] representatives came to the firm conviction that British and American prisoners of war were, in effect, being held hostage by the Russians until deemed expedient by them to permit their release. This latter point was further borne out by subsequent events.³

Meanwhile, Siegel, the American GI still held in Stalag IV-B (who is still alive) decided that as a result of the callousness of his [Major Vershenko's] response and the officious tone in which this information [about repatriation] was given, [it] gave me real pause... That night, my bunkmate, Cpl. William Smith of the 9th Division shared our mutual concerns and [we] decided to take off on our own. The next evening, we "liberated" two Russian bicycles, got thru a gap in the wire where a Russian tank was parked and took off West to where we thought the American Army would be.⁴

They made it safely to American lines, but only after a "two week adventure" that included making another escape after "being captured by a band of fanatical Hitler Youth" still at large in Soviet occupied Germany.

Siegel and his partner made a wise decision to escape. A cable from the Ninth United States Army to the Supreme Allied Headquarters dated May 17, 1945 describes the deteriorating conditions in Siegel's former POW camp, Stalag IV-B Muhlberg, after the two GIs escaped:

Reports received that 7,000 United States and British ex-PWs formerly in MULBURG [Stalag IV-B] and NOERREISAU need medical supplies, additional medical attention and food. Many have left because of conditions. Reports indicate camp leader doing all in his power to enforce stay-put order. Russians alleged to have threatened to use force to prevent escape. [emphasis added]⁵

Thus, through completely different personal experiences, a GI—Siegel—and a General—Barker—came to essentially the same conclusion about Soviet repatriation policy. The GI risked escape rather than trust the Soviets to repatriate him. The General concluded, and reported to

Supreme Allied Headquarters that

British and American prisoners of war were, in effect, being held hostage by the Russians until deemed expedient by them to permit their release.⁷

After Siegel--the intrepid GI--and his partner escaped to Allied controlled territory, Siegel found that his concerns for other prisoners left behind at IV-B were treated with initial skepticism, then annoyance at my persistence, and finally with reassurances that the matter "would be investigated."⁸

It should be noted that Major Vershenko's comments about economic 'credits' were not wholly inaccurate. Weeks before V-E day (Victory in Europe) Soviets had requested a $6 billion credit line from the United States, the equivalent of $59.8 billion in 1991 dollars⁹, or slightly more than the U.S. costs for the Gulf War. 'Credits' from the United States, were, in fact, an active Soviet consideration throughout the repatriation period. Indeed, the Secretary of State, prior to a mid-April 1945 meeting with his Soviet counterpart, Commissar Molotov, received a pre-meeting briefing memorandum, one of the points of which was the Soviet request for $6 billion.¹⁰

"MAKE THEM WORK"

The Soviet rationale for not repatriating Allied soldiers and citizens, however, was motivated by more complex and more repugnant reasons than credits alone. In the memoirs of former Secretary of State under President Truman, James F. Byrnes, there appears an illuminating conversation the Secretary had with Molotov, the Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs. In September, 1945, several weeks after Japan's surrender, Byrnes recounted that while in London:

Mr. Molotov came to see me, on instructions from Moscow...[Molotov] wanted to complain of the way in which the surrender terms [with Japan] were being carried out. He complained particularly about the way the Japanese Army was being demobilized. It was dangerous, he said, merely to disarm the Japanese and send them home; they should be held as prisoners of war. We should do what the Red Army was doing with the Japanese it had taken in Manchuria--make them work...No one can say accurately how many Japanese prisoners have been taken to the Soviet Union. In mid-1947, the best guess was that approximately 500,000 were still there.¹¹

The problem of accounting for POW/MIAs was complicated by the fact that the Soviets were just as uncooperative in the repatriation of the millions of displaced civilians. In Europe, as well as in the Far East, the Soviets guarded a sea of prisoners--human capital and slave labor in their view--who were not only Allied and Axis POWs, but also hundreds of thousands of displaced Western European citizens, as well as Eastern European citizens, who desperately wanted to flee from Red Army occupied territory. Nationalities of smaller countries of Western Europe, like the Dutch, and Belgians, as well as formerly Nazi occupied countries like France, tragically, had little military, political or diplomatic leverage with the Soviet government to secure the repatriation of their citizens at the end of the War. As a result, tens of thousands of Dutch and Belgians, and hundreds of thousands of French were never repatriated by the Soviets.

The French in particular bore the brunt the Soviet "make them work" policy. This policy was implemented by the Soviets not only with regard to the Japanese POWs captured in the Pacific theater, but also with regard to hundreds of thousands of French, Dutch, Belgian, and other Western Europeans who were caught in Soviet occupied territory in Europe.

A window through which a glimpse of the fate of these citizens--in this particular case, French POWs--can be seen is the following cable from the Allied Command's Mission in France, to the Supreme Allied Headquarters for all of Europe. Sent May 30, 1945 (Victory in Europe, VE day was May 7, 1945) the cable read:

Accordance your telephone request, cable from Fifteenth Army French Detachment to Oesgral CHERIERE MMFA Hotel CONTINENTAL PARIS of 25 May is paraphrased for your information.

Report of Lt D HAVERNAS, according to confirmed reports, Russians still do not release thousands of French ex-PWs and civilians, forcing them to work. Many transferred eastwards to unknown destination. Please inform high authority. 700 ex-PWs are evacuated daily from this area to UDINE. Civilians held under difficult food and accommodation conditions. [emphasis added]¹²

"DISCREPANCY OF OVER 1,000,000 WESTERN EUROPEANS"

The next day, a cable detailing the magnitude of the masses of Allied prisoners of war and displaced citizens held in Soviet territory was sent from Supreme Allied Headquarters signed by Eisenhower, to the U.S. Military Mission in Moscow. Eisenhower wanted an explanation from the Soviets for the slow pace of repatriation of these citizens. The "discrepancies" between the Allies' most up-to-date figures of various displaced Western European citizens and prisoners of war known to be in Soviet occupied territory, and the number actually repatriated by the Soviets, were outlined by Eisenhower.

Latest available displaced persons and prisoners of war figures show almost 1,600,000 Western European (French, Belgian, Dutch and Luxemborgese) either repatriated from or at present held

¹² Cable SECRET ROUTINE, "To: SHAEF FORWARD, From: SHAEF MISSION FRANCE, to SHAEF FORWARD G-3," REF NO: MF-1447, May 30, 1945.

WORLD WAR II

in SHAEF area. Soviet delegates at LEIPZIG conference stated only 300,000 Western Europeans in their area. Combined working party on European food supplies, composed of representatives from UNRRA, SHAEF, USSR, UK, and USA, including Soviet delegate LIUSHENKO, estimated approximately 3,000,000 displaced Western Europeans in enemy-held territory at beginning 1944. This discrepancy of over 1,000,000 Western Europeans is causing the Dutch and French Governments considerable anxiety.¹³

More than two weeks later, Eisenhower sent another cable to the U.S. Military Mission in Moscow with more detailed numbers of "discrepancies". Again, Eisenhower requested a detailed Soviet response to his concerns over these unrepatriated prisoners of war and other Allied citizens in Red Army occupied territory. The cable, dated June 19, 1945, stated:

2. A further approach to the Soviets regarding numbers of western Europeans in Soviet occupied area of Eastern Europe is urgently necessary. About 1,200,000 French have been repatriated. Less than 100,000 remain in SHAEF-occupied area. French insist total POW and displaced persons is 2,300,000. Even allowing for several hundred thousand unaccounted trekkers, discrepancy is still very great. About 170,000 Dutch have been repatriated, with less than 25,000 in the SHAEF area. Total Dutch estimate of deportees is 340,000.¹⁴

"OF PERSONS FROM WESTERN EUROPE...[I]...CAN NOT SAY MUCH ABOUT THEM"

In response to Eisenhower's cable, the U.S. Military Mission in Moscow sent the Soviet government a letter dated June 20, 1945, parts of which are quoted below:

Dear General Golubev:

We have been requested by General Eisenhower to make an urgent appeal to you for an estimate of the number of displaced Western Europeans who are now in Soviet-occupied areas of Eastern Europe.

Thus far, about 1,200,000 French have been repatriated. Less than 100,000 French remain in German areas occupied by British-American forces. This makes a total of 1,300,000 French accounted for, exclusive of those who still remain in Soviet-controlled territory. French authorities insist that the total number of prisoners of war and displaced persons amount to 2,300,000. Even allowing for several hundred thousand unaccounted individuals, there still remains a great discrepancy.

About 170,000 Dutch have been repatriated. Less than 25,000 Dutch still remain in Germany under control of British-American forces. However, the Dutch authorities estimate that there were originally 340,000 Dutch nationals deported, thus leaving a great discrepancy.

WORLD WAR II

The Belgian authorities also reported a discrepancy but it is comparatively smaller than those of the French and Dutch....¹⁵

In the French and Dutch cases, the "discrepancy" figures are astonishing. Even assuming that a quarter of a million French citizens were "trekkers"--a seemingly exaggerated estimate--heading West to Allied lines, 850,000 French citizens still were not repatriated from Red Army occupied territory.

With regard to the Dutch citizens, assuming one quarter of the total Dutch "discrepancy" number were "trekkers," then some 116,250 Dutch citizens still were not repatriated from Soviet occupied Europe. It is understandable, as Eisenhower stated in an earlier cable to the U.S. Military Mission in Moscow, that these figures were "causing the Dutch and French governments considerable anxiety."

In late June, the U.S. Military Mission in Moscow sent Eisenhower a cable with the Soviet reply. The Soviet reply was not encouraging. The cable read:

Upon receipt of S-91662 dated 19 June, we presented the queries contained therein to [Lieutenant General] GOLUBEV [Soviet Assistant Administrator for Repatriation] and have received the following reply [from the Soviets]:

In answer to your letter of 20 June:

1. I do not have the exact data on the moving around of persons from Western EUROPE and therefore cannot say much about them.

2. I know that there have been freed by the Red Army:

French: About 230,000 of which 202,456 persons have already been sent home and about 50,000 who are getting ready to be sent home.

Belgians: 27,980 persons freed of which 25,920 have been sent home, the remainder in the process of being turned over.¹⁶

The discrepancy between the Soviet numbers for both the French and the Dutch and SHAEF's numbers is unsettling, as is the Soviets' claim that they "cannot say much about" the hundreds of thousands of Western European soldiers and citizens who apparently disappeared in Red Army occupied territory.

"NOT EVEN VERBAL ASSURANCES WERE TO BE HAD"

However, even before Eisenhower had received his reply, the Soviets had informed U.S. military officials at a separate meeting in Halle, Germany, that "all political prisoners held in German concentration camps overrun by the Red Army had been released." Furthermore, Allied officials reported to the Secretary of State with respect to the "category of displaced persons, not even verbal assurances were to be had."

The results of the Allied-Soviet meeting in Halle, Germany, were detailed in a memo sent to the U.S. Secretary of State and is quoted below. The meeting produced an agreement on a plan for repatriation agreed to by representatives of Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, and Supreme Command Red Army, at Halle, Germany, May 22, 1945, for the most expeditious overland delivery of Allied and Soviet ex-prisoners of war and displaced persons liberated by the Allied Expeditionary Force and the Red Army. The two delegations were headed Lieutenant General K.D. Golubev, Red Army, Soviet Assistant Administrator for Repatriation, and Major General R.W. Barker, U.S.A., Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, SHAEF.¹⁷

This meeting, more than any other, determined the fate of hundreds of thousands of people trapped in the Red Army occupied territory of Eastern Europe. This memorandum, which was sent June 1, 1945 to the U.S. Secretary of State, explains that at the Halle, Germany, meeting the Red Army refused to permit the Allies to fly transport aircraft into Soviet-occupied territory. Although General Golubev would not agree to the incorporation of a paragraph providing first priority delivery of U.S. and U.K. ex-prisoners of war, he gave his most solemn personal assurances that all U.S. and U.K. ex-prisoners of war would, in fact, be given preferential treatment. A request for second priority for Western European ex-political deportees, in accordance with the desires of the Western European governments that such persons be repatriated before their respective ex-prisoners of war and other displaced persons, was countered by the flat assertion that all political prisoners held in German concentration camps overrun by the Red Army had been released and that there were, accordingly, no more political prisoners in Soviet-occupied territory. With respect to this category of displaced persons, not even verbal assurances were to be had.¹⁸

Thus, as far as former political prisoners were concerned, the official Soviet position was that all political prisoners had been released. With regard to the repatriation of displaced persons who found themselves in Red Army occupied territory at the end of the War, "not even verbal assurances were to be had."

"HOUSED NOT IN HUTS BUT IN DUG-OUTS"

The following U.S. intelligence report from OSS-CIG files, dated April-May 1945, may provide some insight into the fate of the hundreds of thousands of French, Dutch, and Belgians of whom the Soviets would not even give "verbal assurances":

1. Informant, a Pole forced to serve in the German Army, was taken prisoner by the Russians in 1944. He was kept for a time in the Transit Camp in KAUNAS, then NINSK until he was deported across SIBERIA to the SEVINSKAYA camp near VLADIVOSTOK. At the end of 1945 - April, he escaped and tried to get to Europe. He was, however, arrested by the NKVD after he had got beyond MOSCOW, and placed in the P.O.W. and Internee Camp in TAMBOV, which was occupied by Germans, French, Americans, British, Dutch, Belgians. The prisoners numbered, in the informant's [sic] estimation, well over 20,000; they were both military and civilian, most likely overrun by the Russians during the offensive.

2. All prisoners were forced to work, and the food they were given was very bad and monotonous. They were housed not in huts but in dug-outs.

3. The monotonous food caused some strange disease which made the legs and arms swell. After a time men afflicted with this disease died. Informant was told that more than 23,000 Italians, more than 2,500 French and approximately 10,000 Roumanian [sic] and Hungarian prisoners had died in this manner. There were also many casualties among Poles and other nationalities.

4. Prisoners in this camp included men of very high culture and learning and great experts in many fields of science. Informant observed that German engineers were employed on a special task - the drawing up of blue-prints for a four engined aircraft, which would carry about 500 men and achieve a speed - it was alleged - of 1,000 kilometers per hour. The Russians were extremely interested in these blue-prints, and men working on the invention were granted all possible facilities both in work and the conditions of life in the camp.

5. ...there were also some Belgians and Dutch, and others, including some English men and several score Americans, the presence of whom in this camp is probably unknown to the British and U.S.A. authorities. When he was leaving, these Englishmen and Americans asked him urgently (as did the French officers and men) to notify the Allied authorities of their plight. Informant succeeded in reaching France with a convoy of Allied nationals.¹⁹

"HUNDREDS OF OUR PRISONERS WANDERING ABOUT POLAND"

In anticipation of the hundreds of thousands of soldiers and citizens who would have to be repatriated in the wake of the Western allies and Red Army victory over the Nazi forces, the Western Allies and the Soviets agreed February 11, 1945, at the Yalta Conference to provisions which would expedite their repatriation. These provisions allowed their respective military officers into Allied and Soviet controlled territory at various collection points in each country throughout Europe, in order to process, arrange for transportation and otherwise oversee the registration and the care and feeding of the soldiers who were to be repatriated. The locations where these repatriation officers were to be sent was agreed to, as well as that these officers would be assigned liaison officers to assist them in the repatriation process.

Less than a month after the signing of the Yalta agreement, in an URGENT TOP SECRET Personal Message to the President, U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman cabled from Moscow:

Since the Yalta Conference General Deane and I have been making constant efforts to get the Soviets to carry out this agreement in full. We have been baffled by promises which have not been fulfilled.²¹

Specifically, Harriman stated in the same cable "I am outraged" that the Soviet Government has declined to carry out the agreement signed at Yalta in its other aspects, namely, that our contact officers be permitted to go immediately to points where our prisoners are first collected, to evaluate our prisoners, particularly the sick, in our own airplanes, or to send our supplies to points other than Odessa, which is 1,000 miles from point of liberation, where they are urgently needed.²²

Furthermore, Harriman in the same cable stated:

For the past ten days the Soviets have made the same statement that Stalin has made to you, [FDR] namely, that all prisoners are in Odessa or entrained thereto, whereas I have now positive proof that this was not repeated true on February 26, the date on which the statement was first made. This supports my belief that Stalin's statement to you is inaccurate.²³

In fact, Harriman in the same cable wrote:

there appear to be hundreds of our prisoners wandering about Poland trying to locate American contact officers for protection. I am told that our men don't like the idea of getting into a Russian camp. The Polish people and the Polish Red Cross are being extremely hospitable, whereas food and living conditions in Russian camps are poor. In addition we have reports that there are a number of sick or wounded who are too ill to move. These Stalin does not mention in his cable. Only a small percentage of those reported sick or wounded arrive at Odessa.²⁴

Odessa was a Black Sea port in the Ukraine, through which some 2,900 U.S. soldiers were processed and repatriated. It is the only camp in the entire Soviet occupied zone in Europe in which

U.S. contact personnel were allowed--the Yalta agreement notwithstanding--and was the source of much of Harriman's outrage.

"GREAT DIFFICULTIES...IN REGARD TO THE CARE AND REPATRIATION OF OUR LIBERATED POWs"

Six days later Ambassador Harriman sent another cable to Washington, this time to the Secretary of State, Edward R. Stettinius, Jr. It deserves to be quoted at some length:

I assume the Department has been informed by the War Department of the great difficulties General Deane [head of the U.S. Military Mission to Moscow] and I have been having with the Soviet Government in regard to the care and repatriation of our liberated prisoners of war. In the beginning it appeared that the Soviet authorities were going to interpret our agreement substantially as we did, namely that we be allowed to send our contact officers to several points within Poland to which our prisoners first find their way, to fly in emergency supplies and to evacuate our wounded on the returning trips of the planes, although in Soviet planes rather than United States planes. We obtained authority for one contact team of an officer and doctor to go to Lublin with one plane load of supplies and they have done extremely useful work there. No other teams or supplies have since been permitted and authority for the Lublin team to remain has recently been withdrawn. The Soviets have now contended that Odessa is the only present 'camps and points of concentration' referred to in the [Yalta] agreement to which our contact officers are to be permitted.

...Our prisoners have suffered serious hardships from lack of food, clothing, medical attention, etc., in finding their way to concentration points in Poland and on the long rail trip to Odessa because we have been stopped from sending in our contact teams and emergency supplies. A considerable number of sick and wounded are still hospitalized in Olan. I have been urging for the last two weeks General Deane be permitted to survey the situation with a Red Army officer. This was first approved in writing with the qualification that arrangements must be made with Polish authorities. An officer of our military mission informally approached the Polish Embassy here and was advised that no Polish authorization was necessary as it was entirely with the competence of the Red Army. We have been unable, however, to get authorization for Deane's trip.

It seems clear that the Soviets have changed their point of view during the last several weeks and are now rigidly determined that none of our officers shall be permitted in Poland.

I saw Molotov again today about the situation. He maintained that the Soviet Government was fulfilling its obligation under the agreement and both the Red Army authorities and the Polish Provisional Government objected to the presence of our officers in Poland. When I pressed him on what valid objection the Red Army could possibly have, he pointed out that we had no agreement with the Polish Provisional Government. In spite of my contention that this was a Soviet responsibility he kept reverting to the above fact. I then directly asked him if he was implying that we should make such an arrangement with Poles and if so, whether the Red Army would remove its objections. He did not answer this question directly but left me with the impression that he wished me to draw that deduction.

I am satisfied that the objection comes from [the] Soviet Government and not the Provisional Polish Government as our military mission had been in informal contact with the Polish Embassy here who have been extremely cooperative as have all Polish authorities including the Polish Red Cross to our prisoners in Poland.

WORLD WAR II

I feel that the Soviet Government is trying to use our liberated prisoners of war as a club to induce us to give increased prestige to the Provisional Polish Government by dealing with it in this connection as the Soviet are doing in other cases. General Deane and I have not (repeat not) been able to find a way to force the Soviet authorities to live up to our interpretation of our agreement. Unless some steps be taken to bring direct pressure on the Soviets, our liberated prisoners will continue to suffer hardships, particularly the wounded and the sick.

...It is the opinion of General Deane and myself that no arguments will induce the Soviets to live up to our interpretation of the [Yalta] agreement except retaliatory measures which affect their interests unless another direct appeal from the President should prove effective. We therefore recommend that the first step be a second request from the President to Marshal Stalin. In the meantime, however, we recommend further that the [State] Department and War Department come to an agreement on what retaliatory measures we can immediately apply in the event an unfavorable answer is received by the President from Marshal Stalin.

Consideration might be given to such actions as, or combination thereof (One) That General Eisenhower issue orders to restrict the movements of Soviet contact officers in France to several camps or points of concentration of their citizens far removed from the points of liberation, comparable to Lwow and Odessa; (Two) That Lend-Lease refuse to consider requests of Soviet Government additional to our fourth protocol commitments for such items as sugar, industrial equipment or other items that are not immediately essential for the Red Army and the Russian war effort; (Three) That consideration be given to allowing our prisoners of war en route to Naples to give stories to the newspapers of the hardships they have been subjected to between point of liberation and arrival at Odessa and that in answer to questions of correspondents, the War Department explain the provisions of our agreement and the Soviet Government's failure to carry out the provisions of our agreement according to any reasonable interpretation.

I request urgent consideration of this question and the Department's preliminary reaction. General Deane requests that this cable be shown to General Marshall [Eisenhower's second in Command, a British officer at Supreme Allied Headquarters].

HARRIMAN²⁴

President Roosevelt sent the following PERSONAL and SECRET cable for Marshal Stalin on March 18, 1945:

In the matter of evacuation of American ex-prisoners of war from Poland I have been informed that the approval for General Deane to survey the United States prisoners of war situation in Poland has been withdrawn. You stated in your last message to me that there was no need to accede to my request that American aircraft be allowed to carry supplies to Poland and to evacuate the sick. I have information that I consider positive and reliable that there are still a considerable number of sick and injured Americans in hospitals in Poland and also that there have been, certainly up to the last few days and possibly still are, large numbers of other liberated American prisoners either at Soviet assembly points or wandering about in small groups not in contact with Soviet authorities looking for American contact officers.

I cannot, in all frankness, understand your reluctance to permit American contact officers, with the necessary means, to assist their own people in this matter. This Government has done everything to meet each of your requests. I now request you to meet mine in this particular matter. Please call Ambassador Harriman to explain to you in detail my desires.²⁵

March 22, 1945, President Roosevelt received Marshal Stalin's reply:

I am in receipt of your message about the evacuation of former U.S. prisoners of war from Poland.

With regard to your information about allegedly large numbers of sick and injured Americans in Poland or awaiting evacuation to Odessa, or who have not contacted the Soviet authorities, I must say that the information is inaccurate. Actually, apart from a certain number who are on their way to Polish soil as of March 16, I have today received a report which says that the 17 men will be flown to Odessa in a few days.

With reference to the request contained in your message I must say that if it concerned me personally I would be ready to give way even to the detriment of my own interests. But in the given instance the matter concerns the interest of Soviet armies at the front and of Soviet commanders who do not want to have around odd officers who, while having no relation to the military operations, need looking after, want all kinds of meetings and contacts, protection against possible acts of sabotage by German agents not yet ferreted out, and other things that divert the attention of the commanders and their subordinates from their direct duties. Our commanders bear full responsibility for the state of affairs at the front and in the immediate rear, and I do not see how I can restrict their rights to any extent.

I must also say that U.S. ex-prisoners of war liberated by the Red Army have been treated to good conditions in Soviet camps—better conditions than those afforded Soviet ex-prisoners of war in U.S. camps, where some of them were lodged with German war prisoners and were subjected to unfair treatment and unlawful persecutions, including beating, as has been communicated to the U.S. Government on more than one occasion.²⁶

President Roosevelt apparently accepted Marshal Stalin's explanation since Ambassador Harriman's and General Deane's suggestion to allow

...our prisoners of war en route to Naples to give stories to the newspapers of the hardships they have been subjected to between point of liberation and arrival at Odessa and that in answer to questions of correspondents, the War Department explain the provisions of our agreement and the Soviet Government's failure to carry out the provisions of our agreement according to any reasonable interpretation.²⁷ was rejected. In fact, four days after Marshal Stalin's reply, General George C. Marshall, the U.S. Chief of Staff, issued an order on a "revised policy" to the U.S. Military Mission in Moscow and other Allied European Commands which read:

Superseding WARK-54401 to Deane and Gilles is revised policy publicly liberated prisoners: Individual interviews authorized provided personnel briefed beforehand against disclosure camp intelligence activities, evasion and escape briefings equipment. Censor all stories. Delete criticism Russian treatment...²²

This new policy of censoring all stories of Russian mistreatment of U.S. POWs effectively ensured that the public perception of the Soviet Union was that the Soviet Union was a stout ally of the United States. In fact, there was good reason to order the censorship of all stories criticizing Soviet treatment of U.S. POWs that the Red Army had "liberated" from Nazi control. A SECRET OSS report dated June 18, 1945, detailed an informal interview with Lt. Col. William F. Fessell...who recently returned from Russia where he was stationed at...Odessa, since early this year, mainly as a contact man with the Russians on problems connected with repatriation of American prisoners of war freed by the Russians. Toward the end of his stay he apparently became persona non grata with the Russians for he was suddenly ordered to leave by the American command and take the first boat out of Odessa, regardless of where it was going.²³

Under the subtitle of "Treatment of American PWs" the OSS report read:

American PWs freed by the Red Army were in the main treated very shabbily and came to hate the Russians. Many of them were robbed of watches, rings, and other personal possessions which they had managed to retain even after extended periods of captivity under the Germans. Their food at Odessa was very poor, consisting mainly of soup with cucumbers in it and sour black bread. The Russians generally tended to throw obstacles in the way of repatriation, frequently calling off shipments at the last minute and insisting always upon clearance from Moscow for every prisoner released. American PWs at Odessa were guarded by Russian soldiers carrying loaded rifles with fixed bayonets, and Russian security was more stringent there than German security had been in the various Salago and Orlage. A number of American officers who went to Poland at various times to coordinate the hunt for liberated PWs were ordered out very quickly at Russian insistence.²⁴

Despite the fact that Moscow was clearing the release of every U.S. prisoner held in Red Army territory--literally releasing them one at a time--U.S. forces were ordered:

that no repeat no retaliatory action will be taken by US forces at this time for Soviet refusal to meet our desires with regard to American contact teams and aid for American personnel liberated by Russian forces.²⁵

"SOME INCLINATION TO BLACKMAIL US"

The Soviets also refused the British contact teams access to their prisoners in Red Army controlled territory who came under Soviet control when the Red Army overran Nazi prison camps. A British government cable dated April 20, 1945, from the Acting Secretary of State, Sir Orme Sargent, to Lord Halifax, then the British Ambassador to the United States reads

It is clear that Soviet Government will not allow our contact teams into Poland. The Russians deny the existence of any British prisoners of war in Poland but we have evidence that there are prisoners of war concentrated at Cracow and Czestochow and in hospitals. This is a clear breach of the Yalta agreement...We have therefore turned to the Red Cross channel...²⁶

The same day that Lord Halifax received the above telegram, Sargent, sent Lord Halifax a telegram which concluded that the Soviets have some inclination to blackmail us into dealing with Warsaw authorities.²⁷

In other words, the Soviets were attempting to force the British to give de facto recognition to the Soviet puppet Polish Provisional government, the same demand that Ambassador Harriman believed was being pressed by the Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, Molotov, in order to end the "serious hardships from lack of food, clothing, medical attention, et cetera,"²⁸ of U.S. soldiers, about which Ambassador Harriman cabled the U.S. Secretary of State.

The U.S. and British forces, meanwhile, were living up to the Yalta agreement. Soviet liaison officers were infused into the Allied command structure, and these Soviet officers went about their business of assisting Allied forces to repatriate, forcibly or otherwise, Soviet and Eastern European citizens and soldiers who were in Allied controlled territory. As cable from Eisenhower's Deputy Commander, a British Marshal, states that we now have 153 Soviet Liaison Officers working under the direction of Major General Dragon who is charged with the responsibility of assisting us in the problem of repatriation.

2. That each Army Group has an organization to handle repatriation matters, and in these organizations we have woven Soviet Liaison Officers who are doing valuable work.²⁹

Soviet liaison officers assisting with repatriations of Soviets in Allied control, were taken to one camp, set up--in accordance with the Yalta agreement--for Soviet citizens and soldiers, in Bari, Italy where, as reported to the U.S. Secretary of State in a TOP SECRET cable:

Russians were permitted and encouraged to set up their own camp administration. Russians of all categories are accepted at Florence camp, outfitted with clothing, PX supplies and same facilities as for United States personnel. After minimum processing they are flown to Bari to await shipment to Russia. When Soviet military missions representatives were taken to inspect both camps, they [Soviet liaison officers] expressed pleasure and said treatment was 'too good.'²⁴

"THEY BEGGED TO BE SHOT...NINE MEN HANGED THEMSELVES"

Less than a week after the Secretary of State received the above cited cable, he received a pre-meeting briefing memorandum to prepare for his meeting with the Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs. With regard to the repatriation issue, the Secretary of State was advised to assure Mr. Molotov, that we have no intention of holding Soviet citizens after the collapse of Germany regardless of whether they desire to return to the Soviet Union or not.²⁵

In other words, the United States was fully committed to the policy of forcible repatriation. The Yalta agreement included the principle of "forced repatriation" of all Soviet citizens, meaning, any Soviet citizen, regardless of whether they wanted to return to the Soviet Union, were forcibly sent back to life under Stalin. This agreement, the Allies initially believed, would result in the repatriation of all of their soldiers and citizens. This provision of the Yalta agreement, in large part, the Allies abided by, despite the fact that hundreds of thousands of those forcibly repatriated to Soviet control were either shot or sent to forced labor camps.

In fact, when Lieutenant General Courtney H. Hodges, Commander, First U.S. Army inquired of Eisenhower's staff at Supreme Allied Headquarters, as to how much force an Army Commander should use in the control of displaced Russians...Talking with Judge McCloy today, he agreed that of course an Army Commander could use any force necessary to insure the success of his operations.²⁶

WORLD WAR II

Many Soviet citizens did not want to return to Soviet occupied territory, since those Soviets captured by the Germans, and recovered by Allied forces, were often recovered in German work camp uniforms. These Soviets captured by the Germans had been given the option of starving or joining a labor battalion. Most joined German labor battalions. Once repatriated to the Soviet Union, many of these Soviets were imprisoned immediately in slave labor camps. However, the Soviets sent to slave labor camps were considered lucky, since the others were often shot.

As a result, Soviet citizens and soldiers in Allied control were extremely reluctant to be repatriated. The following description is of an attempt by Allied soldiers to repatriate 399 former Russian soldiers by train to the Soviet Union:

All of these men refused to entrain. They begged to be shot. They resisted entrainment by taking off their clothing and refusing to leave their quarters. It was necessary to use tear gas and some force to drive them out. Tear gas forced them out of the building into the snow where those who had cut themselves fell exhausted and bleeding in the snow. Nine men hanged themselves and one had stabbed himself to death and one other who had stabbed himself subsequently died; while 20 others are in the hospital for self-inflicted wounds. The entrainment was finally effected of 368 men who were sent off accompanied by a Russian liaison officer on a train carrying American guards. Six men escaped enroute. A number of men in the group claimed they were not Russians...²⁷

SOVIETS DENY ACCESS TO CAMPS IN PACIFIC THEATRE

In the Pacific theater, even though the Soviets were late-comers in the war effort against Japan, they managed to take control of territory just across the Soviet Union's contiguous borders with Manchuria, China--as well as the northern islands of Japan. In doing so, the Soviets were able to seize some Japanese POW camps holding Allied prisoners.

In 1945, during the closing days of the war with Japan, U.S. military intelligence "Mercy Teams" were sent into China and Manchuria to arrange for the well-being of the Allied POWs in Japanese camps. Generally, Japanese troop commanders cooperated with the Mercy Teams, but the Soviets (as in Europe) and Chinese Communists denied Mercy Teams access to camps in areas under their control.

A cable from the Secretary of State to the United States Political Adviser for Germany states that the State Department "has been anxious in handling" the return of Soviet citizens and soldiers from Western Europe "to avoid giving the Soviet authorities any pretext for delaying the return of American POW's of Japanese now in Soviet occupied zone, particularly Manchuria."²⁸

The Soviets even sent a delegation to Hanoi to forcibly repatriate any French Foreign Legionnaires POWs in custody of the Japanese who were identified as citizens of the Soviet Union, or as citizens of any of the east bloc nations, were surrendered by the Allies to the Soviets.⁴¹

"76,000 AMERICAN POWs STILL...WITHIN RUSSIAN ZONE"

Five days after victory was announced in Europe (V-E day) the Associated Press, from Allied Advance Headquarters in Reims, France reported that Nearly half of the estimated 200,000 British and 76,000 American prisoners of war still in Germany are believed to be within the Russian zone of occupation and Supreme Headquarters has twice requested a meeting or an agreement to arrange their return.⁴²

Ten days later, a meeting between the Soviet and Allied command took place. The meeting, at Halle, Germany, on May 22, 1945, was for the purpose of conferring with representatives of the Russian High Command on the matter of repatriation of prisoners of war and displaced persons.⁴³

Lieutenant General K.D. Gohubev, Red Army, Soviet Assistant Administrator for Repatriation, led the Soviet delegation, and Major General R.W. Barker, U.S.A., Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, SHAEF led the Allied delegation.

One of the points of discussion at this meeting was the failure of the Soviets to provide U.S. and British liaison officers permission to visit their fellow soldiers who were formerly POWs held by the Germans and who were now being held in camps in Red Army occupied territory. In a cable from Eisenhower's Deputy Commander, British Marshall Tedder, to various Allied Command officials and U.S. diplomats, Marshall Tedder describes Soviet duplicity and policy on this matter:

Before the HALLE Conference we had made numerous attempts to visit PW Camps in the Russian Zone and always met a firm refusal. After the HALLE Conference General GOLEBEV asked to visit Camps where Russians were being kept. We agreed and asked him for permission to visit Camps in the Russian Zone. He agreed to allow 1 of our Officers to visit 5 Camps. One of my representatives started on the trip accompanied by a Russian Major who stated he had the necessary orders. After visiting the first and nearest Camp the Russian Officer produced orders signed by General GOLUBEV restricting our Officers visit to the one Camp. This is the only instance of Soviet authorities permitting US or British Officers to visit Camps in their area, which is in sharp contrast to the liberal policy pursued by us.⁴⁴

"AMERICAN POWs WERE, IN EFFECT, BEING HELD HOSTAGE"

From the beginning of the six day conference in Halle, Germany, it was for the Allies, a difficult meeting. In his post meeting report, Barker wrote:

When the Russian Mission was finally assembled it numbered some forty officers and forty to fifty enlisted men. Among the Russian officers were one Lieutenant General and six Major Generals. The Russian party arrived in requisitioned German vehicles of all makes, and American type armored car, fully equipped (armed), and a radio truck, which was in operation most of the time. All Russian male personnel were heavily armed with pistols, sub-machine guns and rifles.⁴⁵

The meeting began with the Soviets refusing to allow repatriation of Allied soldiers by air transport, which made the entire repatriation process much more cumbersome and logistically difficult. As Barker described:

After opening statements...I proposed the immediate initiation of steps looking toward prompt release and return to Allied control of all British and American prisoners of war then in Russian custody, using air and motor transport. This proposal was firmly resisted by General GOLUBEV, who cited all manner of local administrative difficulties which precluded the operation. He stated that serviceable airfields did not exist, which was known by myself to be not the case and I so informed him. The Russian position was very clear that neither now, nor at any time in the future, would they permit Allied airplanes to be used for the movement into or out of their territory of prisoners of war or displaced persons, except "Distinguished persons, sick and wounded."⁴⁶

After the initial meetings with the Soviets, lower level discussions were held by the parties in an attempt to work out mutually acceptable arrangements. However, as Barker wrote, these meetings "having proven futile," the decision was made that all discussions were to be carried on directly between the heads of the Missions, with certain members of their respective parties in attendance. On the Russian side, those present numbered normally from twenty to twenty-five, including several general officers. The SHAEF representatives in attendance normally were myself, General MICKELSEN, Brigadier VENABLES and two to four representatives of the technical services.⁴⁷

Barker wrote that it was after the first four-hour session of the meeting in Halle, Germany that the SHAEF (Supreme Headquarters of the Allied European Forces) representatives came to the firm conviction that British and American prisoners of war were, in effect, being held hostage by the Russians until deemed expedient by them to permit their release.⁴

This is the first high level report that openly suggested that the Soviets may not repatriate all of the Allied POWs in Red Army occupied territory. In fact, after six days of meetings with the Soviets, Barker concluded that

There is every indication that the Russians intend to make a big show of rapid repatriation of our men, although I am of the opinion that we may find a reluctance to return them all, for an appreciable time to come, since those men constitute a valuable bargaining point. It will be necessary for us, therefore, to arrange for constant liaison and visits of inspection to 'uncover' our men.⁵

"ONLY SMALL NUMBERS OF U.S. POWs STILL REMAIN IN RUSSIAN HANDS"

On May 19, four days before the start of the Halle meeting, a cable signed by Eisenhower at the Allies Supreme Headquarters, stated that:

Numbers of US prisoners estimated in Russian control 25,000.⁶

After the Halle meeting, given Barker's conclusion that British and American prisoners of war were, in effect, being held hostage by the Russians and that the Soviets were reluctant to return them all, for an appreciable time to come, since those men constitute a valuable bargaining point,⁷ the return of all US and British POWs held in Red Army occupied territory appeared to be in serious doubt.

Furthermore, a TOP SECRET May 31, 1945 letter from Major General John R. Deane, the U.S. Army Commanding General of the U.S. Military Mission in Moscow to Lt. General Slavin, the Assistant Chief of the Red Army in Moscow indicated that the Soviets were still holding over 15,500 U.S. "liberated" POWs. Deane's letter stated:

I have had a cable from General Marshall in which he states he has received information which indicates that 15,597 United States liberated prisoners of war are now under control of Marshal Tolbukhin.⁸

WORLD WAR II

On May 30, 1945, more than three weeks after Germany surrendered, General Kenner, Eisenhower's Surgeon General at SHAEF Headquarters, received a memorandum on the subject "Displaced Persons, Allied ex-PW and German PW."⁹ The following accounting from the Kenner memorandum detailed the number of Allied ex PW and Displaced Persons Allied Supreme Command reported were being held captive in territory occupied by the Red Army on May 30, 1945:

2. Russian Sphere.

	PW	DP
Belgian	50,000	115,000
Dutch	4,000	140,000
British	20,000
U.S.	20,000
French	250,000	850,000

The Kenner memorandum, dated May 30, 1945, stated 20,000 Americans remained under Red Army control. Major General Deane requested information from the Assistant Chief of the Red Army in Moscow about over 15,500 Americans the Soviets were believed to be holding in a letter dated May 31, 1945. Therefore, it is difficult to reconcile these facts with a cable signed by Eisenhower on June 1, 1945, which read:

C. It is now estimated that only small numbers of U.S. prisoners of war still remain in Russian hands. These no doubt are scattered singly and in small groups as no information is available of any large numbers in specific camps. They are being received now only in small driplets and being reported as received.

Everything possible is being done to recover U.S. personnel and to render accurate and prompt reports thereon to the War Department.¹⁰

The claim of the second Eisenhower cable that "only small numbers of U.S. prisoners of war still remain in Russian hands" and that these "no doubt are scattered singly and in small groups as no information is available of any large numbers in specific camps," directly contradicts the information in the Kenner memorandum which states, a mere 48 hours earlier, that 20,000 U.S. POWs were still being held by the Red Army. Furthermore, it directly contradicts the information in General Deane's letter dated the day before that "information which indicates that 15,597 United States liberated prisoners of war are now under control of Marshal Tolbukhin." WORLD WAR II of Major General Dean's TOP SECRET letter, and given the contents of the Kenner memorandum, the Eisenhower cable of June 1 appears to be an attempt to gloss over a serious problem.

At any rate, the Eisenhower cable was merely following the official U.S. news propaganda line. On the same day as the cable stating "only small numbers of U.S. prisoners of war still remain in Russian hands," The New York Times reported the War Department had announced that "substantially all" of the American soldiers taken prisoner in Europe are accounted for, Under-Secretary Robert P. Patterson said. "This means that it is not expected that many of those who are still being carried as missing in action will appear later as having been prisoners of war."⁴⁴

In other words, on June 1, 1945, the U.S. government's public position was that most American GIs taken prisoner have come home and been repatriated, even though the classified cable traffic for the previous fortnight was reporting between 15,000 and 20,000 still held.

"ITEMS 'POWs (Current Status)'... ARE STILL LARGE"

On June 5, 1945, Allied command, from its headquarters in Paris, France, announced that 25,000 of some 90,000 men who had returned from German POW camps after the Allied military victory were men who had been listed as Missing in Action (MIA).⁴⁵ Given that 90,000 U.S. soldiers had returned at the time of the announcement, and that the U.S. War Department, for the European Theater had records of 77,500 U.S. "Prisoners Taken," 102,500 Americans should have returned from Europe, not 90,000.⁴⁶

In other words, the sum of 77,500 known POWs and 25,000 returned MIAs equals 102,500 American soldiers; however, only some 90,000 were repatriated. These numbers may be summarized in tabular form:

Total Prisoners Taken	+ Repatriated MIAs	= Total To Be Repatriated
77,500	+ 25,000	= 102,500

However, the total number of men who were repatriated in June, 1945, were only 90,000. The net number not repatriated, therefore, is as follows:

⁴⁴ "10,000 Ex-Captives Coming By Week-End; Army Sees All in Europe Accounted For," The New York Times, June 1, 1945.

⁴⁵ "25,000 Missing U.S. Soldiers Turn Up Alive," New York Herald Tribune, June 6, 1945.

⁴⁶ See chart "CAPTURED OR INTERNED UNITED STATES ARMY PERSONNEL," December 7, 1941 - October 31, 1945, compiled by the Statistical Branch, Department of Defense, January 7, 1946.

WORLD WAR II

Total To Be Repatriated	- Actual Repatriated	= Total Not Repatriated
102,500	- 90,000	= 12,500

The conclusion is that even a rudimentary assessment of the Allies' own figures suggests that some 12,500 Americans were never repatriated from Red Army controlled territory.

However, the 12,500 figure is significantly lower than the 20,000 POWs known to be in Soviet control as detailed in the Kenner memorandum, which was written 48 hours before the War Department's announcement that "it is not expected that many of those who are still being carried as missing in action will appear."⁴⁷

Was the figure of 20,000 U.S. POWs still held in Red Army occupied territory cited in the SHAEF memorandum to General Kenner correct? Was the real figure closer to 12,500 Americans kept as slave laborers and hostages by the Red Army, as indicated by the Allies' own public figures announced by Lt. Colonel Schweitzer? Or, was the correct number of American soldiers not repatriated by the Soviets the figure cited by Major General Deane, in his May 31, 1945 letter to the Soviets, that "indicated" 15,597 American soldiers were under the control of Marshal Tolbukhin?

On February 25, 1946, some eight months later, the Chief of the Strength Accounting Office, in the War Department's Chief of Staff Office, transmitted to the National Headquarters of the Red Cross in Washington, D.C., a "chart showing Missing in Action (including captured) U.S. Army personnel for the period 7 December 1941, through 31 December 1945."⁴⁸

In his letter Ballard stated:

It will be noted that the items "Prisoners of War (Current Status)" and Missing in Action (Current Status)" are still large. The reason of course is that as of 31 December 1945 these categories reflected latest definite reports available for statistical compilation, and the situation to date has not materially changed. You will appreciate that for statistical purposes these casualties cannot be moved to other categories until detailed disposition records have been processed. In many cases, final disposition must await a legal determination of death under PL 490 which may take up to next September, even though investigation to date leaves little logical doubt that a given man is permanently lost....

The foregoing data was classified "Restricted", but has been approved for release to you.⁴⁹

WORLD WAR II

The chart enclosed with Ballard's letter revealed the following statement, as of December 31, 1945, for the German theaters:

Captured		Other Missing in Action*
Returned to Mil. Control	P.O.W. (Curr. Stat)	MIA
		Declared Dead	(Current Status)
90,937	5,414	11,753	2,997

"LITTLE LOGICAL DOUBT THAT A GIVEN MAN IS PERMANENTLY LOST"

Figures for "Prisoners Not Returned to Military Control," compiled by the Statistical Branch of DOD list 6,595 men in that category as of October 31, 1945.^a According to the cable above, as of December 31, 1945, 5,414 men were still listed as "P.O.W. (Current Status)". Therefore, between October 31, 1945 and December 31, 1945 the U.S. Department of Defense figures for "Prisoners Not Returned to Military Control" decreased from 6,595 to the number listed above, 5,414.

Because the number of U.S. prisoners repatriated between October 31, 1945, and December 31, 1945, totalled only 435, (stragglers, no doubt) the decrease in the number of prisoners listed in the P.O.W. (Current Status) category from 6,595 to 5,414 cannot be explained merely by the repatriation of 435 POWs still returning from Red Army occupied territory. This still leaves a decrease of 646 men from P.O.W (Current Status) unexplained.^a

The remaining decrease in the number of men still listed as POWs (646) can, however, be explained by the War Department issuing Presumed Findings of Death for these individuals. In fact the numbers in the category of known POWs not returned in June, 1945 were likely close to 20,000, as the Kenner Memorandum stated.

This number would not include MIAs, but only known POWs.

By the end of October, the War Department was likely able to make legal Presumed Findings of Death in the majority of these cases, leaving the number of "Prisoners Not Returned to Military Control" not 12,500, but 6,595.

^a Roughly only 1,000 POWs were repatriated in the last half of 1945.

WORLD WAR II

The figure of 11,753 Declared Dead under the category Other Missing in Action, in the chart of casualty figures for December 31, 1945, actually represent Presumed Findings of Death (PFDs), as authorized by U.S. law. These PFDs were made from both the MIA (Current Status) list and the P.O.W. (Current Status) list, decreasing the numbers in those categories and increasing the number in the Declared Dead category.

As a result, Lt. Col. Ballard felt obligated to explain to the Director of the Relief to Prisoners of War of the Red Cross that for "statistical purposes" the numbers in the Prisoner of War (Current Status) and the Missing in Action (Current Status) were "still large." Ballard explained to the Red Cross that "these casualties cannot be moved to other categories" until each man can be found, legally, to be dead. This finding of death occurs, as Lt. Col. Ballard points out, after an "investigation to date leaves little logical doubt that a given man is permanently lost."^a

The most striking aspect of these documents is the revelation that the War Department's Chief of the Strength Accounting and Statistic Office, in the Office of the Chief of Staff of the War Department, main function was to resolve each outstanding case by determining—as soon as enough time elapsed to make it legally possible—that each man is "permanently lost," and therefore, dead.

The thrust of the War Department's efforts were not in the direction that most Americans would expect their government to proceed; that is, to make a thorough effort to determine the fate of each man. Given the obvious and observed policy by the Soviet government to hold citizens and soldiers from Western countries, known to senior U.S. officials, Lt. Col. Ballard's efforts should have been concentrated on determining where the Soviets were holding these men, and not merely to "await a legal determination of death under PL 490 which may take up to next September."

Thus, the bureaucratic precedents created in World War I in the cases of "presumed dead" among these missing from the American Expeditionary force were once again followed. Thousands of U.S. personnel who were known to be POWs held by the Germans in World War II, but, were not repatriated once the territory they were being held in was occupied by Red Army, and were legally determined to be dead.

"NO INFORMATION IS AVAILABLE OF ANY LARGE NUMBERS"

Where were these thousands of Americans and hundreds of thousands of Europeans? Nearly a month after the Eisenhower cable claimed that "only small numbers of U.S. prisoners of war still remain in Russian hands" and that these "no doubt are scattered singly and in small groups as no information is available of any large numbers in specific camps," Eisenhower sent a SECRET PRIORITY cable to General Deane in Moscow which read

WORLD WAR II

Possibility that several hundred American prisoners of war liberated from Stalag Luft 1, Barth, are now confined by the Russian Army in the Rostock area pending identification as Americans is reported by an American who recently returned from such confinement.

S/Sgt. Anthony Sherg was one of 1000 air force officers and non-commissioned officers who left Stalag Luft 1 immediately prior to assumption of control in Barth by the Red Army in order to obtain rumored air transport from Wismar. The group of ten in which Sgt Sherg travelled was arrested by Russian soldiers and held in jails in Bad Döberan, then Rostock. Ten other Americans were soon under similar circumstances in Rostock.

Russian authorities demanded identification papers, which no prisoner possessed, and refused to consider dog tags proof of the Americans' status. The Americans were well fed and well treated but Sherg complains there was no disposition to speed identification and evacuation. After 25 days he escaped from jail and made his way to British Forces.

From his own observations and conversations with other former prisoners he believes several hundred Americans may be held in like circumstances in the Wismar-Bad Döberan-Rostock Area.⁴⁴

"LAGER CONFINES WILL NEVER BE REPATRIATED"

In fact, there continued to be many reports of Americans being held by the Soviets. For example, the catalogue of the National Archives lists a memorandum from the State Department Special Projects Division, date February 6, 1946, regarding a conversation between Colonel Kavanaugh, from War Department and Captain George, and Mr. Baily, regarding Doolittle fliers interned by the Soviet Union.⁴⁵ These fliers were never repatriated.

Again, a letter to the leader of France's National Constituent Assembly dated August 17, 1946 from the Deputy of the Bas-Rhin stated:

I have brought to the attention of the Minister for ex-Prisoners of War the testimony of Mr. Joseph Bogenschütz, 55 Grand Rue, at Mulhouse (Haut Rhin), who was repatriated on last July 7 from Russia, from Camp 199-6 at Imskaya, which is 70 kilometers from Novosibirsk [...]. Bogenschütz states that he wrote at least three cards a month through the Red Cross (Red Crescent) since September 1944 and that none of these cards ever arrived. Bogenschütz, in addition thereto, alleges that there still remain American, British, Belgian, Polish, Rumanian, Luxemburg, etc. nationals in the Camp.⁴⁶

⁴⁵ Listed in the catalog of the National Archives as Memo No. FW 740.00114 PW. However, the actual document is missing. The Doolittle fliers were crew members of the daring surprise "Doolittle raid" on Tokyo, a one-way bombing mission in April, 1942 by 16 B-24 bombers, from the aircraft carrier USS Hornet.

WORLD WAR II

Another example is a report from the Headquarters of the United States Forces in Austria, to the Director of Intelligence, the General Staff of the U.S. Army, dated June 15, 1946 which stated:

SUBJECT: USSR - American Army Personnel in Confinement

SUMMARY OF INFORMATION

The following information was obtained from a former forced laborer who claimed to have been confined in an unregistered lager with Subject personnel. Informant claimed to have been released through an error committed by the commandant of the Moscow hospital where she was transferred because of infantile paralysis.

Approximately 60 km from Moscow, in the direction of Kaline, there is an unregistered labor camp. The confines, 150 men and 50 women, work in coal mines in the vicinity of the camp. Among those confined are 3 American Air Force soldiers who were captured by the German Wehrmacht, Czechoslovakia, during April 1945. These men are:

Charlie, 21 years, 170 cm, blond, blue eyes, has paralyzed right shoulder.

Joe...165 cm, dark blond, dark eyes, has stomach wound and is confined in lager infirmary.

Albert, 27 years, 170 cm, black hair, brown eyes, has stiff left hip and burn scar on left side of face, is from Texas.

The lager confines will never be repatriated and are not permitted to write letters.⁴⁷

The reasons that the Soviets kept U.S. POWs and other Western European citizens and POWs are difficult for the citizens of free countries to fathom. However, one may speculate on at least five explanations:

First, for economic concessions, or as Major Vershenko stated, for 'credits.'

Second, to satisfy the Soviet view—as described by Molotov—that it "was dangerous" merely to disarm an adversary (or in the case of the U.S., an ally who may be a future adversary) but it was also necessary to "make them work."

Third, as a source of slave labor to rebuild their industrial base.

Fourth, as the British cable stated, to satisfy the Soviet "inclination to blackmail us into dealing with Warsaw authorities" and for other political concessions.

Fifth, to ensure that the Allies forcibly repatriated Russian and other eastern European citizens who did not wish to return to their countries under Soviet control.

⁴⁷ Memorandum, CONFIDENTIAL, "To: Director of Intelligence, General Staff, U.S. Army, Washington D.C. From: C. P. Bilzel, Colonel GSC, Director of Intelligence for the Headquarters, United States Forces in Austria," July 13, 1948.

The daughter of one such U.S. Army officer—Major Wirt Thompson—was never told that in 1955 a German POW repatriated from the Soviet concentration camp system reported to the United States government that while he was in prison, he met her father. The German repatriate told American officials that Thompson told him that he had been imprisoned at Budenakaya prison near Moscow, and also in the Tayshet labor camp after World War II. Not only was Thompson's daughter "overwhelmed" when she found out early in 1991 that this information existed, but she wondered how her family could have been told by the United States government in 1944 that Major Thompson had been killed in action, body not recovered.⁶

THE KOREAN WAR

Unlike the result in World War II, Allied forces did not achieve a military victory in Korea. The Korean War ended at the negotiating table between Communist North Korean representatives and United Nations representatives.

With regard to POW repatriation, the North Koreans initially demanded an "all-for-all" prisoner exchange. The United States was reluctant to agree to this formula based on its World War II experience with the Yalta agreement and mandatory repatriation, knowing that thousands of those forced to return to the Soviet Union were either shot or interned in slave labor camps, where most of them died. After two long years of negotiations, the North Koreans agreed to the principle of voluntary or "non-forcible repatriation." This agreement stated that each side would release only those prisoners who wished to return to their respective countries.

Operation BIG SWITCH was the name given to the largest and final exchange of prisoners between the North Koreans and the U.N. forces, which occurred over a one-month period from August 5, 1953 to September 6, 1953.¹ Chinese and North Korean POWs were returned to North Korea, and U.S. and other U.N. troops were returned to South Korea. Approximately 14,200 Communist Chinese POWs elected not to return to the Peoples Republic of China; while 21 American POWs elected to stay with the Communist forces, and likely went to China. These 21 Americans are defectors and obviously are not considered as unrepatriated U.S. POWs.

However, U.S. government documents state that the U.S. government knew that nearly one thousand U.S. POWs—and an undetermined number of some 8,000 U.S. MIAs—were still held captive after operation BIG SWITCH and were not repatriated at the end of the Korean War. These U.S. POWs were never repatriated.

Three days after the start of operation BIG SWITCH, the New York Times reported that

Gen. James A. Van Fleet, retired commander of the United States Eighth Army in Korea, estimated tonight that a large percentage of the 8,000 American soldiers listed as missing in Korea were alive.²

THE KOREAN WAR

"LEAVES A BALANCE OF 8,000 UNACCOUNTED FOR"

A report by the U.N. Combined Command for Reconnaissance Activity, Korea, five days into operation BIG SWITCH, stated:

"Figures show that the total number of MIAs, plus known captives, less those to be US repatriated, leaves a balance of 8,000 unaccounted for." [emphasis added]¹

The report mentions numerous reports of U.N. POWs who were transferred to Manchuria, China, and the USSR since the beginning of hostilities in Korea.² Specifically, the report stated many POWs transferred have been technicians and factory workers. Other POWs transferred had a knowledge of Cantonese and are reportedly used for propaganda purposes.³

The number of known U.S. POWs not repatriated from the Korean War was cited by Hugh M. Milton II, Assistant Secretary of the Army in January, 1954, in a memorandum he wrote four months after the conclusion of operation BIG SWITCH. Section 3, Part B reads:

B. THE UNACCOUNTED-FOR AMERICANS BELIEVED TO BE STILL HELD ILLEGALLY BY THE COMMUNISTS (SECRET)

1. There are approximately 954 United States personnel falling in this group. What the Department of the Army and other interested agencies is doing about their recovery falls into two parts. First, the direct efforts of the UNC Military Armistice Commission to obtain an accurate accounting, and second, efforts by G2 of the Army, both overt and covert, to locate, identify, and recover these individuals. G2 is making an intensive effort through its information collection system world-wide, to obtain information on these people and has a plan for clandestine action to obtain the recovery of one or more to establish the case positively that prisoners are still being held by the Communists. No results have been obtained yet in this effort. The direct efforts of the UNC [United Nations Command] are being held in abeyance pending further study of the problem by the State Department.

2. A further complicating factor in the situation is that to continue to carry this personnel in a missing status is costing over one million dollars annually. It may become necessary at some future date to drop them from our records as 'missing and presumed dead.' [emphasis added]

⁴ Memorandum, SECRET, TO: Secretary of the Army, Subject: The Twenty-One Non-Repatriates and the Unaccounted-For Americans Believed to be Still Held Illegally by the Communists, From: Assistant Secretary Milton, January 16, 1954.

THE KOREAN WAR

In fact, the Defense Department did in fact "drop them" from DOD records as "missing and presumed dead," as were the non-repatriated U.S. POWs from the American Expeditionary Force in World War I and World War II. In a memorandum to Milton from Major General Robert Young, the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1 of the U.S. Army, Young updates Assistant Secretary Milton on the progress on dropping the U.S. POWs from DOD records:

2. Under the provisions of Public Law 490 (77th Congress), the Department of the Army, after careful review of each case and interrogation of returning prisoners of war, has placed 618 soldiers, known to have been in enemy hands and unaccounted for by the Communist Forces in the following categories:

313 - Finding of Death - Administratively determined, under the provisions of Public Law 490, by Department of the Army.

275 - Report of Death - reported on good authority by returning prisoners.

21 - Dishonorable Discharge.

4 - Under investigation, prognosis undecided. Missing in Action for over one year.

2 - Returned to Military Control.¹

The number had already been dropped from 954 to 618 through a series of presumed findings of death for the "unaccounted-for Americans believed to be still held illegally by the Communists." Presumed findings of death were also used to whittle down the number of U.S. soldiers listed as MIA.

According to the "Interim Report of U.S. Casualties," prepared by the Office of the Secretary of Defense, as of December 31, 1953 (Operation BIG SWITCH ended September 6, 1953), the total number of U.S. soldiers who had been listed as Missing in Action from the Korean War was 13,325. Still listed as MIA in January 1, 1954 were 2,953, and the figure for died, or presumed dead, was 5,140. 5,131 MIAs had been repatriated and 101 were listed as "Current captured."²

"THESE PEOPLE WOULD HAVE TO BE 'NEGOTIATED FOR'"

On June 17, 1955, almost two years after the end of operation BIG SWITCH, the Office of the Secretary of Defense, issued an internal report titled, "Recovery of Unrepatriated Prisoners of War." The report admitted that,

THE KOREAN WAR

After the official repatriation efforts were completed, the U.N. Command found that it still had slightly less than 1000 U.S. PWs [not MIAs] "unaccounted for" by the Communists.⁹

Although frank and forthright, this report--written by staff of the Office of Special Operations--provides a glimpse into the thinking of those involved in the Korean POW issue. Sections of the report follow:

At the time of the official repatriation, some of our repatriates stated that they had been informed by the Communists that they (the Communists) were holding 'some' U.S. flyers as 'political prisoners' rather than as prisoners of war and that these people would have to be negotiated for through political or diplomatic channels. Due to the fact that we did not recognize the red regime in China, no political negotiations were instituted, although [the] State [Department] did have some exploratory discussions with the British in an attempt to get at the problem. The situation was relatively dormant when, in late November 1954, the Peking radio announced that 13 of these 'political prisoners' had been sentenced for 'spying'. This announcement caused a public uproar and a demand from U.S. citizens, Congressional leaders and organizations for action to effect their release.¹⁰ [emphasis added]

The eleven U.S. "political prisoners," were not the only U.S. servicemen the Chinese held after the Korean War. The New York Times, reported

Communist China is holding prisoner other United States Air Force personnel besides the eleven who were recently sentenced on spying charges following their capture during the Korean War. This information was brought out of China by Squadron Leader Andrew R. MacKenzie, a Canadian flier who was released today by the Chinese at the Hong Kong border. He reached freedom here two years to the day after he was shot down and fell into Chinese hands in North Korea. Held back from the Korean war prisoner exchange, he was released by the Peiping [sic] regime following a period of negotiations through diplomatic channels. Wing Comdr. Donald Sizoo, his brother-in-law who was sent here from Canada to meet him, said guardedly at a press conference later that an undisclosed number of United States airmen had been in the same camp with Squadron Leader MacKenzie. Wing Commander Sizoo said none of the Americans in the camp was on the list of eleven whose sentencing was announced by the Chinese November 23, 1954.¹¹

"AMERICAN POWs REPORTED IN ROUTE TO SIBERIA"

Despite some political inconvenience to the Department of Defense, the government felt that the issue and controversy had been controlled. The conclusion of the report, "Recovery of Unrepatriated Prisoners of War," stated:

⁹ Report, CONFIDENTIAL, prepared by Defense Advisory Committee on Prisoners of War, Study Group III, titled "Recovery of Unrepatriated Prisoners of War," a document presented by the Office of Special Operations, Office of the Secretary of Defense, written by James J. Kelleher, Report No. CPOW/3 D-1, June 8, 1955.

THE KOREAN WAR

Such as they are, our current efforts in the political field, plus the 'stand-by' alternatives developed by the military, represent the full range of possible additional efforts to recover personnel now in custody of foreign powers. On one hand, we are bound at present by the President's 'peaceful means' decree. The military courses of action apparently cannot be taken unilaterally, and we are possessed of some rather 'reluctant' allies in this respect. The problem becomes a philosophical one. If we are 'at war,' cold, hot or otherwise, casualties and losses must be expected and perhaps we must learn to live with this type of thing. If we are in for fifty years of peripheral 'fire fights' we may be forced to adopt a rather cynical attitude on this for political course of action something like General Enkinde outlined which would (1) instill in the soldier a much more effective 'don't get captured' attitude, and (2) we should also push to get the military commander more discretionary authority to retaliate, fast and hard against these Communist tactics.¹²

Reports of the fate of these Americans continued to come to the attention of the United States government. One such report, a Foreign Service Dispatch (cable) by Air Pouch dated March 23, 1954, sent from the U.S. diplomatic post in Hong Kong to the State Department in Washington, sheds some light on the fate of hundreds of U.S. POWs captured during the Korean War. The report reads:

American POWs reported en route to Siberia

A recently arrived Greek refugee from Manchuria has reported seeing several hundred American prisoners of war being transferred from Chinese trains to Russian trains at Manchouli near the border of Manchuria and Siberia. The POWs were seen late in 1951 and in the spring of 1952 by the informant and a Russian friend of his. The informant was interrogated on two occasions by the Assistant Air Liaison Officer and the Consulate General agrees with his evaluation of the information as probably true and the evaluation of the source as unknown reliability. The full text of the initial Air Liaison Office report follows:

First report dated March 16, 1954, from Air Liaison Office, Hong Kong, to USAF, Washington, G2.

"This office has interviewed refugee source who states that he observed hundreds of prisoners of war in American uniforms being sent into Siberia in late 1951 and 1952. Observations were made at Manchouli (Lupia), 49 degrees 50'-117 degrees 30' Manchuria Road Map, AMSL 201 First Edition, on USSR-Manchurian border. Source observed POWs on railway station platform loading into trains for movement into Siberia. In railway restaurant source closely observed three POWs who were under guard and were conversing in English. POWs wore sleeve insignia which indicated POWs were Air Force noncommissioned officers. Source states that there were a great number of Negroes among POW shipments and also states that at no time later were any POWs observed returning from Siberia. Source does not wish to be identified for fear of reprisals against friends in Manchuria, however is willing to cooperate in answering further questions and will be available Hong Kong for questioning for the next four days."

Upon receipt of this information, USAF, Washington, requested elaboration of the following points:

¹² Report, CONFIDENTIAL, prepared by the Defense Advisory Committee on Prisoners of War, Study Group III, "Recovery of Unrepatriated Prisoners of War," a document presented by the Office of Special Operations, Office of the Secretary of Defense, written by James J. Kelleher, Report No. CPOW/3 D-1, June 8, 1955.

THE KOREAN WAR

1. Description of uniforms or clothing worn by POWs including ornaments.
2. Physical condition of POWs.
3. Nationality of guards.
4. Specific dates of observations.
5. Destination in Siberia.
6. Presence of Russians in uniform or civilian clothing accompanying movement of POWs.
7. Complete description of three POWs specifically mentioned.

The Air Liaison Office complied by submitting the telegram quoted below.

FROM USAIRLO SGN LACKEY. CITE C4 REUR 53737 following answers submitted to seven questions.

(1) POWs wore OD outer clothing described as not heavy inasmuch as weather considered early spring. Source identified from pictures service jacket, field, M1943. No belongings except canteen. No ornaments observed.

(2) Condition appeared good, no wounded all ambulatory.

(3) Station divided into two sections with tracks on each side of loading platform. On Chinese side POWs accompanied by Chinese guards. POWs passed through gate bisecting platform to Russian train manned and operated by Russians. Russian trainmen wore dark blue or black tunic with silver colored shoulder boards. Source says this regular train uniform but he knows the trainmen are military wearing regular train uniforms.

(4) Interrogation with aid of more fluent interpreter reveals source first observed POWs in railroad station in spring 1951. Second observation was outside city of Manchouli about three months later with POW train headed towards station where he observed POW transfer. Source was impressed with second observation because of large number of Negroes among POWs. Source states job was numbering railroad cars at Manchouli every time subsequent POW shipments passed through Manchouli. Source says these shipments were reported often and occurred when United Nations forces in Korea were on the offensive.

(5) Unknown.

(6) Only Russian accompanying POWs were those who manned train.

(7) Three POWs observed in station restaurant appeared to be 30 or 35. Source identified Air Force non-commissioned officer sleeve insignia of Staff Sergeant rank, stated that several inches above insignia there was a propeller but says that all three did not have propeller. Three POWs accompanied by Chinese guard. POWs appeared thin but in good health and spirits, were being given what source described as good food. POWs were talking in English but did not converse with guard. Further information as to number of POWs observed source states that first observation filled a seven passenger car train and second observation about the same. Source continues to emphasize the number of Negro troops, which evidently impressed him because he had seen so few Negroes before.

Comment Reporting Officer: Source is very careful not to exaggerate information and is positive of identification of American POWs. In view of information contained in Charity Interrogation Report No. 619 dated 5 February 54, Reporting Officer gives above information rating of F-2. Source departing Hong Kong today by ship. Future address on file this office.

In this connection the Department's attention is called to Charity Interrogation Report No.

619, forwarded to the Department under cover of a letter dated March 1, 1954, to Mr. A. Sabin Chase, DRF. Section 6 of this report states, "On another occasion source saw several coaches full of Europeans who were taken to USSR. They were not Russians. Source passed the coaches several times and heard them talk in a language unknown to him."¹³

"PRISONERS IN PEACE AND REFORM CAMPS WILL NOT BE EXCHANGED"

The report from Hong Kong was specifically discussed in Major General Young's April 29, 1954 memorandum to Assistant Secretary of the Army, Hugh Milton, II. Young, responding to Milton's request to "consolidate information on prisoners of war which may remain in Communist hands," states in his memorandum written six months after the last U.S. POW returned from North Korea, that the above quoted intelligence report corroborates previous indications UNC POWs might have been shipped to Siberia during Korean hostilities....reports have now come [to the] attention [of the] U.S. Government which support earlier indications that American prisoners of war from Korea had been transported into Soviet Union and are now in Soviet custody. Request fullest possible information these POWs and their repatriation earliest possible time."¹⁴

One CIA intelligence report, which had an information date as of October 1950 - February 1951, confirmed that hundreds of Negro troops were held by the North Koreans. The CIA report stated:

1. One Republic of Korea soldier who was captured by the Communists on 29 October 1950 was sent to a war prison camp at Pyoktong (125-26, 40-36) in North P'yongan. This camp in early November had about 1,000 American war prisoners, of whom about 700 were negroes, approximately 1,500 ROK prisoners, and about 300 civilian employees of the United Nations forces.¹⁵

A different three page CIA intelligence report, on Prisoner of War Camps in North Korea and China, with information dated January-May, 1952, described the Chinese Communist system of camps for U.N. POWs.

officer attached to the general headquarters of the Soviet Far Eastern Military District, controlled prisoner of war camps in Manchuria and North Korea. The office, formerly in Mukden, employed 30 persons, several of whom were English-speaking Soviets. LIN Mai (2651/6701) and NAM IL (0589/2480) were deputy chairmen of the office.

2. The office had developed three types of prisoner-of-war camps. Camps termed 'peace camps,' detaining persons who exhibited pro-Communist leanings, were characterized by considerate treatment of the prisoners and the staging within the camps of Communist rallies and meetings. The largest peace camp, which held two thousand prisoners, was at Chungchun. Peace camps were also at Kaiyuan Kasien (124-05, 42-36) and Pech'ŭ (123-43, 41-20).

3. Reform camps, all of which were in Manchuria, detained anti-Communist prisoners possessing certain technical skills. Emphasis at these camps was on re-indoctrination of the prisoners.

4. Normal prisoner-of-war camps, all of which were in North Korea, detained prisoners whom the Communists will exchange. Prisoners in peace and reform camps will not be exchanged. [emphasis added]

5. Officials of North Korean prisoner of war camps sent reports on individual prisoners to the War Prisoner Administrative Office. Cooperative prisoners were being transferred to peace camps. ROK [Republic of Korea] officers were being shot; ROK army soldiers were being reintegrated and assimilated into the North Korean army.

...13. On 6 January four hundred United States prisoners, including three hundred negroes, were being detained in two buildings at Naisao Nan Kuan Chaili, at the southeast corner of the intersection, in Mukden. One building, used as the police headquarters in Naisao Nan Kuan during the Japanese occupation, was a two-story concrete structure, 30 meters long and 20 meters wide. The other building, one story high and constructed of gray brick, was behind the two-story building. Both buildings had tile roofs. All prisoners held here, with the exception of three second lieutenants, were enlisted personnel. The prisoners, dressed in Chinese Communist army uniforms, with a red arm band on the left arm, were not required to work. Two hours of indoctrination were conducted daily by staff members of the Northeast Army Command. Prisoners were permitted to play basketball in the courtyard. The attempt of three white prisoners to escape caused the withdrawal of permission for white prisoners to walk alone through streets in the vicinity of the camp. Two Chinese Communist soldiers guarded groups of white prisoners when such groups left the buildings. Negroes, however, could move outside the compound area freely and individually. Rice, noodles, and one vegetable were served daily to the prisoners in groups of 10 to 15 men. One platoon of Chinese Communist soldiers guarded the compound.¹⁷

"...DEVOID OF ANY FOUNDATION WHATSOEVER..."

In an attempt to resolve the unrepatriated U.S. POW problem from the Korean war by diplomacy, the United States officially communicated with the Soviet government on May 5, 1954. The official U.S. diplomatic note to the Soviet Union stated:

The Embassy of the United States of America presents its compliments to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics and has the honor to request the Ministry's assistance in the following matter.

¹⁷ Report, CIA, "Subject: Prisoners-of-War Camps in North Korea and China," No. SO 91634, July 17, 1952.

THE KOREAN WAR

The United States government has recently received reports which support earlier indications that American prisoners of war who had seen action in Korea have been transported to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and that they are now in Soviet custody. The United States Government desires to receive urgently all information available to the Soviet Government concerning these American personnel and to arrange their repatriation at the earliest possible time.¹⁸

On May 12, 1954, the Soviet Union replied:

In connection with the note of the Embassy of the United States of America, received by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics on May 5, 1954, the Ministry has the honor to state the following:

The United States assertion contained in the indicated note that American prisoners of war who participated in military actions in Korea have allegedly been transferred to the Soviet Union and at the present time are being kept under Soviet guard is devoid of any foundation whatsoever and is clearly far-fetched, since there are not and have not been any such persons in the Soviet Union.¹⁹

The Soviet response predicates denial of access to the men on its refusal to characterize the U.S. personnel as "prisoners of war." In fact, the Soviets made it a practice to refuse to acknowledge the U.S. citizenship of the U.S. soldiers; as a result—from the Soviet's standpoint—the Soviet denial is accurate.

Nor was this lesson — that the Soviets do not acknowledge the citizenship of U.S. POWs — ever learned. According to a April 15, 1991 press advisory issued by the United States Department of State, the United States once again requested that the Soviets "provide us with any additional information on any other U.S. citizens who may have been detained as a result of World War II, the Korean conflict or the Vietnam War," a request that repeated the mistake of asking for information only about U.S. citizens that the State Department made 37 years earlier.

The State Department also made a point of including in its recent press advisory the government's usual statement that "in the interest of following every credible lead in providing families of U.S. service members with information about their loved ones."²⁰ Furthermore, according to the press advisory, the State Department specifically asked the Soviets only about "two U.S. planes shot down in the early 1950s,"²¹ and did not ask the Soviets any specific questions about any non-repatriated POWs from World War II, the Korean War, and the Vietnam War. It seems apparent that if the Department of State had expected to get solid information from the Soviet government, then the State Department would have sent a much more comprehensive and appropriately phrased request.

THE KOREAN WAR

The sincerity of the State Department's declared intention to follow "every credible lead in providing families of U.S. service members with information about their loved ones" is, therefore, suspect. One U.S. government document dated January 21, 1980, a memorandum from Michael Oksenberg to Zbigniew Brzezinski, the National Security Advisor under President Carter, reveals the cynical view and attitude of at least one U.S. government official with regard to the non-repatriation issue, a letter from you is important to indicate that you take recent refugee reports of sighting of live Americans 'seriously'. This is simply good politics; DIA and State are playing this game, and you should not be the whistle blower. The idea is today that the President [Carter] is determined to pursue any lead concerning possible live MIAs.²¹

"...POWs WHO MIGHT STILL BE IN COMMUNIST CUSTODY..."

The executive branch's disinformation tactics against concerned mothers and fathers extended to Congressmen and Senators. One case is found in a December 21, 1953 letter sent to the Secretary of State from Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson with regard to a constituent letter from Mr. Paul Bath of Marshall, Texas, who wrote Senator Johnson about a U.S. News and World Report article titled "Where are 944 Missing GI's?"

The first reaction of the Secretary of State's office was to call Johnson and dispose of the matter by phone. However, as a written reply was requested, Thurston B. Morton, the Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations, was tasked to reply. The evolution of the text of Morton's letter to Johnson—which took four rewrites to complete—definitively illustrates the ambivalence with which the United States government has approached the non-repatriation issue. The four drafts still exist today, and they illustrate how the State Department artfully sought to mislead the future U.S. President, and the most powerful leader in Congress at the time.

The first draft of the State Department's response contained the following text:

On September 9, the United Nations Command presented to the Communist representatives on the Military Armistice Commission a list of approximately 3,404 Allied personnel, including 944 Americans, about whom there was evidence that they had at one time or another been in Communist custody. The kinds of evidence from which this list was drawn included letters written home by prisoners, prisoners of war interrogations, interrogations of returnees, and Communist radio broadcasts. The United Nations Command asked the Communist side for a complete accounting of these personnel.

On September 21, the Communists made a reply relative to the list of names presented to them by the United Nations Command on September 9, in which they stated that many of the men on the list had never been captured at all, while others had already been repatriated.²²

THE KOREAN WAR

This entire section was crossed out by Morton, but a persistent foreign service officer sent Morton back the second draft, with the section quoted above unchanged, as well as a new sentence at the end of the introductory paragraph which read:

He [Mr. Paul Bath of Marshall, Texas] can be assured that efforts are being made to obtain the release of all our men in Communist custody and may be interested in having the following information about this matter.²³

The second draft also contained a new page which followed the paragraphs used in the first draft. The second page of the second draft read:

General Clark, in a letter of September 24 [1954], two and a half weeks after Operation BIG SWITCH ended] to the Communist side, stated that he considered their reply wholly unacceptable, and pointed out that by signing the armistice agreement the Communists had undertaken a solemn obligation to repatriate directly or to hand over to the custody of the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission all of the captured persons held by them at the time the armistice was signed. He pointed out that this obligation was binding upon them and applied to all United Nations Command persons regardless of where captured or held in custody. I am enclosing a copy of General Clark's letter of September 24 which you may wish to send to your constituent.

On November 21, the United Nations Command provided the Communist side with a revision of its original list of unaccounted for Allied personnel which it had presented to the Communists on September 9. The revised list contained a total of 3,400 names, and the figure for United States prisoners of war unaccounted for was increased by eight to a total of 952.

On November 21, the United Nations Command protested in the Military Armistice Commission to the Communists that they had still failed to give a satisfactory reply concerning the list of unaccounted for United Nations Command personnel, and pointed out that additional evidence provided by three Korean prisoners of war who recently defected to the United Nations side corroborated the United Nations Command statements that the Communists were withholding prisoners of war. The United Nations Command demanded that the Communists "hand over to the custody of the Custodian Forces of India all those prisoners that your side still retains."

Ambassador Arthur Dean has also referred to this problem in the course of his negotiations with the Communists at Panmunjom.

Your constituent may be assured that it continues to be our determined purpose to obtain the return of all personnel in Communist custody and the United Nations Command will make every effort to accomplish the objective.²⁴

Assistant Secretary Morton rejected all the proposed changes in the second draft by crossing them out. The third draft of the letter to Johnson was so disagreeable to Morton that he typed out two sentences and attached it to the draft and crossed out all other sentences that related to the State Department's reply. As a result, the final letter read:

²³ Letter, second draft "To: Senator Johnson, From: Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations, Thurston B. Morton," file number SEV 611.61241/12-2153.

My dear Senator Johnson:

I refer to your letter of December 21, acknowledged by telephone on December 30, with which you enclose a letter from Mr. Paul Bath of Marshall, Texas concerning an article in the December 18 issue of U.S. News and World Report. It is believed that Mr. Bath refers to the article "Where are 944 Missing G.I.s?" on page 27 of this publication.

I am enclosing copies of a statement recounting the efforts being made to secure the return of American prisoners of war who might still be in Communist custody which I believe will be of assistance to you in replying to your constituent. As the statement points out, it continues to be our determined purpose to obtain the return of all personnel in Communist custody and we will do everything possible to accomplish this objective. (emphasis added)

With regard to questions as to whether there are military personnel or other United States citizens in the custody of the Soviet Government, a few of the prisoners-of-war of other nationalities recently released by the Soviet Government have made reports alleging that American citizens are imprisoned in the Soviet Union. All of these reports are being investigated by this Department with the cooperation of other agencies of the Government.

You are probably aware that representations which the United States Government recently made to the Soviet Government resulted in the release in Berlin on December 29 of Homer H. Cox and Leland Towers, two Americans reported by returning (German) prisoner-of-war as being in Soviet custody. The Department will investigate, as it has done in the past, every report indicating that American citizens are held in the custody of foreign governments.

Sincerely Yours,

For the Secretary of State,

Thurston B. Morton*

It is noteworthy that Morton's letter contained no specific or accurate information, as contrasted with the three rejected drafts which had such information. The rhetoric of the State Department could not go beyond the word "might" to describe the possibility of U.S. soldiers being held by Communist forces. On the one hand, the State Department was taking credit for having released two Americans from the Soviet gulag and for investigating "every report indicating that American citizens are held in the custody of foreign governments," but on the other it was dismissing any real possibility that there could be more POWs in Communist prisons. Meanwhile, the State Department knew that the North Koreans had not returned nearly 1,000 U.S. POWs, as well as an undetermined number of the 8,000 MIAs who were actually captured alive and imprisoned by the North Koreans.

* Letter, final "To: Senator Johnson, From: Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Relations, Thurston B. Morton", file number SEV 611.61241/12-2153, January 20, 1954.

"THEY...WOULD HOLD ME LIKE THEY HAD DONE THESE OTHER GUYS"

The People's Republic of China, as noted earlier, released a Canadian Squadron Leader thirteen months after the last U.N. POW was repatriated by the Communist forces three months after Operation BIG SWITCH. In 1973, Chinese Communists repatriated two American POWs who had been captured during the Korean War, along with a pilot, Philip Smith, who was shot down over the Gulf of Tonkin during the Vietnam war. During interrogation sessions in Smith's seven years of solitary confinement in a PRC jail, these two U.S. POWs from the Korean War were paraded before him. Smith said the Chinese told him:

they wouldn't release me, and would hold me like they'd done to these other guys until I recanted.²⁷

Most Americans would find it incomprehensible that the Chinese would hold U.S. POWs from the Korean War, and release them two decades later; yet, to the Chinese Communists, this policy had some rationale.

At the conclusion of Operation BIG SWITCH, the United States Government left U.S. POWs, held against their will, in custody of the North Koreans, the mainland Chinese, and the USSR. Whether any of these men are still alive is tragically-unclear.

The fate of the more than 8,000 men listed as MIA who were administratively found to be "presumed dead" is a mystery. No rebuttal was ever made to General Van Fleet, who stated in the fall of 1953 his belief that a large percentage of the 8,000 American soldiers listed as missing in Korea were alive.²⁸ "A large percentage" translates into thousands of U.S. soldiers who were never repatriated by the Communist forces after the Korean war.

Seven years after operation BIG SWITCH, one Foreign Service Dispatch to the State Department in Washington contained the names of two U.S. Korean POWs working in a Soviet phosphorus mine.²⁹ The cable, "sanitized" by the United States government, originally contained the names of the two U.S. POWs. However, but the names were blacked out in the sanitized version. According to the United States government, the names were blacked out to protect the abandoned POWs' "privacy." It is absurd that the U.S. government, having abandoned soldiers to a life of slave labor and forced captivity, is attempting to protect the same abandoned soldiers' "privacy."³⁰ Perhaps this example best illustrates the U.S. approach to repatriating our abandoned POWs.

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

The war widely known as the Vietnam War was the second war fought by Communist forces in Vietnam and in Southeast Asia. The Vietnamese forces, after defeating the French, fought the Second Indochina war against the United States and U.S.-backed forces. In the final analysis, however, this war was a political and moral defeat for the United States.

As a result, the United States was forced at the Paris Peace Conference to negotiate its withdrawal from Southeast Asia from a weak military and political position. Internal divisions in the United States and mounting political pressure to extricate the nation from the war, exacerbated this weak negotiating position. As a result, the United States, as in World War I, World War II, and the Korean War, found itself, once again, unable to guarantee the repatriation of all U.S. POWs and MIAs who were alive and held captive.

The United States' chief negotiator at the Paris Peace Conference, Henry Kissinger, admitted as much in his book, Years of Upheaval, published in 1982. Kissinger wrote:

Equally frustrating were our discussions of the American soldiers and airmen who were prisoners of war or missing in action. We knew of at least eighty instances in which an American serviceman had been captured alive and had subsequently disappeared. The evidence consisted of either voice communications from the ground in advance of capture or photographs and names published by the Communists.¹

Operation HOMECOMING, the name given to the last repatriation of U.S. POWs by the North Vietnamese began February 12, 1973, and ended March 29, 1973. A grand total of 591 United States servicemen were repatriated.

However, news reports and other documentation stated that the United States Government knowingly left men—perhaps thousands of men—in the captivity of Communist forces in Southeast Asia.

On January 27, 1973, an agreement to end the war and restore peace in Vietnam was signed in Paris, France. Signatories to this agreement were the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam, and the South Vietnamese Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG). This agreement consisted of a preamble, and nine chapters, covering 23 Articles and four protocols.

¹ Henry Kissinger, Years of Upheaval (Boston: Little, Brown and Company, 1982) pp.33-34.

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

In Chapter VII, Articles 21 and 22 outlined the future relationship between the United States and the Republic of North Vietnam. These read in part, Article 21: ...In pursuance of its traditional policy, the United States will contribute to healing the wounds of war and to post-war reconstruction of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and throughout Indo-China.

Article 22: The ending of the war, the restoration of peace in Vietnam, and the strict implementation of this agreement will create conditions for establishing a new, equal and mutually beneficial relationship between the United States and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam on the basis of respect for each others independence and sovereignty, and non-interference in each others internal affairs. At the same time, this will ensure stable peace in Vietnam and contribute to the preservation of lasting peace in Indo-China and South East Asia.

The Paris accord stated that the return of prisoners of war, would be carried out simultaneously with and completed not later than the same day as the troop withdrawal.

"THERE ARE NO MORE PRISONERS IN SOUTHEAST ASIA."

The United States did not receive the list of Americans POWs the whom North Vietnamese admitted they were holding in captivity until after the peace accords were signed. Significantly, the list included only nine Americans captured in Laos. While these men were captured in Laos, they were not prisoners of the Pathet Lao, but were handed over to, and held by, the North Vietnamese after their capture.

In fact, it was widely known that the Pathet Lao were holding many other U.S. POWs. On March 25, one news report stated:

U.S. sources believe that a substantial number of the missing [in Laos]—perhaps as many as 100—still may be alive. The conclusions are based on inspections of crash sites by search teams and on intelligence reports.¹

The absence of names on the U.S. POW list handed over by the North Vietnamese of Americans captured in Laos and held by the Pathet Lao was one of the great blunders of the Paris Peace Accord negotiations and caused great confusion and emotional duress among family members of missing and captured personnel.

¹ United Press International dispatch, Vientiane, Laos, March 25, 1973.

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

One news report stated, three days after the Paris Peace accords were signed:

The North Vietnamese have failed to furnish the United States with a list of American fighting men taken prisoner in Laos, Pentagon officials and an organization of POW families said Sunday. Mrs. Phyllis Galanti, board of chairman of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia told a reporter there are no Laos names on lists provided to U.S. authorities in Paris Saturday after the Vietnam cease-fire agreement was formally signed. Everything we have been told had led us to believe there would be a list, said Mrs. Galanti. Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedhelm said it is true that no Laos list was provided. We do expect to receive a list Friedhelm said.³

In fact, the United States government never received such a list. Two weeks later, one news report carried the United States government explanation for the absence of names of American POWs held by Pathet Lao. The report quoted State Department officials who stated they believe that the list of nine persons submitted by North Vietnam was incomplete and that there are more Americans held by Laotian Communists.⁴

In other words, the U.S. government's explanation for the lack of names of U.S. POWs held in Laos was that the North Vietnamese and the Laotians were holding back the names. Indeed, the next day, the Pathet Lao confirmed that they were holding back names. According to a news report from Laos, the Pathet Lao publicly announced through a Communist Pathet Lao spokesman...[that]...his group is holding American prisoners of war who will be released after a cease-fire goes into effect. Soth Petray, the Pathet Laos permanent representative in Vientiane, declined to give any details about American POWs in Laos. But he said the Pathet Lao leadership has a detailed accounting of prisoners and where they were being held and that both sides in the cease-fire negotiations are ready to exchange prisoners once the fighting ends. The exchange will take place in Laos, Soth said. If they were captured in Laos, they will be returned in Laos, he told UPI. [emphasis added]⁵

The Pathet Lao wanted a cease-fire agreement and were holding American prisoners until such an agreement between the United States and the Pathet Lao was reached. However, State Department officials, responding to the Pathet Lao statement quoted above:

pointed out today that the Pathet Lao statement was not consistent with more detailed statements made by Kissinger and that it was possible that Kissinger's statements were based on some misunderstanding in his dealings with the North Vietnamese.⁶

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

Mr. Kissinger's misunderstanding was that the United States believed, as Kissinger stated in a January 24, 1973 press conference, that American prisoners held in Laos and North Vietnam will be returned to us in Hanoi.⁷

However, during the 60 day cease-fire period required by the Paris Peace accords, American airmen were still flying combat missions and being shot down in the secret war over Laos. Mr. Kissinger's misunderstanding was never cleared up, and at the conclusion of Operation HOMECOMING more than a month later, no American prisoners of war held in Laos were released by the North Vietnamese or the Pathet Lao. These men, and the men that the Pathet Lao forces publicly stated they were holding after the Paris Peace Agreement was signed, have never come home.

On March 26, 1973, the North Vietnamese announced that the last American prisoners of war would be repatriated March 27 and March 28, 1973. The hopes of the nation and of family members that American prisoners of war held by the Pathet Lao would be released by the North Vietnamese were crushed. As one news report stated

North Vietnam told the United States Sunday it intended to release the last group of American prisoners it holds at Hanoi's Gia Lam Airport on Tuesday and Wednesday, but said the U.S. demand that it also release POWs captured in Laos is beyond the jurisdiction of the [Paris] agreement. [emphasis added]⁸

The North Vietnamese publicly concurred with the Pathet Lao's policy with regard to the repatriation of the U.S. POWs the Pathet Lao were holding. Two weeks into this stalemate over the repatriation of U.S. POWs held by Pathet Lao, between the Pathet Lao and the North Vietnamese on one side, and the United States on the other, the United States announced that

There are no more prisoners in Southeast Asia. They are all dead.⁹

Furthermore, one news report quoted a United States government spokesman, who stated,

Rumors that there were hundreds of U.S. Servicemen held in Laotian prison camps, does the families [of the missing] a disservice.¹⁰

These statements were made notwithstanding the eighty men cited by Henry Kissinger held by the North Vietnamese, and notwithstanding the fact the no U.S. POWs held by Pathet Lao forces have ever been repatriated. Clearly, both of the above United States Government statements were demonstrably false; they were designed—one can only speculate—to persuade the media that information with regard to prisoners still alive in Southeast Asia had no foundation whatsoever, and furthermore, only compounded the emotional anxiety of anxious and grieving family members. fact of the matter is that the Pathet Lao publicly admitted to holding U.S. POWs in Laos, and Kissinger implicitly agreed when he said

American prisoners held in Laos and North Vietnam will be returned to us in Hanoi.¹¹

Yet the U.S. government abandoned any attempt to bring them back home, by announcing "they are all dead."¹²

THE KISSINGER HAND-CARRIED LETTER

Five days after the signing of the Paris Peace Accords, Kissinger hand-carried a letter, dated February 1, 1973 to the North Vietnamese Prime Minister a letter which detailed the Administration's interpretation of Article 21 of the Paris Peace Accords, which pledged that the United States would contribute to the healing the wounds of war and post-reconstruction of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

The letter, and the commitments it implied, were not revealed even to the highest-ranking Senators and members of Congress. The text of the letter follows:

The President wishes to inform the Democratic Republic of Vietnam of the principles which will govern United States participation in the postwar reconstruction of North Vietnam. As indicated in Article 21 of The Agreement on Ending the War and Restoring the Peace in Vietnam signed in Paris on January 27, 1973, the United States undertakes this participation in accordance with its traditional policies. These principles are as follows:

- 1) The Government of the United States of America will contribute to postwar reconstruction in North Vietnam without any political conditions.
- 2) Preliminary United States studies indicate that the appropriate programs for the United States contribution to postwar reconstruction will fall in the range of $3.25 billion of grant aid over five years. Other forms of aid will be agreed upon between the two parties. This estimate is subject to revision and to detailed discussion between the Government of the United States and the Government of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.
- 3) The United States will propose to the Democratic Republic of Vietnam the establishment of a United States-North Vietnamese Joint Economic Commission within 30 days from the date of this message.
- 4) The function of this Commission will be to develop programs for the United States contribution to reconstruction of North Vietnam. This United States contribution will be based upon such factors as:

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

a) The needs of North Vietnam arising from the dislocation of war;

b) The requirements for postwar reconstruction in the agricultural and industrial sectors of North Vietnam's economy.

5) The Joint Economic Commission will have an equal number of representatives from each side. It will agree upon a mechanism to administer the program which will constitute the United States contribution to the reconstruction of North Vietnam. The Commission will attempt to complete this agreement within 60 days after its establishment.

6) The two members of the Commission will function on the principle of respect for each others sovereignty, non-interference in each others internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit. The offices of the Commission will be located at a place to be agreed upon by the United States and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

7) The United States considers that the implementation of the foregoing principles will promote economic, trade and other relations between the United States of America and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and will contribute to insuring a stable and lasting peace in Indochina. These principles accord with the spirit of Chapter VIII of The Agreement on Ending the War and Restoring Peace in Vietnam which was signed in Paris on January 27, 1973.

UNDERSTANDING REGARDING ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

It is understood that the recommendations of the Joint Economic Commission mentioned in the Presidents note to the Prime Minister will be implemented by each member in accordance with its own constitutional provisions.

NOTE REGARDING OTHER FORMS OF AID

In regard to other forms of aid, United States studies indicate that the appropriate programs could fall in the range of 1 to 1.5 billion dollars depending on food and other commodity needs of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.¹³

It is unfortunate that the North Vietnamese did not understand the important Constitutional caveat inherent in the Kissinger hand-carried letter. Any funds paid to the North Vietnamese, or any funds to purchase any aid given to the North Vietnamese, would have to be appropriated by the United States Congress.

But Congress knew nothing of the Kissinger commitments. Had key Senators and Congressmen been told of the policy, they would have had the opportunity to tell the President that voting for billions of dollars of aid or funds for North Vietnam would have been an admission of culpability. The United States had failed in its mission to protect South Vietnam from the totalitarian Communist regime in the North.

The suffering, brutality, death and dehumanization borne by the Vietnamese people since the war is proof that the American goals in Vietnam were correct. However, the failure of the civilian leadership to achieve those goals had to do more with the collapse of political leadership in the United States than with the morality of the goals. Congress realized full well, if Kissinger did not, that the soothing word "reconstruction" actually meant "reparations." The American people would never pay reparations when no crime had been committed. Congress saw Kissinger's plan as a betrayal and an admission of guilt.

However, there is no doubt that the North Vietnamese concluded that the President's emissary had pledged billions of dollars in reparations to the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

Two weeks after the date of the letter delivered by Kissinger, the United States and the North Vietnamese announced the formation of the Joint Economic Commission, in fulfillment of paragraph (3) of that letter. The announcement, according to one news report stated that

The United States and North Vietnam will create a Joint Economic Commission to oversee rebuilding of the war-torn country with U.S. dollars; the two sides announced Wednesday. A communique issued by the White House and Hanoi on four days of talks by President Nixon's envoy, Henry A. Kissinger, and North Vietnamese leaders in Hanoi listed no specific figures for U.S. post war aid.¹⁴

Negotiations were underway between Kissinger and the North Vietnamese to implement specific aspects of the Kissinger letter. However, the White House was beginning to understand the depth of the political problems it was going to have with its aid plan. One news report from Paris stated the U.S. negotiators refused to acknowledge whether reparations to North Vietnam were being discussed, or the amounts which were being discussed. According to the report,

U.S. and North Vietnamese representatives met Monday to discuss American postwar reconstruction aid to the North Vietnamese...the American peace delegation declined to confirm the opening of the talks on President Nixon's plan for the postwar financing of North Vietnam's reconstruction...Nixon answered Congressional critics by saying aid money would come out of Defense and Agency for International Development funds instead of the domestic budget. The president said giving money to help North Vietnam rebuild its bombed country would contribute to lasting peace and stability in the area.¹⁵

In fact, U.S. reparations to North Vietnam were being discussed in Paris, France from April through June of 1973. The negotiations were extensive and detailed. A list of specific items was drawn up for the first year of U.S. aid. Among some of the items on the list:

700,000 square meters of prefabricated housing and warehouses; 200,000 metric tons of steel building supplies; 50,000 cubic meters of timber; 40 million meters of cloth; 2,000 metric tons of Rayon fibers; between 2,650 and 2,900 tractors, bulldozers and excavators; three repair plants for the equipment; 20,000 metric tons of steel tubes; 25-50 tug boats; 3 floating ports and 3 cranes, one floating 600 metric tons of barges; 570 trucks; 10 diesel locomotives; between 250-500 freight cars; 10,000 metric tons of rail; 10 6-25 ton pile hammers; 15,000 metric tons of synthetic rubber; 10,000 metric tons of caustic soda; 10,000 metric tons of steel; 5,000 metric tons of steel alloy; 2,500 metric tons of copper; 3,000 metric tons of high tension copper cable; 50,000 metric tons of coal; 1 million meters of tire cord; among other specific aid negotiated.

The negotiators had even drawn up a larger list of aid items to be given to North Vietnam as reparations by the United States from 1973 thru to 1978.

Political problems, however, were working against the Administrations plans to aid North Vietnam. One news report three weeks after the United States and North Vietnam announced the creation of the Joint Economic Commission illustrates the problems the senior Administration officials were encountering on Capitol Hill,

Secretary of State William P. Rogers Wednesday refused to rule out reconstruction aid to North Vietnam by presidential order if Congress fails to appropriate the funds...Rogers three times called for restraint by members of Congress in making adverse comments on the aid issue, at least until American troops are out of Vietnam and all American prisoners are released [emphasis added]¹⁶

One other news report stated:

Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Tuesday the Nixon administration will seek prior authority from Congress for any economic assistance program to Vietnam...in a Monday session before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Rogers asked that the controversy over aid be kept to a minimum for the next month or so. Such a recess in debate would allow the release of American prisoners to be completed and would also provide time for the administration to formulate its proposals...While the North Vietnamese did not list a number of prisoners they wanted freed, The New York Times reported from Saigon today that American sources set the demand at 5,000 [emphasis added]¹⁷

In fact, only 591 U.S. POWs were repatriated by the North Vietnamese during Operation HOMECOMING, which is 12% of the figure of 5,000 U.S. POWs held by the North Vietnamese reported by The New York Times.

The number of prisoners which The New York Times reported that the United States government demanded from the North Vietnamese—5,000—correlates with the statement of a former employee of the United States government. This former National Security Agency (NSA) employee said in a sworn affidavit that the North Vietnamese repatriated only 15% of the U.S. servicemen they held in captivity. In other words, according to this source, the North Vietnamese kept 85% of the American POWs who were alive after March 28, 1973.

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

"A SOVIET, A CHINESE AND A VIETNAMESE GREETED THE PILOTS..."

Some evidence suggests that a number of nonrepatriated Americans may have been turned over to Soviet control, and subsequently transported to the Soviet Union. A former U.S. military serviceman, assigned to the NSA provided the Minority Staff sworn affidavits that during the Vietnam war he "tracked" a certain number of U.S. servicemen from their point of capture to their release to the Soviets for debriefings by the both North Vietnamese and Communist Laotians officials. This has not been corroborated, but information provided to the Minority Staff indicates that American POWs may have been sent to the Soviet Union for interrogation and subsequent use of their special skills.

Indeed, a declassified CIA report gives graphic details of a debriefing incident in Vinh Phu Province involving a group of U.S. pilots captured in Vietnam. Soviet personnel were present at the debriefing. At the conclusion of the debriefing, the U.S. POWs were turned over to a new set of guards who evidently wore distinct uniforms, suggesting a different kind of custody.

A review of declassified documents asserts that the phosphate plant described was a site for transfer of U.S. POWs to Soviet custody. Declassified portions of the CIA document available to the Minority Staff are as follows.

Report No. CS-311/04439-71
Date Dist-10 June 1971

Country: North Vietnam

DOI: 1965-June 1967

Subject: Preliminary debriefing site for captured U.S. Pilots in Vinh Phu Province and presence of Soviet Communist and Chinese Personnel at the site

1. A preliminary debriefing point for U.S. pilots shot down over Vinh Phu Province, North Vietnam (NVN), was located at the Lam Thao district, Vinh Phu Province. Two U.S. pilots were taken to the debriefing point on one occasion in 1963; eight in 1966; and unknown number in 1967. The prisoners were escorted to the site by personnel of the Armed Public Security Forces (APSF), and students from a nearby school served as perimeter guards. Each time prisoners were brought to the site they rode in an open car of Chinese origin resembling an American jeep. Some of the escort guards rode in a lead car and others rode in two cars following the prisoners. Upon their arrival at the plant, the guards lined up, forming a corridor through which the pilots entered the building. At this point a Soviet, a Chinese, and a Vietnamese greeted the pilots and led them into the building. The pilots usually remained in the building for several hours. When they emerged they had changed from uniforms into civilian clothing. [deleted] said [deleted] had told him the foreigners were Soviet and Communist Chinese. Soviet personnel had been stationed at the plant since its construction in 1963, but in 1965 the number of Soviets was reduced to three or four, and it remained at that level as of June 1967. About 20 Communist Chinese personnel arrived at the plant in 1966 and there were still about 20 there as of June 1967 as far as [deleted] knew, the Soviet and Communist Chinese personnel got along well.

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

along well.

2. After shaking hands with the Soviet and Chinese, the prisoners were led to a different vehicle from the one which brought them to the site. They were escorted from the plant by a different set of guards who wore yellow and white uniforms and were armed with rifles and pistols. [Deleted] did not know the destination of the prisoners.

In a previous chapter, U.S. government intelligence cables, and diplomatic and other official memorandum, and correspondence showed that U.S. prisoners were seen being transferred to Communist China and the Soviet Union during the Korean War. The Korean War precedents give verisimilitude to the assertions received by the Minority Staff, that U.S. POWs were sent and kept in the Soviet Union; although the available evidence is not yet conclusive.

"PRISONERS RETURNED AFTER FULFILLMENT OF THE PROMISE"

United States government officials have been told by North Vietnamese officials that the North Vietnamese government was still holding U.S. POWs well after the conclusion of OPERATION HOMECOMING. Lt. Col. Stuart A. Harrington, who worked on the POW/MIA issue as a military intelligence and liaison officer with the North Vietnamese and Peoples Republic of China from 1973 to 1975, stated that North Vietnamese officials told him U.S. POWs would be returned when the reparations that Kissinger promised to the North Vietnamese were paid. In his book, Peace with Honor? An American Reports on Vietnam, 1973-1975, Harrington wrote:

U.S. casualties under North Vietnamese control would be accounted for and prisoners returned after fulfillment of the promise. [emphasis added]¹⁴

The North Vietnamese--apparently--were waiting for the reparations that Kissinger had promised them, before the vast majority of American POWs reported by The New York Times were to be repatriated. Doubtless the North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao held the prisoners back as human collateral. It should be noted that the 5,000 POW figure cited by Times is slightly less than twice that of the United States official POW and MIA totals. However, it is possible that the 5,000 figure reflected the total number of individuals believed to be held by Communist forces in Southeast Asia at that time. This total would have included the total number of covert or "Black Cowboy" POWs and MIAs who were not factored into the official United States government MIA and POW casualty figures for the entire Second Indochina war throughout Southeast Asia.

The North Vietnamese knew well enough that the internal political dynamics of the peace movement in the United States had forced the United States to the bargaining table in a weakened condition. Through this same political network, they clearly saw that it was unlikely the U.S.

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

Congress would vote for billions in reparations.

The political resistance to aid to North Vietnam grew, for among other reasons, because of numerous news reports that detailed North Vietnamese torture of repatriated U.S. POWs:

Reports from returning prisoners of war of torture and mistreatment by Hanoi [which] have stirred new attacks in Congress against U.S. aid for North Vietnam. Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the torture stories have not changed his own position that aid to Hanoi would help ensure the peace. But, he added, he does not know what effect the stories will have on getting aid through Congress. "Even before this it looked difficult," stated Rep. Joel T. Broyhill, (R-VA), who said the stories convince me that not a cent of American aid money should be spent on rehabilitating a country that is apparently run by savages.²⁰

On April 6, 1973, the United States Senate voted to bar any aid to North Vietnam unless Congress specifically approves.²¹

The 88-3 roll call vote in the Senate, combined with the general political sentiment in Congress, indicated there was very little chance that Congress was going to vote for the Administrations request for aid to North Vietnam.

The final death-knell for the payment of reparations to North Vietnam occurred a week later when Armed Services Chairman F. Edward Hebert...served notice he will introduce a proposal to prohibit any U.S. aid for Hanoi. The Louisiana Democrat also said justification for President Nixon's request for $13 billion aid to Southeast Asia so far is either nebulous or nonexistent.²²

It was the very next day after Chairman Herbert announced his intention to introduce a proposal to prohibit aid for Hanoi, that the United States made its definitive statement that there were no more Americans alive in Southeast Asia and that "rumors" did the families a disservice.²³

Several weeks later, in June, 1973, the American Embassy, Saigon, sent a cable to the Secretary of State, in Washington, D.C. which documents one of the attempts to cover up evidence that the U.S. Government abandoned U.S. POWs in Southeast Asia:

Subject: PW REPORT BY NVA DEFECTOR
REP: STATE 112133

he had seen six prisoners whom he believed were Americans who had not yet been released. American officer present at interview requested news services to play down details: AP mention was consistent with embargo request, while UPI and NBC after talk with Embassy press officer omitted item entirely from their stories.

2. Details on rallier's account being reported SEPTTEL through military channels by BRIGHT LIGHT message today. WHITE HOUSE.

This cable appears to be an active step on the part of the U.S. government to insure there would be no media reports of American servicemen still being held captive in Southeast Asia, since such reports would have conflicted with the United States government's policy statement that there were no U.S. POWs left in Southeast Asia, because "they are all dead."

In a September, 1978 hearing before the U.S. House of Representatives Special Committee on Southeast Asia, Congressman Benjamin Gilman (R-NY) asked former Under Secretary of State Philip Habib about the existence of any agreements we are not aware of, secret memorandum that this committee is not aware of?

Mr. Habib responded to Congressman Gilman's question in this fashion:

There is no agreement or secret memorandum which this Committee is not aware of in this respect. There were, as the Committee is aware, some letters and exchanges. With respect to those letters, I think the committee has been informed of the content of those letters and exchanges.

Mr. Frank McCloskey (D-IN) then stated:

With all due respect, Mr. Secretary, this committee asked the Secretary of State and you the same question before we went to Hanoi last December. You did not advise us of that secret [Kissinger hand-carried] letter and we discovered its existence only when we got to Hanoi. We didn't have any idea the letter existed. We asked you in November if there were any secret agreements that we should know about before we went to Hanoi and we were not advised by you or the Secretary of State of the letters existence or of the $3.25 billion figure which we later ascertained.

Mr. Habib, in response to Mr. McCloskey's question, stated:

That [the letter] is not an agreement. It never developed into an agreement. I didn't know of the existence of the letter...either.

Given the intensity of the negotiations which both the United States and the North Vietnamese undertook specifically at the time to implement the contents of the secret letter, including the creation of the Joint Economic Commission and extensive negotiations, it is hard to accept Mr. Habib's assertion that the letter did not constitute—at least as far as Kissinger represented to the North Vietnamese—a secret executive agreement.

THE SECOND INDOCHINA WAR

The House Committee's final report stated:

After the war, when the provisions for gaining an accounting failed to be followed, the State Department tried other means to achieve that end. It tried government-to-government appeals, demands, and protests. It enlisted the assistance of international humanitarian organizations, sought the aid and support of third-party nations and the pressure of world opinion. Short of recommencing the war there were few remaining alternatives on the diplomatic level. North Vietnam was already under a total embargo, and when South Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia fell to Communist forces in 1975, South Vietnam and Cambodia were soon included in the embargo.

Perhaps if Congress and the American public had known of the existence of the secret letter, perhaps if Congress had been given a full accounting of the information on MIAs possessed by the U.S. government, instead of a cover-up, then a concrete plan for implementing the provisions for gaining accounting of captives as described in the Paris Peace Accords, might have been implemented. But there was no way that Congress, with honor, could be blackmailed into accepting the payment of reparations with its tacit implication of surrender to a ruthless Communist regime.

PROLOGUE TO PART II

The original plan of the Minority Staff was to review the U.S. government's handling and evaluation of "live-sighting reports." These reports are first-hand narratives by witnesses who believe that they have seen American military personnel alive in various locations in Southeast Asia. They provide tantalizing glimpses of POW/MIAs who then vanish into the mist of a bureaucratic nightmare at DOD. For example, American POW/MIAs from the Korean War were reportedly seen alive as late as 1982 in the censored CIA document (obtained under a FOIA request) dated 1988 which is reproduced on the opposite page. There is no reason to believe that this is the last report on U.S. POW/MIAs held in North Korea.

For Vietnam, the U.S. Government has at least 1,400 such reports, including reports that have been received up until the publication of this report in May, 1991. In addition, the U.S. Government has received thousands and thousands of second-hand reports--accounts often full of vivid detail, such as "my brother told me he saw 11 American POWs being transported in a truck at such and such a place."

Yet, amazingly, the U.S. Government has not judged a single one of these thousands of reports to be credible. Instead, the policy enunciated by an official statement of the U.S. Government in 1973 was that "There are no more prisoners in Southeast Asia. They are all dead." That policy--in the face of extensive evidence that all U.S. POWs in Southeast Asia were not dead--evolved to the U.S. government's present policy that there is no credible evidence that there are any U.S. POWs still alive in all of Indochina. In spite of 1,400 unresolved reports of first-hand live-sightings, the Department of Defense, remarkably, still believes it has "no credible evidence." How does it dismiss these reports?

In reviewing hundreds of the raw intelligence files on the 1,400 reports, Minority Staff investigators found a predisposition by DOD evaluators to ignore corroborative evidence, and has little interest to follow-up what normal searchers would consider as good leads. Many cases, of course, were quite properly disposed of.

Yet often DOD evaluators seemed more intent upon upholding the validity of the "no credible evidence" policy.

It is contrary to common sense that all of the reports--all 1,400--are spurious, especially in the light of such obvious contradictions as the actual return of the unfortunate Private Robert Garwood in 1979.

PROLOGUE TO PART II

Garwood was a battle casualty taken into custody by the North Vietnamese under fire. However, his court martial as a collaborator and deserter solved two problems for DOD: By bringing up the charges DOD sought to redefine his case as a voluntary expatriate and therefore not technically a prisoner--and it enabled DOD evaluators to dismiss fully 64% of the live-sighting reports as sightings of Garwood. Since Garwood reported that he had been moved from prison to prison, the faulty logic of DOD seemed to demand that any report from the prisons he cited must have been a sighting of Garwood. The policy that there was "no credible evidence" of living prisoners made it necessary to assume that other U.S. prisoners in those prisons could not and did not exist.

Garwood was convicted of one count of simple assault on a fellow POW, one count of aiding the enemy by acting as a translator, interpreter, and interrogator, one count of wearing black pajamas--the enemy uniform--and one count of transporting an AK-47 (unloaded) during a patrol. Whether these convictions added up to meaningful collaboration with the enemy or not, it was never proven that he was a voluntary deserter. Nevertheless the living proof that the "no credible evidence" policy was not correct, thoroughly discredited the policy.

Convenient as the Garwood case was for DOD, the embarrassment still remained. Garwood was alive. There had been a live-sighting report on him in 1973 after DOD had publicly issued the "they are all dead" policy. Indeed, documents and witnesses available to the Minority Staff show that CIA and DIA knew of Garwood's location, as well as other so-called U.S. deserters in Vietnamese custody, after 1973.

And these reports of Garwood, obviously, proved to be correct. Since Garwood was alive in Indochina from 1973 to 1979, DOD policy was salvaged to some degree by his court martial. As a "collaborator" he may have been in North Vietnamese custody in 1973, but he no longer fit the definition of "prisoner." Nevertheless, Garwood, upon his return, reported seeing another presumed deserter, Earl C. Weatherman, alive in 1977. He stated also that a third presumed deserter, McKinley Nolan, was also alive after 1973. It may be assumed that Garwood was not reporting a live-sighting of Garwood in these cases.

Indeed, a list has circulated among POW/MIA families purporting to show that 20 U.S. personnel listed as deserters, or AWOL, were left in North Vietnamese custody after OPERATION HOMECOMING, the 1973 prisoner exchange. Four others are listed as disappearing under unexplained or unusual circumstances. The Minority Staff takes no position on the validity of this list, but it does note that almost all of the individuals cited appear on a DIA alphabetic list entitled "U.S. Casualties in South East Asia," dated 2/26/80, but are conspicuously absent from a similar DIA list dated 8/22/84.

Garwood stated publicly upon his return as well as to Committee investigators when questioned that he had seen at least thirty U.S. POWs off loading from a box car in Vietnam in the late 1970s. In the light of what appears to be a compelling need on the part of DOD to uphold the "no credible evidence" policy, the Minority Staff believes that every live-sighting should be pursued vigorously without prejudgment. Even if one POW who was detained in South East Asia is still alive, then no resources of the U.S. Government should be spared to locate him and effect his return to the United States if he so desires.

PROLOGUE TO PART II

In recent days, the Government of North Vietnam has announced that it is willing to open its territory to relatives to search for any POW/MIAs or their remains. While that is an encouraging development, DOD should reciprocate with a similar gesture. DOD should open its territory too. The files of live-sighting reports and second-hand reports should be made available to families of the POW/MIAs and to any qualified investigator, particularly to Senators, Members of Congress, and their staffs.

Such openness has not, up to this time, characterized the operations of DOD's Special Office of POW/MIA Affairs. On February 12, the Director of that office, Col. Millard A. Peck wrote a letter of resignation to his superior decrying the mind-set of cover-up and the policies of the U.S. POW/MIA interagency group, which have prevented a vigorous search for POW/MIAs who might still be living.

Observers described Colonel Peck as a man who had accepted the position with high motives and a sense of deep dedication. Yet his letter shows that he felt that he could no longer fulfill the demands of duty, honor, and integrity under the policies which he was asked to implement.

Nevertheless, he did not rush to seek publicity for himself. Colonel Peck's resignation first became known and was discussed publicly at a meeting of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in early April, but his memorandum of resignation, written February 12, 1991 did not become public until May, 1991.

The verbatim text of the colonel's letter appears at the end of this report. It is in itself a sufficient commentary on the findings of this report.

Colonel Peck confirms that a "cover-up" has been in progress. He speaks of a "mindset to debunk"—that is, to discredit witnesses rather than to ascertain the truth of their statements. He says that there was no effort to pursue "live sightings." He states that "any soldier left in Vietnam, even inadvertently, was, in fact, abandoned years ago." He also criticizes the U.S. government's treatment of the families and friends of the POW/MIAs.

These statements should be evaluated in the light of Colonel Peck's long career of faithful service in the U.S. Army, including three combat tours in Vietnam, for which he was awarded numerous medals of gallantry, including the nation's second-highest award, the Distinguished Service Cross. These are serious charges put forth by a man who knows their seriousness. Moreover, he is one of the few who have intimate knowledge of the way the U.S. Government's POW/MIA policy operates.

Finally, the Minority Staff notes that Colonel Peck's conclusions are remarkably similar to the conclusions which were contained in the Minority Staff's Interim Report on U.S. POW/MIA in Southeast Asia published in October, 1990. The staff arrived at these conclusions independently, having worked for nearly a year before Colonel Peck was appointed to the POW/MIA office. Our only acquaintance with him was during the few days in which his superiors allowed only Senator Grassley and staff to review live-sighting reports under strict constraints. Because of the atmosphere of tension surrounding these issues in the Executive Branch, our observations were limited to the fact that Colonel Peck was a competent professional acting according to his instructions. We now know in addition that he is a person of sound judgment and integrity.

LIVE SIGHTING REPORTS

The Department of Defense (DOD) has been gathering reports on live sightings of American prisoners since the United States became involved in the war in Southeast Asia. Live-sighting reports are defined as first-hand eye-witness accounts of a person or persons whom the witness believes to be an American POW or American POWs seen in captivity in Southeast Asia.

The DOD states that it has received in excess of 1,400 first-hand live-sighting reports since the end of the Second Indochina War (1955-1975). With the exception of a very small percentage of live-sighting reports that remain "unresolved," DOD has concluded that the vast majority of live-sighting reports do not pertain to any American POWs still in Southeast Asia. Given DOD's record of disproving these hundreds of live-sighting reports, there is little reason to assume that the few live sighting reports that are still "unresolved" will ever be determined by DOD to be valid eye-witness accounts of American POWs.

In the opinion of staff, many of the "resolved" live-sighting reports should be re-examined. There are numerous instances in which the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) attempts to explain away the validity of a report with a flawed or, at least, questionable analysis. Among the common explanations used by DIA to resolve live-sighting reports are the following: that a particular report in question is:

- 1) a fabrication;
- 2) a sighting of Soviet, Cuban, or other East bloc advisors;
- 3) a sighting of volunteers from Western countries working in Southeast Asia;
- 4) a pre-1979 sighting of Robert Garwood, the American POW who returned in 1979 and was, later, convicted of collaborating with the enemy;
- 5) a sighting of American civilians detained for various violations of the Vietnamese criminal code;
- 6) a sighting debunked or discredited—in other words, disregarded—because the source's statement was found to be inconsistent with information DOD considered to be factual; or,
- 7) an out-of-date sighting of POWs who were repatriated during OPERATION HOMECOMING (1973).

LIVE SIGHTING REPORTS

Many times such rationales are valid for particular reports; however, the same explanations are also used in a rigid, bureaucratic manner in order to resolve reports and close the files. Staff reviewed hundreds of classified and declassified live-sighting reports. In the opinion of staff, many live-sighting reports were closed prematurely and disregarded when minimal additional effort may have resolved the veracity of live-sighting reports.

In some instances, the analysis and conclusion that these sightings do not refer to American prisoners cannot be supported by the contents of the respective files. The findings, in these cases, were premature or, worse, could not be supported by the facts of the case. Moreover, DIA's analysis in a general sense reflects an approach by DOD that appears to be geared toward disproving each live-sighting report, rather than each report receiving, as proscribed by official DOD policy, the "necessary priority and resources based on the assumption that at least some Americans are still held captive."

Thus, DOD has been able to construct a rationale to discredit "officially" nearly each and every live-sighting report. Staff found instances where DOD merely excluded from its analysis certain details of a valid sighting, such as a source's statement about the number of POWs sighted, their physical condition, a description of the camp or cave they were held in, whether they were shackled, or, whether they were gesturing for food. By the exclusion of such corroborating details, the report could — under the convoluted DOD bureaucratic process — be labeled a fabrication. Furthermore, the exclusion of these details would not be known to anyone reading just the summary of the live-sighting report, or even by reading DOD's analysis of the report. Only by reading the "raw intelligence" can one learn such details.

DIA's greatest effort at corroborating a source's report is directed at the source's information about themselves, the source's description of the location of the live-sighting, and the source's explanation of how and when the sighting occurred. Great effort is not expended, however, to corroborate whether American POWs were in fact being held prisoner, or were working at or being transported through a particular location.

Any slight indicators of what DOD felt was an inconsistency in the source's description of the time, location, or circumstances of the sighting was used by DIA to erode, and therefore disprove the credibility of the source and/or the source's information. This lack of credibility of the source becomes the basis by which the source's live-sighting report is disregarded. It should also be noted that the debunking of such reports was not confined just to allegations of inconsistencies in the source's information; some live sighting accounts were dismissed for what, in the opinion of staff, seems to be dysfunctional analytical reasoning.

Once an analyst makes a conclusion, it seems to be cut in stone. In other words, the DIA is reluctant to change its conclusions concerning some individuals even when reliable evidence to the contrary is presented for review. Although it is obvious that the reliability of sources varies, it appears that DIA starts with the premise that every source is lying, and then works toward substantiating that premise. A more positive procedure would be to make every possible effort to substantiate the information before setting it aside.

¹ See Department of Defense "POW/MIA Fact Book," 1990.

LIVE SIGHTING REPORTS

One example of DIA's debunking mentality is illustrated by the case of U.S. Navy pilot LCDR James E. Dooley.² Dooley was shot down, October 22, 1967, conducting a bombing run near Hanoi flying an A-4E aircraft. He crashed just south of Do Son, Haiphong Province, Democratic Republic of Vietnam (North Vietnam). Fellow pilots saw Dooley's aircraft after it was hit, watching it go down gradually until it hit about one mile offshore in the vicinity of Do Son. They did not see him eject from the aircraft. Limited observation by fellow pilots, weather, and the swiftness of the incident may have led to some confusion over whether or not Dooley survived the crash of his aircraft.

Dooley is officially listed as KIA-BNR. Dooley was not returned or accounted for during OPERATION HOMECOMING in 1973. In 1987, a North Vietnamese refugee was interviewed by U.S. intelligence personnel at a refugee camp. The refugee described the shootdown of an American jet aircraft he witnessed in 1968 while in the area of Do Son, Haiphong Province. According to the source, he saw the pilot bail out with a tri-colored parachute and try to swim out to sea to escape capture. The pilot fired a pistol, while swimming out to sea, at his pursuers before being captured. The refugee said, the captured pilot was stripped of his one-piece flight suit, placed in the sidecar of a motorcycle, driven across Do Son airfield and taken away by North Vietnamese officials to a waiting Chinese automobile.

An early DOD evaluation of the fisherman's information concluded the fisherman probably witnessed the shootdown of a Navy pilot named J. M. Hickerson, who was shot down two months after Dooley in the same general area of Dooley's shootdown. Hickerson was captured, and repatriated from North Vietnam in 1973.³

However, after OPERATION HOMECOMING, information that Dooley was alive began to surface. In 1973, a U.S. POW who had been repatriated said he saw Dooley's name written on the wall of a prison cell in Hanoi. Two Thai special forces soldiers released from North Vietnamese custody in 1973 identified Dooley's photograph as a fellow inmate. Finally, a Communist propaganda photograph of captured U.S. pilots in Hanoi, dated after Dooley was shot down, shows a partial profile of a person that strongly resembles Dooley.

In April 1989, former POW Hickerson, in a written statement, described the details of his parachute landing and capture. Hickerson was disturbed that the fisherman's eyewitness account of the shoot down of an American Navy pilot was wrongly attributed to his shoot down. In his statement, Hickerson pointed out that he landed on the inside of the peninsula at Do Son, and therefore, he could not have been swimming out to sea when he was captured, as the fisherman described. Furthermore, Hickerson wrote, he did not fire his pistol before capture, as the fisherman described. Hickerson stated that his parachute was all white, not tri-colored as the fisherman stated. Hickerson further stated that when he was shot down he wore a Marine utility uniform, consisting of pants and shirt, not a one piece flight suit as the fisherman described. Finally, Hickerson was taken to prison riding on the back of a bicycle, not in a car as the fisherman described.

Despite these sharply contrasting differences between the actual events of Hickerson's capture, and the fisherman's description of the shoot-down he witnessed, DOD refused to change its original conclusion that the captive witnessed by the fisherman was Hickerson.⁴ The fisherman may indeed have witnessed a capture, but the description of events more closely resembles the capture of Dooley, not Hickerson. In other words, a significant question remains: was Hickerson's shoot-down correlated to the fisherman's live-sighting report—despite the significant factual discrepancies between the two events—only because Hickerson was repatriated, and therefore the fisherman's live-sighting could be "resolved"?

In a message dated April 10, 1987, the Joint Casualty Resolution Center at Barbers Point sent an evaluation of the Dooley file to the National Security Council (Col. Childress), noting Dooley was listed in a "presumptive status of dead, body not recovered."⁵ The message says that Dooley's case was presented to North Vietnamese officials in August 1984 as a case under consideration during a POW/MIA technical meeting in Hanoi. What was the status of the JCRC inquiry in 1984? Were they looking for remains, or were they trying to ascertain the fate of a person believed to have been a POW in Hanoi's custody and not accounted for?

As with a number of cases in JCRC's files, there are conflicts. It is not known how many potential cases of mismatch in casualty incident information there are in DOD files. The Dooley case is but one example of questionable analysis of live-sighting information by DOD of unaccounted-for airmen and soldiers from the Second Indochina War.

INTELLIGENCE COLLECTION

Beyond the problem of flawed, or questionable analysis are more fundamental problems. Staff has identified numerous weaknesses in the methodology and procedures for collecting and analyzing information from refugees. These weaknesses may be found in the procedures for soliciting the information, follow-up interviews, mobilization of adequate manpower, weak linguistic capabilities, the improper methodology for identification of sources, and the failure in many cases to obtain native language statements from sources during initial contact.

The primary responsibility for collecting this information originally rested with the JCRC, a Joint Chiefs of Staff organization within DOD. Presently, that responsibility rests with DIA. After the fall of the Republic of Vietnam (South Vietnam) government in 1975, JCRC offices were stationed within Thailand to carry out this mission.

⁵ The Navy issued a DD Form 1300, 12/4/73, changing Dooley's status from missing to dead, body not recovered.

LIVE SIGHTING REPORTS

In Thailand, the procedure for collecting POW information was as follows: JCRC officials, depending on the availability of resources, traveled to various refugee centers to collect information on purported live-sightings of U.S. POWs within Laos, Vietnam and Cambodia. At each refugee camp, JCRC officers would make announcements in the camps requesting that any refugees who have knowledge of American POWs should report, at a certain time, to a certain location, for debriefing. On occasion, volunteer workers at refugee camps, when initially processing the arriving refugees, would also elicit such information, and report it to JCRC.

The problem with this procedure is that it depends too much upon the initiative of frightened, confused refugees, who have been traumatized by their experience of fleeing their country, and are deeply suspicious of any governmental authority, even one that is trying to help them. The practice of making a general announcement—often referred to contemptuously by government officials as the "cattle call," with the subsequent interviews as the "round-up"—could easily be seen as a threat or danger signal to anyone who had contact with American POWs; contrariwise, it might suggest to a refugee with a manipulative mind that providing information, even if false, might be a way to get ahead in the refugee resettlement system. In the first case, opportunities to get valid reports are lost through fear; in the second, false reports are encouraged.

A more effective method is the so-called "canvassing method." Each refugee is asked questions about possible POW sightings as part of their initial refugee processing, thereby making it unnecessary for a prospective informant to stand out publicly, and lowering the threshold of resistance to discussing the topic. However, the canvassing method requires that JCRC personnel be stationed within easy reach of the refugee camps, a practice which was not followed.

Another failure in collecting information from refugees involves follow-ups to initial interviews. Follow-up procedures require JCRC officials to conduct interviews once a source indicates having information pertaining to American POWs still in Southeast Asia. The information would then be sent to DIA for analysis and follow-up interviews, if necessary. Originally, DIA provided to the JCRC staff additional questions to be asked; however, since JCRC did not have adequate manpower to cover the number of refugees pouring out of Laos, Cambodia (Kampuchea), and Vietnam, this procedure was not followed.

In excess of 300,000 Asian refugees fled from these countries; yet JCRC staff never exceeded thirty-four officials in number on-site in Southeast Asia. The cumbersome nature of this procedure impeded the timeliness of the follow-up interviews. As a result, the information collected was dated and, therefore, its usefulness was diminished.

Limited manpower and the methodology used for both initial and follow-up interviews were major weaknesses in JCRC's collection procedures. Initially, this limitation was especially true of the shortage of trained linguists. Indeed, DOD recognized this problem and sought to increase manpower. In 1987, DIA groups were established throughout Southeast Asia to collect POW information first-hand. This effort was code-named "STONE BEACH." The program added greatly to the quality, quantity and timeliness of information provided by the refugees.

LIVE SIGHTING REPORTS

The STONEY BEACH program enabled subsequent debriefings of refugees to be conducted in a more comprehensive manner. Unfortunately, once information was obtained, no effort was spared to utilize other intelligence methods available to corroborate selected content of these live-sighting reports.

"BLACK" OPERATIONS

Notwithstanding numerous government documents available under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), documents in public archives, and published works, most of the extensive covert military operations throughout Southeast Asia between 1955 and 1975 remain classified. As a result, DOD's list of U.S. personnel lost while on covert, or "black" military operations in Southeast Asia (i.e., Laos, Cambodia, Thailand, North Vietnam, South Vietnam, Burma, and the southern provinces of the Peoples Republic of China) is highly suspect.

As a result, this precludes a presentation of evidence that the lists of POW/MIA and KIA-BNR from Southeast Asia are skewed as a result of withholding of casualty counts from black operations. But the continued effort by the U.S. government to keep records of these operations classified, or to withhold information related to these operations under FOIA exemptions tends to indicate information on U.S. casualties related to these activities may not be accurate. An early 1970s Senate hearing on military operations on Southeast Asia was given classified information on losses from classified operations in Southeast Asia, but that information remains classified and is not included in this report.

Needless to say, due to the covert nature of classified operations, they must remain secure even when personnel involved disappear. According to sources interviewed for this report, if an individual on a covert "black" military or intelligence operation is lost i.e. either captured MIA or KIA-BNR--he might be declared dead immediately (KIA-BNR); or he might be listed MIA, followed by a presumptive finding of-death issued after 12 months elapsed. According to these sources, benign cover stories were sometimes prepared to explain the disappearance of individuals lost on covert or classified missions in Southeast Asia to reflect a MIA or KIA-BNR status. If such a cover story remains as the official account of such casualties, then it would impact on any future evaluations of an individual casualty file because the official case file contains erroneous information as to circumstances or location of the casualty.

One source interviewed alleges that, in order to protect the existence of some classified operations conducted during the Second Indochina War, U.S. casualties from these operations may have been explained away as training accidents in an entirely different geographic location (e.g., Thailand or Okinawa), or as battle losses in areas of South Vietnam even though the loss occurred in another Indochina location (e.g., Laos, Cambodia, or North Vietnam). If casualty information has been manipulated, as alleged by some people, to protect the secrecy of special operations, then what guarantee is there of any oversight of accountability for U.S. personnel who were declared KIA-BNR or MIA from such covert operations?

"BLACK" OPERATIONS

Due to the classified nature of these covert or special warfare missions, there exist no easily accessible records of those involved in these missions; therefore, "presumptive findings of death" might be based upon faulty data in such individual case files. Or, if the review boards for individual casualty cases for persons lost during classified operations in Southeast Asia had access to the true circumstances of the loss, then they might be able to make an absolute finding of death in some cases rather than prolonging the agony of the survivors by publishing faulty findings based on circumstances contrived to conceal covert operations.

In order to arrive at a true accounting for U.S. personnel from "black" operations in Southeast Asia, the following fundamental questions must be answered:

- 1) When did the United States begin covert operations in Southeast Asia?
- 2) Which U.S. agencies or military departments participated in such operations?
- 3) How many U.S. citizens served in Southeast Asia on classified operations during those years?
- 4) What were the losses of personnel in these operations?
- 5) Where did the losses occur?
- 6) What efforts have been made to account for those persons who failed to return from the classified missions?

The extent of United States covert operations in Southeast Asia identifiable through nonclassified, or declassified sources indicates a large number of U.S. military and civilian personnel were lost on these missions. DOD has publicly stated, after release of this investigation's Interim Report last October, all personnel lost on covert missions during the Second Indochina War are on the public casualty lists and that there is no secret list of casualties from covert operations in Southeast Asia.

However, sources interviewed by staff indicate otherwise. Are the public versions of these lists accurate as to the time, date, place, and status of the individuals engaged in classified operations when lost? Are survivors from classified operations the source of live-sighting reports of American POWs in Laos? There is reason to question DOD further on this problem of losses related to classified or covert operations in Southeast Asia.

One case in point is the combat loss of a U.S. Air Force communications/navigation site located on top of Phou Pha Thi, Sam Neua Province, Laos, known as Site 85.

Site 85 provided the Air Force with all-weather capabilities for bombing Hanoi and Haiphong, North Vietnam. Its primary electronic navigation system was known by the acronym TACAN. The site was identified with a nearby classified landing strip operated under CIA covert funding and known as Lima Site 85. The former Air Force TACAN site on Phou Pha Thi is generally referred to as "Site 85."

"BLACK" OPERATIONS

The site was classified, its mission classified, and the circumstances of these March 1968 battle casualties remained classified for many years. Even today, much of the information related to Site 85's equipment, purpose, effectiveness, and battle loss is still classified.

Site 85 was built in 1967, over the objections of the U.S. Ambassador to Laos, and manned by a handpicked team of Air Force technicians in 1968. The Air Force technicians for Site 85, listed as Lockheed Aircraft Systems employees on paper, had been discharged from the military and were paid through Lockheed. The Air Force promised that their service credit would be restored once their classified mission was completed. This cover was necessary to avoid violating the provisions of the 1962 Geneva Peace Accords for Laos prohibiting foreign military presence in Laos.

Site 85 was attacked by Pathet Lao forces March 10, 11, 1968. Eleven U.S. Air Force personnel were lost when the site was overrun by Communist forces. Except for four personnel lifted out by an Air America helicopter during the battle, the remaining eleven personnel manning the site that day are officially listed KIA-BNR.

Almost immediately after the attack, the Thai and Hmong indigenous forces which provided security to the site, were ordered to destroy it with heavy weapons fire before retreating from the mountain top on March 11. These U.S. sponsored, CIA led indigenous guerrilla troops carried out their orders. To insure the complete destruction of the site, American A-1 aircraft in Laos attacked the site with rocket and machine gun fire.

After the successful Communist attack on the mountain site, the U.S. Ambassador to Laos declared the eleven missing Air Force personnel dead. No U.S. bodies were recovered or, for the most part, none identifiable with this group were seen after the attack. Finally, U.S. jet fighters were brought in from out of country to finish the destruction of the mountain site with bombs and rockets. On March 12, 1968, the U.S. indigenous guerrilla force from the mountain site were all accounted for at a rendezvous point. They had no Site 85 survivors with them.¹

However, the Thai sergeant in charge of the indigenous guerrilla force guarding Site 85 told Committee staff that three of the Air Force technicians at the TACAN site were taken prisoner by the North Vietnamese/Pathet Lao attacking force. He gave this information to American intelligence officers in 1968.

A review of POW live-sighting documents, declassified under FOIA rules and released in 1978, contain reports that three American prisoners were brought to a village near Site 85 by North Vietnamese troops about the time of the attack on Site 85. Documents from these files also refer to Americans held in the caves near Site 85, while other caves in Sam Neua were used by Pathet Lao, North Vietnamese, and advisers from the Peoples Republic of China.

¹ According to a declassified CIA message, the heavy weapons fire and initial air attacks used to destroy the site were carried out on March 11, 1968.

'BLACK' OPERATIONS

Throughout the declassified POW files used by this staff, it was not uncommon to see reports that American prisoners were seen in these caves in Sam Neua Province. No bodies were ever recovered from Site 85 by U.S. forces, and there are no eyewitnesses to say that all eleven missing men were killed in the battle.

The Air Force officer in command of Site 85 and other similar activities in Laos was at the unit's Udorn, Thailand headquarters when Site 85 was overrun. According to him, he was told the destruction of Site 85 was not attempted until after there was reasonable evidence that no Americans were still alive on the mountain top.

But a declassified CIA report of the incident shows the destruction of the site by the indigenous guerrilla force and American A-1 aircraft was started almost immediately. The jet aircraft bombing of Site 85 on March 12 was a day or more sooner than what the former commander believed to be the truth. According to reports of the loss of Site 85, aerial photos taken on March 11 and 12, 1968 show bodies on the ground, but the bodies cannot be identified as non-Asian or, U.S. military personnel assigned to Site 85.

Then, in September 1990, an Air Force captain traveling in Laos while conducting research related to his doctoral study arranged to interview a Pathet Lao general officer. During the interview, the Lao officer claimed to have taken part in the March 10-11, 1968 assault on Site 85. The Lao officer told the Air Force captain that three U.S. Air Force technicians survived the Phou Pha Thi mountain battle and were turned over to North Vietnamese troops for transport to North Vietnam.¹

This information corroborates the Thai sergeant's report that three U.S. personnel were captured during the battle for Site 85.

In view of this most recent information on survivors from Site 85, the prisoner of war intelligence reports concerning three Americans seen at a village near Phou Pha Thi after the attack on Site 85 and other POW reports for that time period need to be reviewed and reevaluated to determine if any of them pertain to the Site 85 personnel. If three men survived the battle at Site 85, why haven't they been accounted for by the North Vietnamese? What was their actual fate? Given that no prisoners were ever repatriated from Pathet Lao control this incident takes on even greater significance.

The Air Force losses at Site 85 are only one example of the controversy over U.S. casualties in Southeast Asia as a result of covert, or classified military operations. Cross-border operations by U.S. Special Forces (SF), Army Long Range Reconnaissance Patrol (LRRP), and Marine Force Recon sometimes resulted in their members never being seen or heard from again. Air Force air support operations in Laos under the name of the "Ravens" resulted in numerous casualties, while members of the Ravens were officially listed as "civilians" serving in Laos. Navy SEAL, swift boat, or riverine force operations into North Vietnam, Laos, or Cambodia remain classified, including their non-recovered casualties. The so-called "black operations" undertaken by DOD organizations, the Department of State, and the CIA in Indochina are still not openly discussed by veterans.² Moreover, military history monographs and a number of other books have been published on Navy Riverine Forces in Southeast Asia, but preliminary research shows the true story of these shallow draft boats is still buried in U.S. Navy files.

¹ Cable, From: JCRC Bangkok, TH, To: CDR, JCRC Barbers Point, HI, time/date group 110910Z, September, 1990, provides this information without names of individuals. Institute of East Asian Studies, Indochina Chronology, Vol. IX, No.3, July-September 1990, p.42, identifies the captain as Timothy Castle. Another source identified the Lao as Singkha Sikkhotounamaly.

'BLACK' OPERATIONS

Who has accounted for their battle casualties and how accurate are those records? In addition to the military operations, there is ample evidence of Americans participating as civilians in covert operations, or classified activities outside of the Republic of Vietnam (e.g., Air America, Continental Air Services, CIA para-military operations). Who accounts for those losses resulting from such "civilian" activities?

U.S. military and civilian losses in Southeast Asia during the entire period of the Second Indochina War must be reviewed for accuracy, as well as a means of providing information to the next of kin of these battle casualties. DIA, in its news release concerning the Interim Report released by Committee staff in October 1990, asserted that all American casualties are accounted for on its lists of MIA, POW, or KIA-BNR for the war in Southeast Asia. Without cross checking between operational reports from covert and/or classified missions and unclassified casualty lists, this will remain an open question.

² See Christopher Robbins, The Ravens: The Men Who Flew in America's Secret War in Laos (New York: Crown Publishers, 1987); Shelby L. Stanton (Novato: Presidio Press, 1985). These are two well-documented works on clandestine or special warfare operations in Indochina. The Ravens describes clandestine air operations in Laos and The Green Berets at War describes Special Forces operations in Indochina from 1955 through 1973.

ACCOUNTABILITY

Two methods are used by DOD to account for missing Americans in Southeast Asia. One is the statutory presumptive finding of death in individual cases; the other is categorizing casualties as Killed in Action-Body Not Recovered (KIA-BNR). In either case, when human remains are repatriated from Southeast Asia, they are identified against persons in these two categories. When an identification is made, the individual is accounted for as having died while in the Indochina War zone.

Individually, members of the military services, or U.S. Government employees who were missing while serving in Indochina and remain unaccounted for, can be declared dead by the secretary of the military service or head of the government agency responsible for that individual.¹ Basically, the U.S. Code permits the secretaries and/or heads of agencies to declare an individual dead after the person has been missing for 12 months under circumstances indicating he or she may have died. Each case is decided on its own merits and cases may be reopened if sufficient evidence is presented indicating the individual may still be alive, although not physically returned to U.S. control.

Both presumptive findings of death, and KIA-BNR status strongly prejudice subsequent evaluations of live-sighting information. For example, live-sighting information is much more likely to be disregarded in the field as a result of an individual having been already assigned to one of the legal status-of-death categories without identifiable human remains to substantiate the status.

Supposedly, KIA-BNR status has a stricter evidence criteria than does a presumptive finding of death. However, even KIA-BNR status has its problems when it comes to accounting for missing Americans in Indochina. Two illustrative cases of KIA-BNR problems—that were not among classified files reviewed by staff—follow.

In one case, a Vietnamese source identified the picture of a U.S. Marine as a person he saw in the custody of North Vietnamese forces. However, the U.S. official debriefing the source concluded the source was mistaken because the Marine identified in the photograph by the Vietnamese source was officially listed as KIA-BNR.² As a result of the U.S. official's conclusion, this live-sighting report is considered to be "resolved." Since even in the extremely short Gulf War, Americans officially reported to be killed in battle were in fact captured, and later repatriated by the Iraqis, it is likely that some servicemen reported to be KIA-BNR were in fact captured in Southeast Asia.

² This case was taken from DIA's 1978 declassified message traffic titled "Uncorrelated Information Relating to Missing Americans in Southeast Asia."

ACCOUNTABILITY

In another case, a U.S. serviceman who was reportedly last seen wounded on a Vietnam battlefield was subsequently listed as KIA-BNR. But a year afterward, he had to be reclassified as POW when a handwritten letter from him, dated after his presumed death, was found on the body of a dead Viet Cong soldier in South Vietnam. The letter was addressed to the serviceman's family and talked of life in a Viet Cong prison camp. Based on this information, the Marine Corps changed the corporal's status to POW and promoted him in absentia to sergeant. At the conclusion of OPERATION HOMECOMING in 1973 he was not repatriated. Since then, based on a lack of evidence that he is alive, the serviceman has been found, presumptively, to be dead.

IDENTIFICATION OF REMAINS

Part of DOD's solution to "resolve" POW/MIA or KIA-BNR cases is to identify recovered remains of individuals from Southeast Asia, and match those remains with unaccounted-for or missing Americans on the Vietnam-era casualty lists. However, the Committee has reviewed numerous cases that pieces of bone, or bone fragments were the basis for the identification of the remains of POW/MIA or KIA-BNR cases. These cases, if measured against court room body identification and death evidence criteria, would not be acceptable in court proceedings, except to infer, or to provide circumstantial evidence that something happened to a human being(s) at that location. Furthermore, a scientific evaluation of remains identification methodology used by DOD can be most politely described as not being based on any known and accepted forensic procedures.

In many cases, remains identified by DOD show that there is a probability that such remains are likely of the persons thought to have perished at a particular place. This determination is further complicated since individual skeletal were consumed by natural or in some cases, manmade forces. However, proof that bone fragments belonging to an individual were recovered is sorely lacking in many instances.

In some cases, DOD has made "identifications" of individual servicemen based on less than a handful of bone fragments. Further, in some cases, this finding was made by DOD, despite live-sighting reports that some of the individuals declared dead, and there remains "identified" at a crash site, were seen in captivity after the supposed date of death.

For example, on October 5, 1990, at Arlington National Cemetery, DOD buried the "remains" (bone fragments) of four U.S. servicemen presumed to have died when a helicopter crashed in Laos during the war. These remains were buried with full military honors. Then, their names were taken from the unaccounted-for list, and added to the list of those accounted for from the Second Indochina War. However, according to family members, and admitted by DOD, two of the caskets of "remains" contained no bones at all—no physical matter, whatsoever. The two coffins were empty.

The burial charade was based on specious deductive DOD procedures. The aircraft manifest for that flight listed four American military personnel and nine South Vietnamese troops on board the helicopter when it crashed in Laos. Based upon the flight manifest documentation, the identification of a ring belonging to one of the Americans on the flight, and supposed positive identification of two teeth (one each allegedly identified for the two persons whose caskets had bone fragments in them), each of these cases were closed with everyone accounted for and buried with full military honors at Arlington National Cemetery.

These remains buried October 5, 1990 could not be identified as a specific individual by any known or accepted scientific forensic analysis. In the statements released to the press at the time of these "burials," DOD referred to "remains" and new cases "accounted for." Clearly, the implication in these statements is that physical remains had been recovered and restored to the families of the servicemen. Yet that is not what DOD means. DOD obviously has its own language, its own definitions of ordinary words, and its own purposes—mainly "resolving" cases—to be served.

Furthermore, there is some information that at least one of the four Americans may have survived the helicopter crash in Laos, but his actual death took place much later and he was buried at the Pathet Lao prison camp in which he was being held. In 1986, a Laotian eyewitness, a member of the Royal Laotian Army, reported that he had been imprisoned with Captain Nelson—one of the four "buried" at Arlington National Cemetery. The Laotian stated that he nursed Captain Nelson until he died, and that he was the one who buried Nelson. The Laotian identified a photograph of Captain Nelson, and provided DOD specific locations, geographical details as well as a hand-drawn map of the camp, with Nelson's grave site marked. Although the Laotian's report did indeed confirm the death, the death was not the result of being killed in action. Moreover, the alternate explanation of his death revealed the flaws in DOD methodology. Despite this evidence, DOD made a determination that the Laotian was not credible, and closed the case.³

THE MORTICIAN

Another problem in identification arises from the Vietnamese practice of warehousing remains of U.S. POWs for purposes of barter. In 1979, a former North Vietnamese government official, commonly referred to as "The Mortician," defected to the United States. The Mortician testified before the United States Congress that he was personally responsible for preserving and storing in excess of 400 remains of American servicemen. The United States Defense Intelligence Agency, uncharacteristically, has publicly vouched for The Mortician's credibility with regard to his statement that he cared for the U.S. remains. These remains are warehoused in Hanoi.

To date, since the end of hostilities with North Vietnam, only 255 sets of remains of U.S. servicemen have been returned to the United States. Many of these remains have been recovered as the result of "joint-excavations" of plane and helicopter crash sites by United States and Vietnamese government personnel. Characteristic of the complete lack of cooperation the Minority Staff of the United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations has received from the Executive branch throughout in this inquiry, DOD has consistently refused give the Committee the number of U.S. remains, out of the total 255, that have been excavated, despite the Committee's repeated requests for this information.

Given the statement of The Mortician, it is apparent that the Vietnamese have not returned many of the remains of U.S. servicemen in their possession. Even assuming that every one of the 255 remains returned to the United States was from the Vietnamese warehoused stock—which the Committee knows is not the case—they would still have 145 remains stored in Hanoi.

While this policy of doling out remains of U.S. servicemen, one set at a time, in an on-again, off-again fashion, may be repugnant to Americans, it accurately reflects the Vietnamese government's ideology, history, and the repatriation policies of its Communist allies.

THE CENTRAL IDENTIFICATION LABORATORY

The responsibility for forensic identification of remains of U.S. Armed Forces personnel in the Pacific theatre rests with the Army Central Identification Laboratory, Hawaii (CIL-HI). According to DOD, by early 1990 CIL-HI had identified 255 sets of repatriated remains from Indochina as the remains of U.S. personnel unaccounted for from the Second Indochina War. For a number of years, CIL-HI has been identifying remains of missing U.S. personnel from the Korean War and World War II's Pacific Theater still being discovered or, in a recent case, returned by foreign governments.⁴

A prominent physical anthropologist, Dr. Michael Charney, Professor Emeritus, at the University of Colorado and an internationally recognized expert in the science of forensics has conducted an extensive review of physical remains "identified" as missing Americans from Southeast Asia by CIL-HI. He concluded that it was scientifically impossible to have identified the cases he reviewed from the bone fragments returned to the next of kin.

In fact, according to Charney, the misidentification of these individuals had to be intentional, since there was no scientific basis to make any type of identification. Dr. Charney has reviewed CIL-HI's identification of remains in many other cases. According to Dr. Charney, CIL-HI has falsely identified as many as eighty separate sets of remains of U.S. servicemen previously listed as MIA or KIA-BNR.

Dr. Charney has leveled these serious charges against CIL-HI both publicly and to Committee staff. Dr. Charney states,

This facility [CIL-HI], entrusted with the analysis of mostly skeletonized remains of our servicemen and women in the identification process, is guilty of unscientific, unprofessional work. The administrative and technical personnel have engaged knowingly in deliberate distortion of details deduced from the bones to give credibility to otherwise impossible identification.

Dr. Charney also went on to say that CIL-HI has blatantly and deliberately lied about a large number of the remains CIL-HI has identified. Dr. Charney states that, in his professional opinion, ⁴ In May 1990, North Korea returned five sets of remains of U.S. servicemen from the Korean War.

ACCOUNTABILITY

CIL-HI technicians have in some instances made identifications of remains based on human remains or other material not capable of providing such an identification. He further states that many of the technicians who performed the identifications lacked advanced training in the field of forensic anthropology. Prior to 1986, CIL-HI's technicians referred to themselves as "doctors," when, in fact, they had never been awarded doctorates in medicine or any other recognized scientific or medical discipline.

After 1986 U.S. House of Representatives hearings on the CIL-HI facility⁴ in which Dr. Charney and Dr. George W. Gill, another expert in the field of forensic anthropology, both testified on about CIL-HI, the Army attempted to correct the deficiencies in procedure and staffing identified by Drs. Charney and Gill, as well as other witnesses. The Army hired recognized experts with doctoral credentials for the staff, even though the senior anthropologist—who had the final authority to make identifications at CIL-HI—was a person with questionable academic credentials.

The senior anthropologist, a longtime employee of CIL-HI, did not hold a doctorate in the field of anthropology but had worked in the field of forensic anthropology since the end of World War II. To accomplish his tasks at CIL-HI he insisted on using a theory he developed for the identification human remains, a theory that was roundly rejected by the anthropological scientific community.

Between 1985 and 1987, Dr. Charney reviewed CIL-HI's identification of thirty sets of repatriated remains from North Vietnam and he concluded that CIL-HI had wrongly identified these remains as those of individual U.S. servicemen from the MIA or KIA-BNR lists. In each of these cases, the physical matter available to the CIL-HI forensic examiners (bone parts and fragments) was not sufficient to identify a specific individual by sex, race, height, weight, physical peculiarities, etc. In order to make their so-called "identifications", CIL-HI technicians responsible for identifying remains, in some instances, employed forensic methods and procedures not recognized by the international community of professional forensic anthropologists.

According to Dr. Charney, the CIL-HI technicians deliberately misidentified remains as individual U.S. servicemen off the list of unaccounted for during the U.S. war in Southeast Asia. He believes the only conceivable reason for this demonstrable pattern of misidentification was a desire to clear the lists of MIA while deceiving the MIA families through the return of so-called identified remains.

Dr. Gill, former secretary of the physical anthropology section, American Academy of Forensic Sciences, and a member of the board of directors of the American Board of Forensic Anthropology, substantiates Dr. Charney's statements concerning CIL-HI. Dr. Gill has publicly stated

It is clear from the bones that the problem in the CIL-HI reports results either from extreme carelessness, incompetence, fabrication of data, or some combination of these things.

⁴ U.S. Congress, House, "Activities of the Central Identification Laboratory," Hearing Before the Investigations Subcommittee of the Committee on Armed Services, House of Representatives, 99th Cong., 2d Session, 1986.

ACCOUNTABILITY

These charges levied by Dr. Charney and Dr. Gill against CIL-HI have not been refuted by DOD, and this inquiry has found no evidence that contradict Dr. Charney or Dr. Gill.

PRESUMPTIVE FINDINGS OF DEATH

The problem of accountability for individual American casualties has been addressed by every administration since the 1973 conclusion of the Second Indochina War. During the Carter Administration, for example, a DOD commission—politically sensitive questions are best handled by Commissions, especially if the object is to show the government is taking action to resolve the issue of unaccounted for servicemen—was established to review the status of individual MIA cases.

In these cases, for purposes of compensation to the next-of-kin, the commission issued the following directive:

The Commission has used the date of April 1, 1973 as the last date of entitlement to prisoner of war compensation in cases where the actual date of death is not known and where a finding of death has been issued after that date...[because]...the last known prisoner of war was returned to the control of the United States.⁵

The commission further stated:

There have been reports of sightings of Americans in Southeast Asia after that date [April

1, 1973], but neither the identities or status of those persons nor the reliability of the reports are known to be established...Therefore, the Commission finds that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, April 1, 1973 is the last date when members of the U.S. Armed Forces were held prisoners of war by a hostile force in Southeast Asia.⁶

After a presumptive finding of death has been issued, surviving spouses, next of kin, or children are entitled to government-sponsored death benefits, e.g., six-months pay for spouses of deceased military members, government life insurance, etc. The individual is then removed from the active roles of the military service or agency responsible for him/her.

Among the issues yet to be determined by this inquiry are the following:

- 1) Was all intelligence reviewed pertaining to each individual who was presumptively found to be dead?
- 2) Have any cases ever been reopened and the presumptive finding withdrawn based upon live-sighting information, or any cases where the date of presumptive death was not changed to match information received well after the initial finding?

⁵ As declared in the legal presumptive finding of deaths that were issued by the Commission.

THE FRENCH EXPERIENCE

On May 6, 1991, the newspaper Figaro published in Paris a statistical summary of the fate of French forces fighting in Indochina who had been taken prisoner. The French forces were composed of French nationals, French Legionnaires, Africans and North Africans, indigenous members of the French Expeditionary Force drawn from Indochina, and local forces from Laos and Cambodia.

The statistical table was compiled by the Historical Service of the French Army and shows that of 39,888 prisoners held by the Vietminh, 29,954 were not repatriated. This total includes 2,350 French nationals and 2,867 Legionnaires who were taken prisoner but not repatriated.

Today in France there is great interest in the fate of French prisoners of the Indochina war. Owing to the efforts of French Senator Jean-Jacques Beucler, what has come to be called the "Boudarel Affair" became front page news in France in February, 1991.

The Boudarel Affair involves the discovery of Georges Boudarel, a Frenchman who acted as a deputy political commissar in Vietnamese prison camps during the First Indochina War. He was in charge of brain-washing and interrogating French prisoners, and has been accused of being an accessory to torture. Nothing was known of his whereabouts for years. Then it was discovered that, after serving in the Communist International underground in Southeast Asia and in Eastern Europe, he had obtained a teaching post at a university in France.

A new book by a former prisoner who charges that he was tortured by Boudarel has just appeared in France. Written by Claude Bayle, Prisonnier au Camp 113 is a detailed revelation of life as a prisoner of the Vietnamese revealing the primitive conditions under which thousands of French prisoners were held.

FRENCH POWS IN INDOCHINA

In 1946, after a series of armed clashes with Ho Chi Minh's forces in North Vietnam, France agreed to allow Ho's group to establish an autonomous state of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) as a somewhat-independent state within French Indochina. The DRV's capital became Hanoi with Ho Chi Minh and the Indochina Communist Party in control.

Problems persisted between the French colonial government and the DRV. As various other political factions and nationalist forces within Indochina collectively resisted French colonial rule of Indochina, armed conflicts intensified. Finally, in late 1946, the Vietnamese communists and various nationalist forces combined into a revolutionary army that is commonly referred to as the Viet Minh. A full scale "war of liberation" was started in 1946 to remove the French colonial government from Indochina. The Viet Minh took to the mountains and jungles to wage their war. When the Viet Minh left the cities of Vietnam they took several hundred French prisoners, military and civilian, into the jungles and mountain highlands with them. The Viet Minh's war with France, now referred to as the First Indochina War, refers to the period 1946 through 1954, when the Geneva Peace Accords were signed by the French and Viet Minh. The war also included revolutionary factions in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

The 1954 Geneva Accords required France to withdraw its colonial government from Indochina, provide for an exchange of prisoners, repatriation of remains of war dead, and division of Vietnam (i.e., North and South Vietnam divided at the 17th parallel) pending elections for public determination of a form of government and the unification of Vietnam into a single state.

During the war, the largest group of French prisoners taken by the Viet Minh was at the battle at Dien Bien Phu, North Vietnam. On May 8, 1954, when the French forces surrendered to the Viet Minh, about 6,500 French troops (including French regulars, Foreign Legionnaires, colonial troops from Africa and North Africa, and colonial troops from Indochina, as well as some civilians with the troops at Dien Bien Phu) were taken prisoner by the Viet Minh. French casualties related to Dien Bien Phu were approximately 2,242 KIA and 3,711 MIA. During the war, about 39,000 French-forces POWs were taken by the Viet Minh, with approximately 11,000 were returned during repatriation.¹

None of France's war dead from Dien Bien Phu or other battle sites in North Vietnam, and none of its war dead from Viet Minh prison camps or military hospitals were repatriated. By contrast, all French prisoners held by nationalist or communist forces in Laos and Cambodia were returned or accounted for, as were many of the remains of French war dead in those two areas.

According to historians on the First Indochina War, the high rate of deaths in Viet Minh camps occurred because of the harsh conditions in those isolated camps. Also, prisoners with severe wounds, such as head, chest, and abdominal wounds, stood little chance of survival in these camps because of a total lack of medical treatment facilities and/or supplies.² In addition to the harsh camp conditions and inadequate medical facilities, the Viet Minh marched the French prisoners taken at Dien Bien Phu many miles to camps, causing many deaths during the march. And, during the prisoner exchange, the Vietnamese again marched the French prisoners over long distances, causing the death of a number of the prisoners en route to exchange points.

Only a very small number of French Union troops were able to escape after the siege at Dien Bien Phu. Seventy eight are recorded as having successfully made it back to French custody by traveling overland towards Laos. Of that number, nineteen were Europeans, the remainder were troops indigenous to Indochina.³

¹ Bernard B. Fall, Hell in a Very Small Place, (New York: J.B. Lippincott, 1966), pp.483,484. App. B., Table III provides the breakdown of French losses at Dien Bien Phu. The table includes three American pilots from the Taiwan based Civil Air Transport (CAT) company.

² During the siege of Dien Bien Phu, the Viet Minh had only one qualified medical doctor for 50,000 of their own troops. After the surrender, the French military doctors had to provide medical care for both the Viet Minh and the French POWs. Bayle's new memoir gives dramatic details.

THE FRENCH EXPERIENCE

There are reports that some French POWs were kept in forced labor status, while others were given years of indoctrination in Marxist-Leninist revolutionary doctrine and North Vietnam's anti-colonial philosophy at re-education centers before being returned to French African and North African colonies. The Vietnamese separated officers from non-commissioned officers, and non-commissioned officers from other enlisted troops. The separated colonials from Legionnaires, and French regulars from all other troop. They further separated the prisoners by race and emphasized the differences in races between the Europeans, the blacks, and the Arabs. Reeducation (Marxist-Leninist indoctrination) was concentrated on African and North African colonial troops.⁴

Just as the Soviets did at the conclusion of World War II in the Pacific and Europe in 1945, after the signing of the 1954 Geneva Accords, the Soviets sent a delegation to North Vietnam to repatriate, forcibly, French Foreign Legion POWs identified as former nationals of Soviet bloc nations.⁵

The North Vietnamese repatriated some Legionnaires and large numbers of colonial troops from non-Soviet bloc countries directly to their homelands, via China, without notification to the international commission overseeing the Indochina prisoner exchanges. As a result of the forced repatriations by the Soviets and unreported repatriations by North Vietnam, there are great disparities in accounting for French POWs released by the North Vietnamese after the 1954 Geneva Accords.

In 1962, about forty "Metropolitan" French POWs were returned to France. After their return, the French government charged these former POWs as deserters, or "ralliers" and court martialled them, giving some of them prison sentences of up to five years and no back pay for the period they were prisoners in North Vietnam. Another group of about twenty Metropolitan French POWs chose to remain in North Vietnam. This latter group was court martialled in absentia for capital crimes committed during the war and elected to remain in North Vietnam rather than return to France and face execution.

Writer William Stevenson, a noted BBC correspondent who covered the French Indochina War, told the staff about interviews he had with French soldiers held captive by the North Vietnamese. He was of the opinion that the French prisoners seemed to be mentally deficient, possibly as a result of their long, harsh imprisonment, or severe brainwashing techniques known to have been employed by the North Vietnamese.⁶ Robert Garwood, a former U.S. POW who ⁴ See Fall, pp.438-442.

⁵ As noted, the Soviets carried out a similar policy in 1945 in Hanoi at the end of World War II.

⁷ Fall, Hell in a Very Small Place, pp.438-442. Survivors of Viet Minh brainwashing techniques had a myriad effect on the French POWs. Some carried guilt for their conduct in prison after their release; colonial soldiers became revolutionaries after return to their home states; and, oddly, Legionnaires and paratroopers became the French extreme right-wing militarist.

THE FRENCH EXPERIENCE

voluntarily returned from Vietnam in 1979, stated that, during the mid-1970s, he saw French prisoners used as forced laborers in a North Vietnamese dairy farm not far from Hanoi. Garwood believed the French POWs he saw were former Legionnaires who had not yet earned French citizenship when taken prisoner during the First Indochina War.⁸ Because of that, they had no home country to accept them after the war.⁹

During the 1954 French withdrawal from North Vietnam, the French left the North Vietnamese construction equipment, railway equipment, and various pieces of land and water transport equipment, as well as other stores of non-military supplies already in North Vietnam. From 1955 until sometime in the 1970s, the French government paid the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (North Vietnam) an estimated $30 million, via Hungarian banks, for maintenance of French military graves. In return, the North Vietnamese periodically repatriated remains of French military dead to France. However, all the remains repatriated were exhumed from graves already known to French authorities. The best information available indicates none of the war dead from Dien Bien Phu, the Viet Minh prison camps, or the death marches were ever repatriated to France.¹⁰

In 1971, to resolve the lingering problem over the unaccounted-for POW/MIA from the First Indochina War, the French Foreign Minister declared all unaccounted for French POW/MIA in Indochina dead. According to author/historian Bernard Fall, the actual number of French casualties in the First Indochina War was never made public. In 1973, the French resumed diplomatic relations with North Vietnam.

ANOTHER REPATRIATION EXPERIENCE

In 1975, after the successful invasion into South Vietnam by North Vietnamese and Communist forces, the North Vietnamese captured two high-ranking South Korean officials who were assisting the South Vietnamese in the defense of their country. The North Vietnamese promptly imprisoned the two South Koreans. During their imprisonment, the South Korean government negotiated continually with the Vietnamese for the release of the two South Koreans.

The two South Koreans remained imprisoned throughout the years of negotiation for their release. The Vietnamese never admitted—not even once—that the South Korean POWs were being held in prison. Even after the South Korean government presented the Vietnamese government incontrovertible photographic evidence that showed that the two South Korean POWs incarcerated in Vietnam, the Vietnamese government continued to deny holding the men.

Five years after the South Koreans were captured—in 1980—the Vietnamese government repatriated the two prisoners to South Korea. Still, after their release, the Vietnamese government denied that it ever held the men.

⁸ Individuals must complete, honorably, their initial six-year enlistment in the Legion to be eligible French citizenship.

⁹ Garwood's information on French POWs still being used as forced labor by the North Vietnamese was not verifiable without access to classified files.

¹⁰ Source material for the French Experience includes books by Bernard B. Fall, Jules Roy, and Archimedes L. A. Paul. Testimony of Anita Leane before the House Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia, April 1976, was also used. Other material was developed through interviews conducted by staff.

EPILOGUE COLONEL PECK'S MEMORANDUM

DATE: 12 FEB 1991

ATTN: POW-MIA

SUBJECT: Request for Relief

TO: DR

1. PURPOSE: I, hereby, request to resign my position as Chief of the Special Office for Prisoners of War and Missing in Action (POW-MIA).

2. BACKGROUND:

a. Motivation. My initial acceptance of this posting was based upon two primary motives: first, I had heard that the job was highly contentious and extremely frustrating, that no one would volunteer for it because of its complex political nature. This, of course, made it appear challenging. Secondly, since the end of the Vietnam War, I had heard the persistent rumors of American Servicemen having been abandoned in Indochina, and that the Government was conducting a "cover-up" so as not to be embarrassed. I was curious about this and thought that serving as the Chief of POW-MIA would be an opportunity to satisfy my own interest and help clear the Government's name.

b. The Office's Reputation. It was interesting that my previous exposure to the POW-MIA Office, while assigned to DIA, both as a Duty Director for Intelligence (DDI) and as the Chief of the Asia Division for Current Intelligence (JSI-3), was negative. DIA personnel who worked for me, when dealing with or mentioning the Office, always spoke about it in deprecating tones, alluding to the fact that any report which found its way there would quickly disappear into a "black hole."

c. General Attitudes. Additionally, surveys of active duty military personnel indicated that a high percentage (83%) believed that there were still live American prisoners in Vietnam. This idea was further promulgated in a number of legitimate veterans' periodicals and professional journals, as well as the media in general, which held that where there was so much smoke, there must be fire.

d. Cover-up. The dark side of the issue was particularly unsettling because of the persistent rumors and innuendoes of a Government conspiracy, alleging that U.S. military personnel had been left behind to the victorious communist governments in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, and that for "political reasons" or running the risk of a second Vietnam War, their existence was officially denied. Worse yet was the implication that DIA's Special Office for POWs and MIAs was an integral part of this effort to cover the entire affair up so as not to embarrass the Government nor the Defense Establishment.

e. The Crusade. As a Vietnam veteran with a certain amount of experience in Indochina, I was interested in the entire POW-MIA question, and willingly volunteered for the job, viewing it as sort of a holy crusade.

f. The Harsh Reality. Heading up the Office has not been pleasant. My plan was to be totally honest and forthcoming on the entire issue and aggressively pursue innovative actions and concepts to clear up the live sighting business, thereby refurbishing the image and honor of DIA. I became painfully aware, however, that I was not really in charge of my own office, but was merely a figurehead or whipping boy for a larger and totally Machiavellian group of players outside of DIA. What I witnessed during my tenure as the cardboard cut-out "Chief" of POW-MIA could be euphemistically labelled as disillusioning.

3. CURRENT IMPRESSIONS, BASED ON MY EXPERIENCE:

a. Highest National Priority. That National leaders continue to address the prisoner of war and missing in action issue as the "highest national priority" is a travesty. From my vantage point, I observed that the principal government players were interested primarily in conducting a "damage limitation exercise", and appeared to knowingly and deliberately generate an endless succession of manufactured crises and "busy work". Progress consisted in frenetic activity, with little substance and no real results.

b. The Mindset to Debunk. The mindset to "debunk" is alive and well. It is held at all levels, and continues to pervade the POW-MIA Office, which is not necessarily the fault of DIA. Practically all analysis is directed to finding fault with the source. Rarely has there been any effective, active follow through on any of the sightings, nor is there a responsive "action arm" to routinely and aggressively pursue leads. The latter was a moot point, anyway, since the Office was continuously buried in an avalanche of "ad hoc" taskings from every quarter, all of which required an immediate response. It was impossible to plan ahead or prioritize courses of action. Any real effort to pursue live sighting reports or exercise initiatives was diminished by the plethora of "busy work" projects directed by higher authority outside of DIA. A number of these grandiose endeavors bordered on the ridiculous, and - quite significantly - there was never an audit trail. None of these taskings was ever requested formally. There was, and still is, a refusal by any of the players to follow normal intelligence channels in dealing with the POW-MIA Office.

c. Duty, Honor and Integrity. It appears that the entire issue is being manipulated by unscrupulous people in the Government, or associated with the Government. Some are using the issue for personal or political advantage and others use it as a forum to perform and feel important, or worse. The sad fact, however, is that this issue is being controlled and a cover-up may be in progress. The entire charade does not appear to be an honest effort, and may never have been.

d. POW-MIA Officers Abandoned. When I assumed the Office for the first time, I was somewhat amazed and greatly disturbed by the fact that I was the only military officer in an organization of more than 40 people. Since combatants of all Services were lost in Vietnam, I would have thought there would at least be a token Service representation for a matter of the "highest national priority." Since the normal mix of officers from all Services is not found in my organization it would appear that the issue, at least at the working level, has, in fact, been abandoned. Also, the horror stories of the succession of military officers at the O-3 and O-6 level who have in some manner "rocked the boat" and quickly come to grief at the hands of the Government policy makers who direct the issue, lead one to the conclusion that we are all quite expendable, so by extrapolation one simply concludes that these same bureaucrats would "sacrifice" anyone who was troublesome or contentious as including prisoners of war and missing in action. Not a comforting thought. Any military officer expected to survive in this environment would have to be myopic, an accomplished sycophant, or totally insouciant.

e. The DIA Involvement. DIA's role in the affair is truly unfortunate. The overall Agency has generally practiced a "damage limitation drill" on the issue, as well. The POW-MIA Office has been cloistered for all practical purposes and left to its own fortunes. The POW Office is the lowest level in the Government "efforts" to resolve the issue, and oddly for an intelligence organization, has become the "lightning rod" for the entire establishment to the matter. The policy people manipulating the affair have maintained their distance and remained hidden in the shadows, while using the Office as a "toxic waste dump" to bury the whole "mess" out of sight and mind to a facility with the limited access to public scrutiny. Whatever happens in the issue, DIA takes the blame, while the real players remain inviolable. The fact that the POW-MIA Office is always the center of an investigation is no surprise. Many people suspect that something is rotten about the whole thing, but they cannot find an audit trail to ascribe blame, so they attack the DIA/POW-MIA "dump", simply because it has been placed in the line of fire as a cheap, expendable decoy.

f. "Suppressio Veri, Suggestio Falsi". Many of the puppet masters play a confusing, murky role. For instance, the Director of the National League of Families occupies an interesting and questionable position in the whole process. Although assiduously "churning" the account to give a tawdry illusion of progress, she is adamantly opposed to any initiative to actually get to the heart of the problem, and, more importantly, interferes in or actively sabotages POW-MIA analyses or investigations. She insists on rewriting or editing all significant documents produced by the Office, then touted as the DIA position. She apparently has access to top secret, codeword message traffic, for which she is supposedly not cleared, and she receives it well ahead of the DIA intelligence analysis. Her influence in "jerking around" everyone and everything involved in the issue goes far beyond the "war and MIA protestor gone straight" scenario. She was brought from the "outside", into the center of the imbroglio, and then, cloaked in a mantle of sanctimony, routinely impedes real progress and insidiously "muddles up" the issue. One wonders who she really is and where she came from.

4. CONCLUSIONS:

a. The Stalled Crusade. Unfortunately, what began on such a high note never succeeded in embarking. In some respects, however, I have managed to satisfy some of my curiosity.

b. Everyone is Expendable. I have seen firsthand how ready and willing the policy people are to sacrifice or "abandon" anyone who might be perceived as a political liability. It is quick and facile, and can be easily covered.

c. High-Level Knavery. I feel strongly that this issue is being manipulated and controlled at a higher level, not with the goal of resolving it, but more to obfuscate the question of live prisoners, and give the illusion of progress through hyperactivity.

d. "Smoke and Mirrors". From what I have witnessed, it appears that any soldier left in Vietnam, even inadvertently, was, in fact, abandoned years ago, and that the farce that is being played is no more than political legerdemain done with "smoke and mirrors", to stall the issue until it dies a natural death.

e. National League of Families. I am convinced that the Director of this organization is much more than meets the eye. As the principal actor in the grand show, she is in the perfect position to clamor for "progress", while really intentionally impeding the effort. And there are numerous examples of this. Otherwise it is inconceivable that so many bureaucrats in the "system" would instantaneously do her bidding and humor her every whim.

f. DIA's Dilemma. Although greatly saddened by the role ascribed to the Defense Intelligence Agency, I feel, at least, that I am dealing with honest men and women who are generally powerless to make the system work. My appeal and attempt to amend this role perhaps never had a chance. We all were subject to control. I particularly salute the personnel in the POW-MIA Office for their long suffering, which I regrettably was unable to change. I feel that the Agency and the Office are being used as the "fall guys" or "patsies" to cover the tracks of others.

5. RECOMMENDATIONS:

 E P I L O Q U E : T H E P E C K M E M O

a. One Final Vietnam Casualty. So ends the war and my last grand crusade, like it actually did end, I guess. However, as they say in the Legion, "je ne regrette rien..." For all of the above, I respectfully request to be relieved of my duties as Chief of the Special Office for Prisoners of War and Missing in Action.

b. A Farewell to Arms. So as to avoid the annoyance of being shipped off to some remote corner, out of sight and out of the way, in my own "bamboo cage" of silence somewhere, I further request that the Defense Intelligence Agency, which I have attempted to serve loyally and with honor, assist me in being retired immediately from active military service.

ADDENDUM TO THE REMARKS BY DR. JEFFREY C. DONAHUE

The Mandate for the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIAs

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Committee:

This Committee was formed to put the POW-MIA issue to rest and with it the suffering, acrimony, confrontation, distortion and deceit which has characterized it from all sides. The turmoil and tragedy surrounding the issue has done nothing but pit the public against their Government. A recent national poll shows 70% of Americans believe POWs were left behind. Yet, the Government maintains it did not happen.

Thus, your charter is a profound one. Your efforts will require serious research on the POW-MIA issue including going through the classified intelligence data in the Defense Intelligence Agency and Central Intelligence Agency. Indeed, the very fact that this data is classified is one of the principal problems obfuscating the issue. In addition, your efforts will have to go beyond the Vietnam War to the Korean War and World War II as many feel the Vietnam POW-MIA issue had a strong precedent in those wars.

Moreover, you will need to hear the testimony of the experts outside Government and the POW-MIA activist organizations such as Stephen Arkin, William Paul and James Sanders. Individuals such as these have conducted many years of research on the subject. Beyond them you should hear the testimony of both the Government and individuals outside Government involved in the issue. Indeed, I am honored to have the opportunity to appear before you.

Very basically, the elements of your mandate are straightforward. Fulfilling them is the only way to put the issue to rest and help this country heal. The elements are:

- * To conclude whether American servicemen were left behind in captivity in Indochina and, if so, why. (Fulfilling this mandate will make a very important contribution toward precluding future POW-MIA debacles such as we have experienced in Indochina.)
- * To recommend alternatives for securing as full as possible an accounting for the POW-MIAs. This should include a plan to bring home the live POWs. You will have to address whether an accounting should be a precondition to normalization of relations -- this is an immediate concern for the Committee.
- * To conclude whether American servicemen were left behind in captivity in Korea and, if so, why. Also, to recommend alternatives for securing as full as possible an accounting for them.
- * To conclude whether American servicemen were left behind in captivity in World War II and, if so, why. Also, to recommend alternatives for securing as full as possible an accounting for them.

- * To opine as to the efficacy of the both the Government's efforts to obtain an accounting and its POW-MIA intelligence operations. However, I strongly recommend you adopt a "no fault" policy in doing so.
- * To investigate the Glomar Java Sea incident, as it is closely linked to the POW-MIA issue.
- * To set standards which will delineate what is "as full as possible an accounting of the POW-MIAs." Participants outside Government should work with you in this regard such that the public accepts a final accounting. This is because so very few people trust the Government regarding an accounting. Indeed, the polls indicate the American public is deeply suspicious of the Government's policy and actions on POW-MIAs.

I firmly hope that you will approach this complex subject with open minds and clear slates. It deserves your most complete attention.

ADDENDUM TO THE REMARKS BY DR. JEFFREY C. DONAHUE

A POW-MIA Conspiracy and Cover-up? It's in the Policy!

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Committee:

The loud and in many cases credible voices charging a conspiracy and cover-up on the POW-MIA issue will not go away until you address the two things most responsible for the charges:

1. The large and growing body of evidence clearly showing that servicemen were abandoned alive and in captivity at the end of the Vietnam War and the growing body of evidence indicating that POWs still are alive in Vietnam and Laos;
2. The fact that POW-MIA intelligence data still is classified despite the War having been over for 18 years. Indeed, POW-MIA intelligence still is classified for the Korean War and World War II. As long as the Government classifies such data, charges of a conspiracy and cover-up will stick; it is just not possible to understand why such data is classified unless the Government is trying to hide the truth about live POWs. "National security" is an excuse which simply does not hold water after so many years.

Beyond this, though, is the conspiracy and cover-up embodied in the Government's POW-MIA policy itself; the policy, too, is in vital need of your investigation. Very simply, the Government has concocted and rigorously pursues a POW-MIA policy which actually precludes the return of live POWs! To understand this deliberate paradox, you should consider the elements of the policy:

- A. "The POW-MIA issue is humanitarian, not-economic." To the Vietnamese the issue never was, is not now and never will be humanitarian. To realize this, all one has to do is read the testimony of Congressmen and other officials who visited Vietnam after the War verifying that to the Vietnamese the issues of POWs and economic reconstruction of Vietnam were absolutely linked. The Vietnamese consistently raised the two subjects together. And, of course, the Laotians merely mirrored their sentiments.

To me, the Vietnamese still are telling us the issues are linked. They consistently say to us, "We do not have the money or the manpower to search our remote provinces for missing Americans." What they really are saying is, "Look, give us some aid and trade -- and look who we found in the jungle." In other words, the Vietnamese want something for the POWs and need a face-saving way of giving them back! They are telling us they have our POWs and want to give them to us, but that they need (1) something for them, and (2) a face-saving way to let them go.

Very importantly, this affirms the need to make a return of the live POWs and an accounting for the missing a precondition to normalization of relations with Vietnam and Laos. I firmly believe that unilaterally normalizing relations with Vietnam and Laos will lead them to kill the live POWs because the bargaining power they represent will have been obviated (by us, to compound the paradox).

- B. "The answers to the POW-MIA issue are in Hanoi, not Washington." This element of the policy is the ultimate cowardice, and the policy makers who formulated it should be excoriated for their complete avoidance of responsibility. It was our Government which sent the servicemen to Indochina, it was our Government which abandoned them, and it is our Government which is responsible for bringing them home. The answers are in Washington, not Hanoi. The policy makers do not have enough integrity to either tell the truth about the issue nor formulate a policy which will bring the live POWs home. Indeed, to avoid that responsibility they have subordinated the POW-MIA issue to other foreign policy objectives (normalization) such that the POWs are in danger of being forever wiped off the slate. This is something this Committee dearly needs to rectify. When government avoids responsibility for its actions, as has been happening so long with the POW-MIA issue, we as Americans have lost.
- C. "When somebody brings us proof of a live POW, we will move heaven and earth to bring him home." This is fraudulent on three fronts: (1) it shifts responsibility for proof of live POWs away from the Government to individuals such as myself; (2) the Government itself is sitting on mountains of classified evidence of live POWs which no one else can see; and (3) even when presented with proof, as in the case of Donald Carr, the Government proves itself impotent.
- D. "We have more intelligence resources than ever before dedicated to the POW-MIA issue." This is the classic Government approach to any problem -- throw more money at it (and it still will not be resolved). It does not take 500 intelligence analysts and a POW-MIA office in Hanoi to "resolve" the POW-MIA issue. Indeed, such a smoke-and-mirrors approach is certain to fail because the deceitful policy itself says there are no live POWs! All it takes is the Secretary of State getting on an airplane to Hanoi and Vientiane with a mandate from the President to negotiate the necessary deal to bring home the live POWs. And, we have all the bargaining chips we need in the form of normal commercial and diplomatic relations to strike such a deal. It is that simple.
- E. "We have looked into our files and we can't find any proof of live POWs." Here, the Government is trying to have its cake and eat it, too. This Committee needs to do the looking. The evidence is overwhelming that POWs were left behind alive and in captivity, the evidence is overwhelming that they still are alive today, and the Committee needs to take the initiative and do the right thing: tell the truth and bring the men home.

Much of the problem regarding the POW-MIAs boils down to no one in our Government, including five Presidents, having the courage to serve them as they served their country, and no one in our Government having the integrity to be accountable for them (which is the real issue of accountability). Won't this Committee please change that? The time is due; the POWs deserve it, their families deserve it, and the country deserves it. Time and results clearly demonstrate that the Defense and State Departments are not going to honorably and decently resolve the Indochina POW-MIA issue; rather, they are trying to make it go away through their ruthless deceit and cowardice.

The Role and Activities of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Committee:

(Please also refer to the attached document, "The National League of Families: Undemocratic, Unfair and Unswervingly Dedicated to Defending the U.S. Government's Lies, and Deceit on the Indochina POW-MIA Issue".)

I have been a member of the League since 1971. I served two terms on the Board of Directors in the mid-1970's and was elected to the current Board this past summer with the second-highest vote count.

You may be aware that the Executive Director of the League and the past Board opposed the formation of the Select Committee. Indeed, the Executive Director and leadership of the League oppose almost every initiative which is not "policy correct", i.e., which is not supportive of the Government's POW-MIA policy. And now, the Executive Director of the League and her entrenched minions on the Board continue to hold this Committee in high contempt, as evidenced by their statements to the membership in the League Newsletter. For example, the Executive Director states in the October 21, 1991 Newsletter, "Hopefully, the (Select) Committee will not attempt to determine whether POWs are held or the extent to which accountability can be achieved..." To the family members, as opposed to the totally pro-Government Executive Director, these certainly should be two of the Committee's principal mandates.

The Executive Director and the entrenched members of the Board serve but one purpose which, sadly, is not the POW-MIA families. Rather, it is serving and only serving the Government's POW-MIA policy, a policy itself which has been formulated and is being pursued to make sure that no living POWs return from Indochina to the embarrassment of the Government. The League is little more than a mouthpiece for the Government and the Executive Director is for all practical purposes a spokesperson for the Government. The statistics for family participation in League activities affirm the families' dismay and frustration regarding League activities: only 22% of eligible family members even bothered to vote in the last election of Directors, and a 25% quorum consistently cannot be raised at the League Annual Meetings. It would appear that the family members have given up hope on the League. Furthermore, the League's financial support primarily is through non-family contributions including United Way.

I ran for the Board of Directors hoping to transform the League into an entity serving the families instead of the Government. I now realize that this is impossible. Even though I am a Director of the League, I cannot have access to the League mailing list. Nor can I have any comments inserted into the Newsletter. Other barriers against family members seeing anything but official Government policy go far beyond this; indeed, no voices contrary to the Government's policy are ever invited to address the League or have their comments in the Newsletter. This includes well-known experts on the POW-MIA issue. The League is entirely a one-sided play, and the current League leadership is firmly dedicated to keeping it that way.

The Government's POW-MIA policy would not have what little credibility it does were it not for its very successful co-option of the League in the early 1980's. By bringing the Executive Director under its wings President Reagan could say, as does President Bush today, that he had the support of the family members in his "highest national priority" POW-MIA policy. Such a statement was and is part of the conspiracy which has deliberately kept the POWs from coming home. With so few families participating in the League and with those who do only being fed the pro-Government line, neither the League nor the Government can claim that the families support Government policy. Indeed, the League cannot validly claim to represent the families.

I believe the standard for evaluating the effectiveness of the League, and for that matter the effectiveness of the Government's POW-MIA policy, is accounting for the POW-MIAs and bringing home the live POWs. I cannot imagine any other standard which is relevant. The League and the Government have utterly and unequivocally failed. They have failed the live POWs, they have failed their families and they have failed their country. For the Select Committee to not prevail where the League and the Government have failed would be to lose the greatest opportunity ever to set the record straight on America's POW-MIAs and to deny this country the chance to finally close the books on the Vietnam War and get on with its future.

I would like to note that I do not believe the Executive Director of the League and certain Board members do not want the live POWs to come home. Rather, in blindly accepting the Government's POW-MIA policy they are unwittingly endorsing abandoning the live POWs because the policy has exactly that purpose and consequence.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE OF FAMILIES: UNDEMOCRATIC, UNFAIR AND UNSWERVINGLY DEDICATED TO DEFENDING THE U.S. GOVERNMENT'S LIES AND DECEIT ON THE INDOCHINA POW-MIA ISSUE

By: Dr. Jeffrey C. Donahue, Member of the League Since 1971 and Brother of Maj. Morgan J. Donahue, USAF - MIA in Laos 12/13/68

The U. S. Government's POW-MIA policy has been debilitated by a series of coverup allegations over the years from individuals within Government and individuals and entities outside Government. Each time, the Defense Department or the State Department "investigate" the allegations and say, "Trust us; we've taken a look and affirmed there is no coverup." One thing the American public can count on is the inevitability of more allegations because anytime the Government says, "Trust us," you can bet it is lying. The Indochina POW-MIA issue is no different in this regard than Watergate or the Iran-Contra deal. Thank God that the American public knows better.

One way the Government perpetuates its lies on the issue is through the National League of Families of American Prisoners of War and Missing in Southeast Asia. The League is merely a mouthpiece for the Government's policy, and this brief statement explains how the League goes about it.

Fundamentally, dissenting opinion has no forum within the League. Members are forbidden access to the membership roster or the League mailing list. Questions at the Annual Meeting are severely limited and no press is allowed during the General Session at the Annual Meeting.

Once upon a time, dissenting opinion could be put before the membership in the form of resolutions passed at Regional Meetings. Those resolutions were distributed to the membership for voting prior to the Annual Meeting in mailings accompanied by the voting for Board members. However, the Board also exhorted members to vote against resolutions which were considered contrary to League "direction." Thus, members would read only the resolutions and the recommendations to vote against them. No defense or explanations of the resolutions were allowed. And, the recommendations to vote against the resolutions usually were paragraphs or a page long when the resolutions themselves were only a few sentences. Members never had a chance to hear the other side and never had a chance to even ask questions. This year, the Regional Meetings were dropped, so not even the resolutions can be put before the membership.

At the other extreme, the Executive Director of the League has a totally unencumbered forum from which to espouse the Government's POW-MIA policy. She also distributes her personal views at will in periodic mailings (for example, her 6/14/91 letter) at League expense and in the Newsletter. Opposing opinions are never printed in any League document; rather, opinions and events contrary to her opinion are attacked without the membership ever having the chance to make up their own minds by being given both sides of the story.

The Executive Director and the Board say that the League speaks for the POW-MIA families on the issue, and State/DoD often cite the League as the "voice" of the families. This, true to League form, is just another deception. In the first instance, many families have joined the National Alliance of Families for the Return of America's Missing Servicemen - World War II/Korean War/Cold War/Vietnam War. In the second, there is a universe of POW-MIA families and nobody knows how many belong to the League such that it represents the "voice." Finally, it is not certain as to what comprises a "family." In all probability the League would have folded years ago if membership had not been extended to aunts, uncles and grandparents.

Dissenting opinions are vehemently suppressed at the Annual Meeting and dissenters who either state or distribute opposing opinions are threatened with the hotel Security Department and arrest, as I was at last year's Meeting for merely passing out some literature. Questions are not allowed of Government officials at the Meeting except to innocuous junior-level personnel such as those representing CIMH and JCRC.

Experts on the POW-MIA issue from outside Government whose knowledge or opinions differ from the Government/League position never are invited to appear at the Annual Meeting, nor are their positions ever printed in League documents. Some of these individuals are widely acclaimed for their knowledge and research on the POW-MIA issue; examples include Bill Paul, Tom Ashworth, Jim Sanders, Eugene Tighe, Sen. Robert Smith, former Cong. John Rowland, former Cong. Billy Hendon and members of the POW-MIA research team of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Republican staff. The only opinions presented to the League membership are those in support of Government policy. Does anyone think, concomitantly, that Col. Millard Peck, who recently resigned as head of the Defense Intelligence Agency's Special POW-MIA Office, will be invited to appear at the Annual Meeting to present a different view of the Government's policy? Of course not. Indeed, the League has become a party to the Government's coverup.

Of course, who will be invited to appear before the Annual Meeting? Only representatives of the U.S. Government -- the very same people who formulated and now perpetuate the Government's lies on the issue.

Sadly, the whole POW-MIA issue has come to the point where to know the truth one has to go outside the League and the Government. The truth is that American servicemen were knowingly abandoned alive and in captivity in Indochina and remain there today. The League and the Government are so dedicated to suppressing that truth and instead lying about the issue that they have concocted a policy which precludes the live POWs from coming home.

If the Government and the League wanted the live POWs home, they would be home. It is that simple.

Vietnam pledged to return American prisoners from Laos in Hanoi, an underlining that was apparently contradicted by Soth's statement.

ENCLOSURES. 1 ~~CONFIDENTIAL~~ SOURCE SUBMITTED THE FOLLOWING TRANSCRIBED ENGLISH LANGUAGE LIST TO THE US NAVAL ATTACHE, BANGKOK. SOURCE STATED THAT THE NAMES ARE THOSE OF LIVE PW CAPTIVES PRESENTLY HELD IN LAOS WHICH WERE FURNISHED TO SENSURED BY LAO RESISTANCE PERSONNEL (MFI). THE ORIGINAL IS FORWARDED AS AN ENCLOSURE.

SINCE ALL NAMES CROSSCHECKED WITH VALID MIA CASES.

STONY BEACH REQUESTED THAT THE US NAVAL ATTACHE TO ARRANGE A MEETING WITH SOURCE. THIS MEETING OCCURRED ON 22 AUG 88 AT 1830 HOURS.

2. AT THIS MEETING, SOURCE PRESENTED STONY BEACH INTERVIEWERS WITH A PHOTOCOPY OF A MAP SKETCH OF THE SITE WHERE ADDITIONAL LIVE US PW ARE ALLEGED TO BE HELD. THE ORIGINAL OF THIS SKETCH WAS ALSO OBTAINED FROM LAO RESISTANCE PERSONNEL. IT BEARS THE APPARENT UTM COORDINATES "(XD.6537)", PROBABLY //UTMCOORDS 88XD6537//, WHICH WOULD PLACE THE SITE IN EASTERN SAVANNAKHET PROVINCE. THE PHOTOCOPY MAP IS FORWARDED AS AN ENCLOSURE.

3. SOURCE DECLINED TO ELABORATE ON THE CIRCUMSTANCES PERTAINING TO THE INFORMATION CONTAINED IN THE TWO DOCUMENTS, AND STATED THAT IT PROBABLY WOULD NOT BE POSSIBLE FOR STONY BEACH TO MEET THE RESISTANCE PERSONNEL INVOLVED. SOURCE DID, HOWEVER, INVITE STONY BEACH TO SUBMIT WRITTEN QUESTIONS CONCERNING THESE DOCUMENTS OR OTHER ITEMS/AREAS OF INTEREST. THE QUESTIONS ARE TO BE PASSED TO SOURCE THROUGH SENSURED

4. TWO DAYS LATER, THE US NAVAL ATTACHE PASSED STONY BEACH TWO PHOTOCOPY MAP SECTIONS PROVIDED BY SOURCE. BOTH ARE OF EASTERN SAVANNAKHET

PROVINCE. ONE HAS A MARKER HIGHLIGHTING COORDINATES XD6537, APPARENTLY THE POINT DESCRIBED IN BT 66415 NNNN NNDD

SUBJ: JCRC RPT TAY-605; HEARSAY OF AMERICAN PRISONERS IN LAOS

2. SUMMARY: SOURCE REPORTS HEARSAY OF 260 AMERICANS CURRENTLY BEING HELD IN A CAVE IN LAOS. SOURCE STATED THAT IS ABLE TO OBTAIN RECENT PHOTOGRAPHS OF SEVERAL OF THE PRISONERS

WHICH WERE OBTAINED FROM A LAO CONTACT.

3. INFORMATION: SOURCE REPORTS THAT "WITHIN THE PAST MONTH" HAS BEEN IN CONTACT WITH A LAO WHO HAS TOLD ABOUT AND SHOWN PROOF OF AMERICAN PRISONERS WHO ARE BEING HELD IN LAOS. SOURCE STATED THAT THE LAO, WHOSE NAME DOES NOT WISH TO REVEAL AT THIS TIME, RECENTLY CROSSED INTO THAILAND FROM LAOS AND MADE CONTACT WITH SOURCE. THE LAO TOLD THAT HE HAD OBSERVED A LOCATION IN RUGGED MOUNTAINS IN THE TRI-BORDER (LAOS, VIETNAM, CAMBODIA) AREA WHERE 260 AMERICANS ARE PRESENTLY BEING HELD. SOURCE WAS TOLD THAT UNTIL RECENTLY THERE WERE 270 PRISONERS, BUT TEN HAD DIED DUE TO POOR HEALTH. SOURCE STATED THAT HAD MAILED A LIST OF SIX NAMES TO JCRC AND INQUIRED IF JCRC REP HAD RECEIVED THE LIST. WHEN INFORMED THAT JCRC HAD NOT RECEIVED SUCH A LIST OR ANY OTHER MAIL FROM SOURCE, SOURCE STATED THAT COULD ONLY RECALL THAT ONE OF THE SIX PEOPLE ON LIST WAS A MAN NAMED "MR. MORGAN." STATED THAT RECALLED THIS NAME BECAUSE IT WAS THE MOST IMPORTANT ONE, BUT WHEN ASKED WHY, WASN'T SURE.

4. SOURCE STATED THAT HIS LAO CONTACT HAD COME TO THE AREA HIMSELF AND OBSERVED THAT THE 260 PRISONERS WERE BEING HELD IN A CAVE AT THE FOOT OF A LARGE KARST MOUNTAIN. THERE IS ONLY A SINGLE ROAD INTO THE VALLEY, AND IT IS WELL GUARDED; ONLY RESUPPLY TRUCKS TO THE CAVE-PRISON ARE ALLOWED IN. ACCORDING TO SOURCE, LAO CONTACT IS RELATED TO ONE OF THE GUARDS WHO EXPRESSED INTEREST IN HELPING THE AMERICAN PRISONERS RETURN TO FREEDOM IF HE AND HIS MEN COULD ALSO BE ACCOMMODATED. SOURCE SAID THAT THE LAO SHOWED HIM SIX RECENTLY SHOT COLOR PHOTOGRAPHS WHICH SHOWED EIGHT OR NINE OF THE AMERICAN PRISONERS AT THE CAVE-PRISON. SOURCE SAID THAT DID NOT KNOW THE EXACT LOCATION OF THE CAVE, BUT THAT HIS FRIEND HAD BEEN THERE AND COULD PROBABLY DRAW A MAP SHOWING THE LOCATION.

Notice how the Govt treats live sightings in Laos on news.

 Thanks to the duplication of the US Govt.*

Ex/ (2)

5. SOURCE STATED THAT WOULD BE WILLING TO COOPERATE, BUT INSISTED IN KNOWING THE TERMS OF THE 2.4 MILLION DOLLAR REWARD. HAD HEARD ABOUT IN THE NEWS RECENTLY. JCRC REP EXPLAINED THAT THE U.S. GOVERNMENT WAS NOT OFFERING A REWARD AND DID NOT SUPPORT THE PRIVATE GROUP WHO IS ADVERTISING THE REWARD. JCRC REP ALSO POINTED OUT THAT MANY PEOPLE HAVE BEEN INQUIRING RECENTLY ABOUT THE REWARD, AND CAUTIONED SOURCE NOT TO BE TOO QUICK TO BELIEVE EVERY RUMOR HEARS. SOURCE INSISTED THAT THE INFORMATION WAS VALID, STATING THAT SAW THE PHOTOS HIMSELF. JCRC REP IMPRESSED ON SOURCE THAT WHETHER OR NOT THE PRIVATE GROUP WHO WAS OFFERING THE REWARD WAS SINCERE, NOTHING COULD BE DONE UNTIL THE USG HAD A CHANCE TO EVALUATE THE INFORMATION SOURCE CLAIMED TO HAVE. SOURCE AGREED, AND SAID WOULD ATTEMPT TO OBTAIN THE PHOTOS AND A MAP SHOWING THE LOCATION OF THE CAVE AND SEND THEM TO JCRC BY REGISTERED MAIL AS SOON AS POSSIBLE, DEPENDING ON WHEN SEES LAO SINCE NEXT.

*This is the reason the Congress won't have it put together for our justice system. Further the Congress will never act on this news.
It has the State Dept with its absurd
CIA agencies
(DoD, CIA, DIA) highly upset by it. The Govt has more than offered money recently.*

B. AFTER ARRIVING IN ON 13 AUG 1987, :
 CONTACTED AND MET WITH IN HIS OFFICE WHERE HE REITERATED HIS DISLIKE FOR (HE HAD DONE SO OVER THE TELEPHONE ON PREVIOUS OCCASIONS DURING THE PERIOD WHEN I WAS NEGOTIATING FOR AN INTERVIEW WITH WHEN ASKED WHY HE MAINTAINED A RELATIONSHIP WITH AN INDIVIDUAL WHO HE OBVIOUSLY DISTRUSTED, RESPONDED THAT HE DOES SO IN THE HOPE THAT PW/MIA INFORMATION MAY PROVE ACCURATE. ALSO DURING THE 13TH OF AUGUST, I MET WITH IN WHO INFORMED ME THAT IS CURRENTLY UNDER INVESTIGATION BY THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT FOR POSSIBLE VIOLATIONS OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT. IS ALSO OF INTEREST TO THE DEA.

2. ON 14 AUGUST 1987, I MET WITH AND INTERVIEWED
 HE PROVIDED THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION.

A. DURING A DINNER MEETING IN AUG 1986 THAT HAD BEEN ARRANGED BY, KNOWN ASSOCIATE OF MET A MAN NAMED AMONG OTHERS AT THE MEETING WAS AN INDIVIDUAL CALLED ALSO AN PROCLAIMED LAO RESISTANCE
 LEADER. THE DINNER WAS ARRANGED IN ORDER FOR

MEET PERSONS WHO MAY HAVE BEEN ABLE TO PROVIDE OR SEARCH FOR US PW/MIA INFORMATION. SINCE THAT MEETING, HAS MAINTAINED OCCASIONAL CONTACT WITH IS DESCRIBED AS ABOUT

B. AFTER A TELEPHONE CONTACT WITH (DATE
 UNRECALLED MET WITH HIM AT ROOM IN HIS - HOTEL IN BANGKOK, THE MEETING TOOK PLACE ON APPROXIMATELY 20 JUL 1987. NO ONE ELSE WAS PRESENT.
 STATED THAT LAO CHINESE "SCOUTS" FROM A
 ORGANIZATION HAD RECENTLY RETURNED FROM A FORAY NEAR THE LAO/VIETNAM BORDER AND PROVIDED WITH INFORMATION ON US
 PW'S AND GAVE SIX PHOTOGRAPHS OF AN ALLEGED AMERICAN
 PW AND OF THE CAMP IN WHICH HE WAS KEPT. THE PHOTOS WERE TAKEN ABOUT 45 TO 60 DAYS PRIOR TO THE

(SEE ATTACHED PHOTOS). ACCORDING TO [REDACTED] THEY SAID THAT APPROXIMATELY 50 US PW'S ARE BEING KEPT AT VARIOUS CAMPS IN GROUPS OF SEVEN TO TEN IN AN AREA BETWEEN SAPHONE, LAOS AND KHE SANH, SRV. THE SENIOR PRISONER WAS A MAN NAMED "MORGAN" WHO REPORTEDLY HAS A FAMILY IN TAMPA, FLORIDA. MORGAN WAS SUPPOSED TO HAVE WRITTEN A LETTER IN 1968 TO [REDACTED]

HOW THIS INFORMATION WAS OBTAINED BY THE SCOUTS WAS UNCLEAR TO [REDACTED]

ANOTHER AMERICAN PW KEPT IN THE CAMP WAS A MAN [REDACTED]

WHO

SUFFERS FROM A PARTIAL MEMORY LOSS. SOME OF THE PRISONERS WERE KEPT IN "MENTAL ISOLATION" AND SOME WERE NARCOTICS ADDICTS ACCORDING TO THE SCOUTS. THE AREA IN WHICH THE PW'S WERE KEPT WAS PROTECTED BY [REDACTED] (VIETNAMESE). [REDACTED] COULD PROVIDE NO FURTHER AMPLIFYING INFORMATION.

C. ON ABOUT THE 28TH OF JULY, 1967, [REDACTED] MET AGAIN [REDACTED] MET WITH [REDACTED] IN A DIFFERENT ROOM. [REDACTED] WOULD NOT DISCLOSE EXACTLY WHICH ONE. AT THAT MEETING [REDACTED] SIMPLY PROVIDED [REDACTED] WITH A HAND SKETCHED MAP OF THE LAO/VIETNAM BORDER REGION FROM THE EAST CHINA SEA TO THE SAVANNAKET AREA. ON THE MAP AN AREA IS [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] HAD WRITTEN ON THIS DOCUMENT WHICH WAS APPROXIMATELY 11X14 INCHES IN SIZE. HE WROTE THE ENGLISH AND THE ARABIC NUMERALS. THE OTHER WRITING ON IT IS IN LAO. ACCOMPANYING THE SKETCH ON A SEPARATE PIECE OF PAPER WAS AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION OF THE LAO; THEY ARE MOSTLY PLACE NAMES AND CORRESPOND TO THE ARABIC NUMERALS [REDACTED] HAD WRITTEN ON THE SKETCH. [REDACTED] COULD NOT OR WOULD NOT PROVIDE A NARRATIVE OF HIS DISCUSSION WITH [REDACTED] ON THIS OCCASION EXCEPT TO SAY THAT THE MAP WAS OF THE AREA IN WHICH THE CAMPS WHERE THE 50 US PW'S ARE KEPT. HE WOULD NOT FURNISH THE ORIGINAL (WHICH WAS A XEROX COPY) AND PROVIDED INSTEAD AN 8X10 INCH COPY.

D. [REDACTED] CONSIDERS THE INFORMATION "SOFT" AND STATED THAT HE REQUESTED [REDACTED] TO OBTAIN FURTHER PROOF OF THE EXISTENCE OF THE AMERICANS IN THE BORDER REGION. HE ALSO ACKNOWLEDGED THAT THE PHOTOS ARE SO UNDEREXPOSED AS TO BE ALMOST USELESS BUT SUGGESTED THAT THE DIA COULD DO SOMETHING TO ENHANCE THEIR QUALITY. HE SAID THAT [REDACTED] WAS TO GET IN CONTACT WITH HIM IN THE U.S. AS SOON AS HE COULD GET FURTHER PROOF. [REDACTED] DID NOT AT FIRST WISH TO DIVULGE NAME BECAUSE HE WANTED TO MAINTAIN SOLE CONTACT WITH [REDACTED] AND DID NOT WANT REPRESENTATIVES OF THE USG QUESTIONING [REDACTED] DIRECTLY. AFTER IT WAS EXPLAINED TO HIM THAT SOME OF

THE PERSONS WITH WHOM HE HAD DEALT DURING 1986 HAD CONNECTIONS WITH THE SRV INTELLIGENCE SERVICES AND THAT NEEDED TO KNOW ALL INDIVIDUALS INVOLVED,
RELUCTANTLY GAVE NAME AND DESCRIPTION.

E. I REQUESTED THAT CONTACT ME DIRECTLY IN THE FUTURE, FURNISHED HIM WITH FOUR OF THE OFFICE'S TELEPHONE NUMBERS AND INSTRUCTED HIM TO CALL COLLECT. HE WAS CAUTIONED THAT HE SHOULD NOT INTIMATE TO ANYONE THAT HE WORKS FOR THE DIA, NOR WAS HE BEING TASKED BY US TO DO ANYTHING. AS IN THE PAST, ANY INFORMATION THAT HE COULD PROVIDE WOULD BE WELCOMED.

F. ONE OF THE TOPICS TOUCHED UPON DURING THE INTERVIEW WAS ALLEGED MEETING WITH OF BANGKOK. HAD INFORMED ME DURING A RECENT VISIT
THERE THAT HAD COME TO HIM STATING THAT WAS IN THAILAND TDY FROM THE DIA AND REQUESTED ADVANCE FUNDING FOR HIS TRIP. OF COURSE, DEMURRED. WHEN THIS WAS BROUGHT UP DURING THE COURSE OF THE INTERVIEW, DENIED THAT HE TOLD HE WAS TDY FROM THE DIA, THAT WAS A SUPPOSED SOURCE OF FUNDS FOR PW/MIA INFORMATION AND SIMPLY WAS EXPLORING THE POSSIBILITY THAT HE MIGHT NOT HAVE TO USE HIS OWN MONEY WHILE HE WAS WAITING FOR MEN TO PRODUCE THE FACTS THAT NEVER WORKED FOR THE DIA, AND DOES NOT NOW WORK FOR WERE EMPHASIZED TO HIM.

3. ON 17 AUGUST 1987, I REQUESTED TO DETERMINE IF THE PHOTOGRAPHS PROVIDED BY THE ONE PROVIDED BY AND THE "MAT" PHOTO ALLEGED TO BE OF WERE OF THE SAME INDIVIDUAL AND TAKEN AT THE SAME LOCALE.

4. ON 17 AUGUST 1987, A
SEARCH WAS MADE FOR ANY UNIT NUMBERED IT WAS FOUND THAT A REGIMENT SUBORDINATE TO AN UNIT LOCATED IN EXISTS, AND A REGIMENT WITH THAT NUMBER IS SUBORDINATE TO THE
OF THE. SINCE THE LATTER IS A UNIT, A PORTION OF IT MAY BE LOCATED ALONG WHICH TRAVERSES THE AREA DEPICTED BY THE SKETCH. THERE IS NO BRIGADE,
IN OUR HOLDINGS.

5. COMMENTING ON THE QUALITY OF THE LAO LANGUAGE ON THE SKETCH MAP, NATIVE LAO SPEAKER SAID THAT THE INDIVIDUAL WHO DID THE WRITING WAS PROBABLY ABOVE THE THIS CONCLUSION WAS BASED ON

Dear ☒ About the United States Prisoner of wars
I have kept all information since 19, 2, 1981. Right now we almost have the real information. One of our agent describes all details about the U.S.P.O.Ws. They told me to contact you and they gave me the Prisoners names but all incomplete detail.

1) Mr. Hacktor he has a wife and child living in the United states. This man also lives alone they said it would be very difficult to get him alive they are 100% sure they can get him with the head if necessary. 2) Mr. Morgan Sheffer, Sundom. He was born 2-5-1944, his plane A.C. 123. The Plane serial N 32931. He lived with other 6 Americans. It would also be very difficult to rescue him because they have a strongly security, if you need his picture, B.I.D. Or signature it's possible they can get it, besides these things, if we have the plane, signal for the plane
, and quick landing they are 100% sure we can get them. The P.L. Agent said they will send their people to our camp to serve as collateral for the rescue plans are not successful they will die for us. the rescue plans are successful what is the United States going to do help or support them? Please send us the information and complete details.
they said this Operation would cost $1,500.00. Before actually launching the Operation they will not accept this money however if they are unable to rescue the P.O.Ws. They will not get the money would you please check their names if it's true, if it's true please get plane and $1,500.00. and send them to me. In the near future we will know about position of the P.O.Ws. If the Pl. are brave enough to really risk their lives we will the victory.

How do you feel about contacting each other? do you want me to phone you and if so do you have any secret code that we can use if you have a secret code please send it to me as soon as possible. If the United states agrees to send the rescue team to me, I will not provide as the same team because the old Commando team was well known by Thai and we don't want to know or get involve with us anymore. Now the better plan is to send as soon as possible, we are afraid the U.S. P.O.Ws. will change their location. The U.S. POWs are instructors.

Please keep all this information secret don't tell any body because it would be dangerous for the P.O.Ws. In my team no one knows yet

* Please inform of the situation

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

YES, AMERICA DID LEAVE PRISONERS OF WAR BEHIND IN SOUTHEAST ASIA !!
IT'S TIME TO BRING THEM HOME.

The following timeline of newspaper articles, press releases, Congressional testimonies and other documents explains how and why American POWs were left behind in captivity in Southeast Asia. It also explains why Vietnam and Laos continue to hold American POWs today.

Because the POWs were alive when the war ended and because there is no evidence that they have since died, we can conclude only that they are alive and in captivity today. Does America have enough integrity to bring them home, NOW? If we do not, then we have forfeited that for which they believed they were fighting: America's freedom and dignity. If every resource is not marshalled to bring them home, now, then as a country we will have fallen to the lowest moral standard. As friends of mine have observed, when one American is not worth the effort to be found, we as Americans have lost.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

For background regarding POWs in Indochina, this Timeline starts with the following:

January 4, 1965 Newsweek, "Vietnam: Fortune's Scapegoat," p. 24.

"After the fall of Dienbienphu in May 1954, a fresh inscription was chiseled in the gray stone war memorial in the little Breton town of Pleudihen. Lettered in gold, it read: 'Yves Le Bray, mort pour la France.' (died for France) And on All Saints Day every year thereafter, someone from the Le Bray family joined in placing a wreath beside the plaque honoring Yves and other heroes of Pleudihen who had died for France.

Last week, however, who should be sipping 'vin rouge' in a local cafe but Yves Le Bray-rather the worse for wear, but still alive....

Le Bray's lost decade began...when he was a 21-year-old PFC serving as a radioman with a French artillery battalion near the port of Haiphong, in North Vietnam. Ambushed while on night patrol, Le Bray spent the next six months in a Communist prison camp. And at war's end, instead of being returned to France like most of his fellow prisoners, he was packed off by the North Vietnamese Government to Langson, near the Chinese border, to become a slave laborer....

Having lost all trace of him, French authorities presumed that Le Bray had been killed in action and thus it was that his name was added to the 'monument aux morts' back in Pleudihen....

Eventually, more than ten years after his capture, the French Legation in Hanoi found out about Le Bray, obtained his freedom, and sent him winging homeward aboard an Air France Jet."

COMMENT: Following the French defeat in Indochina, the North Vietnamese proclaimed that all the French POWs had been given back to France and that there were no more French POWs in captivity. Le Bray was living proof to the contrary. Today, the Vietnamese say the same thing about American POWs. Rigidly following the Stalinist model, the North Vietnamese did not consider captured French servicemen as POWs, nor do they so consider captured American servicemen as POWs. Rather, the POWs are "war criminals" who in the Stalinist doctrine are stateless individuals. Thus, the North Vietnamese could and do say they have been holding no Frenchmen, Americans, nor any POWs, while at the same time it is precisely what they have been doing.

January 23, 1973 1971 Vietnam Peace Agreement, Chap. VIII, Article 21. (The Agreement was initialed and announced on January 23, 1973 and was signed January 27, 1973.)

"The United States anticipates that this agreement will usher in an era of reconciliation with the Democratic Republic of Vietnam as with all the peoples of Indo-China. In pursuance of its traditional policy, the United States will contribute to healing the wounds of war and to post-war reconstruction of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and throughout Indo-China."

COMMENT: The Paris Peace Agreement, negotiated by Henry Kissinger and ratified by Congress, committed the United States to rebuilding North Vietnam and all of Indochina. President Nixon, in a secret letter to Vietnam Premier Pham Van Dong (quoted later), affirmed the amount of that reconstruction aid at $3.25 billion, with food and other commodity aid of up to $1.5 billion. In other words, to induce North Vietnam to sign the Agreement the United States promised to "pay up." In a very real sense, the United States tried to buy its way out of the war. The choice of words, "Era of Reconciliation" and "Post-War Reconstruction" were tremendous embellishments given the reality of the situation in Vietnam, and served to falsely build North Vietnam's expectations.

The North Vietnamese, having no reason to trust the United States, needed collateral for their own protection regarding the United States' promise to provide aid. That collateral was the POWs. Indeed, as is shown later, the North Vietnamese linked release of the POWs to aid at the very beginning of the Peace Talks. Because of the incredibly intense efforts to rescue downed pilots and other servicemen during the war, the North Vietnamese knew how much the POWs meant and held many of them back as a downpayment on the promised aid. In effect, the United States promise to provide aid to Hanoi put a price on the POWs' heads of $4.75 billion. These are the POWs who did not come home during Operation Homecoming.

The North Vietnamese -- not the United States -- provided the list of American POWs to be repatriated from Vietnam. (There was no list for the POWs in Laos.) The United States naively accepted the list knowing full well it was incomplete. Major General Eugene Tighe, USAF, then Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, said that according to United States intelligence sources he had fully expected the North Vietnamese list to have 600 more names than were on it. To the United States intelligence community, the list for our POWs in North Vietnam was 600 names short.

January 24, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "U.S., N. Viets to Exchange POW Lists."

"...Kissinger said those held by the Communists will be released in groups at about 15-day intervals throughout the 60 days allotted for repatriation.

'American prisoners held in Laos and North Vietnam will be released to us in Hanoi,' he said. 'They will be received by American medical evacuation teams and flown on American planes to places of our own choice,...."

COMMENT: According to Henry Kissinger, the release of the POWs held in Laos was the responsibility of the North Vietnamese under the terms of the Paris Peace Agreement. However, not only was the war in Laos still underway, including intense bombing by the United States, but also the Laotians claimed sovereignty over the American POWs there. (This is explained in detail later.) That sovereignty was affirmed by the North Vietnamese. At this stage, though, there were two critically important points in Kissinger's comment: first, his verification of the existence of American POWs in Laos; and, second his confusion over their status.

January 29, 1973 The New York Times, "Communists List 585 POWs."

"...The Defense Department spokesman, Jerry W. Friedheim, said that the Communists' lists were 'incomplete' because they did not include American servicemen known to have been captured in Laos. He emphasized that the United States would continue to press the other side for a listing of prisoners held in Laos....

There have been conflicting statements from United States officials on whether North Vietnam was required to turn over a list of American prisoners held in Laos under the agreement or the accompanying protocols."

COMMENT: Not surprisingly, given Kissinger's misunderstanding about the POWs in Laos, even other American officials did not understand the situation.

January 30, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "Reds Fail to List POWs Taken in Laos."

"The North Vietnamese have failed to furnish the United States with a list of American fighting men taken prisoner in Laos, Pentagon officials and an organization of POW families said Sunday....

Some military officers suggested the North Vietnamese might be holding back on this information to deter further U.S. bombing of the North Vietnamese supply trails through Laos. More than 120 American bombers hit Laos and Cambodia after the Vietnam cease-fire....

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said it is true that no Laos list was provided.

He said the matter is being discussed with the North Vietnamese through diplomatic channels in Paris.

"We do expect to receive a list," Friedheim said....

Laos is not covered by the Vietnam cease-fire, although Henry A.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

Kissinger, the chief U.S. peace negotiator, has said the U.S. government has firm expectations there will be an early halt to the fighting there....

In explaining the agreement with North Vietnam and the Viet Cong, Kissinger told a White House news conference that "American prisoners held in Laos and North Vietnam will be returned to us in Hanoi."

COMMENT: The United States complained that the North Vietnamese had not provided a list of POWs held in Laos and reiterated the American perception of the Agreement that those POWs were the responsibility of the Vietnamese. The suggestion by some United States military officers that the POWs were being held back deliberately was most certainly correct, both as a deterrent to further bombing in Laos and as a downpayment on promised American aid.

January 31, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes. "Fate of 56 POWs is still a mystery."

"The Defense Department said Monday 56 American servicemen previously carried by the United States as prisoners of war remain unaccounted for by North Vietnam.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said their names 'are not on the two lists we have received so far.'

These lists, handed to U.S. officials in Paris Saturday by the North Vietnamese, identified 555 U.S. fighting men held in Communist prison camps in North and South Vietnam as well as the names of 55 POWs the Communists said died in captivity.

In turning over these lists, the Communists also failed to furnish information on Americans taken prisoner in Laos or provide clues to the fate of more than 1,300 Americans still missing in action throughout Southeast Asia....

The State Department said 'We firmly expect to have a list of POWs to cover Laos.'

Presumably Washington is pressuring Hanoi for its Laos list, although State Department spokesman Charles Bray declined to specify what diplomatic effort was underway."

COMMENT: The United States not only acknowledged that all of the known POWs in Vietnam had not been accounted for but also reiterated our knowledge of the existence of POWs in Laos. Ultimately, the United States repeated the mistake it made in Korea of accepting the enemy's list of American POWs despite our own intelligence that many more men were being held back. Indeed, as cited by then Major General Eugene Tigue previously, the belief among the intelligence community was that there should have been 600 more men than the 555 identified by the North Vietnamese. The 56 were "hard core" POW cases.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

February 1, 1973 Former President Nixon's "Message to Prime Minister Pham Van Dong" (This letter was kept secret during and after the negotiations and was finally declassified and published in The Department of State Bulletin on June 27, 1977, p. 674.)

"The President wishes to inform the Democratic Republic of Vietnam of the principles which will govern United States participation in the postwar reconstruction of North Vietnam....

1) The Government of the United States of America will contribute to postwar reconstruction in North Vietnam without any political conditions.

2) Preliminary United States studies indicate that the appropriate program for the United States contribution to postwar reconstruction will fall in the range of $3.25 billion of grant aid over five years. Other forms of aid will be agreed upon between the two parties....

3) The United States will propose to the Democratic Republic of Vietnam the establishment of a United States-North Vietnamese Joint Economic Commission within 30 days from the date of this message.

4) The function of this Commission will be to develop programs for the United States contribution to reconstruction of North Vietnam. This United States contribution will be based upon such factors as:

(a) The needs of North Vietnam arising from the dislocation of war;
(b) The requirements for postwar reconstruction in the agricultural and industrial sectors of North Vietnam's economy.

5) The Joint Economic Commission will have an equal number of representatives from each side. It will agree upon a mechanism to administer the program which will constitute the United States contribution to the reconstruction of North Vietnam. The Commission will attempt to complete this agreement within 60 days after its establishment.

6) The two members of the Commission will function on the principle of respect for each other's sovereignty, non-interference in each other's internal affairs, equality and mutual benefit. The offices of the Commission will be located at a place to be agreed upon by the United States and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.

7) The United States considers that the implementation of the foregoing principles will promote economic, trade, and other relations between the United States of America and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and will contribute to insuring a stable and lasting peace in Indochina. These principles accord with the spirit of Chapter VIII of the Agreement on Ending the War and Restoring Peace in Vietnam which was signed in Paris on January 27, 1973....

In regard to other forms of aid, United States studies indicate that the appropriate program could fall in the range of 1 to 1.5 billion dollars depending on food and other commodity needs of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam."

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

COMMENT:

In this communication to Pham Van Dong, President Nixon delineated the United States reconstruction package for North Vietnam at $3.25 billion, with a supplement for food and commodity aid of up to $1.5 billion. Note that the package applied to North Vietnam only. (Laos and Cambodia were not mentioned.) Although per Article VIII, Chapter 21 of the Paris Peace Agreement the United States referred to the rebuilding of North Vietnam in only the most general of terms, in this letter Nixon put $4.75 billion on the table, just for the North Vietnamese. The existence of this commitment was kept secret from Congress and the American people.

No matter how any Westerner interprets it, to the Vietnamese a deal had been made. Holding back POWs became their security for the deal to be consummated. What the North Vietnamese did not anticipate, though, was that Nixon would choose to abandon the POWs instead of providing the aid. (This is explained later.) Also, Principle #7 of the letter was an unequivocal statement to the North Vietnamese that the United States also would pursue normal commercial relations with them in the future. This did not and has not happened.

February 16, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "U.S., Hanoi Tell Plan To Rebuild Vietnam."

"The United States and North Vietnam will create a joint economic commission to oversee rebuilding of the war-torn country with U.S. dollars, the two sides announced Wednesday.

A communique issued by the White House and Hanoi on four days of talks by President Nixon's envoy, Henry A. Kissinger, and North Vietnamese leaders in Hanoi listed no specific figures for U.S. post war aid.

But the language displayed a new cordiality between the two nations."

COMMENT:

Note that the details of the aid package, i.e., $4.75 billion, still were kept secret by Nixon and Kissinger and that reference was made only to "rebuilding" North Vietnam with American dollars.

With this narrower public announcement, the United States even more deeply committed itself to providing reconstruction aid to North Vietnam. We had promised aid as part of the Agreement (Article 21), we had fixed that aid at $4.75 billion (secret letter from Nixon to Pham Van Dong), and now we went public with a program to implement aid. The North Vietnamese could not have had a clearer understanding of our intentions.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

February 17, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "Laos POW Release Tied to Truce."

"A Communist Pathet Lao spokesman said Saturday his group is holding Americans prisoners of war who will be released after a cease-fire goes into effect in Laos.

Soth Petrasy, the Pathet Lao's permanent representative in Vientiane, declined to give any details about American POWs in Laos. But he said the Pathet Lao leadership has a detailed accounting of prisoners and where they were being held and that both sides in the cease-fire negotiations are ready to exchange prisoners once the fighting ends.

White House advisor Henry Kissinger has said that North Vietnam pledged to return American prisoners from Laos in Hanoi, an undertaking that was apparently contradicted by Soth's statement.

The exchange will take place in Laos, Soth said. "If they were captured in Laos, they will be returned in Laos."...

Continued fighting was also reported going on in south and central Laos with increased air strikes by American B52 bombers, F411 swing-wing bombers and tactical fighter-bombers being flown to support CIA-sponsored irregular troops.

U.S. Embassy officials said Soth's comments Saturday were the first reference the Pathet Lao has made to American prisoners since the cease-fire went into effect in Vietnam Jan 28."

February 18, 1973 The Washington Post, "Pathet Lao Says No Truce, No American POWs."

"The Communist Pathet Lao said today [February 17, UPI] that they will not free American prisoners of war until there is a cease-fire in Laos. It also said that the release would take place in Laos, rather than in North Vietnam."

COMMENT:

These were very important pronouncements by the Pathet Lao: first, in that they confirmed that they were holding American prisoners, and second, in that they, and not the North Vietnamese, would release them. Thus, Kissinger's understanding of the Paris Peace Agreement -- that the prisoners in Laos were the responsibility of the North Vietnamese and would be released at the same time as the prisoners in Vietnam -- was completely contrary to the Vietnamese and Laotian understanding.

Another confirmation of prisoners in Laos was a Pathet Lao military training film produced, "Twenty-Five Years of Revolution", showing dozens of captured American pilots. The film was shown to recruits in Pathet Lao training camps. Copies of the film which are shown to Lao soldiers today have the POW scenes clipped out.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

February 10, 1973 The Washington Post, "Prisoners Claim VC Torture."

"American prisoners released by the Vietcong have claimed they were kept chained in cages in dense jungle along the border between South Vietnam and Cambodia.

One man said he had been caged for months without contact with other American prisoners or with anyone who spoke English....

According to the hospital sources, many were bitter about their treatment by the Vietcong."

COMMENT: The torture issue became the factor which ultimately blocked the aid package and caused Nixon to abandon the POWs, as explained later.

February 21, 1973 1973 Laos Peace Agreement (Cited in Treaties and Alliances of the World published by the U.S. State Department.)

"A peace agreement between the Government of Laos and the 'Pathet Lao' was signed on Feb. 21, 1973. It comprised 12 articles, of which the first laid down the general principles on which the future of Laos should be based....

Art. 10(c) 'The two parties take note of the declaration of the US Government that it will contribute to healing the wounds of the war and to post-war reconstruction in Indo-China. The Provisional National Union Government will hold discussions with the US Government in connexion with such a contribution regarding Laos.'

COMMENT: Although the Laotian treaty was between the Royal Lao and Pathet Lao and was not a treaty signed by the United States, the Lao parties did take careful note of the Paris Peace Agreement and said, "Give us the same!" regarding reconstruction aid. In other words, as the Paris Peace Agreement provisions extended to "all the Peoples of Indochina" (see page 2), the new Provisional National Union Government in Laos felt it was entitled to American aid, too. Indeed, it went so far as to say that discussions would be conducted with the United States on the aid issue.

Inevitably, the situation regarding the POWs in Laos thus became the same as in North Vietnam, except that in Laos all the POWs -- not just some of them -- were held back as collateral.

February 23, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "Rogers: Don't Bar N. Viet Aid."

"Secretary of State William P. Rogers Wednesday refused to rule out reconstruction aid to North Vietnam by presidential order if Congress fails to appropriate the funds....

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

Rogers three times called for 'restraint' by members of Congress in making adverse comments on the aid issue, at least until American troops are out of Vietnam and all American prisoners are released."

COMMENT: Rogers' statement was very important. Kissinger and Nixon knew they had made a substantial promise to the North Vietnamese and that the aid was the quid pro quo if all the POWs were to be released. Therefore, they could not afford to default on the aid and threatened to get it by Presidential order instead if Congress did not appropriate it. (As Secretary of State, Rogers had become point-man in the attempt to get Congress to appropriate the aid funds.)

This article also revealed that Congress was beginning to vacillate about the aid package when the first prisoners came back and told about their torture in captivity.

March 2, 1973 President Nixon's News Conference (Cited in Presidential Documents: Richard Nixon 1973).

In answer to a question by Courtney R. Sheldon of the Christian Science Monitor, "...first, with regard to Laos, the agreement there was made by the Royal Laotian Government, and it is an agreement which we, of course, supported and we accept."

COMMENT: Here, by acknowledging and supporting the intra-Laotian peace treaty, the United States committed itself to providing aid to Laos, too. As was the case with regard to the United States promising aid to North Vietnam to induce it to sign the Paris Peace Agreement, the United States provided similar inducement to the Pathet Lao to sign a treaty with the Royal Lao. Nixon and Kissinger could not use American military power to win the Indochina war, so they turned to the all-powerful dollar.

March 7, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "U.S., N. Viet Paris Envoys Discuss Reconstruction Aid."

"U.S. and North Vietnamese representatives met Monday to discuss postwar reconstruction aid to North Vietnam, diplomatic sources said.

William H. Sullivan, deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific Affairs and Nguyen Co Thach, North Vietnamese deputy foreign minister, opened talks for the North Vietnamese peace talks delegation sources said.

The American peace delegation declined to confirm the opening of the talks on President Nixon's plan for the postwar financing of North Vietnam's reconstruction. The proposed aid already has prompted criticism in congress and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has demanded Congressional approval of any aid to Hanoi.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

Diplomatic sources said that Hanoi and Washington officials were discussing the establishment of a Joint Economic Commission which would channel American aid to North Vietnam and prove plans for the postwar reconstruction.

Nixon answered Congressional critics by saying aid money would come out of Defense and Agency for International Development funds instead of the domestic budget. The president said giving money to help North Vietnam rebuild its bombed country would contribute to "lasting peace and stability in the area."

COMMENT: It is important to note that the discussions were held with Nguyen Co Thach, who was aware of Nixon's secret letter and who today is Foreign Minister of Vietnam. Thach clearly understood the $4.75 billion deal, yet today we tell him the POW issue is humanitarian. To him it was and is economic. Keep in mind that Thach handles POW negotiations with the United States today.

Knowing that the aid was the price to be paid for the POWs in Laos and the unrepatriated POWs in North Vietnam, and facing opposition from Congress to the aid because of the torture issue, Nixon escalated the issue and threatened to secure the funds from the Defense Department and Agency for International Development budgets. This revealed Nixon's dilemma and desperation: he had to have the money to get the POWs, but he could not get Congress to appropriate it.

March 8, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "Rogers: We'll Go to Congress For Hanoi Aid OK."

"Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Tuesday the Nixon administration will seek prior authority from Congress for any economic assistance program to Vietnam....

At one point he was asked if the administration felt it had authority to provide aid without congressional approval.

"Not to my knowledge," the secretary answered."

COMMENT: Nixon's capitulation on Congressional approval of aid attenuated the acrimonious debate. While this reversal was not uncommon for Nixon, it is surprising in view of his previous statements.

It is fundamentally important to note that this capitulation turned the fate of the POWs over to Congress. However, Congress was entirely unaware that the return of POWs demanded a $4.75 billion price. Congress did not perceive the North Vietnamese linkage between aid and the POWs because it had never seen the details of the aid package as spelled out in Nixon's letter of February 1 to Pham Van Dong. Congress simply did not know that the POWs were in its hands.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

March 25, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "U.S. Fears Laos POWs Will Be Used as 'Pawns'."

"U.S. officials said Friday that despite continued efforts, they have been unable to learn anything more of the fate of an undetermined number of American prisoners of war in Laos.

The officials said no new light had been shed on the total number or whereabouts of the Laos POW's. Concern mounted that the Communists plan to hold them back as pawns in the continuing struggle in Indochina.

The question of Laos POW's has become an issue in the continuing release of American prisoners by North Vietnam, with the United States ordering a holdup in the withdrawal of its last troops from South Vietnam until the Communists say when and where they will turn over nine Americans -- seven military and two civilians -- whose names appeared on a list of Laos POW's provided by the North Vietnamese.

In addition to the nine there are approximately 320 Americans listed as missing in action in Laos. Most of them are air-crewmembers downed during combat missions.

U. S. sources believe that a substantial number of the missing--perhaps as many as 100--still may be alive. The conclusions are based on inspections of crash sites by search teams and on intelligence reports.

Friday was also marked by the expiration of the formal 30-day deadline for the formation of a coalition government in Laos. So far there has been little progress toward setting up the coalition under provisions of the cease-fire signed last Feb. 21, with government officials accusing the Communist Pathet Lao of causing the delay."

[Both Petrasz, the Pathet Lao spokesman] "broke a long silence on POW's last month to say they were holding Americans and that persons captured in Laos would be returned in Laos, despite U.S. contentions that North Vietnam had agreed to release Laos POW's in Hanoi.

The Pathet Lao declined to give further details about prisoners. In contacts since then, U.S. officials say they have been unable to learn anything more.

The list of nine American and one Canadian names was provided by the North Vietnamese when the United States inquired why no Laos POW's were included in the 535 names turned over at the time the Vietnam cease-fire was signed."

COMMENT: This tells it all in Laos. The POWs held in Laos became pawns in the uncertainty and confusion which characterized the United States interpretation of the Agreement and subsequent events regarding the POW/aid linkage. It is very important to note that when the United States complained at the last minute about the North Vietnamese failure to return POWs from Laos, the North Vietnamese produced nine POWs who had been captured in Laos and subsequently moved to Vietnam. Despite our awareness that there were POWs imprisoned in Laos, which was affirmed by the North Vietnamese and the Laotians themselves, not one of these POWs was released; they were held back as pawns and as collateral. Also, the nine POWs captured in Laos and released from Hanoi had been held separately from the other POWs captured in Vietnam. They had never been integrated into the regular POW system. (For a personal account of this isolation read Ernie Brace's book, A Code To Keep. According to Brace's testimony before the House Select Committee on Missing Persons on April 9, 1976, all the prisoners captured in Laos who ended up in the Hanoi prison system were segregated from the other prisoners and held separately in a group known as the 'Lulu' group. In January 1973, the Lulu group was told of the Paris Peace Agreement but were informed they would not be released until there was a peace settlement in Laos. In March 1973, they were informed they would be released with the other American POWs.)

Two additional considerations warrant comment. First, in April 1973, Seth Petrasz told my mother and father in person that the Pathet Lao were holding over 100 American POWs. Second, there was a great discrepancy in our government's POW numbers in Laos. Whereas the tally purportedly was 320 in 1973, today it is approximately 560 (which implies that the live POW count was/is 175.) The real number is an ultra classified secret, because Laos officially was a neutral country per the Geneva Protocols of the early 1950's and the United States was not supposed to be involved in the war there.

March 26, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "New Snag Stalls Prisoner Release."

"North Vietnam told the United States Sunday it intended to release the last group of American prisoners it holds at Hanoi's Gia Lam Airport on Tuesday and Wednesday, but said the U.S. demand that it also release POWs captured in Laos 'is beyond the jurisdiction of the agreement [the Paris Peace Agreement].'"

COMMENT: Here, North Vietnam told the United States unequivocally that the POWs in Laos were the responsibility of the Laotians and not the North Vietnamese. In other words, if the United States wanted the POWs from Laos returned it would have had to deal with the Laotians and offer a similar aid package to Laos, as well.

March 27, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "Hanoi Drags Feet."

"Bui Tin, chief spokesman for the North Vietnamese delegation, said the Pathet Lao 'have assured us that the American POWs they hold will be released' and that the Pathet Lao said they 'are making preparations for the release.'"

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

"It is for this reason we are insisting that the withdrawal of U.S. troops and the release of the prisoners take place with no relation to the POWs held by the Pathet Lao," said Tin."

COMMENT: The North Vietnamese reiterated that there were POWs in Laos and that the situation regarding these POWs was unrelated to the withdrawal of American troops from South Vietnam and the prisoner exchanges in the two Vietnams; it was up to the United States and the Laotians.

Note that by this time everybody -- the North Vietnamese, the Laotians, the State Department and Defense Department -- had affirmed that there were POWs in Laos. There could be no more compelling proof than three separate governments saying there were POWs in Laos. However, not one of these POWs was released. They continue to rot in jungle prison camps today -- some dying slow, cruel deaths, and abandoned by their own country.

April 3, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "Torture Stories Dampen Chances Of Hanoi Aid."

"Reports from returning prisoners of war of torture and mistreatment by Hanoi have stirred new attacks in Congress against U.S. aid for North Vietnam."

President Nixon has said he plans to ask Congress for such aid as 'an investment in peace.'

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the torture stories have not changed his own position that aid to Hanoi would help ensure the peace. But, he added, he does not 'know what effect the stories will have on getting aid through Congress.'

'Even before this it looked difficult,' Mansfield said.

Sen. James L. Buckley, R-NY, called on Secretary of State William P. Rogers to issue the 'strongest possible protest' to North Vietnam over treatment of U.S. prisoners of war.

In a statement Sunday Buckley also urged President Nixon to 'carefully reconsider any proposal for economic assistance to North Vietnam in light of the POW reports on treatment and prison conditions.'

Rep. Joel T. Broyhill, R-Va., said the stories 'convince me that not a cent of American aid money should be spent on rehabilitating a country that is apparently run by savages.'"

COMMENT: Congress was now starting to say "No" to aid for North Vietnam. The amazing aspect of this was that Congress was unaware that Nixon had promised the North Vietnamese $4.75 billion in his secret letter of February 1 and that the North Vietnamese had tied this to the release of the POWs whom they held back as collateral.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

April 7, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "Senate: No Aid to N. Viet Less We OK It."

"The Senate voted Thursday to bar any aid to North Vietnam unless Congress specifically approves....

The ban on use of funds already appropriated for other purposes was added to a bill to revalue gold in support of the recent devaluation of the dollar in foreign exchange.

Administration spokesmen in the Senate pointed out also that no Indochina aid proposal has been submitted to Congress and said President Nixon is not going to make any such proposal until observance of the January cease-fire in Vietnam is assured.

Continued U.S. bombing in Cambodia became an issue in debate. An amendment by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., to cut off funds for any further U.S. military operations in and over any part of Indochina was ruled out of order.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., demanded an end to bombing in Cambodia as a price for his support of aid to Indochina.

"How can we speak of rebuilding when B52 bombers, day after day, are still making some of the heaviest bombing runs of the war?" Mansfield asked in a Senate speech."

COMMENT: Congress now explicitly stated to Nixon there would be no aid for North Vietnam. Moreover, the war in Cambodia was still going on and U.S. bombing was about to resume in Laos (as stated below). Nixon's and Kissinger's interpretation of the Agreement as extending to all of Indochina was ludicrous. I believe that Nixon and Kissinger were so desperate to get out of this undeclared and catastrophic war that they knowingly signed a sham agreement.

April 13, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "Hanoi Aid Opposed By Hebert."

"House Armed Services Chairman F. Edward Hebert has served notice he will introduce a proposal to prohibit any U. S. aid for Hanoi.

"We might as well bite this bullet right now," Hebert told his committee.

The Louisiana Democrat also said justification for President Nixon's request for $1.3 billion aid to Southeast Asia so far 'is either nebulous or nonexistent.'...

Hebert said he will introduce the amendment prohibiting aid to Hanoi to the bill.

None of the weapons money likely would go to the North Vietnamese anyway, but Hebert's statement put his weight against the controversial

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

Hanoi aid that President Nixon has said he may ask for later."

COMMENT: Hebert, a very powerful Congressman, cited $1.3 billion as Nixon's aid request to all of Southeast Asia. Apparently Nixon had conveyed the smaller sum to Congress in early April in hope of getting at least some funds to try to fulfill his commitment to the North Vietnamese. However, Hebert said, "No", to any funding.

At this stage, all was now lost for Nixon regarding his pledge to the North Vietnamese. He could not get the funding and he knew that without it the North Vietnamese would not release the POWs they held back. The same was true for the POWs in Laos, as the Laotians, too, were looking for American aid in return for our POWs.

April 14, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "POW-Unit Boss: No Living GIs Left in Indochina."

"The Pentagon's prisoner of war task chief said Thursday there are probably no more live American soldiers loose anywhere in Indochina.

Dr. Roger Shields also said there is no evidence that any POWs had been executed in captivity, with three exceptions....

The Pathet Lao in Laos and the insurgent forces in Cambodia will hopefully provide more information about fate of the Americans missing in those countries, Shields said, but 'we have no indication at this moment that there are any Americans alive in Indochina.'

Rumors that there were hundreds of U.S. servicemen still in Laotian prison camps 'do the families (of the missing) a disservice,' he said."

COMMENT: This is the culmination of the great POW tragedy. Unable to get the funding for the aid he had promised the North Vietnamese (and implicitly, the Laotians), Nixon defaulted on his aid commitments and abandoned the POWs. With this announcement (by his POW spokesman at the Pentagon, Dr. Roger Shields) Nixon slammed the door on the North Vietnamese and the Laotians and on the POWs who he and his State and Defense Department staffs knew were still in captivity. He cut and ran on the POW-aid subject and abandoned the POWs whose very existence the State and Defense Departments had been affirming all along.

April 18, 1973 Pacific Stars and Stripes, "New U.S. Air Raid in Laos."

"The United States resumed bombing of Laos Monday after accusing the North Vietnamese of violating the seven-week-old cease-fire by overrunning a Laotian village and air field....

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

Defense Department spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said Monday that only a few hours earlier the North Vietnamese -- using both infantry and tanks -- overran Tha Vieng, a village and air strip on Route 4 between the Plain of Jars and city of Paksane.

Less than four hours later the Pacific command in Honolulu announced, 'at the request of the Royal Laotian government, U.S. aircraft, including B52s, April 16 conducted operations over Laos.'

COMMENT: This headline is self-explanatory: United States involvement in the war in Laos commenced again, effectively eliminating any chances of getting the POWs released from Laos.

July 23, 1973 In The Congressional Record Congressman Jack Kemp (R-NY) quotes from an article in the U.S. News & World Report, "Mystery of Missing GI's."

"North Vietnam is known--by Hanoi's own claims--to have captured men who were not returned, not listed as dead, and not accounted for.

No National Red Cross team has ever been allowed to visit and inspect the places where American prisoners were held....

No prisoners held in Laos have been sent back, and no accounting made of the dead.

The nine POWs supposedly repatriated from Laos actually had been held in North Vietnam....

Among the families of the MIA's, there is growing suspicion that some captured Americans are still alive in North Vietnam and Laos, being held as pawns for further bargaining with the U.S. over final terms of the war's settlement....

U.S. officials are reluctant to comment on this possibility. But one says openly: 'We do not think that everyone now on the missing list is dead.'

COMMENT: Not all Americans were fooled by the cover-up regarding American POWs in Indochina.

Also, it is very important to note that with the U.S. having officially denied that there were any American POWs in Indochina, the Vietnamese and Laotians had no alternative other than to echo that denial. They could not go public and say, "Look, we held your POWs back," in violation of the Paris Peace Agreement. Paradoxically, Nixon's pronouncement that there were no POWs in Indochina forced the Vietnamese to say the same thing.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

July 21, 1976 Transcript from Hearings of The House Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia. (selected pages)

Undersecretary of State Philip Habib: "Already before the Paris negotiations began, we were conscious of the need to account for our men because of the Communist side's refusal throughout the conflict to provide complete information on our prisoners of war, as required by the 1949 Geneva Conventions. As a result, we knew we would have to do all we could by all available means to obtain information about our missing personnel.... the Communist side bracketed the release of prisoners with what they described as 'U.S. responsibility for war damage in Vietnam' in a single numbered point. Although humanitarian issues such as POW/MIA's have been subjects of disagreement in the settlement of other past conflicts, I know of no instance in which an adversary so openly treated this humanitarian problem in this way. We thus recognized from an early date what we were up against and accounting for the missing a basic element of our own negotiating strategy.

I might note that international law, as framed in the Geneva Conventions, does not permit the linking of humanitarian obligations to other issues in the way done by the North Vietnamese....

Congressman Benjamin Gilman, R-NY: "...when we were in Hanoi there were references made to some agreements made between our Government and Vietnam with regard to postwar repatriations. Can you set forth for us just where we stand with regard to those negotiations? Were there any agreements we are not aware of, secret memorandum that this committee is not aware of?"

Mr. Habib: "There is no agreement or secret memorandum which this committee is not aware of in this respect. There were, as the committee is aware, some letters and exchanges. With respect to those letters, I think the Committee has been informed of the content of those letters as they bear on the question which the committee has raised. That is my understanding...."

Congressman Paul McCloskey D-CA: "With all due respect, Mr. Secretary, this committee asked the Secretary of State and you the same question before we went to Hanoi last December. You did not advise us of that secret letter and we discovered its existence only when we got to Hanoi. Can you tell this committee now why we went to Hanoi without being advised of the existence of that letter which was known to the Secretary of State, especially after we asked you about it?..."

We didn't have any idea the letter existed. We asked you in November if there were any secret agreements that we should know about before we went to Hanoi and we were not advised by you or the Secretary of State of the letter's existence or of the $3.25 billion figure which we later ascertained."

Mr. Habib: "That is not an agreement. It never developed into an agreement. Very frankly, Mr. Congressman, I didn't know of the existence of the letter at that time, either...."

Mr. Habib, when questioned further concerning President Nixon's letter to Phan Van Dong and when advised that Henry Kissinger had said that he could not produce Presidential papers: "Let me make the answer very specific. There is no agreement, there was no agreement, there never was an agreement as far as I know, and I think I would know at this stage. We have researched it and there is no agreement with respect to the question of aid involved in that letter."

COMMENT: Through Mr. Habib's testimony the State Department acknowledged that the United States was aware that the Vietnamese firmly linked the POW issue to the aid issue within the parameters of the Paris Peace Agreement and Nixon's February 1, 1973 letter. That is to say, the North Vietnamese tied the POW issue to reconstruction aid at the beginning of the Paris Peace Negotiations!! This is why they kept POWs as collateral on the aid that Nixon promised. Habib then contradicted himself by stating that the letter did not constitute an "Agreement" to provide aid. To the Vietnamese, who held back POWs pursuant to the letter, it was an unambiguous agreement. (If you do not believe this, put yourself in the shoes of the Vietnamese and reread the letter on page 5.)

It is hard to tell whether Habib was telling an outright lie in his testimony or was just intent on confusing the POW issue further so as to protect the State Department against claims that the POWs had been abandoned. Both interpretations probably are correct.

April 1, 1977 Excerpts of Testimony by Leonard E. Woodcock before the House Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs. (Mr. Woodcock, former head of the AFL-CIO had been appointed by President Carter to head a Presidential Commission to study the POW issue -- the Woodcock Commission. The Commission went to Hanoi and Vientiane for discussions with the Vietnamese and Laotians.)

"The Lao made clear to the Commission that the MIA issue was linked to U.S. assistance, expressing the belief that the two problems should be resolved together since both resulted from the war."

Mr. Woodcock (speaking to Chairman Lester Wolff D-MT): "They were saying to us what had been said right along, that their obligation with regard to the MIA's they felt, was lodged in paragraph 8(b) of the Paris accord, and our obligation to them in healing the wounds of war and reconstruction was lodged in paragraph 21, and those two were linked."

COMMENT: The position of the North Vietnamese and Laotians regarding the POW/MIAs was firm and consistent: the United States would have to pay for their release per our written commitments.

For the United States government today to consider the POW/MIA issue as "humanitarian" is a cruel distortion of the facts. In the beginning we made it an economic issue, and the Vietnamese and Laotians continue to this day to hold us to our commitment.

January 23, 1981 The Morning Star, North Carolina, "Witness says Garwood told of POWs who stayed."

"Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood reported seeing 'a couple of hundred other Americans' still in captivity in Vietnam and complained of being unable to make that information public, a Navy psychiatrist testified Thursday.

'Garwood said he didn't know exactly who the Americans were, but that he was upset and concerned that he was not debriefed like other people,' Capt. Benjamin R. Ogburn told a jury of five Marine officers in the court-martial of Garwood....

After listening to Ogburn's testimony, presiding judge Col. R.E. Switzer ruled that his statements about POWs remaining in Vietnam were irrelevant and should be stricken from the record and disregarded by jurors.

Previous attempts by the defense to introduce testimony about remaining POWs in Southeast Asia also had been rejected by Switzer."

COMMENT: By this time the deliberate distortions perpetrated by the Defense and State Departments regarding the POW issue had turned into a cover-up. Even Bobby Garwood's testimony that he had seen American POWs was stricken from the record.

Essentially, the State and Defense Departments were circling their wagons to protect themselves. Since careers were at stake regarding the policy that there were no American POWs in captivity, all steps had to be taken to protect that policy and the people who perpetuated it.

June 28, 1981 House Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs, "Servicemen Held Against Will." Dialogue between Congressman Stephen Solars (D-MT) and Lieutenant General Eugene Tighe (USAF-Retired) on the POW issue.

Mr. Solars: "And that there are still--and this is a somewhat different question--American servicemen being held against their will in Indochina?"

General Tighe: "My conviction would be 'yes' in answer to both questions, sir."

Mr. Solars: "Now, have you testified to that effect previously, General?"

General Tighe: "I have not been asked the question in exactly that same way, Mr. Chairman, as far as personal convictions are concerned."

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

Mr. Solarz: "What leads you to that conclusion, because obviously that is a conclusion that ought to be given great weight, I think, by every member of this committee and the Congress? I am very interested to hear it."

I want to say, with all due respect to the people in your agency, that that was not an impression I had previously received.

Maybe I was not listening carefully enough, but my impression, frankly, listening to other reports I got in private briefings before my trip to Indochina in January was that while there are a lot of reports, whenever they could be tracked down they turned out to be unfounded and the chances are that probably nobody was still alive there.

But you feel otherwise, and I would like to know what leads you to that conclusion."

General Tighe: "I would like to defer that to the closed session. But I suggest that this is a very fast-moving train of evidence. I would also like to clarify the means at our disposal to verify each of these reports that I claim to have checked as much as possible."

When you are dealing with a totally uncooperative government or governments, our ability to check is very, very circumscribed."

Mr. Solarz: "We will go into that in closed session. But your testimony is that in your judgement the weight of the evidence indicates that there are Americans still alive and being held against their will in Indochina."

General Tighe: "Yes, sir."

Mr. Solarz: "Are you absolutely certain of that?"

General Tighe: "That is my own personal judgement, sir."

COMMENT: There was no more informed and professional opinion on the POW subject than General Tighe's. Since this testimony was given, the Departments of State and Defense have gone to extraordinary lengths to hide the truth.

September 29, 1986 The New York Times, "P.O.W.'s Alive in Vietnam, Report Concludes."

"A Pentagon panel, after a five-month review of intelligence files, has concluded that American prisoners of war are still alive in Southeast Asia."

[According to Lt. General Eugene Tighe, former Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency], "...a large volume of evidence points to the likelihood that Americans are being held by the Vietnamese Government...."

"There were as many differences as you could imagine," he said of the refugee reports. "They ran the gamut from first-hand sightings to hearsay. But when you have that large volume of evidence that points in those directions, why that's what you conclude."

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

COMMENT: After this clear statement to the press, a toned-down summary report was issued by the panel. The full report remains classified for no reason other than it would reveal the truth that the State and Defense Departments knowingly left men behind. Allegedly, General Tighe was ordered to tone down the summary.

May 18, 1988 Observer-Reporter, Washington, PA, "Laos wants aid in return for missing soldiers."

"The United States should give Laos humanitarian aid if it wants the country to account for Americans missing in the Indochina war, a senior government official said Saturday."

"We have fulfilled our obligation with the excavation," said Vice Foreign Minister Souphanh Sritthirath. "We are awaiting the humanitarian gesture from the U.S.A."

COMMENT: As recently as 1988 the Laotians were still saying that the United States would have to pay for the POWs. The Laotian Foreign Minister made these comments after an excavation of an American crash site in Laos. A previous investigation of a crash site in Laos had proven that our government had again lied regarding the POW issue.

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

FINAL COMMENT:

It is exceedingly difficult to believe that the government of the United States has not brought home the POWs who served their country in the Vietnam War. The evidence is overwhelming and compelling that POWs were left behind and are alive and in captivity today. A man could be sentenced to death by a court in the United States today based on far less evidence than we have that American prisoners are alive and in captivity in Indochina. The heartbreaking tragedy is that nothing substantive has been done to bring them home. Instead, the Departments of State and Defense feed us a diet of distortions, half-truths, obfuscations and deceptions regarding the facts of the POW issue. These agencies are so skilled at disseminating misinformation and confusing the issue that it is easier for them to lie than it is to speak the truth. Ultimately, it appears their job is to keep the POWs from coming home rather than bringing them home. Under any circumstances, it is clear that if the government of the United States truly wanted the POWs home, they would be home. However, since bringing the POWs home involves undoing the big lie and admitting mistakes were made, which is unacceptable to the State and Defense Departments, the POWs continue to suffer in the jungles of Vietnam and Laos.

Originally, the POWs may not have been intentionally abandoned. However, Nixon's and Kissinger's strategy for ending the war was so ill-conceived and so self-contradictory that the POWs were swept under the carpet as a consequence. Ultimately, the strategy was so faulty that Nixon and Kissinger forced themselves into abandoning the men. Subsequently, all the resources of the State and Defense Departments have been brought to bear to justify that course of action and to convince the American public the POWs do not exist.

Sadly, if resolving the POW issue and bringing the men home were up to the private sector, all the men would have come back to their families many years ago. Instead, the issue remains hopelessly encumbered by the bureaucratic processes of government -- turf battles, careers, perks, and the ever-incomprehensible conduct of foreign policy.

Fundamentally, the POW issue is an economic one. The Vietnamese and Laotians have what we want: the POWs. We have what they so desperately need: aid and trade. There are many ways to find the middle ground and bring the men home, but our "leaders" in Washington are so inept and dishonest as to preclude this from happening within the present POW policy.

To Vietnam and Laos there has not been a final settlement in the war and there will not be until they receive American aid and trade as they feel they were promised. To me and many Americans there has not been a final settlement in the war until all the POWs are home. Vietnam and Laos are desperate for our aid and trade: are we not desperate for our POWs?

INDOCHINA POW TIMELINE

For years the Vietnamese have been telling us they do not have the money and manpower to search the remote provinces for missing Americans. What they really are saying is this: "Give us the aid that you promised us and see what we just found in the jungle." The Vietnamese need a face-saving way of giving back the POWs and need something (American trade and investment) in return for them. To ensure that the live POWs do not come home to the embarrassment of the State Department which has maintained they do not exist, the United States considers the POW issue "humanitarian." This is a cruel hoax; we are the ones who made it an economic issue in the first place, and the Vietnamese consider it an economic issue to this day. If we want these forgotten Americans repatriated, we are going to have to put some aid on the table to Vietnam and Laos. There are many ways to do this, including through the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

An acid test for the credibility of our government on the POW issue is declassification of all the intelligence files pertaining to the POW/MIAs. Such classification truly serves no purpose today, and until intelligence is declassified the policy-makers in Washington have no credibility. They are perceived by the American people as merely trying to hide the truth and protect themselves.

The Center for POW/MIA Accountability, Incorporated

OVERVIEW

The concept of a private fact-finding organization to compliment the U.S. Government's efforts in resolving the dilemma of nearly 2,500 Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War was conceived in early 1981. Following detailed analysis of the issue it was determined that the most effective method for resolution was on a government-to-government basis. It was also ascertained that a private group knowledgeable in POW/MIA matters with skills in research, analysis and evaluation of information would serve a vital role by educating the public and encouraging its support for resolution while concurrently assisting the Government.

In the fall of 1982, a group of Vietnam veterans experienced in domestic and international business affairs pooled their expertise and knowledge of POWs and MIAs to form an association, "The Center For POW/MIA Accountability." The Center was chartered in the District of Columbia in 1983 as a nonprofit corporation with the intent that it would exist until the POW/MIA issue was resolved. Subsequently, the Center was granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

Because the Center is task-oriented towards resolution of the issue, it is not open to general membership thus precluding administrative and financial burdens inherent to large organizations. Membership is comprised solely of its board of directors and advisory council.

To fund operations the Center relies on donations and support from the private sector but does not solicit nor accept monies from POW/MIA families or from any government agency.

The Center has a comprehensive library of current and historical POW/MIA data. These data, as well as information received from Indochinese refugees and Americans in Europe and Southeast Asia, are screened, correlated and evaluated with pertinent factors relayed to the Government and selected interest groups. Concurrently, the Center conducts awareness programs whereby the public is educated on the POW/MIA issue. Periodic presentations are made to professional and fraternal organizations, veterans' groups and during selected public events. Relevant information is also disseminated to the public by participation in radio and TV talk shows and by published articles and news releases to the print media.

The Center interacts with and maintains a working relationship with Government agencies responsible for POW/MIA affairs and with leading private organizations. In this way, the combined productive efforts of all parties will hasten attainment of common goals to resolve this tragic episode in American history.

The Center does not engage in nor endorse any activity in conflict with the policies of the United States Government.

WHO

THE VETERAN'S VIGIL SOCIETY: A non-partisan group of veterans organized in 1982 by Vietnam veterans Dave Morgan and Terry McConnell in Cleveland, Ohio.

WHAT

The Society is asking for help from the American public to:

- o Support the POW/MIA cause.
- o Write their Senators and Congressmen to appeal for an accounting of the 2,500 POW/MIAs whose whereabouts are unknown.
- o Petition Hanoi for a full and complete disclosure.
- o Help generate grass roots support in their home state for the Vigil.

WHY

Two thousand five hundred loyal American citizens still remain unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. Obviously not all were killed in action or died in captivity. Some, possibly hundreds, are presumed alive and imprisoned. Facts are slowly being brought to light which support this belief. The unescapable conclusion is that a full and complete disclosure has not been rendered by Hanoi. There have been more than 450 confirmed sightings of Americans by new refugees. Recent defectors admit to the existence of prisoner of war camps long after all our POWs supposedly were returned. Hanoi has a history of holding prisoners after peace is declared.

The Society seeks to educate the American people about the true plight of their unfortunate bretheren. The members of the Society and its supporters remember that their own name could be chiseled in cold black granite, along with 50,000 other Vietnam Veterans. The Society believes that the public will no longer allow the POW/MIA topic to be "swept under the rug."

MIA-POW coverup discounted Resident calls charges against government 'inane'

WASHINGTON — The head of a military family that claims the U.S. government is covering up the existence of prisoners in the hands of a minority of the military has charged that "there has been a systematic effort to suppress information which conclusively proves the existence of prisoners."

"These are allegations based on support, insinuation and biased interpretation," said Herbert.

Retired Army Col. Earl J. Hopper, who was discharged in 1969, said that he thought "there has been a suppression of information" about prisoners.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Meddling with another man's folly is always thankless work. Rudyard Kipling: The Rescue of Pluffles

FROM the very beginning back in 1981 when Soldier of Fortune began "The POW-MIA Project," our main problem has been to separate the truth from the half-truths, distortions and out-and-out lies that are being peddled in the name of the cause.

While the antics and schemes of Laotian warlords, like Phoumi Nosavon and Kham Bou, or self-styled adventurers, like Bo Gritz, Sean O'Toole or Scott Barnes, may seem transparent and even somewhat amusing, dealing with them is enormously expensive and time-consuming. And James G. "Bo" Gritz has consumed the most time—certainly as of late.

Although it is easy to dismiss Gritz as "the Clifford Irving of mercenaries" as one skeptical Time Magazine editor did, or as the "Elder Gantry of mercenaries" as an even more skeptical SOF editor did, we must be careful to keep these latest antics in perspective with the larger POW/MIA issue.

While Gritz's credibility won't likely recover from his attempt to steal a war story from a real Vietnam hero, and my staff may not soon recover from the hours and they've put into this special issue, we must remind ourselves that Gritz is not really the issue here.

The issues are two-fold: One, are there any POWs still being held in Southeast Asia? and, two, did Gritz produce any proof of American POWs during his time in Southeast Asia?

Answering the last question is easy, as Gritz himself admitted before Congress: No. His source agents were disreputable, his photographs didn't come out and his witnesses are worthless.

The stories of Barnes and O'Toole fall into the same category—wonderful tales, composed of few facts and a lot of imagination.

But as you have read in the stories written by Milt Capules and Will Brownell, there is both a logical reason and some evidence to indicate that there are Americans still being held against their will there. Without doubt, the Vietnamese are playing games with the remains of Americans killed in Vietnam.

While working on this special project, we received messages from two line individuals. One was a letter from George Brooks, a former head of the National League of Families, who was fortunate enough to have his son's body returned from Laos last year, but who is fighting for the rest of the unaccounted-for Americans.

The other was an official statement from Rear Adm. Allan G. Paulson, who heads the Defense Intelligence Agency, the government agency involved with the investigation of the POW/MIA issue.

Paulson said, "What concerns me greatly is the extent to which he, Gritz, is becoming identified with the issue. The thought exists that if he becomes discredited, so might the issue. The fact that Mr. Gritz produces nothing, doesn't erode an iota the possibility that prisoners may exist."

Brooks wrote: "As one who has been deeply involved for more than 13 years in the problem of returning Americans, this is a message of concern for prisoners in Southeast Asia. I am concerned that a damaging back lash may develop as a result of the recent Gritz caper. What has erroneously been termed a rescue attempt, should be known for what it really was, a widely pre-publicized personal attention-getter. A conclusion may be drawn by some that since this 'heroic effort was made' and came up dry, that there are no prisoners held in captivity in Laos."

"Such an easy conclusion would fly in the face of facts gathered tediously over a long period of time. Testimony from eyewitnesses indicating that there are Americans in captivity, in the form of successful polygraph examinations and testimony of recently retired DIA Director Gen. Eugene Tighe that he believes Americans are being held in captivity. The general officer's opinion was based on the results of intensive, secret, factual evidence. Once one learns that men are being held in torturous captivity, it is impossible to walk away from it. When you read a serviceman's letter to his wife, written from his prison cell, can you refuse to be concerned for her or him?

"I hope not."

However many men or remains are there is not important to us. If it were only one, our attitude would be the same.

Every effort should be taken to reach a resolution. Even if that resolution were to be only the end of doubt for the families, it would be worth it. Over the last two years, we have exposed a number of the illegitimate efforts which have preyed on the families and we have contributed to or supported a number of legitimate efforts. We have no intention of stepping.

SOF MIA

LIBERTY CITY

SOF's POW Patrol
in Laos Yields Yellow Rain

by Thomas D. Reisinger

LIBERTY City was the codename for SOF's outpost in communist Laos. It was constructed to serve as a Forward Operating Base (FOB) for our planned POW/MIA mission.

Built of bamboo and thatch, it sat on high ground above the Mekong. Zigzag trenches linked defensive bunkers we built to ring the compound in case the Laotians decided to foreclose on our lease. To the best of our knowledge, Liberty City was the only permanent anti-communist installation in Laos in the late 70s and early 80s—until we closed it down after five months.

You've seen Liberty City before in SOF. Our January 1984 cover photo showed the site as it looked when we took Bob Brown up to see what he'd paid for in his continuing efforts to obtain a full accounting of United States POWs and MIAs. That article simply described the Laotian anti-communist resistance effort at that time as we did not want to compromise anti-communist POW/MIA efforts. However, sufficient time has passed to allow us to tell the story of Liberty City, also known as FOB 81. Some names have been changed for names de guerre assigned to protect those who may be innocent.

It all started with an inspiring phone call from Washington, D.C. in SOF's office in mid-March 1981. It was from three ex-Special Forces Vietnam Vets who had been recruited by Lieutenant Colonel James "Bo" Gritz for a POW/MIA rescue mission which went belly-up. Medal of Honor winner Fred Zabitosky, Son Tay Raider Earl Bleacher and 20-year Special Forces veteran James Monaghan as well as others from the Gritz team had become disillusioned with Gritz when he could not provide the necessary funding or intelligence for his proposed mission. They called Brown, who had been following the progress of the objective Gritz sponsored, and asked him to assist them in setting up a new mission. The Chairman of the Board of Directors of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, The National League of Families (NLF), and SOF's own money and the SOF and Brown felt additional contributions would be needed. At a meeting at the Brooks' New York residence, Brown and the three ex-SFers convinced George Brooks and his wife, Gladys, to fund Gritz's effort.

Zabitosky recalls that in subsequent meetings Bob Brown asked if "Earl and I would go to work for SOF so we if there were U.S. POW/MIAs held against their will in Laos and what it would take to get them out."

Zabitosky, Bleacher and Monaghan agreed the SOF project offered some hope as it had the advantage of solid funding which was lacking in Gritz's effort.

The next three years would find the SOF POW/MIA team, consisting of SOF staffers and their associates, journeying to the mountains and often dangerous environs of Laos by the Vietnamese through before the Thailand's "Golden Triangle" and into communist-occupied Laos where Liberty City (FOB 81), was established to serve as a launch area from which rescue teams and/or intelligence agents could infiltrate Laos to search for U.S. POW/MIAs.

The SOF team, after making an estimate of the situation, decided to convert General Vang Pao, the H'mong general who led the CIA-sponsored "Secret War" against the communists in Laos. We hoped he could provide a source of reliable intelligence through his anti-communist contacts still deep inside Laos.

His appearance, along with his encouragement, at Brown's Boulder home marked the first concrete move by SOF in its search for POW/MIAs.

"Gentlemen," the General began, "I realize what you really want is information about your missing comrades in Southeast Asia. I can help to provide such aid. But, let me give you a quick pro quo: I want the following before anything can be given by my side and what I want will have to be in three phases. First, I want the names of chemical biological warfare against my people in Laos by the Vietnamese through before the Thailand's "Golden Triangle" and into communist-occupied Laos. Secondly, in exchange, I will have my organization turn over 17 sets of remains of missing Americans to you. Thirdly, you must assist me in arming and

Mystery of MIAs

Veterans, families claim U.S. cover-up on Vietnam POWs

By JIM HENDERSON

Staff Writer

The controversy. More than 2.6 million Americans went to Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War years and nearly 2,500 of them never came home, dead or alive. They are still unaccounted for. Not are known to be dead or presumed to be, their remains either held in foreign warehouses or lost at aircraft crash sites in the remote jungles of Vietnam and Laos.

Only these essential facts are known.

Nearly 10 years after the last Americans were airlifted from the roof of the embassy in Saigon, officially ending the U.S. military involvement in Southeast Asia, the growing suspicion — some would say obsession — that live Americans are still being held captive is mounting into a dramatic controversy nearly as bitter, although smaller, as that which surrounded the war itself.

The families of the missing have organized two sprawling camps. There have been charges of a government "cover-up" by influential congressmen. The issue has divided Vietnam veterans, some of whom talk privately of a yearning to return in uniform to the name of the war to blame the survivors they are concerned over.

Former high-level military officers have said intelligence officials of withholding information from President Reagan, and intelligence officials have responded that they are not in a position to do so.

There is plenty of evidence to suggest that in the hands of the intelligence community, the lives of Americans are being kept secret.

last summer was chairman of the National League of Families of American Prisoners. "I personally think that if the evidence is submitted to the President, he would take whatever action is necessary to get them home."

Albure, undaunted however, says a Pentagon official, asking not to be identified, "if any Americans were being held captive, we have the capacity of proving that. We have been unable to prove it."

If the evidence is not conclusive, fragments of it are convincing enough to create questions in the minds of some of the foremost military figures of the Vietnam war.

Last March, in Philadelphia, to address a group of Vietnam veterans, retired Gen. William Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. troops in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying there are "indications" that some of the missing Americans may be alive.

"The matter has got to be brought to a head," he said. "How many are still alive, no one knows."

Retired Gen. Mike Hooley, a former commander of U.S. Special Forces in Vietnam, expressed similar reservations about the official position of the government.

"Some of the evidence is pretty shaky," he says, "but I can't help but have the feeling that it is getting kind of a short shrift."

The evidence

The book is nearly 2 inches thick, 230 heavily bound pages of depositions, maps, declassified Central Intelligence Agency reports. Some Department officials, congressional hearing transcripts, personal correspondence, notes, maps, communications, newspaper clippings, Defense Intelligence Agency documents and observed last names of prisoners and government officials.

It is, in essence, a collection of the National Vietnam Veterans Coalition, a Washington-based, umbrella group that represents 25 Vietnam organizations around the country.

"Historically, the American public was led to probably about the POW problem," says Mike Van Alta, a Vietnam veteran who now runs an electrical contracting business in northern Virginia and publishes a monthly newsletter critical of the government's handling of the issue. He has headed the veterans group's efforts to prove there are Americans in captivity in Southeast Asia.

The evidence, he says, "includes of CIA-confirmed locations and numbers of prisoners, reports by refugees who saw these men alive as recently as two years, fingerprints, aerial photos and even pictures. The civilian population in America has no idea of the depth of the information."

Van Alta says the documents he has assembled also show that government officials "have tried to conceal the evidence by 'misleading' refugees who reported sighting live Americans and by downgrading some accounts of the sightings and public debate of the POW issue."

As proof, that the "cover-up" began even before the war ended, Van Alta and the veterans group have distributed a June 1973 State Department cable from the U.S. embassy in Saigon to the secretary of state concerning a defector, named Nguyen Thanh Son, who claimed to have seen 30 American prisoners who were not released under the 1973 Paris Peace Accords.

"In follow up interview with AP, UPI and NBC correspondents," the cable says, "intelligence information that he had seen 30 prisoners who had been 'American' was not believed." "The cable," said Son, "was never released. American officials present at interview requested more services to play down the cable. AP mention was consistent with exchange frequent, while UPI and NBC, after talk with military press officers, omitted news entirely from their stories."

Included in the book is evidence and declassified CIA reports on the tracking of POWs up to the end of American involvement in Vietnam in 1973.

"We left live Americans over there, and we know we were leaving live Americans there," Van Alta says.

The veterans group claims, for example, that 550 Americans were missing in Laos, but the remains of only four have been returned from that country. In the early days of the war, the government of Laos published photographs of 20 pilots who were in captivity. None has been accounted for.

Since the end of the war, information on U.S. survivors has come mainly from refugees fleeing Laos and Vietnam. "As of July 15, 1964, DIA has over 1,200 reports on Americans in Southeast Asia," 640 are eye-witnesses," the citation says in its literature.

In testimony before the House Subcommittee on Asia and Pacific Affairs last August, Lt. Gen. James Williams, director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, testified that 125 of those eye-witness reports were "under continuing investigation" and 60 were being "actively pursued." But he concluded his statement by saying, "We cannot yet prove any American is now being held captive."

Williams has had difficulty in converting some members of Congress from both political parties.

At these same hearings, Rep. Douglas Applegate, an Ohio Democrat who had offered a resolution directing the President to obtain a full accounting of Americans in Southeast Asia, said he had obtained a refugee report "never investigated by the Defense Intelligence Agency — of 40 live Americans in northern Laos. The live sighting of our boys was made on April 24, 1962."

Applegate said he was "furious that ... government agencies are covering up — just another and withholding information for whatever reason."

Earlier, former North Carolina Congressman Bill Hendon, a Republican who worked six months as a Pentagon consultant after leaving the House at the end of last year, claimed that he had seen classified reports that proved Americans were still captive in Southeast Asia.

Although the Pentagon disputes Hendon's charges, he persisted in convincing the DIA of covering up POW information. Last August, he was quoted in his hometown newspaper, The Salisbury Citizen, as saying, "I know who

"There is plenty of evidence (of survivors) in the hands of the intelligence community. I personally think that if the evidence is submitted to the President, he would take whatever action is necessary to get them home."

— Earl Hopper, retired colonel congressmen are told on this issue, as opposed to what I saw at the Pentagon."

He accused government officials of trying to suppress the information to cover their initial mistake of abandoning the survivors. "It is not national security," he said, "to let a job security for the bureaucrats who have been sitting on this for 12 years."

While the Pentagon was trying to discredit Hendon's charges, Vice President George Bush was granting him "Billy Henson is an expert on this." Bush said during a campaign stop in Asheville last March. "The country needs an elected official up there for whom this is a major interest."

Another former Republican congressman, John LaBouffeur of Long Island, N.Y., published an article in the New York Times last August in which he alleged that POWs were still alive in Laos and the DIA knew of them.

LaBouffeur, who served on the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Task Force on Prisoners of War in Southeast Asia, wrote, "Gen. Eugene Tipton, who was at the time (of the war) and director of the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency, recently testified that he believed that our men were still held in Laos. Privately, DIA analysts concede that POWs are still alive there, differing only on how many there are. The most recent estimates range from 20 to 240."

"Hundreds of known refugee reports, verified with no other numbers, describe similar scenes."

The rebuttal

The other photograph was released on a Friday and intelligence officials were told it was smuggled out of Laos by a refugee who claimed it was released from there.

It was a photograph of an American, identified as a former prisoner of war, who was released from Laos. "We got just another one here," the source says. "We haven't really lost anything."

Reassuring future soldiers puts urgency on POW issue

"We have to end this thing," says retired Gen. Healy. "Not just for these men and their families, but for the next generation, for the young kids coming down the road. If they are called into the service, they have to have a reasonable expectation, that this country is going to stand behind them, that this (unmounting a soldier) is not going to be forgotten like it was in Korea."

Mystery of MIAs

Veterans, families claim U.S. cover-up on Vietnam POWs

By JIM HENDERSON

Staff Writer

The controversy: More than 3.4 million Americans went to Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War years and nearly 2,800 of them never came back, dead or alive. They are still unaccounted for. "Are we known to be dead or presumed to be dead, their remains either held in foreign countries or lost at aircraft crash sites in the remote jungles of Vietnam and Laos."

'We left five Americans over there, and we knew we were leaving five Americans there.'

— Mike Van Alta, Vietnam veteran

Nearly 10 years after the last Americans were airlifted from the daily ending the U.S. military involvement in Southeast Asia, the growing suspicion — some would say optimism — that five Americans are still being held captive is continuing into a domestic controversy nearly as hot, although smaller, as that which surrounded the war itself.

The families of the missing have organized into opposing camps. There have been charges of a government "cover-up" by influential congressmen. The issue has divided Vietnam veterans, some of whom talk privately of a journey to return in uniform to the scene of the war to locate the survivors they are convinced are there.

Former high-level military officers have said "intelligence officials of established reputation have suggested that cover-up is a possibility." The issue has divided Vietnam veterans, some of whom talk privately of a journey to return in uniform to the scene of the war to locate the survivors they are convinced are there.

There is plenty of evidence in the public domain that the U.S. government has covered up the fate of the missing. A report published in 1973

last summer was chairman of the National League of Families of American Prisoners. "I personally think that if the evidence is submitted to the President, he would take whatever action is necessary to get them home."

"Andrew, undoubtedly being," says a Pentagon official, "noting not to be identified, if any Americans were being held captive, we have the capacity of proving that. We have been unable to prove it."

If the evidence is not conclusive, fragments of it are swirling around in even questions in the minds of some of the foremost military figures of the Vietnam era.

Last March, in Pittsburgh to address a group of Vietnam veterans, retired Gen. William Westmoreland, who commanded U.S. troops in Vietnam from 1964 to 1969, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying there are "indications" that some of the missing Americans may be alive.

"The matter has got to be brought to a head," he said. "How many more will die, no one knows."

Retired Gen. Mike Hooley, a former commander of U.S. Special Forces in Vietnam, expressed similar reservations about the official position of the government.

"Some of the evidence is pretty shaky," he says, "but I can't help but have the feeling that it is getting kind of a short shrift."

The evidence

The book is nearly 3 inches thick, 230 heavily bound pages of depositions, maps, declassified Central Intelligence Agency reports, State Department cables, congressional hearing transcripts, personal correspondence, maps, maps, memoranda, newspaper clippings, Defense Intelligence Agency documents and assorted fact sheets of private and governmental origin.

It is, in turn, a detailed plan, the one being advanced by the National Vietnam Veterans Coalition, a Washington-based umbrella group that represents 25 veterans' organizations around the country.

"Historically, the American public was led to probably about the POW evidence," says Mike Van Alta, a Vietnam veteran who now runs an electrical contracting business in northern Virginia and publishes a monthly newsletter critical of the government's handling of the issue. He has headed the veterans group's efforts to prove there are Americans in captivity in Southeast Asia.

The evidence, he says, "includes" of CIA-confirmed locations and numbers of prisoners, reports by refugees who saw them men alive as recently as last year, fingerprints, aerial photos and even pictures. The civilian population in America has no idea of the depth of the information.

Van Alta says the documents he has assembled also show that government officials have tried to conceal the evidence by "intimidating" refugees who reported sightings and by discrediting news accounts of the sightings and public debate of the POW issue.

As proof, that the "cover-up" began even before the war ended, Van Alta and the veterans group have distributed a June 1973 State Department cable from the U.S. embassy in Saigon to the secretary of state concerning a detainee named Nguyen Thanh Ben, who, claimed to have seen the American prisoners who were captured.

released "under the 1973 Paris Peace Accords."

"In follow on interview with AP, UPI and NBC correspondents," the book says, "interviews elicited information that he had seen prisoners who had been taken to the United States. Americans 'said' had been released, American officials 'said' at interview requested news services to 'play down' details. AP mentioned war minister with embargo request, while UPI and NBC, after talk with military press officers, wanted less entirely from their sources."

Included in the book is evidence that declassified CIA reports on the tracking of POWs up to the end of American involvement in Vietnam in 1975.

"We left five Americans over there, and we know we were leaving five Americans there," Van Alta says.

The veterans group dates, for example, that 164 Americans were missing in Laos, but the remains of only four have been returned from that country. In the early days of the war, the government of Laos published photographs of 30 pilots who were in captivity. None has been accounted for.

Since the end of the war, information on U.S. survivors has come mainly from refugees fleeing Laos and Vietnam. "As of July 15, 1984, DIA has over 2,850 reports on Americans in Southeast Asia," 640 are eye witnesses," the book says in its literature.

In testimony before the House Subcommittee on Asia and Pacific Affairs last August, Lt. Gen. James Williams, director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, acknowledged that 193 of those eye-witness reports were "under continuing investigation" and 84 were being "actively pursued." But he qualified his statement by saying, "We cannot yet prove any American is now being held captive."

"Williams has had difficulty in convincing some members of Congress from both political parties."

At these same hearings, Rep. Douglas Applegate, an Ohio Democrat who had offered a resolution directing the President to obtain a full accounting of Americans in Southeast Asia, said he had obtained a refugee report "never investigated by the Defense Intelligence Agency — of 64 live Americans in northern Laos. This live sighting of our boys was made on April 26, 1982."

Applegate said he was "furious that ... government agencies are covering up past mistakes and withholding information for whatever reason."

Earlier, former North Carolina Congressman Bill Hamilton, a Republican who worked six months as a Pentagon consultant after leaving the House at the end of last year, claimed that he had seen classified reports that proved Americans were still captive in Southeast Asia.

Although the Pentagon disputes Hamilton's charge, he pointed to evidence the DIA of covering up POW information. Last August, he was quoted in his hometown newspaper, The Asheville Citizen, as saying, "I know what congressmen are told on this issue, as opposed to what I saw at the Pentagon."

He accused government officials of trying to suppress the information to cover their initial mistake of shrouding the survivors. "It is not national security," he said, "it is job security for the bureaucrats who have been sitting on this for 13 years."

While the Pentagon was trying to discredit Hamilton's charge, Vice President George Bush was pressing him. "Bully Hamilton is an expert on this," Bush said during a campaign stop in Asheville last March. "The country needs an elected official up there for whom this is a major interest."

Another former Republican congressman, John LaBouffeur of Long Island, N.Y., published an article in the New York Times last in August in which he alleged that POWs were still alive in Laos and the DIA knew of them.

LaBouffeur, who served on the House Foreign Affairs Committee and Task Force on Prisoners of War in Southeast Asia, wrote: "Gen. Sharon Tague, who was at the time [of the war] and director of the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency, recently testified that he believed that our men were still held in Laos. Privately, DIA analysts concede that POWs are still alive there, differing only in how many there are. The most recent estimate ranges from 60 to 263."

"Hundreds of recent refugee reports, verified with US defense missions, describe similar scenes."

The rebuttal

The color photograph was received on a Friday and intelligence officials were told it was smuggled out of Laos by a refugee who claimed it from eastern Laos.

It was a photograph of an American military plane in a single, during a mission. The plane was shot down by a North Vietnamese missile. The plane was shot down by a North Vietnamese missile. The plane was shot down by a North Vietnamese missile.

Intelligence analysts claim reports POWs in Vietnam hard to verify

A task force of experts was summoned to the Pentagon on the project over the weekend. By Saturday afternoon, according to one analyst, the group had determined, through various clues the photograph held, that the location was in Thailand.

By Monday, a defense attaché in Southeast Asia had interviewed the Comintern. He was, indeed, an American. He was, indeed, in Vietnam in Thailand to study Eastern religions. The photograph was a hoax.

That episode is cited by intelligence analysts to illustrate the difficulty of sorting through and verifying the hundreds of reports that are received concerning American POWs.

In his report to Congress last August, Gen. William, DIA director, said that of the 543 reports "alleged to be first-hand live sightings" reports, 150 "are known to be fabrications." (Most of the reports, 446 of them, were received "through a determination that they correlate with individuals since accounted for," he said.)

Pentagon spokesmen say they believe many of the "fabrications" are advanced by refugees trying to gain entrance into the United States or others motivated by a $1 million reward offered by the National Foreign-Disaster Assistance for POW/MIA's Inc. for proof of live Americans in Southeast Asia. "We operate on the assumption that each report is true," says a Pentagon official. "We do everything we can to make this an effective process."

He cited another example of a promising line sighting that ended with serious questions about its veracity and the credibility of the source.

In that case a refugee reported having seen 50 Americans in a London prison, for which he provided a name and general description. He even sketched a map of the compound. It was immediately verified that a prison by that name existed in that location.

From files on the hundreds of thousands of Southeast Asian refugees who have settled in the United States, analysts were able to locate seven, living in different cities around the country, who had been in that prison. In interviews with intelligence agents who visited each city, the refugees were unable to confirm that Americans had been held in the prison.

Each was asked to draw a map of the prison. All their maps were similar, indicating that they all had the same knowledge of the prison. However, the map drawn by the refugee who reported the sighting did not match the map drawn by the other refugees.

Analysts say various methods, many of them classified, are available to the State Department, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency for checking the live sightings. "We know that the live sightings of Americans in North Vietnam are still hanging in the air and from which light does not come," an official said.

Frequently, Pentagon officials dispute their critics as being their claims on out-of-date or incomplete information. To the Pentagon's critics, that is a frustrating argument.

In the case of former Rep. Hord's claims of a cover-up, the Pentagon responded that he had seen only portions of some files, not the entire picture. Yet he was a member of the committee that allegedly refuted Hord's charges in 1975 classified by the Pentagon and is discussed with congressional committees only in closed sessions.

Most of the documents that have been supplied by the veterans group are more than 4 years old, the Pentagon argues. But several contained since 1975 remain classified.

Bob Crossman, head of the National Foreign-Disaster Assistance in Florida, says the government's position is the "closing to critics" "go as far as to find out what happened in the prisons."

"Add 'Don't think a former George Bush major, who now lives in Washington, D.C., has been and serves as chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Committee. 'We are totally convinced that our mission is correct.' And there are live men, POWs, in the government's possession."

The politics

By some accounts, 30,000 Americans who fought in World War II were never accounted for, as were thousands more who fought in Korea. Yet the incomplete accounting did not generate the political furor that is building over the open books that remain on Vietnam.

After these wars, which ended in victory or stalemate, the U.S. had access to the areas where Americans might have been incarcerated. If all the questions were not answered, at least there was an opportunity to erase lingering voices of American soldiers languishing in enemy prisons.

Vietnam was different. The war ended in defeat. The withdrawal of the U.S. was swift, and insufficient. Paper for counting the live sightings of Americans was still burning in the American embassy as North Vietnamese tanks clustered on and from which light does not come through the streets of Saigon. The Americans who were left behind, dead or alive, became a spot on the American psyche, a brain that wouldn't go away.

"Throughout the years of President Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter, the U.S. government took the quiet position that those missing in action were presumed dead. And the governments of Laos and Vietnam insisted they had no knowledge of Americans still in captivity. The pursuit of an accounting was mostly viewed as a humanitarian, non-political matter."

As a presidential candidate, Ronald Reagan promised to give the POW/MIA issue the highest national priority, and as President, he vowed that his administration would proceed on the assumption that "at least one" American was still being held prisoner in Southeast Asia. In writing terms he told the National League of Families that if given conclusive evidence of live prisoners, he would do whatever was necessary to get them out.

Reagan has repeated that vow throughout his tenure. On Memorial Day he again pledged that "We write no last chapters ... we put away no books."

Reagan's rhetoric, intended to reassure the families of those still on the missing list, had the effect of politicizing the issue for the first time. By acknowledging the possibility of a POW, he gave encouragement to veterans groups determined to prove their case.

By failing to acknowledge what some of them veterans consider conclusive evidence, he has given rise to the claims of a political cover-up.

"If he acknowledges that he knows they are there," says one veteran, "then he has to keep his promise to get them out. Now's the time to do that! He'd have an Iranian-hostage type situation on his hands."

Many of the veterans' leaders, many of whom are Republicans, are hesitant to criticize Reagan personally. One of them is Tom Bursh, the chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Coalition. Bursh is a Republican and was one of five finalists for the position of Secretary of the Army under Reagan.

"I don't want to embarrass the President," Bursh says. "I just want to get the facts out. I don't believe he has all of the information his intelligence agencies have."

The issue became overly politicized last August when Reagan supporters, including at least one member of the White House staff, tried to thwart the veterans group parade in Dallas on the eve of the Republican National Convention.

At Bursh says the purpose of the parade was to "insure public awareness of the issue" and to force a personal meeting with Reagan as the coalition's evidence could be turned over to him.

He blames a telephone and letter-writing campaign by Dick Childers, who works on the staff of the National Security Council, and veterans associated with the federally funded Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program in Dallas with "sabotaging" the event.

Medal of Honor winner Roy Benavente, of El Campo, Texas, received telephone calls and letters from Tom Martin, chairman of the Dallas Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program chapter, urging him not to participate as grand marshal of the parade. "He said it would not only be embarrassing to me but to the President," Benavente says. He attended anyway. "Why? It's all over for us except giving these guys out," he says.

Chairman, director of the National Foreign-Disaster Assistance, received a call from Childers advising him and his organization not to participate. "He said there were procedures already set up to get in Dallas, and there was a possibility of violence," Crossman says. He received a subsequent phone call and letter from Martin, who said him the event was an attempt to embarrass the President. Crossman came to Dallas anyway.

Several other organizations, including the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Gold Star Mothers and the Shriners withdrew from the parade after receiving similar notices from Reagan supporters. On Saturday before the parade, he had 44 organizations scheduled to take part," Bursh says. "By Saturday, the number was down to 14."

"The Department of Defense coalition members say, had given us support to the event but withdrew at the last minute, depriving the organizers of military vehicles and adding daily problems. Only a Marine color guard 'replaced' the command decision not to participate."

pace," according to Mike Van Atta, one of the organizers.

Martin, who was not on the federal payroll because his position as chairman of the VVLF is voluntary, said he opposed the event because of the timing.

"It was becoming a political issue, and it shouldn't be," he says. "July 30 was National POW/MIA day and there was an observance in Times Square. They could have come here then, and I would have been behind them 100 percent. But they chose Aug. 18 (the day before the opening of the Republican convention), and they did it to embarrass the President. I didn't like it."

"For several years, the veterans groups were devoting their energies to lawsuits and legislation to compensate victims of Agent Orange exposure. With that battle essentially won, they have not the accounting for POWs and MIAs as their top priority."

But there is another reason for the increased activism — the urgency of time and the reassurance for future soldiers.

"The average age of Vietnam veterans is now 34. Some of the photos shot down in the war, if any remain alive, would be approaching old age."

"We have to end this thing," says retired Gen. Healy. "Not just for these men and their families, but for the next generation, for our young kids coming down the road. If they are called into the service, they have to have a reasonable expectation, that their country is going to stand behind them, that this (accounting of missing) is not going to be forgotten like it was in Korea."

The Honorable Fred Fielding
Counsel to the President
The White House
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. Fielding:

Your assistance is respectfully requested in having the matters described in the attached material investigated. Basic documentation on these matters has been provided to DOJ and DIA.

The events over the last year have forced me to accept that some officials of the USG are willfully and deliberately maintaining a policy of deception and self interest which is not in accordance with the expressed policy of the current administration nor in the interests of the United States.

This policy includes preventing information and reports from reaching the president; taking aggressive reprisal action against those who express disagreement or do not support their position; suppressing data which is not in agreement with their interests and illegal political interference in the affairs of private organizations.

The reprisal actions have included threats of prosecution, character assassination, violation of civil rights, intimidation, interference in commerce and other criminal acts.

For over six months I have been trying to work within the established legal channels to have an official investigation started. Until my TELEX to the Attorney General I could not even obtain acknowledgment that I had made a complaint.

With all due respect to the Attorney General's office and personnel I feel that my complaint will be buried and that no action will be taken unless I continue to press the matter thru every channel possible.

As the current focus of my complaint is within the NSC and DOD I hope that any action you may consider would be by persons who are not under the control of nor subject to review by persons within the NSC or DOD.

Sincerely,

Mr. H. Marshall Jarrett
Attorney at Law
Public Integrity Section
Criminal Division
U.S. Department of Justice
Washington, DC

Dear Mr. Jarrett:

The following information is provided in response to your telephone request and Mr. McDowell's letter.

The attached documentation should be reviewed first to establish the general background. It represents part of the records that have been accumulated since March 1983 through the present date. Much of the supporting documentation is in the hands of other persons; however, can be obtained on reasonable notice.

It was not until January 1984 that I reluctantly accepted the probability that individuals at the responsibility level of Mr. Childress were involved in the activities described herein. Since that time I have had occasion to be in a position to verify that Mr. Childress is an active, willing participant in these activities.

During my analysis of events over the last eighteen months one thing has become very visible. There is a serious misuse of official position and authority by Mr. Childress and by other persons within the Department of Defense including Mr. R. L. Armitage, Assistant Secretary of Defense.

The following is a general breakdown of some issues and general supporting information for each. Names and contact information of witnesses to each point and supporting documentation is available and can be obtained on reasonable notice as needed.

In the following breakdown when I state Childress, I am referring to Mr. R. T. Childress of the National Security Council, his associates and persons under his direction and/or control.

Illegal Political Relationship - Childress and 'Center for POW/MIA Accountability'.

An illegal political controlling relationship exists between Mr. Childress and the Center for POW/MIA Accountability in such a manner that the 'Center' acts for Mr. Childress and is his private force. The 'Center' is described as a Non-profit Tax-exempt corporation based in Washington, DC. Some of the activities of the 'Center' are described herein.

Supporting Information:

Representatives of the 'Center' acknowledged that they were political in nature with a political mission and scheduled to go out of business in November 1984. This statement was made during a question and answer session after a presentation to 'Project Freedom' in Phoenix, Arizona.

Representatives of the 'Center' stated that they had access and approval at the highest level including the NSC with instant access to an unnamed individual on the White House staff. This statement was made several times but specifically during their trip to California in July 1983 and in Las Vegas during October 1983.

Childress acknowledged on January 13, 1984 that the 'Center' was his investigative group and his Public Awareness Briefing team.

Childress acknowledged on January 13, 1984 that representatives of the 'Center' visited his office and he approved their travel to California to talk to my associates and me.

See the attached documentation for more information on this trip.

Release of Classified Information

Childress has willfully, knowingly and illegally authorized the release of, released or provided information that was classified and furnished in confidence to the Defense Intelligence Agency to persons without a need to know and who did not hold a valid security clearance.

Supporting Information:

On his trip to California in July 1983, Allen could quote 'word for word' information provided in confidence to DIA. When queried, he said he had received it from his 'high level' contacts within the USG.

Childress stated on January 13, 1984 that personnel of the 'Center' were provided with all reports from all sources to evaluate and investigate as appropriate. This apparently included whatever reports were prepared by DIA during my discussions with them during June 1983.

I have been assured by representatives of DIA that they did not give out the information provided to them however they had no control over the information after it left their office.

Other cases of selective release have been reported and appear to be true.

Misuse of Office and Authority

Mr. Childress has used his office for political purposes to interfere and intervene in the activities of private organizations.

Supporting Information:

Mr. Childress has condoned and possibly approved the use of attempted blackmail, threats of official prosecution, threats of physical harm and other actions by his agents (Personnel of the 'Center', its advisors, associates and consultants) against myself and others. Threats of physical harm were made by Mr. Monaghan and others against myself and my associates. Threats of prosecution were made by Mr. Allen and Monaghan. Mr. Allen stated that if we did not do as they wanted we would be ruined.

Mr. Childress has used his position, office and authority to deliberately interfere with and influence the actions of private non-profit organizations interested in the POW/MIA issue. This has apparently been done to suppress any independent inquiry or publicity that may not support his public position on the matter. Mr. Richard L. Armitage, Assistant Secretary of Defense has also been involved in this matter.

Childress has used personal intimidation and threats of governmental sanctions against the League in an effort to insure that Ann Griffiths remain as the Executive Director of the National League of Families (A paid position as an employee of the League). Mr. Richard L. Armitage, Assistant Secretary of Defense has also used this approach.

See attached documentation for additional information.

Violation of Civil Rights of myself and others

An extensive Character Assassination has been conducted against myself and my associates thru several sources but they appear to be coordinated thru the 'Center'. Everyone involved is associated with the 'Center'.

Supporting Information:

Representatives of the 'Center' (Butler and Allen) have told third parties (in person and via interstate telephone) not to do business with me or my company as we were under investigation by the FBI for illegal acts and anti-american activity.

Representatives of the 'Center', their advisors and consultants have deliberately, knowingly and willfully conducted a character assassination campaign against my associates and myself. They have repeatedly told third parties that we are 'under investigation for illegal, criminal and un-american acts'. This has occurred from September 1983 until the present date.

See attached documentation for additional information.

Threats of Damaging Official Actions:

It has become apparent during the last few months that the threats expressed by Mr. Allen and other persons associated with the 'Center' had merit and that I should have been more aware that they were serious.

Supporting Information:

During their trip to California in July 1984 Mr. Allen and Mr. Hebert stated that they had 'arrangements' with both the FBI and IRS. The FBI would perform checks on all personnel they were interested in and perform other services as needed. IRS would 'take care' of them and insure that they had no tax problems and provide other services that were not named.

Allen stated several times that if we did not do what they wanted that things would go very bad for us.

From the events of the last few months it is apparent that there is an attempt to carry out these threats.

See attached documentation for more information.

Illegal Surveillance

Several times during the last few months I have been informed by different persons that Mr. Childress and/or DIA Representatives have approached people known to be interested in POW/MIA activities and asked them to join groups and report back on the intentions and actions of these groups.

Supporting Information:

It is my understanding that this type of 'undercover' activity is unlawful in general and that the military in specific is not allowed to infiltrate civilian groups or conduct undercover investigations of same.

Statements of individuals approached are available.

Comments

It has become evident that if a person (or group) does not embrace the position expressed by current USC Representatives (Mr. Childress and DIA)) and they are active in the issue of POW/MIA affairs that they are then in for trouble. It apparently does not matter if a person is acting in good faith or is just expressing a political position.

Character assassination appears to be a standard tactic employed by the USC Representatives and their agents. The comments made about myself and others with whom I have come into contact over the last few months have ranged from 'liars' to 'Anti-American Radicals' to 'Senile' and worse.

The charges I am making are serious and are not being made without a lot of thought and investigation. It is my intention to continue until the matter is resolved regardless of expense or time.

Additional information is available to fully support all charges I am making however is in safekeeping at this time.

I sincerely hope that your office will be able to determine who is responsible for these illegal actions and can take appropriate action.

Please advise me if I can provide any additional information.

Sincerely,

9

THE U.S. POSITION IS THAT THIS IMPORTANT ISSUE CAN ONLY BE RESOLVED THROUGH GOVERNMENT-TO-GOVERNMENT COOPERATION. ALTHOUGH WE UNDERSTAND THE INTENSITY OF CONCERN SURROUNDING THIS ISSUE, SUCH ACTIVITIES NEVERTHELESS CAN AND HAVE IN THE PAST JEOPARDIZED ONGOING LAO-U.S. COOPERATION. WE ARE ALSO CONCERNED THAT REWARD OFFERS REINFORCE A PERCEPTION WIDELY HELD IN INDOCHINA, PARTICULARLY AMONG REFUGEES, THAT INFORMATION AND REMAINS ARE ITEMS OF BARTER. REWARDS HAVE BEEN OFFERED BEFORE, BUT HAVE PRODUCED NO POSITIVE RESULTS. WE ALSO NOTE THAT GOVERNMENT-TO-GOVERNMENT COOPERATION WITH LAOS HAS INCREASED RECENTLY AND WE ANTICIPATE MORE PROGRESS ON RESOLVING THE POW/MIA ISSUE IN THE MONTHS AHEAD. END TEXT. 44

Laos confounds POW efforts

WASHINGTON — The possibility that American prisoners of war are still alive in Southeast Asia tantalizes many Americans. But some Americans are more than tantalized — they are irritated to the point of doing something about it.

Jack Anderson
columnist

Two North Carolinians, Dennis Long and James Cogg, spent 23 days locked up in Laos after they crossed the Mekong River from Thailand to Laos seeking information on POWs. They were released Nov. 12, a little worse for wear. Their hard ride across the border will be nothing more than a footnote in the voluminous negotiations for the return of American servicemen, dead or alive.

But their capture gives Americans a clue as to why the campaign to free POWs, if there are any alive, is the slowest rescue on record.

Confidential State Department sources from the U.S. Embassy in Laos in Washington during the time that Long and Cogg were held reveal that the talks over the simple conversion of American airplane crash sites are based on 10-to-100-fives.

The United States has smashed its way for a private group to build at least one medical clinic in Laos. That group, AmeriCarus of Concord, is a conservative organization that puts its money where its politics are. Founder Bob Mansley told us that the clinic is not a humanitarian trade for information about POWs, but is a way "not trying to get the door open."

It is clear from the State Department cables that the Laotian government expects much more in return for granting the United States the privilege of recovering its war dead.

Several cables from the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane, Laos, to the State Department include complaints from Laotian officials that the construction of the clinic was delayed. The complaints are "indicative of a Lao perception that they have been generous in helping us on POW/MIA matters and we have been less than generous in responding to their humanitarian needs," the embassy reported. Before the United States cable for the right to survey more crash sites in Laos, the cable says, "we should carefully consider as well what we may be willing and able to provide the Lao to assist with their humanitarian needs." The cables talk of a second clinic to be built in the same region of a crash site that the United States wants to observe.

The arrest in Laos of Long and Cogg, according to the embassy, didn't help matters. The two belong to the National Steering Committee for American War Veterans, chaired by Ted Kennedy of Illinois, N.C. More than two years ago, the group began collecting money to offer as a reward for the return of any live American POW from Southeast Asia. That reward is set up to $1.4 million and includes pledges of $10,000 each from 21 members of Congress.

Hairs rise on the backs of necks at the State Department when a reward is suggested. It comes too close to paying for hostages. But Sampley and his group think the U.S. government is doing the same thing when it arranges favors for Laos in exchange for the right to search for dead bodies. Sampley isn't interested in remains. "I want live prisoners," he told our associate Daryl Glavin. "It's a very humane program (the reward offer), if the prisoners of war do not exist, they can't be hurt by it."

State Department spokesman Alan Almeyer refused to talk about the details of negotiations in the confidential cables. "We have agreed with the government of Laos to help to the extent that we can with the humanitarian concern," Almeyer said.

The cables carrying information from the U.S. Embassy about Long and Cogg showed that Laotian officials would have liked the U.S. government to publicly denounce the reward offers from members of Congress. After the release, Almeyer did not criticize the congressmen. He would only repeat the State Department's opposition to reward schemes.

Before the release, Laotian officials had also hinted that they wanted the State Department to pay for the cost of keeping Cogg and Long locked up, but the cables show the State Department diplomatically avoided that issue.

When Sampley and Long were arrested in Washington as Veterans Day to protest the continued denials of Cogg and Long, the State Department varied all any public embarrassment by calling a deal. Sampley and the veterans passed the hat and collected $1,300.

The Laotians called it a fine, but Sampley figures it was the cost of room, board and transportation for Cogg and Long. The money was wired to Laos and the two were set free.

2. WE APPRECIATE YOUR WELL CONSIDERED VIEWS ON TIMING OF OUR FORTHCOMING ACTIVITIES. VICE MINISTER CHUNHAF REAFFIRMED THAT AT LEAST TWO EXCAVATIONS COULD BE UNDERTAKEN BEFORE THE END OF THE YEAR. IF THIS IS NOT WIDELY KNOWN IN VIENTIANE, THAT CAN BE A PROBLEM. WE AGREE.

3. HOWEVER, TENTATIVE THINKING ON OUR PART IS THAT IF WOULD BE USEFUL TO SCHEDULE AN EXCAVATION FOR THE OCTOBER 22-28 PERIOD, THEN HAVE THE LAO VISIT HAWAII BEGINNING NOVEMBER 7. WE BELIEVE THAT THIS IS THE BEST WAY TO PROCEED TO THAT THEY CAN BE PRESENT AT OUR LAPS AND SEE JUST HOW WE WORK WITH WHAT HAS BEEN PICKED UP DURING AN EXCAVATION.

4. WITH REGARD TO THE HUMANITARIAN AID QUESTION, THE LAO HAVE EMPHASIZED BOTH TO YOU AND TO US THE NEED TO HAVE PROGRESS IN MEETING THEIR HUMANITARIAN REQUIREMENTS. WE CONTINUE TO BELIEVE THAT THE UNDERSTANDING WORKED OUT WITH AMERICANS THAT THE ORGANIZATION WILL CONSIDER A SECOND CLINIC ONCE THE FIRST ONE IS COMPLETED IS A SERIOUS SIGN OF OUR INTEREST AND COMMITMENT.

5. REQUEST THAT YOU PROCEED ON BASIS OF THE FOREGOING IN YOUR DISCUSSIONS WITH LAO AUTHORITIES. WE WILL OF COURSE BE HAPPY TO ENTERTAIN ANY FURTHER SUGGESTIONS EXPRESSED THAT HAVE AS TO OTHER HUMANITARIAN ENDEAVORS TO CONSIDER FOR THE FUTURE. PLEASE ADVISE.

2. JIM STEELE HAS JUST RETURNED FROM SEEING DONNA LONG AND JAMES COPP. THE TWO APPEARED TO BE IN GOOD HEALTH, AND MADE NO COMPLAINTS ABOUT MALFEASANCE. THEY ARE BEING HELD NOT IN THE EMBASSY, NOT IN JAIL FOR ST, BUT THEY ARE CERTAINLY NOT AT LIBERTY. THE LAO STILL HAVE NOT CHARGED THEM, BUT ACCORDING TO MS. LONG, TOLD THEM THAT THEY WOULD BE RELEASED "WHEN THEIR STATEMENTS WERE CLEAR". WE ARE NOT SURE WHAT THAT MEANS, AND WILL PURSUE THE QUESTION OF CHARGES WITH MEA TOMORROW. MESSAGES FROM THEIR FAMILIES WERE DELIVERED, AND THE LAO DID PERMIT COPP TO HANDOVER TO JIM A WRITTEN MESSAGE TO HIS FAMILY AND FRIENDS. COPP DOES NOT SEEM NOT WANT ANY INFORMATION TO BE GIVEN OUT ABOUT HIM OTHER THAN TO HIS FAMILY. LONG ON THE OTHER HAND HAS NO OBJECTIONS TO COMMENTS TO THE PRESS. OUR CONVERSATIONS WITH THE AVID PANTYON PRESS CORPS MAY THEREFORE READ RATHER STRANGELY.

3. THE STORY THEY TOLD JIM IS NOT RPT NOT IN ACCORD WITH THAT SENT TO UDORN (SEE UDORN 32R) BY THE THAI AUTHORITIES. ACCORDING TO LONG AND COPP THEY DID CROSS THE RIVER, DID LAND ON THE LAO SHORE, AND DID PASS OUT PILLS TO THE LAO VILLAGERS. THEY WERE, AFTER THEIR ARREST, VISITED BY THAI POLICEMEN, BUT THEY HAD THE IMPRESSION THE POLICE WERE IN LAOS TO PURSUE INVESTIGATION OF A STOLEN MOTORCYCLE RATHER THAN ON THE AMERICANS' BEHALF.

SOLVING THE CAMBODIA PROBLEM.

10. A/S SIGUR ASKED IF THE LAC OBJECTED TO AN INTERNATIONAL PEACE-KEEPING FORCE (IPKF). SOUBANH SAID THAT THE "INDOCHINESE" POSITION WAS NOT TO ACKNOWLEDGE THE U.N. RESOLUTION ON CAMBODIA, BECAUSE THE U.N. ONLY RECOGNIZES ONE SIDE -- THE COALITION GOVERNMENT. THUS, IF AN IPKF WERE PLACED TO THE U.N., IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT TO ACCEPT IT. A/S SIGUR SAID THAT WE SEE AN IPKF AS NECESSARY, BUT WE KNEW IT HAD TO BE ACCEPTED BY ALL THE PARTIES; IT CAN'T BE IMPOSED.

11. SOUBANH NOTED THAT THE 1954 INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE WAS A GOOD PRECEDENT SINCE IT WAS NOT UNDER THE U.N. A/S SIGUR ASKED WHETHER THE LAC SUPPORTED FRENCH PRESIDENT MITTERRAND'S CURRENT IDEA TO HOLD AN INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON CAMBODIA. SOUBANH SAID THE LAC WOULD NOT EXCLUDE THE IDEA, BUT THINK THAT THE SIALONG/HUN SEA MEETING SHOULD BE THE PRIMARY FORUM TO DECIDE ON SETTLEMENT PROCEDURES -- AN INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE DOES NOT HAVE THE RIGHT TO DECIDE WHAT THE CAMBODIAN PEOPLE CAN DO. A/S SIGUR ENDED BY NOTING THE SITUATION APPEARS MORE HOPEFUL, WITH THE VARIOUS PARTIES TALKING AND MEETING. SOUBANH RESPONDED BY REITERATING THAT THE SPEECH BY PRESIDENT REAGAN HAD A GOOD IMPACT. A/S SIGUR ADDED THAT THE SOVIETS APPEARED INCLINED TOWARD A CONSTRUCTIVE ROLE, AND THAT HE WOULD BE MEETING WITH VICE FOREIGN MINISTER BOGACHEV IN PARIS IN LATE OCTOBER/EARLY NOVEMBER.

12. MR. LAMPERTSON NOTED THAT HE WOULD APPRECIATE SOUBANH'S CONTINUED ATTENTION TO THE ADMINISTRATIVE PROBLEMS FACED BY OUR EMBASSY IN VIENTIANE, E.G., LIMITS ON STAFF AND SPOUSE NUMBERS, ETC. FACING THESE RESTRICTIONS WOULD ENABLE THE EMBASSY TO OPERATE MORE EFFECTIVELY AND WOULD BE GOOD FOR OUR BILATERAL RELATIONS. SOUBANH SAID HE WOULD SERIOUSLY CONSIDER THESE ISSUES.

LAMPERTSON SAID HE WOULD LOOK INTO DEVELOPING SUCH A PROPOSAL. SOUBANH ADDED THAT THE U.S. EMBASSY IN VIENTIANE COULD COORDINATE THESE ACTIONS.

6. SOUBANH REFERRED BRIEFLY TO THE PUBLIC STATEMENTS CONCERNING LAOS BY ASSISTANT SECRETARY WROLESKI IN CONNECTION WITH THE ISSUANCE OF A RECENT REPORT TO CONGRESS ON NARCOTICS. HE RECALLED THAT HE HAD MET HER IN JUNE AND IF HE WERE TO MEET HER AGAIN WOULD EMPHASIZE THE STEPS TAKEN BY THE LPDR IN NARCOTICS CONTROL. MR. LAMPERTSON NOTED THAT THE REPORT HAD BEEN RELEASED IN AUGUST BUT HAD BEEN PREPARED TOO EARLY TO TAKE INTO ACCOUNT CERTAIN STEPS. HE REITERATED THAT HE LOOKED FORWARD TO FURTHER COOPERATION ON NARCOTICS IN THE FUTURE.

RELATIONS WITH THAILAND

7. A/S SIGUR ASKED ABOUT LAO RELATIONS WITH THAILAND. SOUBANH SAID THAT MANY DELEGATIONS HAD VISITED BETWEEN THE TWO COUNTRIES, RANGING FROM OFFICIALS TO ACROPATS. LENDING AN APPEARANCE OF NORMAL RELATIONS, BUT FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEMS REMAINED. NEVERTHELESS, THE ATMOSPHERE WAS CONDUCTIVE TO SOLVING THE BORDER PROBLEM AND THE LAO WERE EAGER TO DO SO. CONTACT HAD ALREADY BEEN ESTABLISHED BETWEEN THE TWO ARMIES, SO THERE WAS NO REASON FOR DIPLOMATS NOT TO SPEAK TOGETHER. SOUBANH SAID IT WOULD BE HELPFUL FOR THE U.S. TO HELP REALIZE A MEETING BETWEEN THE TWO SIDES, WHICH WOULD ALSO CONTRIBUTE TO BETTER RELATIONS BETWEEN INDOCHINA AND THE U.S. (A/S SIGUR DID NOT RESPOND.)

CAMBODIA

8. MR. LAMPERTSON ASKED ABOUT SOUBANH'S EXPECTATIONS FOR THE OCTOBER MEETING OF THE WORKING GROUP OF THE JAKARTA INFORMAL MEETING (JIM). SOUBANH SAID THAT THE LAO APPROVED OF THE UNGA SPEECH BY PRESIDENT REAGAN BECAUSE IT REFLECTED THE RESULTS OF THE JIM (I.E., REFERRING BOTH TO VIETNAMESE WITHDRAWAL AND THE PREVENTION OF A RETURN TO POWER BY THE KHMER ROUGE). SOUBANH SAID THE JIM WORKING GROUP MEETING IN OCTOBER SHOULD ELKP PREPARE THE GROUND FOR THE DISCUSSIONS BETWEEN HUN SEN AND PRINCE SIHANOUK IN PARIS IN NOVEMBER. SOUBANH SAID HE PERSONALLY THINKS THE NOVEMBER MEETING WILL BE DECISIVE; HE ANTICIPATED THAT HUN SEN WOULD PRESENT CONCRETE PROPOSALS FOR CREATION OF A COUNCIL OF NATIONAL RECONCILIATION. IT WOULD BE UP TO PRINCE SIHANOUK TO RESPOND, ALTHOUGH PRINCE SIHANOUK WAS MANY COMMITMENTS WITH THE OTHER SIDE AND IS SUBJECT TO MANY OUTSIDE FORCES. SOUBANH NOTED THAT NOT EVERYONE UNDERSTANDS PRINCE SIHANOUK'S THINKING, BUT A SOLUTION REQUIRES PRINCE SIHANOUK TO "BE HIMSELF".

9. A/S SIGUR TOLD SOUBANH THAT THE U.S. SUPPORTS PRINCE SIHANOUK VERY STRONGLY; HE THINKS HE UNDERSTANDS HOW TO BRING TOGETHER VARIOUS FORCES TO RESTORE PEACE TO HIS COUNTRY. SOUBANH SAID THE LAO DO NOT OPPOSE PRINCE SIHANOUK, AGREEING TO THE PROPOSAL FOR HIM TO LEAD THE

1. AT SAME TIME AS THE CURRENT POW/MIA INVESTIGATION MISSION WAS IN VIETNAM, TWO AMERICAN CITIZENS WERE ARRESTED BY LAO POLICE WHILE THEY WERE PASSING OUT REWARD NOTICES ALONG THE MENONG RIVER FOR THE SAFE RETURN OF POW/MIA'S. THIS GENERATED NEWS MEDIA QUERIES FROM LOCAL UPI AND NEW YORK TIMES CORRESPONDENTS WHO WERE ALSO COVERING THE POW/MIA MISSIONS.

2. THE QUERIES ASKED IF WE HAD ANY INFORMATION ABOUT THE U.S. NATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS SUPPOSEDLY SPONSORING THESE INDIVIDUALS. THE PAD REFERRED THESE QUESTIONS TO DASD/PA. THE QUESTION WAS ASKED IF THIS ACTIVITY HINDERED U.S. GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS, SUCH AS THE CURRENT OPERATIONS IN LAOS AND VIETNAM. PAD DECLINED TO COMMENT ON THE INCIDENT IN LAOS AND SAID THAT, IN GENERAL, THE U.S. DISCOURAGES PRIVATE POW/MIA SEARCH ATTEMPTS BECAUSE THEY MAY BE IN VIOLATION OF U.S. LAW AND THE EFFORTS MAY NOT HAVE THE TECHNICAL MEANS NOR EXPERTISE TO DEAL WITH ANY FINDINGS.

3. AN OCT 6 BANGKOK POST STORY SAID THAT A SECOND GROUP OF MIA ACTIVISTS HAS ARRIVED IN BANGKOK TO PASS OUT MONEY STAMPED WITH A REWARD OFFER FOR THE RETURN OF A LIVE U.S. POW. MR. TED SAMPLEY, IDENTIFIED AS THE CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL STEERING COMMITTEE FOR AMERICAN WAR VETERANS, SAID A FOUR-PERSON GROUP PLANNED TO DUMP $2,000 WORTH OF U.S., VIETNAMESE, LAO, SOVIET AND INDOONESIAN CURRENCY IN PLASTIC BAGS INTO THE MENONG RIVER BORDER OF THAILAND AND LAOS.

"Even though Laos is a communist country, we have people who live there permanently," Donald Stader said in a telephone interview from Washington. "We have an embassy there. What inside scoop could Ms. Long and Mr. Copp provide? Who did they talk to?"

"Our role was to see that Ms. Long and Mr. Copp were treated properly and released," Stader said. "From what we were told by the Laotian embassy, we were pleased. We had no reason to protest. Ms. Long and Mr. Copp never complained to our consulate that they were not being treated well. Anything else is somebody's image of a Hollywood world."

Ms. Long, of Jacksonville, and Copp, of Hampstead, were released Saturday.

Demand for confession worries relative

The sister of one of two North Carolinians who are being held in Laos said Wednesday that she is confused by reports that officials there want the pair to confess before they are released.

Tsui Tumin said she received a report from United Press International that Thongkai Kamnueith, a Laotian brigadier general, issued a statement demanding that her sister, Donna Long, and James Cope, have to "confess their wrongdoing and tell whether they entered the country on a spy mission."

"What are they supposed to be confessing to?" Ma. Tumlin said. "It's really getting scary now. It's like they are trying to get them to confess that they're spies, but they're not."

The two hired a fishing boat from Thailand to carry them across the river, where they were attempting to distribute money marked with messages promoting a $2.4 million reward for anyone who brings a living American prisoner of war out of Southeast Asia and turns him over to a representative of the International Red Cross.

American officials say the Leontian government has not notified them of any formal charges against two North Carolinians. That makes embassy officials optimistic that the two will be released without judicial proceedings against them.

Donald Stator, a State Department spokesman, said there has been no confirmation of a report in which a Legion official told CBS proceedings against them.

News that the country was going to expel the two.

That leads us to believe that they are trying with the idea," Stater said. "If they tell it to us, it's official. If they leak it to the news media, they can deny it later."

"If there is a charge, that means there must be a process to resolve the charge. Without one, they can released them if they want to, they can do it easy."

Ma Long and Copp are members of the National Steering Committee for American War Veterans, a group which has pledged the reward fund as part of its efforts to account for Americans listed as missing in action from the war in Indochina. The group believes there are still living American prisoners of war in Laos, Cambodia or Vietnam.

3 MiA activists temporarily held

THREE American activists attempting to publicize a reward for the safe return of American prisoners of war they believe are held in Indochina were arrested on a technicality by police in Bangkok, fined and released, police said yesterday.

"We charged them as foreigners changing residence without informing the authorities," said Li Komsan Suerin, a police investigator in Bangkok's Phnom district bordering Laos, 375 miles from the border with Laos.

Komsan said the arrests on Monday came on instructions from Bangkok to stop the three Americans from releasing reward notices into the Mekong River that forms the border between Thailand and Laos.

Police identified the three American MiA activists as Amos R. Townsend, 51, from Manchester, New Hampshire, Michael Bales, 38, from Ohio, and George Handyside, 33, from Atlanta, Georgia.

They were fined $80 each for violation of a rarely-enforced regulation on foreigners residing in Thailand. — UPI

Three MiA activists arrested and fined

THREE American activists attempting to publicize a reward for the safe return of American prisoners of war they believe are held in Indochina were arrested on a technicality, fined and released, police said yesterday.

"We charged them as foreigners changing residence without informing the authorities," said Pol Li Komsan Suerin, in Nakhon Phanom.

Pol Li Komsan said the arrests on Monday came on instructions from Bangkok to stop the three Americans from releasing reward notices into the Mekong River that forms the border between Thailand and Laos.

Police identified the three American MiA activists as Amos R. Townsend, 51, from New Hampshire, Michael J. Bales, 38, from Ohio, and George R. Handy, 33, from Georgia.

They were fined 2,000 baht (approximately $80) each for violation of a rarely-enforced regulation on foreigners residing in Thailand.

Their behaviour indicated that they were not serious about their arrest, but we have no law to charge them on that, so we had to charge them for failing to inform immigration police of a reward for the safe return of American prisoners of war they believe are held in Indochina," Pol Li Komsan said.

The policeman said the three Americans registered in a hotel in Bangkok and later moved to rent a house in Nakhon Phanom.

The three could not be reached for comment, but police said they were seeking information on missing Americans and would publicize a reward of their safe return.

The $2.4 million reward, put up by conservative American legislators, is meant to persuade officials from Laos to help them contact with at least one of their prisoners.

Washington has disavowed such independent private efforts to resolve the fate of the 5,000 Americans listed as missing since the Vietnam war.

It says there is no information to prove that American prisoners are still held in Indochina, but does not have the information to eliminate that possibility.

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE PRESIDENT'S FILE

FROM: H. R. HALDEMAN

RE: Meeting with Senator Dole,
Wednesday, April 14, 1971

This meeting was held at the Senator's request so that he could report briefly to the President on the activities of the National Committee and on his trips around the country.

The conversation centered primarily on the reaction to the Vietnam speech and a feeling that we definitely have the people going our way and that it's a matter now of continuing to stay on the offensive.

The Chairman reported that the moods of the audiences in all of his meetings seem to be more optimistic than it has been in the past, but there is an overwhelming sentiment, on all sides, to end the war as soon as we can.

The President gave the Chairman some suggested talking points on how to handle the war question and particularly the question of setting a specific date.

There was also some discussion of the Prisoner of War problem and the Chairman made the point that this is a tender-box that is about to explode and there is real danger of great numbers of POWs reversing their support of the President. He suggested, therefore, a fairly major move for cosmetic purposes and the President asked that this possibility be explored.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the President, the Chairman, and I walked across West Executive to the West Lobby entrance and the President went on to the residence.

 FROM: MICHEL OKSENBERG MO
 SUBJECT: Renewed League of MIA Families Request for Appointment

Once again, the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia seeks to meet you (Tab B).

They have nothing new to say, and I am capable of summarizing any developments for you. So I recommend turning down the request, and I will call Ann Griffiths separately to say you have instructed me to see her.

However, a letter from you is important to indicate that you take recent refugee reports of sighting of live Americans "seriously." This is simply good politics; DIA and State are playing this game, and you should not be the whistle blower. The idea is to say that the President is determined to pursue any lead concerning possible live MIAs.

Do not offer an opinion as to whether these leads are realistic. Apparently you revealed skepticism to Congressman Gilman, and my recommended letter to the League walks you back from that.

RECOMMENDATION:

That you sign the letter at Tab A to Ann Griffiths.

 SUBJECT: National League of Families Meeting with the President

Your response to my memorandum of March 7 asks why State cannot pursue the issue of the American defector.

State has pursued this issue, and the defector is now on his way home.

The point is that his return will generate new stories about the MIA issue and particularly about the possibility that additional Americans remain in Hanoi.

My own view is that it would be politically wise for the President to indicate his own continued concern with the MIAs.

This is a "right wing" issue, and I think it gains the President some politically to indicate his continued interest in the issue -- particularly since he may be moving on the Vietnam front in the months ahead and since the Administration had implied earlier that it believed Vietnamese assurances that there were no live Americans left in Hanoi.

The Vietnam War horror continues for those yearning for loved ones missing in action. Ann Mills Griffiths (below) heads a controversial support group

A 'SUPPORT' GROUP'S TURMOIL

Kim of missing servicemen find dissonance in the ranks at the League of Families

By Cathryn Donohue
The Washington Times

The young woman approaches, nods, speaks confidentially. Twenty-eight years old, daughter of a Navy pilot downed 26 years ago over the Gulf of Tonkin, she offers what in this setting is disapproved information.

"I have," she says, in the tone one might use to hawk contraband, "copies of the Senate Foreign Relations minority staff report."

Welcome to the July annual meeting of the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, the nation's largest group of POW-MIA relatives where many takes the subtlest of forms.

Here there is the mutiny of an ID badge incorrectly worn, there an impermissible question asked aloud. Mutiny is inappropriate applause or possession of material that contradicts the organization's official line — such as the young woman's copy of the Senate committee report, published in May, that accuses the U.S.

government of abandoning the nation's POWs.

Once little-known, the 3,783-member League of Families drew national attention early this year with the resignation of the POW-MIA chief at the Defense Intelligence Agency.

That official, Col. Millard A. Peck, charged at the time that the league's executive director, Ann Mills Griffiths — a member of the administration's top policy body on POW-MIA issues — not only opposes attempts to solve the question of missing Americans, but actively sabotages such efforts.

Since then, the 21-year-old League of Families has been in the spotlight. At issue: Can an organization that represents families seeking help from the U.S. government itself without slowing progress in the search for the missing? Turmoil within the group tells the story.

This month a newly seated Senate select committee — spurred by Col.

See KIN, page A6

Special Report, page A7.

Peck's charges and by summer's first page, photos of men said to be missing U.S. soldiers — began to color the government's conduct of POW-MIA matters. Among its chief news, the panel will hear from one of the league's own rebels.

But even at July's grand ballroom of the downtown JW Marriott Hotel, relatives of the 2,273 Americans still unaccounted for in Indochina gather for reports from government officials and military brass, the subtle signs of mutiny show — as do the league's countermeasures.

Here Vietnam vets in white polo shirts, known to league members as "bouncers," "moons" or "Gestapo," guard floor mikes against impermissible questions. The vet patrol against interlopers, agitating at the ID badges members must wear, on pain of ejection, around their necks.

Here Helen Haggerty, the Navy pilot's daughter, who now is a Hill navy Georgetown, slips copy after copy of the Senate report (reproduced at her own expense) to other members. They do not know of the report's existence — because to the League of Families' board of directors the report is anathema. As such, it has gone unmentioned in league newsletters.

Here there is Halman of Walnut Springs, Texas — 17 years a league member, the sister of an Army sergeant lost in South Vietnam in 1968 — slashes among her papers a copy of S.R. 82, the bill that would give rise to the Senate's select committee on POWs and MIAs.

The league's board has opposed S.R. 82 as an attempt to reopen charges of "cover-up" on POW-MIA issues. The board has not pulled the membership. But at the Marriott, the bill's partisan advocates hope of a formal vote. With only 294 members here, there is no quorum.

And as the board chairman turns aside floor requests for a straw poll, S.R. 82's case is closed.

It is a scenario played out repeatedly in the five years since the board raised the quorum requirement from 50 members to 300, says retired Army Col. Earl F. Hopper of Glendale, Ariz. Col. Hopper, 70, the father of an Air Force pilot shot down in 1968, is a charter member of the league and a former board chairman.

The stifled quorum requirement, he says, gives members less and less of a voice in league business.

Almost as if to prove it, as Col. Hopper steps up to speak for S.R. 82 he will find the hands of white shirts on his floor mike.

Were they trying to stop him from speaking or were they trying to help? Accounts differ. But later Col. Hopper draws an upshot from one of the veterans stationed outside the ballroom. Bill later that week, Rodney A. Anderson of West Buxton, Maine, past chairman of the Maine Vietnam Veterans' Vigil Committee, tells a reporter what he thinks of the league. "Democracy talks for itself," Mr. Anderson says. "That might not be the ideal case down there."

The league has been described as a "family support" group. It began in 1968 as just that — as an informal newsletter written by a POW wife in California. The newsletter was circulated, with Pentagon help, among POW families that hoped to bring their men home alive.

Incorporated in Washington in 1970 and still headquartered there — where Executive Director Ann Mills Griffiths now writes the bi-monthly newsletter — today the league is a major, if sotto voce, player in the government game. The league's budget, last year was $622,000, not a true measure of its influence.

Its goals have changed with the times to include "the fullest possible accounting" of the missing; this is discovery and identification of all remains possible and reputation of remains. That is itself a point of contention. Discoveries can live men back.

But "family support" is more fitting also.

The mother and brother of Larry James Stevens (the Navy lieutenant named as one of the three men in the enigmatic "MIA" photo on front pages over the summers) discovered that when they approached Mrs. Griffiths at the July conference. They asked her why, with her inside knowledge, she had not informed them of the photo early on. It's not league policy, they were told.

"My son said, 'Do you mean, Ann, that this is not a support group for families?'" says Gladys Fleckenstein of Big Bear, Calif., a close friend of Mrs. Griffiths at one time. "She looked daggers at us and said, 'Go see your casualty officer. You need psychiatric help.'"

Mrs. Griffiths, who refused repeated requests for a formal interview for this article, declares by telephone at deadline: "I did not say, 'You need psychiatric help.' That is blatantly not true." Moreover, she says, it is the responsibility of the military service casualty officer, not the league, to report to families on individual cases.

It may be a measure of the changed relationship between the two women that Mrs. Griffiths adds "I have witnessed as well."

Gone is the once-upon communication among families, except through informal networks of their own. "To preserve 'family privacy,' league members' names are kept from all but the staff and its most trusted officers, even from the elected board of directors. That gives the staff, principally Mrs. Griffiths, unbreachable control."

Today, in fact, Ann Mills Griffiths is synonymous with the League of Families. Stubby, bustling, a clean sweater at 50, she is a divorced mother of three, a high school grad with a steel-trap mind. And in one sense, she inherited the job.

Her older brother, Lt. Cmdr. James Mills, was shot down over North Vietnam in 1966. Their father, E.C. "Bus" Mills, helped spark the POW-MIA families movement in California. He became the league's executive director for a year in 1973. But Mrs. Griffiths' daughter, Ann, stepped into the job in 1978 and has worked at it since. Today her sister, Judith Taber, is the league's western regional coordinator.

Yet, at $66,000 a year, Ann Mills Griffiths is a hired hand who serves at the board's pleasure. And it is a measure of her power that even when the board tried to dismiss her, it couldn't.

It happened in 1984, say league members who served on the board then. Spurred by what they considered unauthorized activity by Mrs. Griffiths, board members advertised for a new executive director. They found one, only to have Mrs. Griffiths' close friend and White House contact Richard Childress of the National Security Council staff, intervene.

"I remember Dick standing up and saying that he wrote the attorney for the U.S. government on the POW-MIA issue," says Michael Clark of Santa Barbara, Calif., now an Air Force pilot shot down over Laos in 1969.

"Dick" said he had written two strategies, one that included the league and one that didn't. Mr. Clark says "And that if we didn't agree to keep Ann as executive director, he would activate the other strategy."

That "other strategy" would deny any new director access to classified data and membership in the Interagency Group, the government's top policy body on POW-MIA affairs.

"We would then be considered on the same level as any other POW-MIA group," Mr. Clark says, "and we would not have the special status that the league had now."

Rather than forgo its privileges, the board caved in, recalls Mr. Clark, who sat in on the meeting as a regional coordinator.

So it is the power of secrets — secrets the board itself is denied — that Mrs. Griffiths wields, even now that Mr. Childress has left government.

Given classified access in 1979 through a simple secret clearance, Mrs. Griffiths today boasts a top-secret State Department clearance.

Appointed in 1980 to a newly formed Interagency Group for POW-MIA affairs that she herself has described as a step in the families, Mrs. Griffiths has transformed the panel into the government's top policy body on the issue. The IAG includes representatives from the State and Defense departments, the National Security Council, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the DIA — and Ann Mills Griffiths.

Thus league policy mirrors administration policy. "When the U.S. government wishes to speak out without fear of rebuttal, they write it. And Ann signs it," Earl Hopper says.

To some seasoned observers, the arrangement works in one's benefit.

"There is something wrong when your major advocacy group is part of the government effort. You can't distinguish between those that want something done and those that may not want something done," says retired Air Force Lt. Gen. Eugene Tighe.

Once director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, Gen. Tighe originated the idea of giving Mrs. Griffiths classified access.

Just as, to the public, Mrs. Griffiths appears a government-licensed spokesman, within government itself Mrs. Griffiths acts as family advocate. The technique is said to work wonders.

"She goes up the line and up the line until somebody rolls over. And somebody will always roll over because they don't want to go against the families," says one observer of Mrs. Griffiths' approach to Pentagon brass.

Sometimes even heads roll. A Department of Defense official informed a closed-door meeting of the league's board in July that Ann Mills Griffiths had targeted Col. Peck, the DIA's chief of POW-MIA affairs, long before the colonel resigned in February alleging a government cover-up.

55%
Exhibit K

2K

Ronald J. Knecht, who investigated Col. Peck's charges for Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, told the board that "sometime last fall" Mrs. Griffiths contacted the Defense Department "to say Peck should be relieved of his duties," says Jeffrey C. Danielson of Danbury, Conn., a newly elected board member.

"You could have drawn that conclusion," says Mr. Knecht in response. "She indicated to DOD that she was not satisfied. But she was one of several people who were not satisfied," Mrs. Griffiths says simply. "I have no ability to have anyone in the U.S. government removed."

But it may not be always the brass that gets hurt. Daniel Maslowski, a retired Army lieutenant colonel who in 1987 served as a POW-MIA adviser to Richard Armitage (then a deputy assistant secretary of defense), says Mrs. Griffiths' interference led him to quit after six months.

"The last straw," Mr. Maslowski says, came when Mrs. Griffiths stepped in to stop him from passing information to a family (which he names, but not for publication) about a turnover of remains.

"I wanted to pass the information to the family. Everyone in my office wanted to pass it to the family. All of DOD agreed until Ann said: 'No, we're not going to tell them. The league has decided.' After that I found out it was a family she was on the outs with.

"If she doesn't like somebody, she won't give them the same information," Mr. Maslowski says. "It's like 'I'm going to show you I have more power than you do.'"

Mrs. Griffiths calls that a "crazy" story, one that defies everything she has ever done to free up information. "I don't know what he's talking about."

"I know of no more successful advocacy group than the League of Families," Mrs. Griffiths says. "We get the U.S. government to adopt our priorities and policy."

Memo may bolster critics of family support group

By Cathryn Donohoe
The Washington Times

When an Army colonel charged with monitoring the fates of American prisoners of war resigned in February, accusing higher-ups of roadblocks and coverups, he singled out the head of the nation's largest support group for POW families as "intentionally impeding the effort" to find surviving soldiers in Indochina.

Today, against the backdrop of a new Senate inquiry into how thoroughly the government is investigating reports of so-called "live sightings," a memorandum has surfaced that may give credence to critics' claims that Ann Miller Griffiths, executive director of the private support group, is improperly helping government officials mollify POW families.

In a Feb. 24 memo, a copy of which has been obtained by The Washington Times, Mrs. Griffiths specifically advises a Pentagon rear admiral on how to respond to a letter from a former member of her own group, the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia.

The Griffiths memo, labeled "SENSITIVE," could become a point of testimony today as Col. Millard Peck, who resigned in February as chief of the Defense Intelligence Agency's Office of POW-MIA Affairs, testifies before the Senate Committee on Rules.

The panel with DIA for insights on (Mrs. Dickinson's) assertions that Mark Danielson was 'reported to be alive on the ground' would be enlightening," Mrs. Griffiths suggests.

"All information which pertains or may pertain to her brother has been provided; no new information has been collected or received which could reveal 'his whereabouts,'" is the wording Mrs. Griffiths suggests

MEMORANDUM FOR VICE MCDONALD/BILL JORDAN

From: Ann Griffiths

Subject: RESPONSE TO MIA

Date: February 24, 1991 SENSITIVE

Lee Dickinson Dickinson goes back a long way with the League; even working in the League's office during my father's tenure as executive director, 1973-74. She became increasingly disaffected and receptive to Earl Napper's "approach," as did her parents who became extremely bitter. She needs to hear the following from DOD:

- Reiteration of current policy on normalization of relations, expanded by what "peace and respect" means, i.e. Vietnam's needs governed largely by the seriousness of any efforts to resolve the issues.

- We are aware of no "collateral" surrenders, orders, not would you consider such, despite recognition that there were several years of political apathy and lack of serious attention by the U.S.

...not use this information of "no" for efforts to resolve. Most importantly to issue which held the answers on those missing in Vietnam as well as over 575 in Cambodia and Laos.

Note: After you draft, send over and I'll give input.

Danielson Dickinson of Tuthill, S.D. Mrs. Dickinson had written to the admiral in January, asking his help in finding her brother, an Air Force captain shot down over Vietnam in 1972.

As background, Mrs. Griffiths told the admiral that Mrs. Dickinson had become "increasingly disaffected" to the support group and "receptive" to dissidents who have challenged Mrs. Griffiths' leadership.

"A check with DIA for insights on (Mrs. Dickinson's) assertions that Mark Danielson was 'reported to be alive on the ground' would be enlightening," Mrs. Griffiths suggests.

"All information which pertains or may pertain to her brother has been provided; no new information has been collected or received which could reveal 'his whereabouts,'" is the wording Mrs. Griffiths suggests to the admiral for a reply.

Mrs. Griffiths gave him the strategy tips in her role as a member of the Interagency Group for POW-MIA Affairs, the government's top policy-making body on the issue. Some of her critics have charged that Mrs. Griffiths' dual roles as both government official and head of a POW advocacy group seriously compromise the interests of families hoping for information about missing loved ones.

Reached by phone last night, Mrs. Griffiths defended her memo as a proper exercise of both roles.

"There is nothing there that is wrong," she said. "I'm advocating that the U.S. government be direct. It sounds responsible and factual. That is my job, to be responsible and factual and try to get this issue resolved."

Dear Mr. Secretary:

As previously noted in my correspondence of April 19th, the League of Families has undertaken a national project condemning the exploitation of the POW/MIA issue now taking place at the National Vietnam Veterans Memorial by those standing vigil on a permanent or semi-permanent basis.

At the six League regional meetings recently concluded, tremendous support for this project was received from family members, concerned citizens and veterans group representatives in attendance. Representing all POW/MIA family members of the League, the following resolution was overwhelmingly passed in all regions:

RESOLVED, that the National League of Families condemns the exploitation of the POW/MIA issue taking place at the National Vietnam Veterans Memorial; and be it further

RESOLVED, that the National League of Families calls upon the Department of Interior and all veterans organizations to take appropriate action to eliminate this desecration.

Prior efforts to dissuade the illicit activity at the Memorial were unsuccessful. While we recognize that legal ramifications bear on this matter, it is our hope that the Department of Interior will aggressively seek to restore appropriate honor and dignity to the most actively visited memorial in our nation.

Thank you.

Respectfully,

Washington, D.C. 20040

Dear Secretary Lujan:

The League has long been concerned about the desecration occurring at the National Vietnam Veterans Memorial, using the issue of our missing relatives as the basis. The nearly 3,600 POW/MIA family members who comprise the League have witnessed this spectacle since Christmas Eve, 1982.

As Executive Director, I tried for quite a long time to work with those holding POW/MIA vigils at the Memorial in an effort to ensure that illegalities and unsavory incidents did not occur. The League's efforts in this regard were to no avail.

There have been viable groups of individuals who have manned POW/MIA information booths at this site, but they are the minority. They come to Washington for a specified period, such as Veterans Day, National POW/MIA Recognition Day and on other occasions which lend themselves to public focus on the issue. The problems associated are too difficult to convey in a single letter, but it is our hope that you will assign someone to look into this matter and meet with the League as well as veterans organizations' representatives to seek a solution.

The individuals and organizations now "permanently installed" at this highly visible site are desecrating the sanctity and serenity of the Memorial, its purpose and the service of those Americans whose names are listed, including our missing relatives. The misinformation being spread on the POW/MIA issue is undermining League and U.S. Government efforts to resolve this humanitarian problem. Sadly, the American people are being misled into donating funds which are not accounted for in compliance with Federal or District of Columbia law for non-profit organizations.

6K

The POW/MIA families have passed a resolution condemning the destructive activities now taking place at the memorial, a copy of which is enclosed. Also provided for your information is an enclosure which is being distributed to all of the major national veterans organizations, seeking their help in correcting this problem. Prior efforts to encourage responsible cooperation by those manning the booths have been unsuccessful; therefore, other means must be pursued.

In short, this travesty should be ended for the benefit of the American people as a whole, as well as those concerned with the public perception of veterans and the POW/MIA issue. It is our sincere hope that you will seek to remedy this national disgrace.

Respectfully,

Ann Mills Griffiths

Official raps MIA protesters

By The Associated Press
12 FEB 17

Washington—A White House official says some of the protesters claiming the government is dragging its feet on the POW-MIA issue are "cranks" who are harming U.S. efforts to learn more about missing servicemen in Southeast Asia.

Richard Childress of the National Security Council said Wednesday that protests directed at the administration and the Pentagon government have brought complaints from the Pentagon.

Childress, who directs Asian affairs, including talks on the POW-MIA issue, said U.S. officials agree the protests are posing difficulties.

"They (the Pentagon) told us this kind of activity can harm cooperation," Childress said. "It's not helpful to the process. And we agree with them."

About 25 persons, many of them children of U.S. servicemen shot down over Laos or soldiers captured during the Vietnam War, attempted to deliver more than 1,500 packages of food, medicines and other items last month to the Pentagon Embassy in Washington. They were blocked by police after depositing about 150 packages, which were addressed to men missing in action in that country.

The activities caused the Reagan administration has not done enough to press Vietnam and Laos for information about the missing men or to release any who may still be held alive.

The protests have been led by Vietnam veterans, family members and other activists. Childress, in talking to reporters, referred to the embassy protesters as "Ted Sampley and his North Carolina cronies."

Sampley is a Kinston, N.C., contractor and former Green Beret who was among the leaders of the embassy protest. Contacted by telephone, he said the U.S. government has not made an adequate effort to secure information from the factions and the government. He charged that Childress, as a member of the National Security Council, has "tried to disrupt our activities."

Speaking to the American Legion's annual Vietnam memorial, Childress said protests have "stalled somewhat and exacerbated the delays" in cooperation by the governments of Vietnam and Laos in obtaining remains or other information about the 2,621 Americans unaccounted for in Southeast Asia.

Sampley can be as pushy as they come. He is furious in his efforts to get his message out, and he is willing to let horns, if necessary, with anyone who stands in his way. That includes newspaper editors who might not embrace Sampley's latest idea

'Crazies' with a cause

Richard Childress apparently worries more about Hanoi's perceptions of this country's interest in bringing home missing servicemen from Southeast Asia than he does about the American people's perceptions of their government's POW-MIA efforts.

Childress is the National Security Council's man in charge of negotiating for the release of any POW-MIAs being held captive in years after the Vietnam War. While we share his growing frustration at the country's inability to move off Square One, his positions on the subject can seem downright insensitive to the heart-felt need for final word on the missing loved ones and former brothers-in-arms.

Government officials such as Childress and others such as Ann Mills Griffiths of the National League of Families maintain the government is doing all it can to determine if there really are captive Americans in Southeast Asia and, if there are, to bring them home. They stress cooperation with the communists and push for unity in the negotiations, regardless of how ill-conceived and ineffective the government's position has proven to be.

Meanwhile, the official line in Washington is that there is a "strong possibility" that American servicemen from the Vietnam War are still being held prisoners in Southeast Asia. President Reagan has said accounting for the 2,621 missing Americans is a "highest national priority."

A group of Vietnam veterans, POW-MIA family members and other supporters — dubbed the "Rambo Faction" — have continued to press the government to act as if Rambo's words meant something. A key faction member is an eastern North Carolina veteran: Kinston contractor Ted Sampley, a former member of the Army's Special Forces who now serves as deputy coordinator of the National Vietnam Veterans Coalition.

Sampley can be as pushy as they come. He is furious in his efforts to get his message out, and he is willing to let horns, if necessary, with anyone who stands in his way. That includes newspaper editors who might not embrace Sampley's latest idea for a story. Most certainly, he is a valued customer of the phone company and the Postal Service.

Sampley and other members of the Rambo Faction have tried a variety of tactics in their campaign for more government accountability with varying degrees of success — and taste. One veteran has twice locked himself in a bamboo cage and begun hunger strikes. Faction members have protested at the Washington-area homes of top government officials. They have been arrested for chaining themselves to the White House gate. The group's newspaper has taken some rather vulgar shots at its critics through words and cartoons.

The faction, led by Sampley, struck a nerve with Childress when it attempted to deliver more than 1,500 "care packages" addressed to missing American servicemen, to the Pentagon Embassy in Washington. (Lose has accounted for practically none of the 600 Americans said to be missing in that country.)

Some of the packages were later delivered to the homes of Childress and Frank Carlucci, Reagan's national security adviser. Childress has since labeled Sampley and his cohorts "North Carolina crazies" who have staked efforts to win the cooperation of the Southeast Asian governments.

It seems that Childress wants Sampley and other Americans to accept with blind faith that there are recalled suggestions will soon produce a breakthrough. Given the track record, that is difficult to do.

Sampley is a rebel with a cause, and U.S. negotiators might do well to borrow from his unbridled passion for information about the missing servicemen. But Childress can only complain. "Think about how it's portrayed in Hanoi."

We hope that Childress is correct when he says Hanoi is "watching" the protests over the location on POW-MIAs. If the Vietnamese are watching, maybe they are getting the message that even if the U.S. government is willing to accept 14 years of her and bones as a suitable response to POW-MIA concerns, the American people are not.

POW/MIA Families React to Unwarranted Attack

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's April 29th column, "POW/MIA group becomes part of bureaucracy," is a revealing example of the distortion and exploitation for which they have become well-known, tragically this time at the expense of the POW/MIA families.

Mr. Anderson's and Mr. Van Atta's involvement in the POW/MIA issue has ranged from support of irresponsible purported rescue missions to providing a forum for conspiracy and coverup theorists. In both instances, credibility and evidence were lacking. Attempts to provide Mr. Van Atta with factual information, including substantive briefings from the Defense Intelligence Agency, have been ignored and refused. He chose instead to indulge in such tactics as attempting to coerce government officials to illegally pass classified documents.

The vast majority of over 3,600 POW/MIA family members of the League endorse League policy and have a great deal more at stake than either Mr. Anderson or Mr. Van Atta. Rather than listening to a few self-appointed "experts," Mr. Anderson and Mr. Van Atta would have been wise to recognize the tragedy that the POW/MIA families have endured for over two decades. Their failure to do so makes this cheap and unfounded attack all the more pathetic.

From: Ann Mills Griffiths

Subject: ACCESS TO CLASSIFIED POW/MIA MATERIAL

Date: August 2, 1990

On August 1, letters from ASD/LA Dave Gribbin were sent to Senators Jesse Helms (R-NC) and Charles Grassley (R-IA) giving them full access to cases of interest on the POW/MIA issue. In addition, Mr. Gribbin suggested that the Senators may wish to invite staff of the Foreign Relations, Armed Services or Intelligence Committees, with the appropriate clearances and with responsibility for the POW/MIA issue, to accompany them to review of the classified material.

An additional August 1 letter was sent to Representative Billenson stating that Congressman Bob Smith (R-NH) would be provided the same opportunity, along with staff of the Armed Services or Intelligence Committees, under the same clearance criteria. Mr. Gribbin's decision to pursue this course (which I understand was strongly opposed by JSA, DIA and the Deputy Chief of Staff for Intelligence, Department of the Army) has far reaching ramifications about which I feel you and the Secretary should be aware.

As you know, the President, Vice President, Secretary Cheney, you Bob Kimmitt and others have firmly committed the U.S. Government to pursuing resolution of the POW/MIA issue as a matter of highest national priority. These pledges were taken at face value and gratefully received by POW/MIA families. If implemented, this course makes a mockery of the Bush Administration's commitments.

On any matter of highest national priority, sensitive information is not subject to indiscriminate release outside of the parameters established by the Congress itself, i.e. the respective Select Committees on Intelligence and responsible staff members with appropriate clearances. This path, if followed, sets a precedent for similar access on other issues; such a step would not be considered, much less approved, on Cambodian, Soviet, Chinese, Middle East or other matter of importance to the U.S. In short, the President's and Secretary's pledges will be viewed as nothing more than hollow tokenism.

Mr. Gribbin's communications authorize access to individual Members of Congress who have been loudest in proclaiming that USG officials are not pursuing this issue with integrity or priority. (Examples are enclosed.) Their records are replete with implications, or outright assertions, that the USG is involved in a conspiracy to coverup evidence that Americans are being held captive in Southeast Asia.

I have no concern that Members of Congress or staff will uncover anything which would lend credence to the charges of conspiracy against which we have collectively fought since the 1983-86 time frame. On the contrary, while problems are continuously identified and remedied, there is a great well of talent in DIA's Special POW/MIA Office.

My concern is that if this decision is implemented, the above message - that the POW/MIA issue is one solely of rhetorical priority - will be made clear throughout the U.S. Government. Equally or more important, Hanoi will perceive that stated U.S. policy on this issue is no longer valid and that resolution of the fates of America's POW/MIAs is not an issue which they need to seriously address.

Beyond these significant policy considerations, there will be a severe negative impact throughout the intelligence community. One can anticipate immediate CIA and NSA action to pull their documents and information from the files currently held by DIA. Department of State, the FBI and DEA, as well as friendly foreign intelligence services and others with ongoing investigations and cooperative programs will cease all cooperation on POW/MIA related matters. Sensitive sources and methods will be exposed which will have an adverse effect on source cooperation and reporting. Strategies will be exposed and negotiations will be compromised by revealing the extent of U.S. knowledge and intelligence gaps to those from whom we are seeking information.

As outlined in Mr. Gribbin's letters, DIA's Special Office for POW/MIA Affairs will necessarily be available to assist the Members of Congress and staff during their review of the material. This will usurp critical manpower from important and serious efforts to accomplish the objectives stated by the President and Secretary Cheney. The current level of personnel in DIA's POW/MIA office was established as a result of the Reagan/Bush priority, hard earned and absolutely mandatory. Squandering their time and efforts to participate in a "witch hunt" against themselves does nothing to help resolve the issue and, in fact, lends credence to those most involved in accusations that a "mindset to debunk" exists in that office.

Finally, indiscriminate release such as Mr. Gribbin has now invited will potentially subject POW/MIA family members to further, tragic exploitation by "activists." I am appalled by this action from an individual who obviously knows little about the issue but is seeking to pander to Congress by sacrificing principle and the integrity of the President and Secretary Cheney. He clearly has no understanding of what this will mean in the broader sense, not to mention POW/MIA.

NATIONAL LEAGUE OF FAMILIES OF AMERICAN PRISONERS AND MISSING IN SOUTHEAST ASIA

1804 K STREET, N.W., WASHINGTON, D. C. 20006 12021 222-4840

MEMORANDUM TO THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS, REGIONAL COORDINATORS

F.OM: Ann Mills Griffith, Executive Director

SUBJECT: MORE ALLEGATIONS FROM THE DESPERATE

DATE: JUNE 8, 1987

Unnamed persons (Ted Sampley is reportedly involved along with some cohorts of Bo Gritz) held a press conference on June 5th to launch another unfounded attack on Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage, National Security Council Director for Asian Affairs Richard Childress and me. They now allege that I conspired to "launder money for the White House." This ludicrous charge, like those before, is untrue; however, it again proves the increased desperation of some individuals who apparently will stop at nothing to try to discredit and undermine those directly implementing efforts to resolve the issue.

The truth is that money which went to Thailand was solicited and spent by John LeBoutillier, not by the White House, in his attempt to gain proof of live prisoners, supposedly a priority of those making the accusations. Former Congressman John LeBoutillier asked for a valid non-profit group which could accept contributions and disperse them in support of his efforts to seek information and evidence of living U.S. POWs. Since it was not a League project and knowing that Support Our POW/MIAs still retained that status, I contacted Betty Bartels about the possibility. LeBoutillier had not yet formed Skyhook II (Account for POW/MIAs) but was attempting to raise funds to support his information-gathering activities and pledged to turn over any information to the U.S. Government. Betty agreed to receive and disperse the funds, based on LeBoutillier's assurance as a sitting Member of Congress that nothing illegal would be undertaken and that the efforts were not counter to U.S. Government policy or law; however, neither the League nor Betty knew how the funds were spent. This was and is clearly under John LeBoutillier's purview, but we have no reason to believe his funds were ever spent illegally. LeBoutillier's sources of funds from conservatives, as a conservative Republican, are logical. Obviously, some of the names involved would overlap with conservative contributors to the Contras. To infer LeBoutillier's efforts had a connection to Iran-Contra, five years later, again shows a lack of knowledge and sleazy tactics by those seeking to exploit the current political environment.

Needless to say, I have never accepted any POW/MIA funds from any source for unofficial uses, nor would I dream of doing so. The slanderous accusation that I "was secretly paid at least $4,000 of the laundered money" is also included in the public release. The "fringes" appear to have finally stepped across the line legally. I received a cashier's check for $3,500 in December 1983 for the February 1984 trip to Vietnam and Laos. I was unable to discuss the trip with the board in advance due to government classification. A private donation was used. I also received a Support Our POW/MIA's check in October, 1983, in the amount of $362.25 to reimburse my personal expenditure for hosting a dinner for Vietnamese Foreign Minister Thach and his delegation, the initial session which established high level dialogue between U.S. and Vietnam in February 1984. These legitimate expenditures were privately funded and the disbursements are documented on the August 1984 State of California Tax return (Form 199) of Support Our POW/MIA's.

Interestingly, those who claim that I have no interest in live POWs use as negative my efforts some five years ago to support what was then a responsible private initiative to obtain evidence of living POWs. The contradiction is obvious; but it is clear that these people will try anything to remove those directly involved in implementing the President's priority. In earlier years, before the issue gained the level of attention and serious policy it deserves and now has, all of us searched for any possible means of getting evidence to return our men. The list now is extensive; however, numerous individuals have been taken in by the likes of Bo Gritz, Jack Bailey, Scott Barnes and Mark Smith, to name a few. These circumstances have generated serious caution, and the League has not endorsed the activities of LeBoutillier's Skyhook II. Attempting, in 1982, to assist a Member of Congress who had been helpful in 1981 by gaining official White House approval of the $100,000 in medical assistance to a hospital in Vientiane made sense in the issue's history.

This latest attempt also regurgitated old allegations that Armitage is a drug trafficker, using the most notorious drug trafficker in Southeast Asia as a "reliable source," interviewed by (of all people) Bo Gritz, another "reliable source." Also they falsely claimed that Childress is under investigation for trying to bribe LeBoutillier to discredit Billy Hendon, charges previously addressed by Congress and found to be untrue, and even denied by LeBoutillier.

One must wonder if these latest activities are due to recent legal problems of Gritz and company or the known competition between Gritz's operatives and those of LeBoutillier. The unscrupulous tactics being used should result in U.S. Government officials backing off direct involvement, and it would if they were not men of character. I've cautioned before that such a result is predictable. The wisdom of public visibility on the POW/MIA issue can be questioned when all it gets you is attacks, unfounded allegations and accusations of wrong-doing. I urge serious thought by those of you in leadership positions. You, not only the Board Chairman and the League staff, must continue to visibly speak out in support of those in whom you have confidence. I have yet to hear any viable substitute policy to Return our men. If we lose people like Armitage, Childress and others I could name who are less willing to be visible, the issue will suffer immeasurably, perhaps fatally.

The support of high level DOD, HSC, State Department, JCS and DIA officials is critical to the issue. The same holds true for the Congress; yet recall how viciously Congressmen Solarz, Gilman and Solomon, plus Senator Murkowski, have been attacked. Now that policy is in place and being implemented, attacking those responsible for bringing the priority into reality is ignorant, foolish and totally destructive.

As for myself, I'm very tired of such stupidity and viciousness; however, we must again recognize that the nature of this latest attack proves that those who so desperately are trying to force my resignation from the League or the resignation of government officials do not care about our loved ones, alive or dead. I deeply resent the unnecessary time which must be spent answering false charges or reacting to other demands which have absolutely nothing to do with achieving the League's objectives. I have never wasted League time or resources and do not intend to start now! Our efforts must focus on working to return our men not on those who apparently concentrate on nothing but attacking the League and the government.

Most of us have quite understandably become cynical about individuals or groups who come to us claiming they can resolve the issue, have proof of POWs, can work with the resistance to get proof, etc. We have paid our dues and tried everything we could think of through the years. Even now, we listen to every proposal, hoping that this time it will be valid. The illusive Smith video tape is just another example of family-member vulnerability and how much we all want to believe.

Ironically, those who demand, accuse, allege, play on frustration and emotion or otherwise distort the truth are desperately concerned that President Reagan will leave office without the issue having been resolved. With all the complaints, attempts to remove the President's designated representatives and allegations of coverup or worse, you would question why they are concerned? Do they actually recognize the value of current policy and priority? I hope so; yet they continue to abuse those responsible for bringing us as far as we have come, unsatisfactory as is the pace of results. You can't have it both ways.

Should anyone think that the President is not fully aware of the current situation, don't kid yourselves. This President is involved and will be until he leaves office. Regardless of allegations to the contrary, he is knowledgeable and supports those implementing his policies, as does the President's special POW/MIA emissary, General Vessey.

I ask your support and prayers for strength, confident that the 1987-88 election will again signal those trying to destroy the League that the families recognize the truth. Each year, there is great concern about the outcome of the elections. I know some are apprehensive now, recognizing that those elected to represent the families are crucial to continued viability of the organization. It would, indeed, be tragic if the League opted out of the process at this critical juncture. You should take some comfort, however, in learning that despite the minority extremist activities, they all focus on the League and even run for League office. Obviously, they are not making it outside of the League. It should be clear to all that if the League becomes unrealistic and irresponsible, the Congress and the Executive Branch as well as the media, not to mention the Indo-Chinese Governments, will disassociate. Some in the Congress and the media already believe those involved in the issue are not rational due to minority activities. Should the League join them, we will have no one to blame but ourselves; however, those who will suffer the most are those we are fighting to return, and their families.

Such responsibility is not easy, and there are no promises of success. All we can do is make the best effort, tell the truth and hold firm in the face of irrational attack and adversity. Our missing loved ones and the League's membership deserve no less.

On a final note, I will continue to pursue all possible channels to return our men alive as long as it is reasonable and legal, which this was. In addition, I will not support efforts that are illegal or counterproductive. Should the League not want this from their executive director, then the League should find someone else to do the job.

Griffiths: No clear evidence

Executive Director of National League of Families also says she knows of no wrongdoing by POW/MIA groups at Vietnam Memorial vigil sites

For U.S. Veteran News and Report
By F.A. Wright

The executive director of the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia says she only occasionally reviews live-sighting reports, frequently forgets key details of the POW/MIA issue and does not believe there is any evidence of live POWs.

"I think there is not yet clear evidence that there are live prisoners of war," Ann Mills Griffiths said in a deposition given recently in a $60,000 slander and libel lawsuit filed against the League of Families.

In the deposition, Griffiths portrayed herself as little more than a pawn of the League's board of directors who has become increasingly reliant on the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) for her information and opinions on the POW/MIA issue.

Griffiths also said she supports tight controls on government release of information about POWs and MIAs because members of the public interested in the issue are not intelligent enough to assimilate such information and form the appropriate conclusions.

"The possibility always exists . . . that put all together and distributed selectively, (information) can get taken out of context or inadvertently mixed up, which would cause difficulties in pursuing the issue as best it could be pursued," said Griffiths.

Griffiths's deposition was taken July 6 in Washington, D.C., as a result of the lawsuit filed against the League of Families by Homecoming II, a non-profit POW activist organization based in Kinston, N.C. The year-old suit charges that officials of the League of Families disseminated false information about the activities of Homecoming II to damage its public reputation and cut into its fund-raising activities.

One of the more surprising revelations made by Griffiths under questioning by attorney Bill Bennett, who represented Homecoming II in the deposition, was that she pays little attention to the most recent live sighting reports and frequently forgets information given her about them.

On a recent trip to Vietnam, long-distance runner Stan Cottrell said he saw a group of men he believed were Americans. Col. Joseph Schlatter of the DIA said analysts have spoken with Cottrell several times but are still evaluating his sighting.

Griffiths: "Only a synopsis that he could not state that he saw American prisoners. He was unclear about that."

The suit, filed July Court in New Bern, N.C., charges that League of Family officials, including Griffiths, tried to publicly portray Homecoming II as "corruptly and dishonestly sensationalizing the POW/MIA issue for personal and financial gain."

The League has but in the deposition support several le. have been highly cr

Griffiths, however, did not take the report seriously enough to study it in detail herself, instead relying on the DIA and a subordinate to evaluate the information.

Griffiths: "Mary Currall (the League's director of operations)."

Bennett: "What is your understanding of how that conversation went?"

Griffiths: "I don't recall the details of it."

The suit, filed July, 1989 in U.S. District Court in New Bern, N.C., charges that League of Family officials, including Griffiths, tried to publicly portray Homecoming II as "corruptly and dishonestly sensationalizing the POW/MIA issue for personal and financial gain."

The League has denied the charges, but in the deposition Griffiths refused to support several league employees who have been highly critical of Homecoming badgering and misleading people who come to the memorial.

Griffiths refused to support Cox and Currall or their statements.

Bennett: "Do you have any reason to believe that either one of them were accurately quoted in this article?"

Griffiths: "I can't attest to the accuracy of the quotation."

Bennett: "Do you have any reason to believe that either one of them were inaccurately quoted?"

Griffiths: "I simply cannot attest to the accuracy of the quotations since they weren't mine."

Prior to the Stars and Strips article, Griffiths had written twice to the Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan claiming "desecration" of the memorial by "POW/MIA vendors" and vigils and asked for an investigation.

"The individuals and organizations now 'permanently installed' at this highly visible site are desecrating the sanctity and serenity of the Memorial, its purpose and the service of those Americans whose names are listed, including our missing relatives," Griffiths wrote to Lujan on April 19, 1989. "The misinformation being spread on the POW/MIA issue is undermining League and U.S. Government efforts to resolve this humanitarian problem. Sadly, the American people are being misled into donating funds which are not accounted for in compliance with Federal or District of Columbia law for non-profit organizations."

Although she signed the letter, Griffiths said in the deposition she had no personal knowledge of "people being badgered at the memorial, or of any illegals, or of any desecration because she has visited the Vietnam Memorial only once since it was erected in 1982."

Bennett: "Can you tell us from your personal opinion and understanding of how the memorial has been desecrated?"

Griffiths: "No."

Bennett: "You don't have a personal opinion as to whether the memorial has been desecrated?"

Griffiths: "An opinion?"

Bennett: "Any personal understanding?"

Griffiths: "I have no direct experience."

Bennett: "What do you mean by direct experience?"

Griffiths: "Visits to the memorial."

Bennett: "Have you ever visited the memorial yourself?"

Cox and Currall were quoted in the July 10, 1989 issue of Stars and Stripes as saying that some of the "POW/MIA vendors" at the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C., were distributing false and misleading information about the issue.

Homecoming II maintains one of the most popular vigil sites at the memorial.

Cox called some of the information "blatantly false. We cannot afford to have people misinformed."

Children of MIAs fight guerrilla war over fate of fathers

Some were toddlers when their fathers went to Southeast Asia and have only vague memories of them. Others were not yet born and know their fathers only through photographs.

The group has mounted a guerrilla campaign of civil disobedience aimed at drawing attention to what members say is government inactivity or indifference in the fate of 2,417 men still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. "The North Carolina cranes" is the way a White House aide referred to some of the more militant sons and daughters of missing men.

Some argue that the activism of these children of Vietnam soldiers will bring only pain and more frustration.

"It's a shame what some of these children of the missing men are doing. They are just getting themselves through the same grief their mothers went through years ago," said a senior Pentagon official, who asked that his name not be used.

The children say they have no choice.

"Many of the permits are getting old and tired and if the children don't keep this issue alive, no one will," said Robin Owen Bell, a real estate salesman from Prichard, Ala., whose father is missing in Laos.

The U.S. government says it cannot prove conclusively that Americans are being held at POWs in Southeast Asia, but is operating on the assumption that some remain in captivity. Many POW/MIA activists, including the "North Carolina cranes," say the government has sufficient evidence to prove the existence of POWs but is playing with words to allow itself deniability in the event none are ever returned.

"The weight of the evidence that they are there is overwhelming. That's why the children of these men are fighting so hard on this," said Ted Sampley, a Hampton contractor and Special Forces veteran who served two tours in Vietnam.

Recent activities of some of the members of the most militant group of POW/MIA activists, which is believed to number about 500, have increased the wrath not only of the White House, but also the leadership of the nationally recognized National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia and more moderate activists. These activities included:

□ Locking themselves inside bamboo cages on the front lawn of former White House Chief of Staff Don Regan.

□ Houndcuffing themselves in the White House lawn.

□ Stacking about 1,000 CARE packages addressed to POWs in Laos in the driveway of National Security Council head Frank Carlucci in a blinding snowstorm after being turned away from the Lincoln Embassy.

□ Giving a "Rambo of the Year" award to three women who snatched a POW/MIA flag past Secret Service agents and planted it on the White House lawn.

□ Discouraging a neo-violent twenty band for certain government officials and board members of the National League of Families with cream pies, rotten tomatoes and water balloons.

□ Staging a short-lived occupation of the Washington office of the National League of Families.

Further polarizing the two sides is the publication of an underground newspaper called the Bamboo Connection, that ranges from lightly satirical to openly violent in its treatment of government officials and private individuals with whom its editors do not agree. The paper shows up regularly in the Pentagon, on Capitol Hill and has surfaced as far away as Thailand.

Some of the more vocal activists also have joined the newly formed American League of Prisoners and Missing in Laos, a group that has about 300 members but is not recognized by either the government or the National League of Families.

"Never before have we ever had people ready to do the things we're doing now," said Sampley, who has spent most of the past 11 years pursuing the POW/MIA issue.

On Monday, March 23, Sampley, Bischoff, and his wife will be among six persons arraigned in a Washington, D.C., court on charges they illegally entered and occupied the offices of the National League of Families on March 4. Except for Sampley, all these arrested have fathers who are among the nearly 600 Americans unaccounted for in Laos.

Ann Mills Griffiths, executive director of the National League of Families, said the activities of this group have attracted far more attention than they deserve.

"These kinds of efforts make a mockery of the seriousness of the issue and the priority that is assigned to this issue," Ms. Griffiths said in an interview in her Washington office.

Ms. Griffiths, who has a brother missing in Vietnam, says she understands the frustrations left by the activists but cannot condone their actions.

"Your frustrations have to evidence themselves in something positive and that is not happening here," she said. "As frustrated as we are, we have the best opportunity now, for live prisoners and an accounting, that we've ever had."

The MIA activists include in their ranks not only the sons and daughters of missing men but also a handful of Special Forces combat veterans of Vietnam. Their activities have not been confined simply to civil disobedience and protests.

Activists helped convince the British Broadcasting Corporation to spend more than a year researching and filming a show on live POWs, called "We Can Hold You Forever," that was seen in Atlanta in January.

They helped convince H. Ross Perot to get reinterviewed in the POW/MIA issue and Perot is now quietly collecting information on live POWs.

They helped convince the government to undertake an examination of the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) to determine if they were covering up information about live POWs. Indeed Gen. Eugene Tigh, former head of DIA, concluded there was no cover-up but said he emerged from last year's investigation more convinced than ever that POWs are being held in Southeast Asia.

Ms. Griffiths said the antics and efforts of these activists, particularly by those of the sons and daughters, undermine many years of work on the POW/MIA issue and send a signal of disrespect to the Vietnamese and Laotians.

"This is playing right into the hands of the enemy," said Ms. Griffiths.

The activists say they are tired of the snail's pace of negotiations between the U.S. and Vietnam over the POW/MIA issue.

"All we want is for [the U.S. government] to tell us the truth," said Sampley. "We're going after the government to make them say they [the POWs] are there. If they do that, then the case is on to the Vietnamese and we'll go after them."

GRIFFITHS DODGES DUE PROCESS TO AVOID LIBEL SUIT

SPECIAL TO U.S. VETERAN
By Tom Cartwright

Ann Mills Griffiths, controversial executive director of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, has made scores of trips to communist Vietnam, the confidante and traveling companion of U.S. government officials, supposedly seeking an accounting of U.S. missing in action from the Vietnam War.

They have accounted for none alive, not even with her "help," but Griffiths apparently has no equal when it comes to becoming missing herself, particularly to avoid due process of law.

Griffiths is under subpoena of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina, New Bern Division, to provide oral testimony in a libel and slander action brought against the League by a volunteer POW-MIA group, the Homecoming II Project, based in Kinston, N.C.

Griffiths successfully avoided process servers for months.

NEVER AT OFFICE

Griffiths is supposed to be the full time executive director of the League, a post which pays her $75,000 annually, plus perks, but she was, according to underlings, never in her office when the process servers appeared with the Federal subpoena. When they waited outside of the League office to serve her when she was arriving or leaving, they were harangued in the hallways by her assistants, who said they were interfering with the conduct of League business.

Nor does Ms. Griffiths have a personal phone, or a home where she can be served, at least process servers could not find one.

"You would think that her board of directors, if they have any power or influence over her at all, would insist that she comply with the law," Ted Sampley, national director of Homecoming II, stated.

"It is one thing for her to issue memorandums and missives from the inner-sanctum of her office, slandering and libeling people, good and decent people who are volunteering their time for a cause and not for pieces of silver," Sampley added, "but obviously quite another to have to support such libel under oath."

Finally, on June 28, Griffiths' attorney accepted service of the subpoena at his office, since it was felt that process servers would use the opportunity of Griffiths' scheduled appearance before a House subcommittee public hearing to serve the papers. The hearing was scheduled for 2 p.m. the same day before the Subcommittee on East Asian and Pacific Affairs, chaired by Rep. Stephen J. Solarz (D-N.Y.). Her attorney threatened "sanctions" against Homecoming II if any effort was made to serve her, to "embarrass" her at the hearing.

The hearing on the POW-MIA issue was widely viewed as "a dog and pony show" by many who attended, to provide something for Griffiths to impress the ever-dwindling number of League families who would be holding their annual meeting in Washington two weeks later, featuring Vice President Dan Quayle and Senate Minority Leader, Robert Dole (R-Kan.).

FURTHER STALLING TACTICS

Griffiths' attorneys had no more than accepted service of the subpoena, which set the date for her oral testimony for July 6 in Washington (for her convenience since her office is located there), when they pulled further stalling tactics.

Griffiths' attorneys petitioned the court to delay the presentation of oral testimony until after the League's annual meeting, which was set for July 12 to 15 in the Washington area, a fact they were well aware of when they accepted service. They contended that due to her supposed heavy schedule leading up to and during the annual meeting it would be very difficult for her to prepare and present the oral testimony on July 6.

Further, the League's slippery executive director petitioned the court that Sampley be barred from the session when she, finally, presents her oral testimony under oath. This was an astounding request since Sampley, as chairman of Homecoming II, is one of the targets of her alleged libel and slander.

Also being subpoenaed in the case by Homecoming II is Col. Joseph Schlatter, who has served as the officer in charge of POW-MIA affairs for the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA).

One subpoena sent to the Department of Defense to call Col. Schlatter to present oral testimony was served on the wrong Schlatter by Pentagon security officials. Thus, more wasted time.

The subpoena was finally severed on the right, but reluctant, Schlatter when he appeared, with Griffiths, to give testimony at the Solarz subcommittee hearing.

In the latest stalling tactic, the DOD claims that the subpoena was not valid because of technicalities regarding the subpoenaing of an officer attached to DOD. The problem is, Col. Schlatter is soon to be transferred to a new post in Japan, which will further complicate service of a subpoena.

AND MORE STALLING

"All of this is just an effort to subvert the due process of law, to stall and delay," Sampley said.

And, to make matters more difficult, Griffiths' attorneys are petitioning the court for a change of venue, from North Carolina to Washington, D.C., arguing that witnesses she plans to call for her defense would have to travel at great expense; plus find lodging, meals, etc., if a trial is held in North Carolina.

Her incredible list of witnesses includes Richard Armitage, former Assistant Secretary of Defense and now U.S. special envoy to arrange for an extension of a military base agreement with the Philippines; Richard Cheney, the current Secretary of Defense; Robert MacFarlane, former National Security Adviser to President Ronald Reagan; Gen. Colin Powell, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Richard Childress, former director of Asian and Pacific affairs for President Reagan's National Security Council; Col. Schlatter, etc.

"This is just another apparent effort of Griffiths to dazzle the court," Sampley said. "If we agree to the change of venue, then she probably will never call half of the people she claims she is going to at this point. As far as the expense involved in her witnesses being subpoenaed to court in North Carolina is concerned, many of them are U.S. government officials and it would not cost them anything. On the other hand, if she doesn't subpoena them, we just might. It's time they were all on the record, under oath, on this issue."

"It would seem to me that if Griffiths and her friends feel secure about what they have said and done, they would welcome the chance to support it in court," Sampley added.

Homecoming II alleges in its suit that the League has slandered and libeled it by name, both through the public media or private memoranda, with damaging and false information about its activities.

Homecoming II in the litigation is seeking $50,000 in damages resulting from loss of revenue that resulted from the League's circulation of alleged false information about the organization, and at least $10,000 in punitive damages resulting from loss of reputation, good name and ability to raise funds.

HAMMER THOSE WHO DISSENT

"Griffiths and the League has the attitude that every organization and every individual American who disagrees with their line, the government line, about our missing POWs and MIAs is crazy, or worse, and tries to hammer those who dissent from the 'official' line," Sampley said.

Homecoming II, he explained, is one of several organizations, which Griffiths has accused of obtaining funds through misinformation and by harassing parents by at The Wall (the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial in Washington).

Among others blasted by Griffiths was the American Defense Institute and its director, U.S. Navy Capt. (Ret.) Eugene "Red" McDaniel, a Vietnam War POW who endured the worst of the tortures of the North Vietnamese during several years of captivity.

Sampley, himself a highly decorated Green Beret with two tours of duty in Vietnam, explained that "Griffiths and thus the League is attempting to slander our organization, made up of volunteers, to tarnish our image which will in turn debilitate our fund-raising abilities."

In a letter, dated April 19, 1989, Griffiths charged that "individuals and organizations now 'permanently installed' at this highly visible site are desecrating the sanctity and serenity of the Memorial, its purpose and the service of those Americans whose names are listed, including our missing relatives. The misinformation being spread on the POW/MIA issue is undermining League and U.S. Government efforts to resolve this humanitarian problem..."

The letter was addressed to Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan, with the intention of getting his office to curtail the efforts of the organizations that she was attacking.

BOOKS OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

"We have a marginal percentage in overhead and the majority of the money that we raise is returned to the POW issue in literature and printed material," Sampley explained. "We have never exploited or capitalized on this issue. Our organizational by-laws are set up so that none of the officers, including myself, receive a salary. Our books are open to the public."

"We have a valid permit to operate an information booth at the Lincoln Memorial, near the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial," Sampley added. "The permit is issued by the U.S. Parks Service to operate and obtain funds solely through sales, which includes the sale of T-shirts, POW-MIA bumper stickers and other POW-MIA and American war veterans' materials."

"Unlike the League, we don't play patty-cake with the U.S. government on the issue of our missing POWs and MIAs, we are not spoon-fed the government's line," Sampley continued. "And, yes, unlike the League, we do

Today, the League Says POWs Must Take Second Place to Other USG Foreign Policy Interests

Now, after years of claiming to be an independent, non-political advocate for the families of Americans missing in Southeast Asia and the voice of those still being held in captivity, the leadership of the League is finally publicly revealing its true colors.

The revelation came in a feeble attempt by the League in its May 21 newsletter to justify its complete support of a U.S. Government policy, that if not changed, will end the POW/MIA issue with the return of a "reasonable" number of remains and abandon those still alive in captivity.

The newsletter quotes columnist William Raspberry as saying in a recent article on the Iranian hostage crisis, "The answer is that the president knows what the anguished families may find difficult to accept: that the interests of the hostages must take second place to the interests of America."

Raspberry's comment, which accurately explains why the Bush Administration has adopted a "do nothing" policy on returning live hostages in the Middle East, is then incredulously used by the League as an excuse for rubber stamping the Bush's "do nothing" policy on returning live POWs in Southeast Asia.

"Mr., Raspberry's comment demonstrates precisely why the League must not come into conflict with existing foreign policy and national security interests of the U.S.," says the League.

In other, less patriotic sounding words, what the League is saying is that it has accepted what the anguished hostage families haven't been able to accept - that the interests of unreturned POWs in Southeast Asia must take second place to other American interests.

But rather than flatly admit it has sold out the men and families it professes to represent, the League wants its membership to believe that by continuing to be a team player and not rocking the political boat, the interests of the unreturned POWs will somehow take first place over other foreign policy interests.

believe that our government has for years covered up information about the fate of our missing, and we want to see the truth prevail and a full accounting of our missing. For that reason, we, along with other organizations who don't toe the official line, have become targeted and slandered as exploiters, liars and unpatriotic."

Homecoming II has a board of directors which includes four Vietnam veterans and four family members of Americans still listed as missing in action.

4 MAJOR PROJECTS

Homecoming II operates four major projects, including a biography collection effort, in which the biographies of all Vietnam War POWs and MIAs are being formulated and computerized in cooperation with the POW-MIA Network, a computer bank of information regarding POWs and MIAs based in Iowa. From all available sources, the "Bio-Project," as it is called, collects information on each POW and MIA, including in particular details concerning how and where the individual became lost and any information that may relate to his survival. The information is free to the public.

Through "truth litigation," Homecoming II is following the legal process in demanding access to intelligence reports pertaining to the live sightings of men still held in captivity and supports congressional legislation that will make public such information.

Through its Mekong Project, Homecoming II maintains a presence in Nakhon Phanom, Thailand, which generates support for a $24 million reward for the return of a live POW and collects data from neighboring Laos and Cambodia about the missing Americans.

Homecoming II operates a house in Washington, D.C. for housing and feeding scores of volunteers who maintain a vigil site near the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial. At the site, information packets are distributed for creating "public awareness of the POW-MIA cause," one of the stated principal aims of the Reagan and Bush administrations.

This blatantly self-serving rationale for betrayal is tantamount to telling the chickens to accept the hungry fox in their pen and ignore the continuing slaughter and growing pile of bones because the interest of the chickens will eventually take first place over the fox's interest.

Over eight years ago, the League leadership let the Reagan/Bush administration into their pen and during that time it has supported the continuing slaughter of our missing men by pointing to the growing pile of bones and calling it "significant progress."

No where is the government's seduction of the League more evident than in the complete turn around of Griffiths.

Prior to letting the government foxes into the pen she was guarding, Griffiths was a strong, outspoken advocate for the return of live American POWs as the League's first priority.

"We can wait for the bones," Griffiths said in a 1981 interview with Parade. "But there are live Americans being held over there. Some have been held for 15 years in God knows what conditions. The danger is, how much will I left when you've been waiting for your government to get you out for all this time? Every day counts now."

Today, every day that passes no longer counts.

Today, all Griffiths talks about it bones, as she openly praises Bush and the leaders of Vietnam and Laos for the return of remains.

And just as openly, Griffiths attacks family members and their supporters who dare to say, "There are live Americans over there - the bones can wait." Griffiths has been able to get away with this betrayal of both the men and the POW/MIA families by cleverly inflating the League's voting membership with families of the killed in action, bodies not recovered - the vast majority of whom have never expected anything more than the return of remains.

It's time for the POW/MIA families to either replace the present League leadership with people who represent their loved ones or join an organization that will.

The only other choice is for the families to accept that their loved ones must take second place to other American interests and hope that someday they get more to bury than a handful of unidentifiable remains in a flag draped coffin...

NATIONAL LEAGUE OF FAMILIES LEADERSHIP HAS BETRAYED MIA's AND POW's AND THEIR FAMILIES

When the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia was formed in 1970, it dedicated itself to protecting the interests of American POWs and MIAs.

The League also assumed the responsibility of providing a needed voice in Washington, D.C., for relatives of the missing men, whose voices often were callously ignored by members of Congress.

As the National League of Families prepares for its 21st annual meeting in Washington, D.C., July 12-15, it has become painfully obvious even to the casual observer that the leadership of this once noble organization has betrayed not only the MIAs and POWs it vowed to represent, but also has abandoned and humiliated the relatives who once sought solace in its membership.

The National League of Families is now stronger than ever in its political power base and ties to the federal government. At the same time, the League is weaker than ever in its moral resolve to bring a conclusion to this shameful chapter of U.S. government abandonment of American military men overseas.

The League's leadership has either been co-opted by the U.S. government, or, in the case of executive director Ann Mills Griffiths, bought out by government officials who recognize the political liability the issue represents to presidential administrations.

Even the League's board of directors, once a group of feisty, independent thinking individuals whose primary goal was accounting for the missing men, has become a herd of sheep installed by questionable voting procedures whose sole interest is to follow in lockstep the whims of the dictatorial Griffiths.

Griffiths is a prime example of the old saying that power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely. The more power the government gave her, the more she wanted. She has installed herself as "executive director for life," much as Manuel Noriega did in Panama. When it comes to dictatorial demeanors, Romania's Nicolae Ceausescu had nothing on Griffiths.

Griffiths and the League's board of directors long ago abandoned their quest for the truth on the POW/MIA issue. Instead, they saw in the issue an opportunity to obtain power, however illusory; to cozy up to foreign government officials; and to participate in government-sponsored junkies to Thailand, Vietnam and Laos. Through some strange turn of events it became more important for them to feel important than to fight for the issue.

The League's leadership has become like a ventriloquist's dummy. When the government speaks, the words come out of their mouths. Griffiths and the League's board of directors long ago abandoned any independent thought processes on the issue.

How far the League leadership has fallen in a few short years is readily apparent in the manner in which it now conducts its affairs.

The League once vehemently opposed mass burials without proper identification, claiming such actions were an effort by the government to close the books on POWs and MIAs. In 1984, Griffiths and the League opposed the burying the remains of the unknown soldier from the Vietnam War which were buried May 28 of that year in Arlington National Cemetery.

Now, the League leadership readily endorses such burials. With the Central Identification Laboratory's reputed ability to identify an individual from the smallest scrap of bone, whatever went into the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier must have been small enough to fit through the eye of a needle. This year the League has endorsed several mass burials without individual identification one in late February when remains the government said belonged to six Americans and two Vietnamese who died in a 1968 helicopter crash in Laos were interred in Arlington. League officials participated in the ceremony, thereby sanctioning it.

The League once supported public dissemination of information that would demonstrate to the world that Americans were still being held in Southeast Asia, so long as that disclosure did not do so at the expense of specific individuals.

Now, the League leadership violently opposes disclosure of information that might indicate there are live Americans in Southeast Asia. It has fought against every effort to throw some light on the issue and is currently engaged in a massive campaign to stop H.R. 3603, the "Truth Bill." It is no small coincidence that the U.S. government also opposes H.R. 3603.

But the question remains: If the government believes all those people are dead, why is the information classified?

The League once encouraged diverse opinions among its members as a means of generating public interest in the issue.

Now, the League leadership actively discourages views and opinions different from its own and excommunicates those members who publicly voice those opinions. Wives, mothers, fathers, daughters and sons of missing men have been expelled from the League's membership role because they disagree with the vituperative and vindictive Griffiths. These relatives also have been denied access to classified information that Griffiths is allowed to see, even though she does not have the appropriate security clearances.

The League once sought help from any veterans organization because of the close bond veterans have with the missing men.

Now, the League leadership has abandoned veterans and sought to destroy through innuendo and legal action those organizations which do not agree with its views on the issue. The most specific attacks have come against Homecoming II and the National Steering Committee for American War Veterans.

The League once encouraged concerned citizens and the media to attend its annual convention.

Now, the League has restricted access to the convention and only those with special invitations who are deemed "acceptable" to the League leadership are allowed to attend. According to the League's May 21, 1990 newsletter, "Concerned citizen registration for the League's 21st Annual Meeting is by invitation from the League's national office or a current board member, state or regional coordinator. By restricting attendance to those members and concerned citizens whose opinions are viewed 'acceptable,' the League has severely limited its base of support and destroyed its credibility as an organization that represents all POW/MIA families.

The League once encouraged protest rallies against the Vietnamese and Lao to publicize the plight of the missing men.

Now, the League leadership condemns those who seek to pressure the Lao and Vietnamese into living up to their promises to account for the missing men. Now, says the League, "targeting specific embassies for protest demonstrations may be destructive."

Just as the U.S. government has become an apologist for socialist repression in China, Burma and the Baltic States, so, too, has the National League of Families leadership become an apologist for the governments of Laos and Vietnam and their refusal to account for the missing men.

The organization that established itself to represent American servicemen missing in action and prisoner of war in Southeast Asia now represent nothing but the U.S. government and its own self-serving interests.

No one has 'determined' that this is a hoax

I'm writing in response to the Oct. 13 news article by Susan Katz Keating, "Scams raise false hopes." This article was part of your Special Report on POW-MIAs.

In the article, Mrs. Keating writes that "letters in conjunction with a much publicized photograph were viewed by family members as proof that Albro Lundy Jr., John Robertson and Larry Stevens were alive. The letters and photograph have been determined to be fakes."

I am the daughter of Col. John Leighton Robertson, the man pictured on the left in the "much publicized photograph." This photograph has never been determined to be a fake. The Pentagon has spoken several times regarding other photographs that were found in a Soviet magazine; the photo of my father was never found in a magazine and was never said to be a fake. The identification of the photograph has not been discredited by the Pentagon; officials have never said that is not John Leighton Robertson, Albro Lundy Jr. or Larry J. Stevens in the picture.

After reading the article, I called the Pentagon and spoke with Lt. Tom Dowdy and Maj. Charlie Gittens of the Department of Defense Southeast Asia Office; I was assured that this photo had never been called a fake. As a matter of fact, I was told that on Oct. 12, at a meeting in New York, Carl Ford, acting assistant defense secretary for international security affairs, assured the audience that at no time had the Pentagon established this photo to be a fake or a hoax.

I don't know whether my father is still alive or not.

I do know that he is pictured in a photograph taken sometime after Sept. 16, 1966 (his shoot-down date).

I do know that I have received more than 10 live sighting reports of my father in Southeast Asia.

I do know that I have never been asked for money to find my father.

I do know that a returned POW was interrogated with my father's ID card and dog tags, in perfect condition.

I do know that my father didn't explode with his plane.

I do know that his remains have never been returned to the United States.

I do know that the Vietnamese returned nearly 1,000 French POWs from the French Indochina war 16 years after they claimed that they no longer held them.

There is compelling evidence that my father may still be alive and in captivity in Southeast Asia.

As a daughter, it is my responsibility to seek the truth regarding my father and bring him home if I can. But it is not only my responsibility, it is the responsibility of the American public and the U.S. administration to seek the truth regarding our POWs; it just happens to be my father.

It may be easier to just discount this photo as a fake or a hoax; but we deserve the truth, we must demand the truth. My father deserves at least that much.

U.S. Department of Justice

Federal Bureau of Investigation

Office of the Director

Washington, D.C. 20535
August 27, 1991

Honorable Stephen J. Solarz
Chairman, Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs Committee on Foreign Affairs
House of Representatives
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Chairman:

On July 31st and August 2nd, you conducted hearings concerning MIAs from the Vietnam War, in particular, the recently surfaced photograph that depicts three individuals that are purported to be MIAs. Carl W. Ford, Jr., Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary for International Security Affairs, Department of Defense (DOD), was the principal witness for the Administration at the hearings. At the request of DOD, the FBI had been requested to conduct analyses on the photograph and documents associated with that document. Additionally, the FBI conducted other analyses in relation to the MIAs.

As you are aware, DOD requested the presence of FBI representatives in the event certain topics surfaced in the course of the hearing. We provided experts on fingerprints and photography. We believed that their presence was necessary so that an accurate and complete record would be established if questions arose concerning those issues. These issues were mentioned in the course of the hearing, but more information is available that will make the record more complete. I am taking this opportunity to provide that information and comment on another issue that was raised at the hearings.

By letter from you to Mr. Ford dated July 26, 1991, you requested an analysis of "finger and palm prints that the Lundy and Robertson families have received and have associated with their missing relatives." (In conversations with staff, it has been determined that this was a joint request with Congressman Robert J. Lagomarsino.) Since the FBI is the repository for fingerprints of military personnel, DOD requested the prints for these individuals, in addition to the third person linked to the photograph, Lieutenant Commander Larry J. Stevens. A search of FBI fingerprint files did not disclose a record for these three individuals. There are many reasons why we may not currently have those fingerprints and an explanation for the record may be beneficial.

Honorable Stephen J. Solarz

The most logical reason for the absence of these prints may be the policy for purging files. In the case of military prints, if DOD reports an individual killed-in-action (KIA) or otherwise deceased, the print is placed in a special file for seven years and then destroyed unless there is additional information furnished by the military. In testimony, Mr. Ford advised that the DOD had listed Major Albino L. Lundy, Jr., and Lieutenant Commander Stevens as KIA based on eye witnesses' accounts of each incident. Relevant herein is a list of 2,483 names furnished to the FBI by DOD in 1984. They were identified by DOD as being "Americans Unaccounted for in Southeast Asia." A search of our fingerprint files identified prints for 912 individuals from that list. The prints for the three individuals linked to the photograph were not among those with prints in file. All existing prints from that list are being maintained and are not subject to being purged.

Another explanation is that we never received fingerprints of those in question. But, it would perhaps be more than coincidental that the prints for three individuals linked to a single photograph would not have been submitted. This is particularly true given the policy of fingerprinting all military personnel. Unfortunately, due to the volume of civil prints alone, approximately 35 million individuals and 90 million cards, records of receipts are not maintained. In most instances, the only means to determine if there is a print on file is to check the index. The absence of an individual from the index only indicates the FBI does not currently have a file. This would not necessarily mean that the FBI never had a file. It could have been previously purged from the system, but, in most instances, there would be no record of the purge.

Fingerprints are frequently not capable of classification/retention due to their illegibility based on the quality of the inked prints that are submitted. When this occurs, the prints are sent back to the contributor with a request to obtain a legible fingerprint card for resubmission. It is not unusual to not receive a follow-up set of prints. As above, there would be no record if this occurred. As a point of reference, in the first three quarters of Fiscal Year 1991, the FBI Identification Division rejected over 790,000 fingerprint cards for this reason. Although historical figures are not available for the Vietnam War era, rejection rates for prints submitted by the military in the early 1980s were about 15 percent. Anecdotal information from the Vietnam War era indicates rejection rates may have been as high as 25 to 30 percent.

In the course of the hearing there was testimony that the photograph had been submitted to a photographic expert to determine if the middle individual was identical to Major Lundy. According to the testimony of Major Lundy's son, 16 positive points of identification were made. It is the opinion of the FBI's photographic experts that due to the poor quality of the photograph such an identification process is not possible. Further, positive identifications from photographs are dependent on scars, marks, and other individually unique features. Additionally, the positive identification points that were recited by the witness are broad-based characteristics common in large segments of the population. This does not reject the possibility that an individual may 'recognize' a particular person in a photograph, but it does reject the capability to make a positive identification through analysis, given the quality of the photograph and the absence of identifiably unique features.

One other issue raised at the hearing bears clarification. A Member raised the issue that the FBI had in its possession photographs of a possible MIA approximately six months before they were made available to DOD. As stated by the Member, these photographs were furnished to the FBI by a Congressman. However, no specific information was furnished the FBI that these photographs concerned a possible MIA. Even if they had been suspected to be MIA related, the FBI had no reason to believe that the photographs had not already been referred to DOD. Within a matter of a few days, these photographs were returned to the Congressman. I would also note that many communications between Congress and the FBI are considered to be privileged unless otherwise indicated. This is a privilege we do not take lightly, given the sensitivity of constituent and other matters that are referred regularly to the FBI. The FBI does not believe we acted improperly in this instance.

MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD

SUBJECT: Conversation with Jack Bailey

1. At 1715 hours I called Jack Bailey to tell him to stop answering the telephone connected to his fax since I had a paper to send to him. Jack wanted to talk and told me the following:

- Said something important is going down in Thailand, that he has had several telephone calls from there, and CARR HAS NOT BEEN MOVED! therefore he needs to return to Thailand as soon as possible. He asked that I arrange for him to return on a military aircraft, or that I arrange for the Government to pay for his trip. Told him that I would forward his request to OSD/ISA.

- He says he has a videotape of Mr. X and that he wants to bring it to Thailand for our review.

- He stated that the Thai certificate in the new photos he has provided may actually be in an office in Burma, but he stated, "DO NOT RULE OUT THAILAND AS THE LOCATION". He also stated that based upon his review of the Carr photos, he thinks they were taken on a farm where the two Lao Princes lived, somewhere in Phongsaly Province.

2. Subsequent to Bailey's comments I called COL Jordan, OSD/ISA and relayed Bailey's request for transportation to Thailand.

MEMORANDUM FOR MR. JACK BAILEY

SUBJECT: Meeting in Bangkok

Jack: Bob Sheetz has directed that I initiate travel plans for him and me to travel to Bangkok to meet with you and obtain the information on the sources in Hong Khai, in Vientiane and the Pathet Lao General in Bangkok. The Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA will hold hearings on 29, 30 and 31 October; Bob wants to leave immediately after the hearings.

I have been asked to pass the following questions to you:

- Do you know exactly when you will be returning to Bangkok?
- If you plan to return earlier than the Senate hearings, would you please let us know so that we can alert COL John Cole? If you do arrive there prior to the hearings, Bob Sheetz and I will join you in Bangkok and assist COL Cole in the investigation.
- Based upon our meeting with you on 9 October, this office is now obligated by law to notify the next of kin of the five individuals that you identified as POWs. Do you have further information about any of the five people you named: Hrdlicka, Billipp, Allen, Hagen and Lilly? Would like to know full names, locations, and what proof is there that any are alive?
- We understand from your meeting with the Secretary of Defense that your primary source for the Carr information, Mr. X, can be made available to interviewers, and that he will take a polygraph examination. Is it true that he will be available and that he will take the polygraph?
- Is there anything we can do to help in this matter?

Would appreciate your response; I will be on leave next week, therefore please pass any response to Chuck Trowbridge. Telephone numbers are 703-614-4708 or 697-2498; the fax number is 703-697-5333. Thanks in advance.

BODY

SUBJ: TEMPORARY DELAY IN CARR PHOTO INVESTIGATION (U)

1. ON 8 OCTOBER 1991, RETIRED USAF OFFICER JACK BAILEY, THE SOURCE OF THE PHOTOS ALLEGED TO BE CAPTAIN DONALD G. CARR, MET WITH SECDEF; HE WAS ACCOMPANIED IN THE MEETING BY KEPS MCCLOSKEY AND VISCLOSKEY. AS A RESULT OF THAT MEETING, DIA HAS BEEN DIRECTED TO CEASE AND DESIST ON INTERNAL DATA ASPECTS ONLY OF THE ON-GOING CARR PHOTO INVESTIGATION FOR A PERIOD OF TWO WEEKS. THIS EFFECTIVELY PUTS CERTAIN ASPECTS OF YOUR INVESTIGATION ON HOLD UNTIL 22 OCTOBER 1991.
2. WE ARE AWARE THAT A LETTER FROM AMBASSADOR LAMBERTSON HAS BEEN FORWARDED TO THE THAI GOVERNMENT WITH A FORMAL REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE, THAT THE THAI POLICE HAVE BEEN CONTACTED FOR ASSISTANCE AND THAT PHOTO PACKETS HAVE BEEN DISSEMINATED TO THE THAI POLICE IN OUTLYING PROVINCES. WE ARE AWARE THAT DURING YOUR ON-GOING INVESTIGATION YOU HAVE VISITED NO LESS THAN FIVE ENCLOSURES OR CAGES THROUGHOUT THAILAND IN A SEARCH FOR THE ALLEGED DETENTION FACILITY SHOWN IN THE PHOTOS PROVIDED BY BAILEY. YOUR CONTINUING SEARCH ALONG THE BORDER IN THAILAND FOR SOURCE INFORMATION RELATIVE TO THE CARR PHOTOS IS ALSO AFFECTED. WE DESIRE THAT THESE ACTIVITIES IN THAILAND MUST NOW BE PUT IN ABeyANCE FOR THE SHORT TERM.
3. IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT ON 9 OCTOBER 1991, JACK BAILEY MET WITH DIA/POW-MIA AND OSD/ISA PERSONNEL TO DISCUSS THE NEW INFORMATION HE HAD OBTAINED IN THAILAND WHICH RESULTED IN HIS RETURNING TO COMUS TO MEET WITH SECDEF. IN A PAPER PREPARED FOR SECDEF BAILEY WROTE THAT "CAPTAIN DONALD G. CARR IS ALIVE". WHEN PRESSED FOR PROOF OF THIS STATEMENT, BAILEY STATED THAT HE HAD NO DIRECT PROOF, THAT THE INFORMATION WAS HEARSAY AT BEST. HE THEN STATED THAT CARR AND 20 - 30 OTHER AMERICAN PRISONERS HAD BEEN MOVED FROM THE PLAIN OF JARS AREA IN LAOS NORTHWEST INTO LUANG NAM THA PROVINCE TO A LOCATION 22

LIABILITIES FROM THE BURMA AND CHINA BORDERS. BAILEY STATED THAT HE HAS HAD NO DIRECT CONTACT WITH HIS PRIMARY SOURCE IN LAOS, AN INDIVIDUAL NAMED (PREVIOUSLY IDENTIFIED AS MR. X), AND THAT HE IS HAVING TO WORK THROUGH INTERMEDIARIES IN HONG KAI, THAILAND TO CONTACT WITH REGARD TO HIS UPCOMING RETURN TO BANGKOK.

BAILEY SAYS HE IS WILLING TO REVEAL THE NAMES AND TELEPHONE NUMBERS OF THE INDIVIDUALS IN HONG KAI, AND TO PROVIDE STUNT BEACH WITH THE TELEPHONE NUMBER OF HIS PRIMARY SOURCE IN VIENTIANE, ALTHOUGH HE STATES THAT THIS SOURCE IS LOCATED SOMEWHERE IN LAOS BETWEEN VIENTIANE AND THAKHEK. BAILEY ALSO PROMISED TO SECURE THAT HE WOULD MAKE BOTH THESE INTERMEDIARIES AND "MR. X" AVAILABLE FOR INTERVIEW AND POLYGRAPH BY STUNT BEACH WITHIN TWO WEEKS TIME.

4. AFTER THE REVELATIONS ABOUT CARR AND OTHER AMERICAN PRISONERS BEING MOVED TO LIANG NAM THA PROVINCE, BAILEY STATED THAT HE WAS ALSO AWARE OF ANOTHER GROUP OF FIVE AMERICAN POWS,

WHO HAVE BEEN MOVED FROM CENTRAL LAOS TO A POINT ON THE VIETNAM BORDER. "AS YOU KNOW, THIS INFORMATION WILL HAVE TO BE PROVIDED TO THE FIVE FAMILIES; IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT THIS IS NOT THE FIRST TIME HE HAS SURFACED NAME. TWO YEARS AGO BAILEY CLAIMED THAT 'WAS ALIVE AND ABOUT TO BE RESCUED, HOWEVER, WHEN THE FAMILY CALLED HIS NAME AND THREATENED TO TAKE HIM TO COURT, BAILEY BACKED OFF. HE STATES THAT HIS SOURCE FOR THIS INFORMATION IS A PATRIOT LAO (PL) GENERAL LIVING IN BANGKOK; BAILEY AGREED TO PUT STUNT BEACH PERSONNEL IN TOUCH WITH THE PL GENERAL AFTER HIS RETURN TO BANGKOK. BAILEY IS NOT CERTAIN WHEN HE WILL RETURN TO BANGKOK, HOWEVER, DID STATE THAT HE WOULD NOTIFY DIA/PM-HIA WHEN HE WAS GOING TO DO SO. BAILEY WAS INFORMED BY THE CHIEF, PM-HIA THAT HE AND CURRENT OPERATIONS BRANCH CHIEF ARE READY TO TRAVEL TO BANGKOK TO JOIN THE CHIEF, STUNT BEACH THAN TO RECRUIT HIS INFORMATION. IT WAS EMPHASIZED TO HIM THAT WE TAKE HIS STATEMENTS SERIOUSLY AND THAT WE FULLY EXPECT HIM TO PROVIDE THE INFORMATION PROMISED.

5. (U) LASTLY, TO AVOID ANY MISUNDERSTANDING WITH JACK BAILEY, ON 10 OCTOBER 1991, DIA/PM-HIA TRANSMITTED A WRITTEN MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD (HVR) OF THE MEETING WITH BAILEY TO BAILEY'S HOME IN CALIFORNIA. THAT FAX HVR CLEARLY STATES THAT BAILEY AGREED TO AND WILL PROVIDE THE NAMES AND TELEPHONE NUMBERS OF THE TWO INDIVIDUALS IN HONG KAI WHO ACT AS HIS INTERMEDIARY WITH THE PRIMARY SOURCE IN LAOS; THAT HE WILL PROVIDE THE TELEPHONE NUMBER IN VIENTIANE FOR HIS PRIMARY SOURCE FOR THE CARR INFORMATION; AND THAT HE WILL PUT STUNT BEACH PERSONNEL IN TOUCH WITH THE PATRIOT LAO GENERAL IN BANGKOK TO DISCUSS THE FIVE AMERICAN POWS. SINCE JULY 1991 BAILEY HAS PROMISED AT LEAST THREE TIMES TO IDENTIFY SOURCES AND ASSIST IN THE EFFORT TO FIND CARR; OF COURSE, THAT HAS NOT HAPPENED.

6. (U) NOTE THAT THE ADDRESSEE LISTING FOR THIS MESSAGE HAS BEEN NECESSARILY EXPANDED SINCE OTHER AGENCIES ARE ASSISTING IN THIS SEARCH EFFORT AND SHOULD BE AWARE OF THE STATUS OF THE INVESTIGATION. WE ARE AWARE OF AND APPRECIATE THE TOTAL DEDICATION STUNT BEACH PERSONNEL HAVE CONTRIBUTED TO RESOLVING THIS SENSITIVE ISSUE. THE DIA/PM-HIA FOC FOR THIS ACTION IS CURRENT OPERATIONS BRANCH, (703) 614-4706.

A. COMMENTS AND OBSERVATIONS:

A. DURING THIS LATEST DISCUSSION WITH JACK BAILEY, HE STATED THAT THE LOCATION OF THE CARR ENCLASURE, WHERE THE PHOTOS ALLEGED TO BE TAKEN WERE TAKEN, IS LOCATED IN PHONGSALY PROVINCE, LAOS. WHEN BAILEY WAS GIVEN A PROVINCIAL MAP OF LAOS AND ASKED TO INDICATE THE LOCATION OF CARR, HE CIRCLED THE CITY OF LOUANG PHABANG, LOUANG PHABANG PROVINCE. IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT THIS LATEST CLAIMED CURRENT LOCATION IS CONTRARY TO THAT PROVIDED DIA (IN WASHINGTON DC AT THE PERMANENT) ON 8 AND 9 AUGUST, 1981, AND DIFFERENT FROM THAT PROVIDED SECRET DURING THE WEEK OF 6 OCTOBER, 1981. BAILEY STATED THAT HIS INFORMATION FOR THE CURRENT LOCATION OF CARR IS ALMOST TWO YEARS OLD, THEREFORE HE CANNOT RULE OUT THE POSSIBILITY THAT CARR MAY HAVE BEEN MOVED SINCE THAT TIME. BAILEY CLAIMS THAT THE PHOTOS WERE TAKEN AT THE "TRUMP" IN AN AREA NEARBY BANGKOK ON WHICH PHONGSALY PROVINCE. ONCE LOUANG PHABANG PROVINCIAL BUREAU, ON 8 AND 9 AUGUST, 1981, BAILEY STATED TO DIA THAT THE LOCATION OF THE CARR ENCLASURE WAS BETWEEN BANGKOK AND BAN HAI, IN CENTRAL LAOS. HE STATED TO SECRET AND DIA REPRESENTATIVES ON 8 AND 9 OCTOBER 1981, THAT CARR WAS MOVED FROM THE BANGKOK AREA - BAN HAI AREA TO LOUANG PHABANG PROVINCE, SPECIFICALLY TO A LOCATION 22 KILOMETERS FROM THE BANGKOK AND CHANGKONG BUREAU. ON 21 OCTOBER, 1981, BAILEY INFORMED DIA/PHABANG BY TELEPHONE THAT HE HAD RECEIVED INFORMATION DURING THE DAY THAT CARR WAS NOT MOVED FROM AS HE REPORTED. HE STATED THAT CARR REMAINS IN THE BANGKOK AREA - BAN HAI AREA. DURING THE MEETING TODAY, WHEN BAILEY DISCUSSED THIS TODAY LOCATION FOR THE CARR ENCLASURE, IT WAS POINTED OUT TO HIM THAT HE HAD REPORTED CHANGKONG LAOS TO DIA/PHABANG AND CHANGKONG LAOS TO THE SECRETARY BAILEY DISCUSSED THESE DISCREPANCIES WITH THE SECRETARY THAT HE WAS REPORTING SECOND-HAND HEARD INFORMATION TO DIA AND SECRET. AT NO TIME DURING HIS MEETING WITH DIA AND SECRET DID BAILEY STATE THAT HIS INFORMATION WAS ANYTHING OTHER THAN FIRST-HAND.

A. ONE OF PHONGSALY LNO AND DIA IS THE SELF-DECLARED LEADER OF THE LAO PEOPLE'S DEMOCRATIC LIAISON FRONT, A LAO RESISTANCE FRONT. OVER THE YEARS HE HAS BEEN AT A POINT TO ESTABLISH CLOSELY WITH VARIOUS PHONGSALY AND CHANGKONG. ALL EXCEPT BAILEY'S OPERATION BECAUSE TERMINATED THEIR RELATIONSHIP WITH HIM AFTER LEARNING THE TRUTH, EXCEPT MAY BE. "SOURCES" LIKE HIM IN THE SUBJECTIVE OF CHANGKONG HAS BEEN REPORTED THAT IN LOUANG PHABANG PROV. OTHER "SOURCES" EMPLOYED WHICH WERE PROVIDED FROM THE BANGKOK OFFICE BECAUSE JEWELRY BAILEY AND ACTING AS A DRIVER - FOR CHANGKONG. CHANGKONGS - FOR THAT LAO/PHABANG SECOND EMPLOYMENT IN THE BANGKOK EAST.

THE INFORMATION ON IS CONTAINED IN RPTs A, B, AND C.

- HE STATED THAT CARR HAD BEEN MOVED TO LUANG NAM THA PROVINCE TO A LOCATION WITHIN 22 KILOMETERS OF THE BURMA BORDER.

- BAILEY PROVIDED SEVERAL NICKNAMES FOR MR. X, BUT NOT THE COMPLETE NAME. HE STATED THAT HE HAD NOT PERSONALLY TALKED TO THE INDIVIDUAL FOR A LONG TIME. BAILEY ALSO PROVIDED TWO ADDITIONAL PHOTOS OF HIS PRIMARY SOURCE, MR. X.

- BAILEY PROMISED TO PROVIDE STONY BEACH PERSONNEL WITH THE NAMES AND TELEPHONE NUMBERS FOR HIS INTERMEDIARIES IN THAILAND, THROUGH WHOM HE KEEPS IN CONTACT WITH MR. X. HE AGREED TO PROVIDE THIS INFORMATION AFTER HIS RETURN TO THAILAND.

- BAILEY STATED THAT HE ALSO KNEW OF ANOTHER GROUP OF 5 AMERICAN POWS IN LAOS, AND THAT HE RECEIVED THIS INFORMATION FROM A PATHET LAO GENERAL LIVING IN BANGKOK. HE PROMISED TO MAKE THE GENERAL AVAILABLE TO STONY BEACH PERSONNEL FOR INTERVIEW, AFTER HIS RETURN.

- 11 OCTOBER: DIA TRANSMITTED TWO MEMORANDUMS FOR RECORD OF THE MEETINGS WITH BAILEY BY FAX TO BAILEY IN CALIFORNIA. BAILEY WAS REMINDED OF ALL OF HIS PROMISES TO SECDEF AND DIA, AND WAS ASKED IF HE HAD FURTHER INFORMATION ABOUT CARR OR THE 5 AMERICAN POWS. HE DID NOT.

- DURING A TELEPHONE CONVERSATION THE SAME EVENING, BAILEY TOLD DIA THAT HE HAD JUST LEARNED THAT CARR HAD NOT BEEN MOVED.

- BAILEY ALSO VOLUNTEERED THAT THE CARR PHOTOS MAY HAVE BEEN TAKEN IN NORTHERN LAOS OR IN BURMA, AND HE CAUTIONED TO NOT RULE OUT THAILAND AS THE LOCATION OF THE CARR PHOTOS.

- BAILEY STATED THAT IT WAS HIS OPINION THAT THE PHOTOS HAD BEEN TAKEN ON A ROYAL FARM IN PHONGSALY PROVINCE.

- HE ASKED THAT DOD ARRANGE FOR HIS RETURN TO THAILAND.

- 11 OCTOBER: BASED UPON BAILEY'S MEETING WITH SECDEF AND HIS SPECIFIC REQUEST THAT THE CARR INVESTIGATION BE PUT ON HOLD FOR 10 DAYS, DIA NOTIFIED STONY BEACH TO CEASE AND DESIST IN ITS INVESTIGATION FOR TWO WEEKS.

- 22 OCTOBER: DIA AND OSD PERSONNEL TRAVELLED TO CALIFORNIA TO MEET WITH BAILEY AND ACCOMPANY HIM TO THAILAND TO CONTINUE THE INVESTIGATION INTO THE CARR PHOTOS.

- BAILEY STATED THAT MR. X WAS TRAVELLING TO BANGKOK FROM LAOS AND THAT HE WOULD BE AVAILABLE FOR INTERVIEW ON 25 OCTOBER.

- BAILEY WAS UNABLE TO TRAVEL ON THE 23RD BECAUSE OF A DEATH IN HIS FAMILY, HOWEVER, DID ARRIVE IN BANGKOK ON 25 OCTOBER, ACCOMPANIED BY NORM TURNER.

- 26 OCTOBER: THE DIA/OSD/STONY BEACH TEAM MET WITH BAILEY AND TURNER IN BANGKOK.

- BAILEY COMPLAINED THAT HE WAS BEING FOLLOWED, PROBABLY BY CIA, AND THAT HIS TELEPHONE AND FAX HAD BEEN TAPPED. IT WAS EMPHASIZED TO HIM THAT DOO HAD NOTHING TO DO WITH SUCH ACTIVITIES.

- BAILEY STATED THAT MR. X WAS NOT AVAILABLE, AND THAT HE DID NOT KNOW WHEN MR. X WOULD BE AVAILABLE, THAT HE HAD A TEAM UP COUNTRY LOOKING FOR THE INDIVIDUAL. HE ADMITTED THAT PHUMANO NOSAVAN WAS PART OF THE TEAM LOOKING FOR MR. X. IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT PHUMANO IS A LONG-TIME REPORTER OF FABRICATED PH-RELATED INFORMATION.

- BAILEY WAS REMINDED OF ALL THE PROMISES HE HAD MADE TO THE SECDEF AND DIA, BUT WAS UNABLE TO PROVIDE ANY OF THE INFORMATION REQUESTED.

- BAILEY STATED THAT THE CARR PHOTOS WERE TAKEN ON A FARM IN LUANG NAM THA PROVINCE, NORTHWESTERN LAOS. IT WAS POINTED OUT TO HIM THAT HE TOLD DIA THE PHOTOS WERE TAKEN AT KHAM KHAI - BAN BAN AND THAT HE TOLD SECDEF THE LOCATION WAS NEAR THE BURMA BORDER. HE STATED THAT HE HAD PROVIDED DIA AND SECDEF SECONDHAND HEARSAY INFORMATION.

- 26 OCTOBER: BAILEY VISITED THE AMERICAN EMBASSY AND SHOWED A VIDEO TAPE REPORTED TO CONTAIN BAILEY'S INTERVIEW OF MR. X.

- IT WAS DETERMINED THAT THE VIDEO TAPE WAS OVER THREE YEARS OLD, MADE SOMETIME IN 1988.

- THE TAPE HAD NOTHING TO DO WITH THE CARR CASE. BAILEY STATED THAT THE CARR PHOTO APPEARED ABOUT A YEAR AFTER THE VIDEO TAPE WAS MADE.

- MR. X. WAS SHOWN IN SILHOUETTE ONLY, ALONG WITH OTHER LAO AND THAI PERSONNEL.

- DURING THE CONVERSATION THE FOREIGN NATIONALS MENTIONED TWO GROUPS OF POWS. 16P IN ONE LOCATION AND 33 IN ANOTHER. BAILEY OPTED TO CONCENTRATE ON THE GROUP OF 33 POWS, STATING THAT 16P POWS WERE A FANTASTIC NUMBER.

- THIS VIDEO TAPE WAS FOLLOWED BY ANOTHER WHICH DEPICTED COMMUNIST PROPAGANDA, AND HAD NOTHING TO DO WITH THE PH ISSUE.

- 29 OCTOBER: THE JOINT TEAM MET WITH BAILEY AND TURNER AGAIN. ONLY TO LEARN THAT BAILEY HAD NO NEW INFORMATION ON MR. X. BAILEY DID OFFER TO MAKE ANOTHER INTERMEDIARY, MARIO, AVAILABLE.

- BAILEY CLAIMED THAT MARIO HAD BEEN INVOLVED IN THE CARR CASE ONE AND ONE-HALF YEARS EARLIER WHEN HE WAS APPROACHED BY AN EMPLOYEE OF THE AMERICAN EMBASSY, BANGKOK. REPORTEDLY, THE EMPLOYEE TOLD MARIO THAT BAILEY WAS KEEPING MONEY FROM HIM, WHICH RESULTED IN MARIO DROPPING OUT OF THE OPERATION. BAILEY BLAMED THIS INCIDENT FOR HIS FAILURE TO RESCUE CARR.

- WHEN REMINDED ONCE AGAIN OF THE PROMISES THAT HE HAD MADE TO SECDEF AND DIA, BAILEY STATED THAT HE DID NOT REMEMBER STATING THAT HE WOULD PROVIDE THA NAMES AND TELEPHONE NUMBERS FOR HIS INTERMEDIARIES IN NONG KHAI.

- 29 OCTOBER: TEAM MEMBERS MET WITH MARIO TO DISCUSS MR. X AND THE CARR PHOTOS; MARIO WAS UNABLE TO DESCRIBE MR. X, ALTHOUGH HE HAD KNOWN X FOR SEVERAL YEARS, AND KNEW NOTHING ABOUT THE CARR PHOTOS.

- MARIO WOULD NOT PROVIDE THE NAME OF THE AMERICAN EMBASSY EMPLOYEE WHO REPORTEDLY APPROACHED HIM ABOUT BAILEY.

- 30/31 OCTOBER: THE DIA AND OSD TEAM MEMBERS RETURNED TO THE U.S.

INFORMATION PAPER on POW/MIA Source Khambang Sibounheuang

Khambang Sibounheuang is a former Royal Lao Army serviceman, now a naturalized US citizen residing in Memphis, Tennessee. He states he was a Captain in the Royal Lao Army. Our best information is that he was an enlisted man in the Royal Lao Army. He is now bailiff for Judge Hamilton Gayden, a self-described POW/MIA activist. Khambang has been active in the POW/MIA issue for a number of years. This paper will outline Khambang's activities as known and documented by the Department of Defense.

Khambang is a former member of the Neutralist faction of the Lao resistance. He lead the organization in the United States for several years and at one point may have been its elected leader. Khambang was removed from his position with the Neutralist faction after the leader of the Neutralists, former Lao General Kong Le learned that Khambang had fabricated POW-related information and had attempted to use the POW issue for personal gain.

In the past, Khambang was associated with Bo Gritz and he was for a period Gritz's primary source of information for POW's. Khambang later became associated with retired-Major Mark Smith, another POW/MIA activist. His current relationship with Smith is unknown.

DoD's first involvement with Khambang occurred in 1985 when he approached DIA and offered to work the POW issue in exchange for $4,000, which was to be used to support the Neutralist faction of the Lao resistance. Khambang's offer was rejected by DIA.

In November 1987, Life Magazine published an article about POW/MIAs. A prominent portion of that article was devoted to a photograph purported to depict an Air Force Lieutenant Colonel, Charles S. Rowley. The photograph was provided by Khambang to Captain Eugene "Red" McDaniel, USN (Ret.). Captain McDaniel provided the photo to DIA in August of 1987, and investigation was underway when the photo was published by Life Magazine. Photo analysis established that the individual pictured was not Lieutenant Colonel Rowley. The Rowley family confirmed the photo analysis.

In 1990, Khambang passed bogus dog-tag information to his superiors in the Arlington (Virginia) Police Department where he worked as a clerk. The information was determined to be fabricated and DIA traced the information back through the Arlington Police Department to Khambang. The Department was informed that Khambang was an established POW/MIA source of questionable reliability.

In the fall of 1990, Khambang passed a roll of film and other information related to the purported Borah photograph to Judge Hamilton Gayden, then his employer in Tennessee. Khambang received the information from a blood relative now residing in Thailand. Judge Gayden provided the information to the family, who then contacted Senator Bob Smith for assistance. The photos had not been made available to DoD until July 1991, when Senator Smith appeared on the Today Show with Daniel Borah, Sr. and the photographs. After receipt of the information, a joint Lao-U.S. team interviewed, photographed and fingerprinted the individual identified as Borah and photographed in Laos. The photo depicted not LT Daniel V. Borah, but rather a 77 year old Lao highland tribesman, Mr. Ahrao. Khambang told Bill Gadoury, a U.S. POW/MIA investigator in Bangkok, that the individuals who passed him the roll of film did so for the purpose of obtaining a reward.

Sometime during the summer of 1991, Khambang obtained another photograph, this purported to depict Navy Lieutenant Commander Larry Stevens, USN. (Stevens was also said to be depicted in the photograph of three individuals, positively identified by their families as Colonel John L. Robertson, LCDR Stevens and Major Albrow Lundy. The Stevens photo was said to have been taken in Vietnam and the individual identified as Stevens is pictured with his arm around an Asian woman. At the request of members of Congress, the staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was provided a DoD aircraft to transport Khambang to Southeast Asia to locate his sources of the "Stevens" photo. Khambang produced his source and the individual was polygraphed. He failed the polygraph and indicated deception in nearly all of his responses. DoD is continuing to investigate the "Stevens" photograph.

To date, Khambang has provided information on a number of occasions to POW/MIA activists and others interested in the POW/MIA issue. The descriptions above are illustrative, not exhaustive. Every dog-tag report, every report of remains, every photograph and every other report about POW/MIAs, with the exception of the as yet unsolved "Stevens" photo, provided by Khambang has proven to be false.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF DEFENSE

WASHINGTON, D. C. 20301-2400

DoD Response to Robertson, Stevens and Lundy Testimony

The following allegations were raised by the family members regarding DoD investigative efforts on behalf of the purported Robertson, Stevens and Lundy photographs. DoD Responses follow.

(Ms. Fleckenstein): As of September 16th, I received the information from the Defense Department that the picture had been analyzed by Dr. Charney, who I just told you that they didn't accept that, and that they would analyze it their selves. And I waited up until now. I've called and called trying to get the annalysis to me, whic I did not get, and didn't know about it until I arrived here yesterday morning and it was handed to me by Major Giddens.

The Department of Defense sent the photograph purported to depict Commander Stevens to Sandia National Laboratory on 13 September 1991. When Sandia completed its analysis the report was reviewed at DIA and then forwarded it to the Assistant Secretary of Defense/International Security Affairs (ASD/ISA) in order to respond to direct family requests made to Carl Ford's Military Assistant. The report was obtained on late 5 November and was provided to Mrs. Fleckenstein personally by Major Gittins rather than forwarding it through the Navy Casualty Assistance Office. This accomodation was made in order to minimize the delay to Lieutenant Commander Steven's family in light of their participation in the Committee Hearings.

(Ms. Shelby Quast): And I guess I'm asking for some help. We have said this so many times, yet I continue to hear that it [the three man photo] has been in a magazine. It's simply people don't want to hear that. And I would like to, for the record, set it straight. It has never been found to be a fake or a hoax, or ever found to be in a magazine.

The Department of Defense has never stated that the three man photo is a hoax or fake. The facts surrounding the photograph of the three individuals identified by family members as Colonel Robertson, Lieutenant Commander Stevens, and Major Lundy are as follows:

1) The photograph first surfaced during August 1990 in Thailand along with a report which was not correlated to Robertson, Stevens and Lundy. The photograph was received along with a second photograph that was later located in an Eastern-bloc magazine in Phnom Penh and which depicted a Soviet special forces military officer. The report that accompanied the first passing of the photo was that the two photos depicted four Americans from the same prison in Vietnam and that the three were friends and the fourth was separate from the other three, so two photos were taken.

2) There are no first hand live sighting reports of the three individuals that correlate to Robertson, Stevens and Lundy. In every case, the reports are hearsay, second or third hand reports. The first report, does not have any name association to Robertson, Stevens or Lundy.

3) Flyers widely circulated in Southeast Asia by Red McDaniel's American Defense Institute provide basic biographical data on Colonel Robertson and Lieutenant Commander Stevens. Information contained within the flyer forms the basis for information associated with later iterations of the photograph. Associated reporting that goes beyond the basic biographical data is quite obviously wrong--almost humorously so.

4) The photograph has been altered. The placard that the men appear to be holding was added to the photograph after it was taken and printed, and a photo made of the alteration. The placard reflects basic data that appears on several other photographs, also reported by the sources of those photos to depict American POWs. The writing on the placard is by the same hand as the writing on a number of other alterations to photos purported to depict American POWs and later located in Soviet magazines.

5) The men in the photo appear to be holding rifles in the photograph. U.S. Government photo analysts have identified the butt of a rifle on the left side of the photo and the rifles are apparent under the placard.

6) A tape recording received with the photograph by one source and identified as the voice of Colonel Robertson by the source was rejected as a fraud by the Robertson family.

7) Captain Buchanan, Colonel Robertson's WSO stated that he did not know whether Colonel Robertson got out of the aircraft. He did not see Colonel Robertson subsequent to ejecting from the aircraft.

8) Congressman Peterson testified before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs, that he was interrogated by the Vietnamese about Colonel Robertson with Colonel Robertson's dogtag and identification card. He also stated that the Vietnamese captors told him that Colonel Robertson had died and it was his (Peterson's) opinion that Robertson had died either in the crash or shortly thereafter.

(Ms. Quast) (Page 332): The third part I just wanted to touch upon quickly to address the access to information. I have been promised at a very high policy level access to my father's file, but denied access by those people that have testified before this committee when I went to see the file. I'm asking what is the policy and who runs the show for POW policy.

Ms. Quast has met on several occasions with Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense Carl W. Ford, Jr. On one occasion in Mr. Ford's office on August 22 at 1:30PM, Ms. Quast requested to see the entire DIA file on her father. Mr. Ford did not promise Ms. Quast that she could see the file. He stated that he would look into the matter because the file may contain sensitive classified information.

When Ms. Quast returned to see Mr. Ford, she reiterated her request to see the entire file. She was again told that the file contained classified information and she would not be provided access to the file. Mr. Ford assured Ms. Quast that his staff would compare the DIA file with the Casualty Assistance Officer's file maintained by the Air Force to ensure that she was in possession of all of the unclassified information on her father. Lieutenant Thomas Doughty, of Mr. Ford's staff, reviewed the DIA file and the Air Force file with Mr. George Atkinson, USAF Missing Persons Office, on 5 November 1991 and determined that Ms. Quast had been provided all but one document from the DIA file. This information was communicated personally by Lieutenant Doughty and Mr. George Atkinson to Ms. Quast during one of the recesses to the hearings.

(Senator Smith): So I am going to put all officials in control of these [fingerprints] on notice that I intend to know why, in the case of all of the live sighting reports, and all of the individuals involved in those reports, why we do not have fingerprints in the service jackets of those individuals. And if you do not know why, you better start looking because I want to know why.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is the sole USG agency with the responsibility for maintaining fingerprints of American citizens. The Department of Defense does not maintain fingerprint records on servicemen. None of the services are required by law or regulation to maintain fingerprints in the service records of their individual servicemen. The national fingerprint database within the FBI maintains all service fingerprint records as well as the fingerprints of civilians who may be fingerprinted and their prints retained by the Government.

Congressman Solaz, the Chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs, requested an explanation of why the fingerprints of Colonel Robertson, Lieutenant Commander Stevens and Major Lundy all are missing from the FBI database. At the Department of Defense request, FBI Director William Sessions provided the possible explanation for this state of affairs. Director Sessions' response is provided in pertinent part:

Since the FBI is the repository for fingerprints for military personnel, DoD requested the prints for these individuals, in addition to the third person linked to the photograph, Lieutenant Commander Larry J. Stevens. A search of FBI fingerprint files did not disclose a record for these three individuals. There are many reasons why we may not currently have those fingerprints and an explanation for the record may be beneficial.

The most logical reason for the absence of these prints may be the policy for purging files. In the case of military prints, if DoD reports an individual killed-in-action (KIA) or otherwise deceased, the print is placed in a special file for seven years and then destroyed unless there is additional information furnished by the military. In testimony, Mr. Ford advised that the DoD had listed Major Albro L. Lundy, Jr., and Lieutenant Commander Stevens as KIA based on eye witnesses' accounts of each incident. Relevant herein is a list of 2,483 names furnished to the FBI by DoD in 1984. They were identified by DoD as being "Americans Unaccounted for in Southeast Asia." A search of our fingerprint files identified prints for 912 individuals from that list. The prints for the three individuals linked to the photograph were not among those with prints in file. All existing prints from that list are being maintained and are not subject to being purged.

Another explanation is that we never received fingerprint of those in question. But, it would perhaps be more than coincidental that the prints for three individuals linked to a single photograph would not have been submitted. This is particularly true given the policy of fingerprinting all military personnel. Unfortunately, due to the volume of civil prints alone, approximately 35 million individuals and 90 million cards, records of receipt are not maintained. In most instances, the only means to determine if there is a print on file is to check the index. The absence of an individual from the index only indicates the FBI does not currently have a file. This would not necessarily mean that the FBI never had a file. It could have been previously purged from the system, but, in most instances, there would be no record of the purge.

Fingerprints are frequently not capable of classification/retention due to their illegibility based on the quality of the inked prints that are submitted. When this occurs, the prints are sent back to the contributor with a request to obtain a legible fingerprint card for resubmission. It is not unusual to not receive a follow-up set of prints. As above, there would be no record if this occurred. As a point of reference, in the first three quarters of Fiscal Year 1991, the FBI Identification Division rejected over 790,000 fingerprints cards for this reason. Although historical figures are not available for the Vietnam War era, rejection rates for prints submitted by the military in the early 1980s were about 15 percent. Anecdotal information from the Vietnam War era indicates rejection rates may have been as high as 25 to 30 percent.

It should be noted that the Department of Defense requested in 1984, well before this photo surfaced, a list of POW/MIAs for whom the FBI had fingerprints on file. At that time, Robertson, Stevens and Lundy's fingerprints were not within the FBI database. We can provide no further explanation for this phenomenon beyond that provided by the Director of the FBI, however, there is no conspiracy, cover-up or otherwise mysterious circumstances surrounding the loss of these files as has been suggested by some individuals at these hearings.

The fingerprints record of Captain Donald G. Carr another individual with a high profile POW/MIA photograph case, is on file with the FBI and available for comparison if that individual is located

(Mr. Albro Lundy) (Page 345): I have asked one photoanalysis that we've done to be passed around to the Senators. It's a simple photo overlay. Its done on acetate, and if you take a look at it—you just lift the acetate up—one of the photos is my father as a younger man and then the other photo is the copy of the photo drawn out. You see that it matches perfectly. All the features are the same, the head shape is the same, everything in regard to the photo is exact. That's a very simple analysis, something that could have been done very easily, I think by the Government immediately, but has never been done, or at least has never been provided to us.

The simple analysis described by Mr. Lundy was provided to Government photo analysis experts at the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The FBI experts reaction was that the "analysis" had no basis in science, was not acceptable methodology in any professional association that they were aware of, and would not be accepted for admission as evidence in any court in the United States on the issue of identification by photograph. Despite its simplicity, the method described in the testimony is patently unreliable.

Mr. Lundy (Page 347): So I wrote a FOIA. . . . So if you can not read it, but the part that is highlighted says specifically, this is all the information in the file, there were no witnesses to this incident.

Mr. Lundy's FOIA request in 1985 was directed to the USAF. Their records had no indication that there were any witnesses to the incident in which Major Lundy was lost. The sole witness statement was located in a file in JCRC during records search conducted pursuant to his 1991 FOIA request to ICRC. This report was provided to Mr. Lundy immediately by the staff of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for International Security Affairs when its existence became known.

(Mr. Lundy) (in response to the statement "Apparently some other families claim (the individual in the three person photo) is theirs" (Page 354): And none of the families that the DIA has talked about have come forward, have called and said, let me help you here, this is my son or this is my brother. Would it not be a relief to me? . . . I asked Chuck Gittins, I said please Chuck, contact those people. Please write them and tell them to contact me. I need to know, I need to know. I don't know if Chuck has done it or not, but they have not contacted me.

In a September meeting in PDASD Ford's office with PDASD Ford, Shelby Quast and Major Gittins, Mr. Ford explained to Mr. Lundy the fact that two other families had come forward to claim the pictured individual as their unaccounted for loved one. He also explained that the individuals claimed by the other families also bore a striking resemblance to the individual in the three-person photo. Mr. Ford reiterated that these families did not want to be thrust in the limelight and requested that the DoD not share their identities. Mr. Ford told Mr. Lundy that he intended to honor that request.

While Major Gittins was escorting Mr. Lundy out of the Pentagon after the meeting with Mr. Ford, Mr. Lundy stated in passing that he would like to speak to the two other families. Major Gittins reiterated Mr. Ford's explanation and stated that DoD would respect the request of the families. Mr. Lundy never requested Major Gittins make contact with the families. Mr. Lundy couched it as he would "really like to talk to the other families." Major Gittins surmises that the actual question was not asked so that it would not appear that Mr. Lundy was trying to get around the decision of PDASD Ford, but rather that Major Gittins would do so on his own initiative.

ADDENDUM (P. 1708-131)
FRIDAY, NOV. 15, 1991

29. Senator McCain asked Mr. Ford to provide, in writing, any DoD analyses done by the FBI, Sandia National Laboratory, Los Alamos National Laboratory or any other government scientific organization, of the quality of the forensic anthropological work of Dr. Michael Charney of Colorado State University. Mr. Sheetz also offered to provide for the record a copy of the report Dr. Charney did which positively identified a picture as MIA LT Daniel Borah, which subsequently turned out to be a 77-year old hill tribesman.

Mr. Tracy E. Usry, Chief Investigator

Washington, D C 20510

Dear Mr. Usry:

On 26 July you brought me a photograph, 2x2, of a Navy pilot and 24 negatives and their prints of a man in a wooded area. The Navy pilot photograph I was told was that of Daniel V Borah, Jr, shot down over Laos during the Vietnam War. Some of the photographs from the wooded area, said to have been taken in Laos, contain two men, one a young man of obvious mongoloid racial affinity. The other, an older man, appears to be a caucasoid.

The question, is the older man Lieutenant Daniel V Borah, Jr, USNR?

All twenty-four photos were examined by Dr Fitzhorn, Faculty of Mechanical Engineering, Colorado State University and myself to select one for comparison with the 2x2 photo of Lieutenant Borah. Problems arose in selecting a photo from the twenty-four to match, closely, with the angling of Borah. We petitioned Mr Usry to obtain other photos of Borah from his family. Several were sent by Borah's sister and father. Dr Fitzhorn chose one of Borah at age 22, as an usher at a wedding.

The photo from the twenty-four and that of Borah at 22 years were then digitized and superimposed. The technique is described in the attached report of Dr Fitzhorn.

An examination of the superimposition raises questions about the lack of closeness at the chin and left jawline. This is due to the slight differences between the two photos with that of Borah?, 1990, tilted forward slightly and turned to the left. That of Borah, 1968, is full face and not tilted. These differences are not enough to make for a mismatch. All other features but for the restreated hairline, coincide perfectly.

faithfully,

Re: Digital Photographic Superimposition of September 12/20, 1991

To Whom it may Concern

Two photographs were selected by Dr. Michael Charney, Director of the Forensic Sciences Laboratory at Colorado State University and myself to perform a photographic superimposition. These were selected from two sets of photographs, one set from the late 1960's of a white male, and one set purportedly taken in South East Asia fairly recently. We selected one photograph from each set that provided the best match in facial angulation (head pitch, roll, and angle).

One photograph was a 12.5 x 18 cm color print of a male figure squatting in an open area outdoors. This photograph was previously annotated on the reverse with the following sequence, 38 12 N N-2-2 2 85. I placed a second set of marks, PAF-10, on the lower side of the reverse of the photograph for my own identification. The second photograph, appeared to be taken at a formal function (wedding?) and is a 12.5 x 18 cm black/white print. I annotated the reverse with the marks PAF-11 for identification.

I digitized both photographs using a Microtek 300dpi color/gray scanner interfaced to an Apple Macintosh IIx computer. The Macintosh computer runs Adobe Photoshop Software for image acquisition and processing.

Photograph 1 - (P1)

After image acquisition by color scanning at the maximum resolution, 300 pixels per inch, I then performed the following techniques on the first image.

1. The image was cropped to the facial region including hair and beard.
2. The image was uniformly scaled (aspect ratio remaining the same) 145% to a resolution of 602 x 808 pixels. This resizing was done to aid the manual superimposition described below. It should be noted that a positive resizing after scanning at maximum resolution loses pixel information. This photograph's resizing resulted in each original, unscaled pixel supplying information for approximately 1.5 resulting pixels. This resulted in an increase in noise, and a decrease in high frequency information.
3. A histogram equalization was performed to equalize color distribution.
4. After experimentation, it was determined that the green signal contained the highest quality image (most high frequency information). The red and blue signals contained a severe amount of noise. This was not unexpected due to the original color distribution in the print I received.

The resulting image was the processed 8-bits of green data from the original photograph, including background.

Photograph 2 - (P2)

After gray-scale image acquisition at 300 pixels per inch, I then performed the following techniques on the second image

1. The image was cropped to the facial region
2. The image was uniformly scaled (aspect ratio remaining the same) 171% to a resolution of 600 x 779 pixels. The above discussion applies here as well.
3. A histogram equalization was performed to equalize gray-scale distribution.
4. All background information was removed by airbrushing/painting it out.
5. An edge-finding filter (possibly a Sobel filter. Adobe photoshop documentation is not available at this time) was applied.
6. A threshold mapping was applied to the resulting image to convert it from gray-scale to black and white.

The resulting image was a set of white edges on a black background.

The resulting images were loaded onto a Silicon Graphics Inc. 4D/210 GTXB Power Series graphics computer. This machine has a resolution of 1280x1024 pixels with two 24-bit frame buffers and a set of overlay and underlay bit planes 2 bits deep each. I then wrote a software suite in the C programming language to display both images in two modes - side by side, and superimposed. In superimposition mode, a set of rigid-body transformations were entered to graphically overlay P2 onto P1. Since P2 is displayed in black/white, P1 was displayed in one of the 24 bit frame buffers, and P2 was superimposed over P1 in the overlay planes. The transformations, entered interactively through the keypad, specifically consisted of any combination of (i) rotations theta degrees about the 'z' axis (out of the plane of the screen), (ii) uniform scalings s in 'x' and 'y', and (iii) 2D translations tx, ty. The transformation variables changed during each superimposition try are denoted by italics.

It should be noted that Dr. M. Charney is responsible for all decisions of similarity or fit between these two images; questions concerning the results of the fit itself should be directed to him. As well, requests for copies of photographs taken of the superimposition process and results should be directed at him. Please direct any technical questions concerning the image acquisition and processing performed, or the graphics hardware/software combination used, to myself.

Sincerely:

Patrick A. Fitzhorn, PhD

Mr Tracy E. Usry, Chief Investigator

Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Usry:

I received two photographs from you in the first week of July, one of a Donald Gene Carr taken in 1961 at his wedding. He was 23 years of age. The other photo was a colour shot of a man in a stockade taken February 1990. The question was the identity of this second individual? Was it Carr?

Both photos were half-tones and not the best of study material. I asked for glossy photos if such existed. They were and I received them on 13 July 1991. Results of this study show that the person in the later photo, February 1990, is that of Donald Gene Carr, some thirty years later than his wedding photo.

(1) The two photos were put on 35 mm slides and projected by zoom lens to the same magnification. The ears were studied for morphological characteristics. They were similar as to earlobe, helix, tragus, concha. The two were then superimposed to see, initially, if the facial features coincided. They did.

(2) The two photos were then turned over to Dr. Patrick Fitzhorn, Department of Mechanical Engineering, Colorado State University for digital photographic superimposition by use of computer. The facial features, hairline, browridges, eyes, nose, mouth, lips, ears, chin, jawline, muscles of the cheek of the Feb 1990 were drawn by the computer in black and that of Donald Gene Carr, 1961, in red. The computer drew these lines with an accuracy of one-hundredth of an inch. The two were then superimposed and the resulting fit evidence of the sameness of the person in the two photos under study. The man in the February 1990 photo is Donald Gene Carr.

The two photos are not precisely the same as to the angle of the subject's pose. This accounts for certain discrepancies:

- (1) the 1961 photo shows Carr's head tilted. This was rotated 14 degrees to upright.
- (2) the length and width of the ears are not the same due to this difference of pose.
- (3) the top of the head in the 1990 photo could not be precisely drawn as the background blends with the hair thus obscuring the top of the head.
- (4) the eyes do not coincide as Carr in the 1961 photo is looking to the left.

Human biological diversity, individuality, is based on the science of inheritance. Darwin said that children will resemble but not exactly duplicate their parents. Over the years, the features of one's face will change, the soft tissue, with the onset of jowls, pouches under the eyes, crowfeet, thickening of the nose and the like. The underlying bony structure will, however, remain the same, but for some resorbing of the bone of the jaws as one loses teeth. The soft tissue of the face, eyes, nose, lips, ears, etc., take their position from the underlying bone and will stay the same. The distance relationship of these features is individual and will not be repeated exactly by another.

Re: Digital Photographic Superimposition of July, 22/23/24, 1991

To Whom it may Concern:

On Monday, July 22, 1991, I received two photographs from Dr. Michael Charney, Director of the Forensic Sciences Laboratory at Colorado State University. One photograph was a gray-scale print of a young, white male in a tuxedo (denoted P1 throughout this discussion), the second was a color print of an older white male (P2) in casual clothes. I digitized both photographs using a Microtek 300dpi color/gray scanner interfaced to an Apple Macintosh IIfx computer. The Macintosh computer runs Adobe Photoshop Software for image acquisition and processing. After image acquisition by gray-scale scanning at the maximum resolution, 300 pixels per inch, I then performed the following techniques on each of the images:

1. Each image was cropped using a rectangular mask isolating the head as much as possible.
2. Each image was uniformly resized (aspect ratio remaining the same) to an approximate resolution of 600x756 pixels. This resizing was done to aid the manual superimposition described below. Photograph P1 was resized to 114% of its scanned size, while P2 was resized approximately 500% to reach the desired size. It should be noted that a positive resizing after scanning at maximum resolution loses pixel information. P1's resizing was minor, resulting in each pixel supplying gray-scale information for 1.14 pixels. P2 was significantly resized however, by a factor of approximately five. This resulted in an increase in noise, and a decrease in high frequency information.
3. Each image's brightness and contrast were adjusted to compensate for scanning brightness.
4. A histogram equalization was performed to equalize gray-scale distribution. This proved especially valuable with P2.
5. A high-pass filter was applied with a pixel mask size of 10x10 to bring out high-frequency information, including edge information. Again, P2 was effectively enhanced by this method.
6. Contrast was increased to emphasize facial regions of interest.
7. A thresholding algorithm was applied to change the image from gray-scale to black and white.
8. The resulting images were cleaned by removing all pixel information outside the head area. Care was taken not to remove potentially important edges in the head region, or to add spurious edges during the cleaning process.

It should be noted that size-finding algorithms in Adobe Photoshop are extremely limited, thus none were used. Photograph P1 resulted in the best image with the least amount of noise. The head of the subject in the photograph was large in an absolute sense, and was set in relief against a white background. As well, the photograph was of good quality. P2 contained substantially more noise due to the small, absolute size of the subject's head in the photograph (approximately 1/2 inch by 1/2 inch) and the poor photographic quality.

On Wednesday, July 24, 1991, the resulting images were loaded onto a Silicon Graphics Inc. 4D/20 graphics computer. This machine has a resolution of 1280x1024 with eight bit planes (256 colors). I then wrote a software suite in the C programming language to display both images in two modes - side by side, and superimposed. In superimposition mode, a set of rigid-body transformations were entered to graphically overlay P1 onto P2. I entered each of the transformations manually, recompiled the software, and then viewed the resulting superimposition. These transformations specifically consisted of (i) a rotation θ degrees about the 'z' axis (out of the plane of the screen), (ii) a uniform scaling s in 'x' and 'y', followed by (iii) a 2D translation (x, y) . The transformation variables changed during each superimposition try are denoted by italics.

The best fit, as pronounced by Dr. M. Charney, resulted when P1 was rotated 14° clockwise forming a close fit with the eyes in each image. This rotation was required since the head in P2 is not entirely vertical. The final scaling factor was 1 (coincidence and initial resizing was responsible for this result). The final 2D translation mapped the head outline of P1 onto P2.

It should be noted that Dr. M. Charney is responsible for all decisions of similarity or fit between these two images; questions concerning the results of the fit itself should be directed to him. As well, requests for copies of photographs taken of the superimposition process and results should be directed at him. Please direct any technical questions concerning the image acquisition and processing performed, or the graphics hardware/software combination used, to myself.

Review of Dr. Charney's Photo Identification Procedure in the Carr POW/MIA Case

1.0 Synopsis

In a report to Mr. Tracy E. Usry of the U. S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee dated July 25, 1991, Dr. Michael Charney, a forensic anthropologist at Colorado State University, stated that the 1961 wedding picture of Donald Carr and a photograph purportedly taken in Laos in 1990 show the same individual [1]. The report discusses two procedures used by Dr. Charney to reach his conclusion. The first procedure is a morphological comparison of ears. The second is a superimposing of "edge" images digitally extracted from the wedding and purported photographs. I have reviewed Dr. Charney's report. I have concentrated my attention on the "edge" superimpositions since my expertise is in digital image processing. It is my professional opinion that the superimposing of "edge" images, as described in Dr. Charney's report, is inconclusive for identifying the purported image as being that of Donald Carr. This report discusses the technical reasoning that supports my conclusion.

2.0 Review of Prof. Charney's Photo Identification Procedure

Dr. Charney makes the following comments in his report about his comparison of Carr's wedding photograph and the purported photograph of Carr.

"(1) The two photos were put on 35 mm slides and projected by zoom lens to the same magnification. The ears were studied for morphological characteristics. They were similar as to the earlobe, helix, tragus, concha. The two were then superimposed to see, initially, if the facial features coincided. They did.

"(2) The two photos were then turned over to Dr. Patrick Fitzhorn, Department of Mechanical Engineering, Colorado State University for digital photographic superimposition by use of a computer. The facial features, hairline, browridges, eyes, nose, mouth, lips, ears, chin, jawline, muscles of the cheek, of the Feb. 1990 (photo) were drawn by the computer in black and that of Donald Gene Carr, 1961, in red. The computer drew these lines with an accuracy of one-hundredth of an inch. The two were then superimposed and the resulting fit evidence of the sameness of the person in the two photos under study. The man in the February 1990 photo is Donald Gene Carr."

Also attached to Dr. Charney's report was a detailed description by Dr. Fitzhorn of his digital analysis steps.

If I understand the report correctly, step (1) says that expert analysis of the ear structures showed enough similarity between the subjects in the wedding and purported photographs to warrant further investigation, and step (2) is the follow-on study that definitively identifies the subject in the unknown image as Donald Carr. I believe that an expert at identifying human subjects can identify subtle structural features in photographs that a layman would miss. I believe that these features can be crucial factors in identifying people. However, I do not believe that a definitive identification can be made solely from the "edge" images provided by Dr. Fitzhorn.

The "edge" extraction technique mentioned by Dr. Charney in step (2), and described in detail by Dr. Fitzhorn, is commonly used as a preprocessing step in digital image processing applications where information reduction is required. A typical example is in machine vision where a robot, usually under highly controlled lighting conditions, must reduce the amount of picture information it sees to bare essentials in order for the computer to rapidly find objects in three-dimensional space. Dr. Fitzhorn employed a technique called "high-pass filtering" to extract only those regions in the photographs with high contrast changes over small distances. After extracting only the high spatial frequencies, he then created binary images. These binary images are made by simply coloring all the high frequency information black (or red) and the remaining information white. The important issue here is that the edge images represent a subset of the available information in the original image. Carr's wedding photograph, as well as the purported POW/MIA image of Carr, are very high quality photographs. There are no spatial frequencies that corrupt the image and inhibit human analysis. Why should a photo interpreter believe a better interpretation of a high quality photograph can be made by throwing away much of the information in the image? This is my first criticism.

My second criticism has to do with the integrity of "edge" images. The definition of an "edge" in a digital image is somewhat subjective. Different "edges" can be extracted from a common scene due to changes in lighting or the addition of noise. What a person perceives as an edge on a face, regardless of lighting or noise, may be different from what a high-pass filter implemented on a computer designates as an "edge". Furthermore, the width and length of "edges" can be changed by redefining the spatial frequencies that are passed by the digital "edge" filter or by the presence of noise. Artifacts, perceived by the computer algorithm to also be "edges", can also be introduced by redefining the frequencies to be passed by the "edge" filter. In short, the "edges" of a human face are subjective, and their position is somewhat sensitive to the digital filter being used.

To emphasize my point, I have supplied two examples. Figure 1 is an unedited superimposition of an "edge" image created from Donald Carr's wedding photograph (blue) and an "edge" image created from the purported 1990 image of Carr (red). Note the alignment of the eyes, nose, eyebrows, etc. These images were created by a high-pass filtering technique similar to that used by Dr. Fitzhorn. Figure 2 is an unedited superimposition of an "edge" image created from an image of a Sandia National Laboratories employee (yellow) and an "edge" image created from a noisy photograph of a man known not to be the Sandia employee (blue). Note the overlap of the eyes, nose, eyebrows, etc. The same high-pass filter was used in both cases. Figure 2 is a counter-example to Figure 1. We know the "edge" images in Figure 2 show different individuals, yet the "edges" overlap just as in Figure 1. Figure 2 also emphasizes my point that the imaging conditions affect the "edges". The thickness of the blue edges is a result of film grain noise in the original photograph.

I agree that an overlapping "edge" image can yield additional clues to assist in an identification, but it is inappropriate to make an identification solely on the basis of overlapping "edge" images. The presence of overlapping "edges" in a superimposition of "edge" images is not definitive.

3.0 Conclusions

I believe that a definitive identification cannot be made solely on the basis of overlapping "edge" images for two reasons. First, "edge" images of two different individuals can overlap remarkably well as described above and shown in Figure 2. Second, if an identification cannot be made using all the information in the photographs, then throwing away good information by high-pass filtering cannot improve the reliability of the identification.

I have spent a considerable amount of time analyzing the Carr-photographs. My experience is that Carr's wedding and service record photographs, as well as the purported 1990 Carr POW/MIA photograph, are of a high enough quality to warrant direct examination. Information reduction, which is the result of creating high-pass filtered "edge" images, is inconclusive. In fact, we have shown that facial scars and markings correlate well between the wedding, service record, and purported photographs by simply digitizing the original negatives at a high spatial resolution [2]. The analysis of the original negatives described in reference [2] provides more information than the "edge" images analyzed in reference [1], and, in addition, shows a striking similarity between subtle features in the wedding, service record, and purported images. Nevertheless, I cannot state conclusively that the images show the same individual. Readers must draw their own conclusions.

Dear Bob:

We have completed our work on the POW/MIA photographs that you provided to us. Most of the photographs were obvious composites (e.g., Photos 1, 4, and 7). We were unsure as to what action should be taken with respect to other photographs (e.g., Photo 2). Most of our effort was expended against Photos 13, 17, and 18. We have enclosed enhanced facial views of the Subject 13 and CAPT Carr. These were prepared by IT-1. In our view, a strong possibility exists that the Subject 13 (the man in Photo 13) is an aged CAPT Carr (Photos 17 and 18). However, this assessment is not conclusive.

Thanks for allowing us to participate.

Sincerely,

PHOTOS 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, AND 7

Images 4, 5, 6, and 7 are xerographic reproductions (i.e., "xerox" copies) for which direct photographic enhancements are of little to no utility. However, in Photo 1, itself a many generation copy, the sign appearing to be held by three men and the collar placard on Photo 3 are add-ons to extant photographs. That is, they are of a more recent generation than the backgrounds. In addition, the inscriptions in all these photographs appear to have been written by the same person. The numbers, lettering and spacing, e.g., the identical word "pho to" on Photos 1 and 7, suggests that English was not the native language of the writer. The elaborately rolled number "2" suggests the writer was South Asian (India to Vietnam).

PHOTO 2

No enhancement work was done on Photo 2. However, we note that the man in the photograph is married (based on wedding ring). The wearing of a watch and wedding ring on his right hand suggest that the image is inadvertently reversed. The man has a tattoo (appears to be a cross, dagger or anchor) on his right biceps (left if the image is reversed). The foot to the right (in the doorway) appears to be that of a young woman (based on grooming and morphology) possibly wearing a yellow skirt (showing as a small yellow triangle above foot). The photograph was taken with a flash with some separation from the lens (no redness in the pupils of the man and boy.) Based on the uniform fatigues and haircut, the photograph is possibly of the Vietnam War era.

PHOTO 8

PHOTOS 9, 10, 11, AND 12

Images 10 and 11 are poor quality xerographic reproductions. Photographs 9 and 12 are multigeneration copies. Within the uncertainties caused by the poor resolution (especially in the case of Images 10 and 11), the man shown in Photos 9 and 12 and on the right in Image 11 is the same person. The two men on Image 11 are not the same individual.

PHOTOS 13 AND 13A

Most of our efforts at enhancement were directed toward Photo 13 and, for comparison to CAPT Carr, Photos 17 and 18. The wedding picture of CAPT Carr, Photo 18, had been heavily airbrushed to the point that many facial features, that could have provided a more extensive basis of comparison, are completely masked. For example, the pattern of acne scars of the lower right and left cheeks clearly visible in Photo 17 have been airbrushed away in Photo 18.

Moreover, the forehead lines and lines under the eyes visible in Photo 17 are not obvious in Photo 18. Possibly, these were airbrushed away or, more likely, developed afterwards as a consequence of aging or environment exposure. These limitations aside, Photo 18 provides the most direct comparison to the subject in Photo 13 (hereafter called Subject 13) with regard to the head position relative to the camera.

The faces in Photos 13 and 18 were digitalized and rescaled to provide equal iris-to-iris spacing between (reference Photos 13B and 18A). Of course, this rescaling itself introduces a bias that favors the discovery of similarities. Optical densities were also balanced to the extent possible. Afterwards, a split image was generated using the using the left side of Carr's face in Photo 18A and the right side of the Subject 13's face (Photo 13B), reference Split 13/18. Photographic comparison of the enhanced photographs provided the following results.

Observed differences:

(1) Spacing and shape of the eyebrows are markedly different. CAPT Carr's eyebrows are arched and terminate near the upper part of the nose intersects the bridge. The Subject 13's eyebrows appear to fall within a rather straight line or slightly turned up on at the ends. However, these differences could be a product of aging, plucking of the eyebrows, or slight differences in camera angles.

(2) No hair is visible on the chest of the Subject 13, whereas hair is visible on CAPT Carr's chest in Photo 17. A small mole or nevus is also noted only on the chest of the Subject 13. These differences could be caused by aging and photographic resolution.

(3) Differences in the eye folds cause the geometry of the eye openings and canthi of CAPT Carr (in Photo 17) to differ from the eye openings and canthi of Subject 13. However, with age the eye folds become larger and sag.

(4) The acne or facial scars seen on CAPT Carr's face in Photo 18 are not noticeable on the face of the Subject 13. This absence could be attributable to resolution in the case of Photo 13. Moreover, acne scars tend to be reduced in size with aging.

(5) Subject 13's eye appear brown in color although vagaries in color processing, ambient lighting, and color film sensitivity can create erroneous colors. The color of CAPT Carr's eyes could not be determined directly. However, the detail present in CAPT Carr's irises in Photos 17 and 18 suggests gray, blue, or hazel eyes.

Observed similarities:

(1) Where feature morphology is determined by bone or cartilage, the features of CAPT Carr (wedding photograph) and of Subject 13 are identical within measurement error and remembering that equal iris-to-iris spacing was forced. For example, the jaw, nose, nose bridge, eye orbits, zygomatic ridge, neck, laryngeal area, and cranium are essentially identical.

(2) While resolution is a problem in the case of Photo 13, the general shape, size and positioning of the ears of CAPT Carr and of Subject 13 appear essentially identical. The ear structures of the CAPT Carr and Subject 13 are similar. The upper helixes and upper antihelixes appear to form a similar "lambda" shape. However, poor resolution in the Case of Photo 13 makes a more definitive comparison of ears impossible.

(3) The smile formations (i.e., positionings and structures of the upper and lower lips, smile lines, cheeks) are striking similar.

(4) While Subject 13's hair is thinner (as would be expected), the hair lines and texture (waviness) are similar.

General Observations:

(1) The cage (or bars) shown in Photos 13 and 13A resemble those that one might see at a zoo, for example, as opposed to a prison. The single strand of barbed wire, shown in Photo 13A and appearing to be of a rather low height, is again suggestive of animal (versus human) confinement.

(2) While some gray is suggested in the temple area of Subject 13, the hair cut is exceeding dark for someone in their fifties. Of course, natural retention of hair color in older men is possible.

(3) Subject 13 shows no obvious signs of physical or psychological abuse. For example, he seems to have been well fed, general muscle tone seems good, his face is tanned (no evidence of his having worn a hat), the smile does not seem forced, and no contusions or bruises are evident. (Slight scarring might be present on the forehead.)

(5) Even though the area is tropical in appearance, Subject 13 shows no signs of perspiration, even in the area of the arm pits.

Conclusions Regarding Photos 13, 13A, 17 and 18:

No obvious differences, not explainable by normal aging, were noted to negate the possibility that Subject 13 is a older CAPT Carr. On the contrary, while not conclusive, the similarities between Subject 13 and CAPT Carr are suggestive that Subject 13 could be CAPT Carr. The possibility that two unrelated individuals could evince such striking similarities is improbable but not impossible.

PHOTOS 14A THROUGH 14K

The old man in this series of photographs is not the individual in Photos 24 and 25, identified as BORAN. Distinct differences exist in the structure of the ears, forehead slopes, and noses of the old man and BORAN.

POINT PAPER

SMITH AMENDMENT ON DISCLOSURE OF POW/MIA INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

Amendment: Requires the Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency to provide any Member of Congress, upon request, full and complete access to all internal reviews relating to DIA's efforts to fully account for POW/MIA or unaccounted for U.S. military personnel. The amendment specifically cites three reports.

Background: Of the three reports cited in the amendment, only the report issued by General Tighe in 1986 is in written form; the other two were apparently oral briefings to the Director of DIA. An unclassified version of the Tighe report was released in 1986 and is available.

Discussion: The DIA maintains that all three reports, to the extent they exist, represent confidential advice to a former Director on the effectiveness of the internal workings of that agency. Because of the classification and sensitivity of these reports, the confidential sources and diplomatic relationships involved in Southeast Asia and because of the intended use of this information, DIA does not wish to release any internal report of this type. The administration would resist this amendment because of executive privilege. DIA is willing to discuss the effectiveness of its POW/MIA efforts but does not wish to invade the confidential relationship that existed between a former director and his hand-picked advisors. Further, DIA will make the entire Tighe report available to the Chairman and Ranking member of the committee, if they so desire.

Recommendation: Oppose the amendment because of the sensitivity of the sources and methods involved and the nature of these types of reports.

In draft form. Department of Defense. The subject of the amendment is the disclosure of intelligence related information on information concerning military personnel listed as prisoner, missing or unaccounted for in military actions. The Defense Intelligence Agency believes that these proposals are unnecessary and counterproductive, and should be opposed.

One proposal would require agencies whose funds are authorized under the Intelligence Authorization Act to provide the Member of Congress complete access to all classified information which possibly correlates to military personnel reported to be missing in action, unaccounted for, or a prisoner of war from World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam conflict, or any other action involving the presence of U.S. military forces in a foreign country.

This proposal apparently would mandate full and unrestricted access to intelligence. This would be a drastic step that disregards the special protection necessarily given to intelligence sources and methods, especially sensitive human sources and technical systems. It disregards the principle of allowing the agency with which information originates to control its dissemination. The requirement to provide information fails to include any corresponding provision for the secure storage and handling of classified information. What is more, this proposal would have the effect of requiring dissemination of unvetted and uncorroborated information, a result that would add more to confusion and clarification of issues.

There is no need to proceed in such an ill-advised manner. Procedures in effect insure that appropriate committee members and committee staff are informed of POW/MIA-related events, briefed on POW/MIA cases of interest and afforded the opportunity to conduct a review of DIA's analytical conclusions. The implementation of the proposed amendment would totally circumvent the executive system of the U.S. Congress - specifically the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence and the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Both have direct oversight responsibilities on the POW/MIA issue. There is no instance where raw intelligence reports are given to an interested member of Congress; however, this amendment would be precursory to like requests on other subjects.

It is important to note that the Department of Defense has extended an invitation to members of the Congress, including the sponsor of the amendments at issue, to visit the DIA facility in the Pentagon to review POW/MIA cases of interest. DIA analysts would be present to answer any questions posed by the members. (To date, one Senator has responded to this invitation and has spent DIA internal working draft.

WORKING PAPER

SECTION 504 OF H.R. 5422

The Committee on Armed Services of the House amended the FY1991 Intelligence Authorization Bill referred to it by including Section 504 in the bill. This section, directing the Secretary of Defense to provide to any Member of Congress full and complete access to the so-called "Tighe Report," relating to efforts by the Special Office for POW/MIA of the Defense Intelligence Agency to fully account for U.S. military personnel listed as prisoner, missing, or unaccounted for in military actions, was adopted after modification, pursuant to an amendment proposed by Representative Bob Smith.

This amendment is unnecessary inasmuch as the "Tighe Report" was made available to the four committees of Congress with oversight responsibilities for the POW/MIA issue in 1986 when the report was promulgated. Although the report is classified, it remains available for "in camera" review by Members of those committees exercising oversight of POW/MIA matters. Representative Smith has been so advised and has been invited to review the report.

Given the above described policy concerning congressional access to the "Tighe Report" Section 504 is totally unnecessary.

WORKING PAPER

ACCESS TO POW/MIA LIVE SIGHTING CASES

Representative Bob Smith has previously proposed amendments which direct agencies whose funds are authorized under the Intelligence Authorization Act to provide any Member of Congress complete access to all classified information which possibly correlates to military personnel reported to be missing in action, unaccounted for, or a prisoner of war from World War II, the Korean War, the Vietnam conflict, or any other action involving the presence of U.S. military forces in a foreign country.

It is important to note that the Department of Defense has extended an invitation to Members of Congress, who specifically requested access to POW/MIA files, including the sponsor of the amendments at issue, to visit the DIA facility in the Pentagon to review POW/MIA cases of interest. DIA analysts would be present to answer any questions posed by the members. (To date, one Senator has responded to this invitation and has spent four days reviewing files at the DIA facility.) The Members were advised they could be assisted by professional staff of the Armed Services, Intelligence or Foreign Relations/Affairs Committees who have the appropriate clearances and have staff responsibility for POW/MIA issues.

WORKING PAPER

The Gaines and Brooks Reports

Representative Smith has previously drafted amendments to require the Secretary of Defense to provide access to any Member of Congress to the so-called "Gaines and Brooks Reports." These "reports" are internal reviews of the DIA Special Office for POW-MIA and constitute confidential advice to a former DIA Director from advisors specifically picked by him on the effectiveness of the program for which he felt a heightened responsibility.

Portions of these reports are classified because of their potential impact on our diplomatic relations with the governments of Vietnam and Laos.

These reports are in the nature of confidential Inspector General reports to the Director on the internal workings of his Agency. DIA is willing to discuss the effectiveness of its POW/MIA efforts, but hopefully without invading the confidential relationship that existed between a former Director and his hand-picked advisors.

WORKING PAPER

MEMORANDUM

6 November 1991

From: Joan Dempsey GDIP Staff
To: Mr. Knecht, C31

Subject: Gaines Report

1. You requested that I recount how I came to possess the Gaines report and when I located the document. Following is the sequence of events as best I can remember.

2. In my previous position as Special Assistant to the Executive Director, DIA, I worked POW/MIA issues with the DIA Special Office for POW/MIA. A draft amendment to H.R. 5009, the Intelligence Authorization Bill, was introduced in September 1990, requiring DIA to provide three reports to Congress. Those reports were the Tighe, Brooks, and Gaines reports. The Tighe report was available. The Gaines and Brooks reports could not be located in any office in DIA involved, currently or previously, in the POW/MIA issue.

3. I initiated a search for the Gaines and Brooks reports in September. I requested a thorough review of all former DIA directors' files and record files within the Executive Support Office in DIA, as well as historical files in the DIA library. I also queried personnel associated with this issue in DIA during the time the reports were compiled. The only reference to the Gaines report that was located in late September or early October was a paper copy of briefing viewgraphs provided to a former DIA director on the Gaines study effort. Also at that time, a page-and-a-half list of conclusions and recommendations written by RADM Brooks was located. It was internal staff memoranda, not a report. Ultimately, the amendment was changed to require that the Tighe report be made available to members of Congress and that the Secretary of Defense could withhold sources and methods.

4. I continued to try to locate the Gaines report. Late in 1990, a former director's executive secretary suggested I talk to a military officer, no longer assigned to DIA, who was aware of the Gaines report at the time the study was ongoing. That officer led me to a current DIA employee in the Office of Security and Counterintelligence who had a copy of the Gaines report. I do not remember the exact date but both the employee who had the report and I think it was in January 1991.

ADDENDUM (2.2.7) ~~TO~~ ~~THE~~ ~~STAFF~~

FACT SHEET

Colonel Millard A. "Mike" Peck was assigned to the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) Special Office for Prisoners of War and Missing in Action (POW/MIA) in June 1990 and left the office on March 28, 1991. Colonel Peck is a highly decorated veteran of the Vietnam War.

On February 12, 1991 Colonel Peck handed a letter to his superiors that contained allegations of a coverup in the POW-MIA activities of the U.S. Government and interference in the intelligence process of the Defense Intelligence Agency by the Director of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia. Colonel Peck's letter closed with a request for DIA assistance "in being retired immediately from active military service." On March 28, 1991 - his last day of duty in the DIA POW/MIA office - he attached a letter of farewell to his staff on the door of his office along with a copy of his February 12 letter with the personal references to the Director, National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia blacked out.

Colonel Peck told the team looking into his charges that he disagrees with the current approach the U.S. Government is using to resolve the POW/MIA issue. Colonel Peck wants the U.S. Government to take unspecified action to "win the second Vietnam War." He believes the U.S. Government is rushing to normalize relations with Vietnam without first making Vietnam confess to holding prisoners of war after the end of the war. He does not say prisoners are still held in Vietnam, but wants to settle up for what he believes the government of Vietnam did in the past. He sees current U.S. actions for obtaining the fullest possible accounting of our missing service personnel, such as the establishment of a temporary POW/MIA Office in Hanoi, as playing into the hands of the Vietnamese government.

There have been seven previous investigations between 1982 and 1987 into allegations of a government conspiracy or coverup in handling of the POW/MIA issue. All concluded that there was no merit in the allegations. The Department's current inquiry has not found any facts that support Colonel Peck's allegations of impropriety in the POW/MIA activities of the National League of Families, Defense Intelligence Agency or the U.S. Government.

There also has been consistent monitoring of Department of Defense and Defense Intelligence Agency POW/MIA activities since 1975 by the House Select Committee on POW/MIAs, by the POW Task Force of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, by the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee, and by the Senate and House Select Committees on Intelligence.

Colonel Peck did identify some shortcomings in the management of the POW/MIA Office which require attention. For example, the members of the POW/MIA Interagency Group should use a formal process to task the DIA POW/MIA Office, and we need a procedure to establish the priority of competing requests for POW/MIA intelligence support. The management problems identified are not serious and the new chief of the Special Office for Prisoners of War and Missing in Action already has corrective management actions underway.

Colonel Peck is currently assigned to the Military District of Washington.

The U.S. Government remains totally committed to obtaining the fullest possible accounting of our missing personnel. We have made every conceivable effort to resolve the issue of whether the governments of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia retained prisoners of war in captivity after the return of POWs in early 1973. Indeed, our focus is to resolve individual cases through joint investigations, surveys and excavations, while at the same time encouraging expanded unilateral efforts by the governments concerned.

Since September 1988, we have conducted 13 joint "iterations" in Vietnam consisting of one or more of these joint activities.

Since September 1987, Vietnam has repatriated 288 sets of remains. 123 of these remains have been identified.

In Laos, we have conducted 13 joint excavations. In April 1991, we began the first of several joint investigations of cases involving Americans who were known to have been captured alive.

The Department of Defense has about 150 people who work on this issue on a full-time basis, or nearly full-time basis. They include 31 personnel at the Defense Intelligence Agency's POW/MIA Office, 38 personnel at the Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Hawaii, 49 people at the U.S. Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii, and others.

We still list 2,273 Americans as missing or otherwise unaccounted for as a result of the war in Southeast Asia.

The POW/MIA issue has the personal interest, concern and commitment of President Bush, Secretary Cheney and the entire Department of Defense. While the question of live prisoners remains at the forefront of our negotiation and intelligence efforts, all of us in the Department of Defense are committed to the return of any and all Americans who may still be held in captivity; the fullest possible accounting for the missing; and the repatriation of all recoverable remains. We will continue to apply all necessary resources to find the answers to these questions, as a matter of the highest national priority.

1.0 Overview

Among the photographs supplied by the D. I. A. were two black and white prints of a Mr. Carr and one recent color print of a man in a polo shirt standing before a grillwork who has been identified by the Carr family as the same Mr. Carr. Gary Sydow of the POW/MIA group expressed an interest in Sandia trying to determine whether the recent color photo was indeed of Mr. Carr. One of the black and white prints is a facial close-up of Carr in his Special Forces uniform (Figure 1). Although slightly overexposed, this print shows clear detail of what appear to be acne scars on Carr's cheeks and chin. The presence of these scars prompted my associates and I to look for similar scars in the second black and white print, a picture from Carr's wedding (Figure 2). We then attempted to find the same scars in the color print suspected of being a recent photograph of Carr (Figure 3).

I cannot state conclusively whether the man in the color print is or is not the same individual in the Special Forces and wedding pictures, but there are some interesting correlations. This report documents those correlations.

2.0 Analysis Procedure

Facial regions in all three prints were digitized for exploitation by a digital computer and a digital image processor. This is performed by placing the prints on a light box, passing light through the prints, and imaging the transmitted and attenuated light with a black and white vidicon camera. The gray shade data captured by the camera is quantized to 256 levels and stored in the memory of a digital computer for exploitation. The spatial resolution of the digitized images is 512 x 512 picture elements (pixels). Computer algorithms and specialized hardware functions in the digital image processor are used to enhance contrast, zoom, smooth noise, and a number of other functions. No aspect of color has been exploited in my analysis since only one of the photographs is in color.

Prints are not the preferred media for digital image analysis. Transparencies are. When light is transmitted through a print, paper texture, writing and printing on the back side of the photograph, as well as the image itself, are captured. These artifacts reduce our ability to make judgements about the photographic image itself. Sometimes they may interiere. This is especially true of writing such as handwritten numbers identifying the images and printing such as "THIS PAPER MANUFACTURED BY KODAK". We are always concerned that printing, writing, and paper texture can lead us to a false interpretation of the digitized data. Since prints were the only media provided, I proceeded with the analysis, paying close attention to any image features that could possibly be attributed to paper texture, printing, or writing. Although I cannot be certain that some of the facial features I am identifying in this report are not false, my best judgement is that they are real.

Because the Special Forces photograph provides the highest quality map of facial scars, I used it as my primary reference image. The wedding photograph is the secondary reference image. My first exercise was to identify common scars in both of these images. I digitized portions of the two black and white images around the mouth, chin, cheeks, and nose in order to gain higher spatial resolution digital images of the scars. Next, I stretched the contrast to make the scars more easily visible on a large color video monitor. Figures 4 and 5 are photographic copies of the images displayed on the monitor. Unfortunately, the copies do not show the features as well as the monitor. Finally, I identified three scar areas which I believe appear well in both images. These are outlined in boxes numbered 1, 2, and 5. Box 1 includes a single deep chin scar. Box 2 encloses two interesting features, a shallow depression closer to the mouth and a smaller rise to the right of the first feature. The shallow depression shows better in the wedding photograph. Box 5 encloses an intersecting double ring scar, one ring at the lower left of the box and one ring at the upper right.

I identified some distinguishing scars in the Special Forces image (Figure 4) and the wedding image (Figure 5) that may or may not be visible in both images. The scar in box 7 of the Special Forces image may appear in the wedding image, but this is purely a judgement call. What I have labeled as box 4 in the wedding picture may not exactly correspond to box 4 in the Special Forces image. Exact placement is difficult because of the slightly differing camera angles in the two images. The "blotch" on the chin in the wedding image (box 8) cannot be seen in the Special Forces image due to overexposure in the chin region of the Special Forces image. An interesting curve in the upper tip of the Special Forces image (box 6) is not visible in the wedding picture because of Carr's wedding image smile.

My next step was to find features in the suspected recent image of Carr. I will refer to this as the Suspect image. As in the case of the black and white images, I digitized a facial region of the Suspect image at high magnification. Because the face in the Suspect image occupies a smaller portion of the scene, the magnified and digitized face appears more noisy (grainy) than the Special Forces and wedding images. This "noisiness" makes all facial features less distinct, especially scars. I did discover several interesting correlations between images. First, box 5 encloses a double-ringed scars on the chin of the Suspect image that appears in roughly the same location as in the Special Forces and wedding images. Second, box 2 in the Suspect image shows two circular features in roughly the same location as in the Special Forces and wedding images. Third, note the similar upper lip curve in the Special Forces and Suspect images (box 6). Also note the correlation between the scars in box 7 of the Special Forces and Suspect images. Finally, box 8 in the Special Forces image shows a chin "blotch" that is in the vicinity of the marking in box 8 of the wedding image.

Given the length of time between the Suspect and Special Forces/wedding images, I was concerned about the propriety of comparing acne scars for identification purposes. I consulted with Dr. Gerald B. (Chip) Demarest, head of the trauma unit of the University of New Mexico Hospital and a Desert Storm surgeon, about these kinds of scars. His comment was that deep acne scars such as those in the Special Forces image will remain for life. They may become shallower and possibly wider with age and weight gain and they may change color, but they will remain as characteristic facial features throughout life.

One final comment should be made about a scar that appears above Carr's right eye (viewer's left) in the Special Forces image (Figure 1). There appears to be a slight mismatch of Carr's right eyebrow, possibly due to a cut of some kind. This feature also appears in the wedding image (Figure 2). Now look at the color Suspect image (Figure 3). Does the suspect's right eyebrow show a similar anomaly? Dr. Demarest thinks so. I could not demonstrate anything conclusive digitally.

3.0 Conclusions

Although a positive identification of the individual in the Suspect image cannot be made based on my analysis, several interesting correlations between the Suspect image and known images of Carr can be made. Should more images surface that claim to be recent images of Carr, I would recommend that the facial features identified in this report be investigated. If at all possible, obtain original negatives. Prints are a poor medium for digital image analysis.

I must emphasize that any correlations are judgement calls on my part. Digital image processing has allowed me to visualize small details that were not obvious from the full-sized prints I received, but no quantitative analysis can realistically be performed to match these facial features to any degree of confidence. The matching was done by me and I am susceptible to human biases and errors in judgement.

Analysis of the Purported Stevens P. O. W./M. I. A. Image

Sandia National Laboratories
Albuquerque, NM 87185

1.0 Synopsis

This report accompanies a video tape showing the comparison of the service record photograph of Lieut. Larry J. Stevens (USN) and a recent photograph purported to show Stevens in southeast Asia. The quality of the purported Stevens image is not high enough to identify subtle facial features; therefore, a comparison of basic facial structure has been pursued. Four experiments were performed.

The first experiment was a computer comparison between the Service Record image and the Purported image. The Service Record image was uniformly scaled and positioned so that it geometrically registered with the Purported image. A digital blending or dissolving sequence was then created and recorded on video tape. This sequence makes it easier for a human observer to identify facial features such as cheeks, eyebrows, and nose structure that may be similar or different between the images. There is a good match between many features in this video sequence, but there is a noticeable difference in head width.

The second experiment was a computer comparison between the Service Record image and an image of a known individual (an employee of Sandia National Laboratories) with similar facial structure to the man in the Purported image. This experiment attempted to answer the question, "If the correlation between the Service Record and Purported images appears to be good, can the same correlation be made between the Service Record image and an image of another man whose face is similar to that of the man in the Purported image?" The same blending technique was used in this experiment. There are similarities in eye and nose structure between the men in these images.

The third experiment was another computer comparison, this time between the Test Subject image and the Purported image. These individuals are known to be different people, yet the blending shows similarities between the men.

Finally, a fourth experiment was performed. There was good correlation between facial features in the first experiment, but the width of the face in the Purported image is slightly wider than that in the Service Record image. Is this reasonable if the subject has gained weight over the years? To answer this question, images of the Test Subject from youth and from a recent image were compared. There was no measurable difference in head width despite roughly 40 years of age-difference and a 100 lb. weight gain by the Test Subject.

There is not enough information in the Service Record and Purported images to make a conclusive identification. The two men look somewhat alike. There is some reason, however, to doubt that the images show the same individual. Experiments 2 and 3 showed that it is possible to photograph a Test Subject (having similar facial structures to those in the Purported image) in such a way that many features correlate. Experiment 4 showed that the Test Subject's head width, as measured ear-to-ear just below the eyes, did not change with age or weight gain. Why, then, is there a quantifiable difference in the same measure between Steven's Service Record image and that of the man in the Purported image? Readers should view the blending video tape sequences and make their own determination. Viewers should note that the Test Subject is called the "Imposter" in the video sequences.

I also have some serious reservations about the technique used by Prof. Charney of Colorado State University to "positively" identify the Purported image as that of Lieut. Stevens. These issues are briefly addressed at the end of this report.

2.0 Experimental Procedure

All experiments were performed in the Image Processing Facility at Sandia National Laboratories. In the first experiment, negatives supplied by the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) of the purported image of Stevens, referred to in this report as the Purported image, and Stevens' service record image, referred to in this report as the Service Record image, were captured with a vidicon camera (using a 55 mm macro lens), digitized, and stored in computer memory. Only the facial regions of the images were digitized. This permits the highest spatial resolution possible in the image areas of interest. Next, the Service Record image was uniformly scaled so that the facial dimensions corresponded to those of the Purported image. Uniform scaling means that the x- and y-dimensions of the Service Record image were interpolated by the same factor. In this case, the x- and y-dimensions were interpolated so that the resulting image was 90% of the size of the digitized image. The scaling factor was determined so that the eye separation in both the Service Record and Purported images was identical. The Service Record image was then digitally translated within the computer memory space so that the eyes in both the Service Record and Purported images were superimposed. Some contrast stretching was performed to better match the contrast in the two images for frame-to-frame comparison. Finally, a digital dissolving or blending operation was performed as a comparison technique. Multiple comparison frames are generated in this technique which can be recorded as a movie loop. The sequence begins with the Service Record image displayed, then, in successive frames, the displayed image is composed of increasing contributions from the Purported image and decreasing contributions from the Service Record image until, at last, only the Purported image is displayed. The algorithmic form of this process is

N = number of blending frames

$\Delta = 1/(N-1)$

For FRAME from 1 to N ,

$\lambda = (\text{FRAME} - 1) * \Delta$

$\text{IMAGEOUT} = (1 - \lambda) * \text{SERVICE_RECORD} + \lambda * \text{PURPORTED}$

End For

This process is reversed to blend the Purported image into the Service Record image.

This technique was chosen for two reasons. First, the quality of the Purported image is not high enough to identify subtle facial features such as scars, moles, etc. The poor quality is primarily due to film grain noise. The subject simply was not close enough to the camera to adequately sample his face. In the absence of high spatial resolution, all one can do is examine gross facial structure. The blending technique allows a comparison of gross facial structure. Second, Prof. Michael Carney, a forensic scientist at Colorado State University, has made a positive identification based on gross facial structure. Dr. Charney used binary (black or white) "edge" images created from high-pass frequency filtering of the Service Record and Purported images. While I understand the motivation for this, I also understand that this means an identification was made using a subset of the available gray-shade information. I was curious to see whether having all the spatial frequencies would aid in the identification. There are certainly striking similarities between facial structures in the Service Record and Purported images, but even with all the gray-shade data and the additional interpretive information one obtains from blending, I do not feel I can make a positive identification.

A second experiment was performed that was identical to the first, but the Purported image was replaced by an image of a known test subject. I wanted to know if a blend between the Service Record image and the image of a known imposter (having similar gross facial structure to the subject in the Purported image) would reveal the same similarities observed in the first experiment. A known individual at Sandia National Laboratories, posed in front of a TV camera connected to the image processor. His pose was chosen to copy the pose of the man in the Purported image. The digitized image was then uniformly scaled, translated, and rotated slightly so that his eyes matched the position of the man in the Purported image. A blending sequence was then performed between the Service Record image and the image of the known individual. The image of the known individual is called the "Imposter" in the video sequences.

This blending shows a correlation between the eye and nose structures of both Stevens and the Test Subject. There is, however, a difference in cheek structure below the eyes. The Test Subject's head is also wider than Stevens' head in the vicinity of the ears. This experiment shows me that the image of an imposter having a roughly similar facial structure to that of the man in the Purported image can be blended with a known image of Stevens and match closely.

A more interesting experiment that I performed was a blending between the Imposter image and the Purported image. This was the third experiment. I believe that the blending between these two images shows as great, or greater, a similarity between faces as the blending between the Service Record and Purported images. My opinion after this experiment is that 1) if one of the images to be blended is blurred or noisy, thereby obscuring facial details, 2) if the men in the images are about the same age, and 3) if the faces in the images to be blended have roughly the same facial structure, then the blended images will appear to match. The imaging geometry of the faces also plays a significant role. I photographed the imposter in three slightly different geometries. One of these photographs matched the Purported image much better than the other two. The eye squint and smile of the imposter were also significant matching factors.

The experiments to this point have concentrated on what is the same in the images. What about those features that don't match? There seems to be some head width inconsistency between blended images in all of the experiments. By head width, I mean the distance between points where the ears intersect the skull just below the temples. A line drawn on the photograph between these points would cross the upper cheek bones. The pose of the head being photographed can certainly change the measured width. Slight neck rotations of the head relative to the camera can make the head appear wider. Fortunately, the Service Record and Purported poses are the same. Head rotation appears not to be an issue in this case. There is another consideration. Can this width increase with age and weight gain? The fourth and final experiment addresses this issue. An image of the Test Subject at age 14 was compared with an image of the Test Subject taken this week. I carefully posed the Test Subject so that his head position matched the position in his picture as a youth. In the case of the Test Subject, there is no measurable difference in head width. It is interesting that the Test Subject's head width has not changed despite a weight gain of over 100 lb. and fattening of the cheeks. In contrast, the head in the Purported image is about 14% wider than Stevens head in the Service Record image. (An adult head is about 6 in. wide, so 14% corresponds to about 1 in. of difference.) If this pattern of fixed head width holds for the general population, then it is very unlikely that the Service Record and Purported images show the same man.

3.0 Review of Prof. Charney's Photo Identification Procedure

Professor Charney has stated that the Service Record and Purported images show the same man. My understanding from Dr. Charney's report [1] is that his determination was made solely from the superposition of binary "edge" images created from high-pass filtering of the Service Record and Purported images. Figure 1 shows the color coded binary images that I understand Dr. Charney used to make his determination. If it is true that these binary images represent the only information used in Dr. Charney's decision, then I question the validity of his determination.

Researchers in human visual perception argue that humans, when viewing a natural scene, rapidly construct "... a primitive but rich description of the image that is to be used to determine the reflectance and illumination of the visible surfaces, and their orientation and distance to the viewer." [2] These researchers have shown that humans are extremely sensitive to rapid changes in intensity. The most rapid changes are termed "edges" and perceptual researchers focus on the human ability to recognize "edges" as a first step in analyzing scenes. As a result, people in the field of digital image processing often concentrate on finding "edges" in scenes as the first step in a computer analysis. One way to find "edges" in an image is to perform high-pass filtering. This is a technique commonly used in image processing as a preanalysis step.

One must understand, however, that "edges" in images are somewhat subjective. Different "edges" can be extracted from a common scene due to changes in lighting or the addition of noise. What I perceive as an edge on a face, regardless of lighting or noise, may be different from what a high-pass filter implemented on a computer designates as an "edge".

Furthermore, edge detection is usually used in image processing as a data reduction technique. A classic application is in machine vision where a robot, usually under highly controlled lighting conditions, must reduce the amount of picture information it sees to bare essentials in order for the computer to rapidly find objects in three-dimensional space. Because researchers believe that humans perceive "edges" as their first step in analyzing a scene, machine vision practitioners routinely find "edges", believing that "edges" are the optimal set of bare essentials necessary for locating objects.

The question I ask when assessing Dr. Charney's report is, "If it is difficult for observers to positively identify the Service Record and Purported images given all the information inherent in the gray-shade images, why should throwing away most of the information make the identification any easier?" Had Dr. Charney enhanced the high-frequency information of the image to make a better determination, I would not question his procedure. Had Dr. Charney eliminated a few frequencies that appeared to contribute to the "noisiness" of the image to make his determination, again I would not question his procedure. Throwing away information, however, is usually not a good idea. Let me illustrate my point with an example.

The superposition image in Figure 1, which comes from Dr. Charney's report, shows the Service Record "edge" image (red) superimposed on the Purported "edge" image (dark). Edges around the eyes, nose, and mouth overlap. Now look at Figure 2. Here I have superimposed the Test Subject "edge" image (yellow) over the Purported "edge" image (cyan). The "edges" from the Purported image are wider because of the noisy (fuzzy) nature of the Purported image. Note that the same is also true for the Purported "edge" image (dark) in Figure 1. The "edges" from the Test Subject image in Figure 2 overlap the "edges" from the Purported image. Am I to conclude, then, that the Test Subject and Purported images show the same man?

I believe that an expert at identifying human subjects can identify subtle structural features in photographs that a layman would miss. I believe that these features can be crucial factors in identifying people. However, if an identification is made solely from the "edge" images, then I must dismiss the identification as being flawed.

4.0 Conclusions

I cannot say whether or not the Service Record and Purported images show the same man. The men in the two images do look somewhat alike. Sequence 1 on the video tape documents this. However, sequences 2 and 3 on the video tape show that an imposter can also be photographed to look somewhat like the Service Record and Purported images. The increased head width in the Purported image compared to the Service Record image is very troublesome to me, especially in view of the comparison between images of the Test Subject as a youth and as an adult. Age and weight gain did not increase the width. Finally, I am concerned about the technical foundation upon which Dr. Charney has made his identification.

Analysis of the Purported Robertson, Lundy, and Stevens

P. O. W./ M. I. A. Image

1.0 Overview

One of the photographs the D. I. A. has asked Sandia National Laboratories to investigate is the widely circulated photograph of three men holding a banner which is purported to show Col. John L. Robertson (USAF), Maj. Albro L. Lundy, Jr. (USAF), and Lieut. Larry J. Stevens (USN). All three men are missing from the Vietnam war. These identifications have been made by family members. The D. I. A., however, has reason to believe that the photograph is a hoax. There are reports that this photograph is an alteration of a photograph taken at the end of World War II, or shortly after. The man on the left (see Figure 1) is believed by the D. I. A. to be holding the stocks of rifles. If this photograph is supposed to be a photograph of American servicemen being held captive in Vietnam, why would they be holding rifles?

I have examined regions of the photograph. Although the quality of this photograph is terrible, I concur that the man on the left is holding the stocks of several rifles. I also believe that the man on the right (see Figure 1) has his left hand cupped to support something. My belief is that he is holding the barrels of the rifles. Finally, I suspect that the second man, the one behind and to the immediate right of the banner, is holding the bottom of the banner with his left hand, has his shoulders parallel to the right-most man, and that his head position is the result of his holding the banner and leaning forward for the picture.

I, too, am suspicious that the photograph is a hoax. The only substantiating evidence I can give, however, is an outline of what I believe to be the front-most rifle and a justification for why the right-most man is posed as he is. I have no conclusions about the banner or the writing on the banner. This report outlines the details of my observations.

2.0 Analysis Procedure

The photographic print was rephotographed at Sandia National Laboratories and this negative was used to make an 8 x 10 inch transparency. The transparency was illuminated from behind, and the image was captured on a vidicon camera interfaced to a digital image processor and a digital computer. The captured image has a spatial resolution of 512 x 512 picture elements (pixels), each pixel having a dynamic range of 256 gray shades. Although the imaging system has the capability of capturing 256 gray shades, the photograph of three men has very little dynamic range. A histogram of the images shows the image to be almost binary, i.e. it has virtually two gray shades, opaque and transparent. This is a serious disadvantage for digital image analysis since analysis usually exploits dynamic range information to discern spatial structures of interest. I suspect that the original image supplied to the D. L. A. may have been a fax copy, not a true photograph. This could account for the poor dynamic range.

2.1 Man 1 and the rifle stocks

I began my investigations with a subregion extracted about the man on the left. I will refer to him as Man 1 since he is left-most. I digitized this subregion to the full spatial resolution of the system. In other words, I adjusted the position of the digitizing camera to fill the full 512 x 512 digitizing space with the subregion of Man 1. Next, I digitally altered the contrast of the digitized image in order to discern any structures at the chest level of Man 1. I wanted to see if I could trace the outline of the rifle stocks he appears to be holding. The light blue (cyan) outline in Figure 2 is my best judgement of an outline that is marginally visible in several contrast-stretched versions of the image. I discerned a faint round glint in the gun outline which I have questionably labeled as a rifle bolt. The green outline is a continuation of that outline, but one in which I have less confidence. I did, however, repeatedly discern a dark rectangular region in the enhanced image. Could this be an ammunition magazine? I am not sure. It could also be an artifact of continued reproduction of the original photograph. The red outline in Figure 2 shows the man's shoulder and arm profile. I was originally suspicious of a bright vertical line between the left edge of the banner and Man 1, but I later decided this shows the near intersection of the shoulder and the banner. I have also outlined what I believe to be the collar of Man 1. Could this man be wearing a camouflage shirt or jacket over a lighter shirt with an exposed collar? Finally, I was initially confused about the light areas just right of what I believe is the rifle stocks. I thought they showed Man 1's right hand. After some consideration, I believe the lower white area is the right hand and wrist, and that the upper white area is the left hand resting on top of the rifle stocks. This raised a serious question. If Man 1 has both hands near the rifle stocks, what is holding up the barrel ends?

2.2 Man 3 and his pose

This last question led me to consider the right subregion of the full photograph. The right-most man, whom I will call Man 3, seems to be posing with his left hand in a peculiar position. I conjectured that Man 3 is holding the barrel of the rifles whose stocks are being held by Man 1 (see Figure 3). Man 3 seems to have his hand cupped around the bottom of the barrels. From the orientation of the rifle stocks held by Man 1 and by a comparison of relative head sizes, I assume that Man 3 is standing further away from the camera than Man 1. The next question I asked was, "Is Man 3 standing the expected distance away from Man 1 to actually be holding the barrel of the rifles?" I went to the library and found a copy of Brassey's Infantry Weapons of the World (1975) and located a popular World War II German rifle, the Mauser Kar 98 k. I chose this rifle because of its widespread use by the Germans in World War II and because of its bolt action. I could not locate a picture of this rifle with an attached magazine, if such an arrangement even exists. An associate helped me create a gray shaded transparency from the book page which I digitized and entered into the computer. I then digitally scaled the rifle image so that its stock height equaled the stock height of the front-most rifle held by Man 1 in Figure 3. Based on the depth of the front-most rifle stock, another associate and I calculated the angle that the rifle is making relative to the plane of the photograph. This was done because Man 3 is standing further back than Man 1, and, because of the angle of the rifles relative to the plane of the photograph, any rifle image mapped onto the photograph would have to incorporate length foreshortening due to the perspective. Our calculations showed the front-most rifle to be oriented at roughly 55 degrees from the plane of the photograph, meaning that the digitized rifle had to be compressed in length by about 40 percent. This experiment was performed and the rifle was overlaid on the photograph. The end of the barrel of the front-most rifle rested just beyond the hand of Man 3. I believe this verifies my conjecture that Man 3 is holding the barrels of the rifles. See Figure 4.

My associates and I have posed a question about the rifles that we cannot answer. Are the rifles being held right-side-up (barrel up and trigger down) or upside-down (barrel down and trigger up) as a hunter would hold his rifle? If my sketch is right (Figures 2 and 3), an ammunition magazine is attached to the front-most rifle, the bolt is visible, and the rifles are right-side-up. However, when I warped the Mauser Kar 98 k to overlay on the photograph, the rifle appeared to be too tall in the vicinity of the bolt and it partially obstructed the bottom of the banner. Perhaps no magazine exists and the rifles are being held upside-down. We can't say for sure.

2.3 Man 2 and the banner

Finally, I should say a few words about Man 2, the man just to the right of the banner. I was concerned about the apparent size of his head and its orientation. I fit ellipses to the faces of Man 2 and Man 3 and discovered that the head of Man 2 is almost exactly the same length as Man 3 who is standing in front. Still, I could find no evidence that the head of Man 2 had been cut and moved. I now suspect that Man 2 is in the proper place in the original photograph, that the person generating this hoax photograph did not move or add him. I say this because I believe Man 2 is standing with his shoulders parallel to Man 3, that he is standing almost shoulder to shoulder down-range from Man 3, and that Man 2 has his left hand holding the banner. I also suspect that Man 2 has his right arm raised to support the top left edge of the banner. I cannot find any evidence of Man 2's right hand. Why? Has it been removed as a result of alterations to the banner? I don't know. I suspect Man 2 just has a large head, and that due to his position behind Man 3 and his responsibility for holding the banner, he is stretching his head forward and at an uncomfortable angle for the picture.

2.4 More questions

One last set of questions. Is the background brush or is it light passing through camouflage netting? Could this be an altered version of a World War II victory photograph? Is Man 3 wearing a traditional Soviet uniform coat? Is Man 1 a paratrooper in camouflage? Are the rifles captured German weapons? Was the banner originally a captured Nazi flag or a flag of the victorious fighters that has been altered for this photograph?

3.0 Historical Literature Search

I am so convinced that this photograph is an alteration of a historical photograph that I have begun a limited literature search to find the original photograph. I have examined the following:

1. All issues of Soviet Military Review in the Sandia National Laboratories library from mid-1965 through 1989.
2. An assortment of books covering the Soviet liberation of the Baltic states and eastern Europe in the Sandia library and the University of New Mexico library. A list of possible sources was accessed by a Sandia librarian from her on-line Library of Congress database. This list is attached to the end of this report. I had little success in locating any of these volumes.
3. All issues of Soviet Life in the Sandia National Laboratories library from May 1989 to the present.

4.0 Conclusions

I cannot prove that this photograph is a hoax, but I believe there is substantial evidence that rifles are being held. It doesn't make sense that captive P. O. Ws would have their picture taken holding weapons. This, however is conjecture on my part. I have found no evidence that this photograph has been tampered with. I also have found no evidence that it is tamper-free. I recommend a continued historical literature search to locate the original image.

Figure 2. Man 1 and the rifle stocks (my interpretation of the scene). The light blue (cyan) outline is my best judgement of an outline that is marginally visible in several contrast-stretched versions of the image. The green line is a continuation of the cyan outline, but one in which I have less confidence.

Figure 3. The full scene with a continuation of the front-most rifle held by Man 1. Man 3 (right-most) may be holding the rifle barrels.

Figure 4. Test to see if Man 3 is the proper distance away from Man 1 to be holding the end of a rifle barrel. A Mauser Kar 98 k, digitally scaled and geometrically warped to the proper perspective, is superimposed for comparison.

Incident Summary - EC-470 "Baron 52"

On January 27th, 1973, the U.S. Government signed The Paris Peace Accords, bringing a long sought "Peace with Honor", and ceasefire to Southeast Asia. His report deals with the 3 February, 1973 shoot-down of an EC-470 electronic intelligence aircraft operating eight days AFTER all military operations were to cease. The EC-470 essentially is a C-47 aircraft which has been altered by the emplacement of more than $4 Million (in 1973 dollars) worth of sensitive electronic equipment so that it can be used for military reconnaissance work. Among it's functions is the ability to locate and eavesdrop on enemy military communications. Much of the electronic equipment involved is regarded as SECRET and crew-member operators had to possess TOP SECRET/CRY-TO Security Clearance with special access to compartmentalized information (SI). (There are DoD directives dictating that arrangements be made for the immediate destruction of the aircraft and equipment rather than risk compromise of same.)

4. The particular EC-470 with which we are concerned, Call Sign: "Baron 52", was based at Ubon Royal Thai Air Force Base (KTHFB), Thailand. It had a minimum basic crew of eight men - four commissioned officers primarily responsible for flying and navigating the aircraft, and four enlisted personnel responsible for the operation of the electronic equipment aboard. On February 5, 1973, while on a classified tactical mission to locate and track the movement of Vietnamese armor along a sector near the "Ho Chi Minh Trail", the EC-470, containing at least two of the flightcrew, was shot down over Buravane Province, Laos. Shortly after the shoot-down, another U.S. eavesdropper working in the area intercepted coded Vietnamese Command and Control Communications indicating that several members of the EC-470 crew had bailed out of the damaged plane, had been captured, and were to be transported to a specific commander awaiting the crew for transport to Hanoi, North Vietnam. This information was known to U.S. Officials immediately.

4. In another report, still highly classified, a "friendly" agent, whom the U.S. Government considers highly reliable, reported seeing four of the crew "clean shaven" and "in their flight suits", being led away from the crashsite area under guard.

4. Four days later, a helicopter was utilized to lower a search team to the crash site to ensure that all of the classified materials were destroyed. The wreckage was thoroughly inspected. As this was not a hostile site, the team was on the ground over forty minutes to complete their survey. The cargo compartment of the aircraft had melted, though structurally the aircraft remained primarily intact. This is not common in an uncontrolled landing situation (crash), indicating that at least one of the flight crew had stayed aboard to attempt a landing. Under the nose of the wreck, partial remains were discovered which are thought to be those of a co-pilot. Peering inside the wreck, towards the front, the search team is reported to have seen, but did not recover, at least one additional body still strapped into the seat normally occupied by the second co-pilot of the aircraft. In the rear where the other crew members had been stationed, there was no sign of anyone, and neither their nor their remains, parachutes, or survival equipment vests were seen in the wreckage. This confirmed the information that the men had exited the aircraft, avoided the crash, and been captured. Eventually the search party departed, taking with them one co-pilot's retrievable remains and some other fragments of material. The co-pilot was declared dead (KIA), and the other seven crew members were continued in their missing status (MIA). This was done even though the body of the second co-pilot was seen and confirmed dead in the plane. Up to the day this document was prepared, the family of this young man was still not notified that his body was found at the site, and that he was in fact deceased. They... search and hope for answers that our military casualty offices have not for over sixteen years.

6. Investigation further indicates that on February 17, 1973, members of the EC-470 crew were seen and identified about 25 kilometers from the crash site, in good health and accompanied by their known captors. Once again, U.S. Officials were immediately made aware of this information.

6. Throughout this period, U.S. Department of Defense directives mandated that the families of men such as these be given the most complete information possible. However, this was not done. The families were told that the aircraft was not being tracked by radar... it was; they were told that there were no photos of the crash site... there are; they were told that the crashsite could not be investigated further because it was considered "hostile"... it was not. Of course, the country of Laos had areas in which combat was commonplace and enemy personnel were known to operate in. However, the mountainous region in which the wreckage came to rest was quiet prior to, during, and subsequent to the crash incident and search.

7. On February 22, 1973, seventeen days after the shoot down... while this information was still being withheld from the families, the Air Force declared ALL of the men from the aircraft dead; without the benefit of ANY new information. Coincidentally, the previous day, February 21, 1973, the United States Government participated in the signing of the accord to restore peace to Laos.

8. In response to their inquiries, the families were told that all of the crew perished in the crash. This even though absolutely no evidence exists to support any conclusion which excludes several members of the crew not being present in the aircraft to die from injuries obtained in the crash landing or subsequent fire.

9. About two months after the shoot-down, the captives were sighted again, still in apparent good health, with their captors about 65 kilometers from the crash site. Again this information was known immediately by U.S. Officials, but was withheld from the families of the men. Instead, these families were assured, again and again, that it was certain that all of the men of the EC-470 had died in a fiery crash. At the same time these statements were being told to the families in response to their questions, other organizations within the Defense Department were continuing to track the movement of these prisoners, and others, throughout the region. In fact, further investigation has shown that these men were transported throughout North Vietnam, to Hanoi and Son Tay, and then back to Sam Neua, Laos. Sometime during this movement the captives were turned over to Soviet representatives for transport to the Soviet Union and/or its satellite nations, on board 11-14 "Crane" transport aircraft.

10. During the summer of 1976, some details of this case were "leaked" to Jack Anderson, the syndicated newspaper columnist and Lyn Ferguson of the Atlanta Journal. They pursued the reports until the Defense Department released several highly "sanitized" documents that confirmed that indeed individuals were captured on the same date and in the same area as the EC-470 crash, but that "no identity or nationality was specified"... another outright lie, as no U.S. Aircraft were lost over Laos since the preceding December, and none since this incident. Still, the families of these men were not told what the details of the information were, they were merely told that the information was not enough to warrant a change of status review or any other reconsideration of the determination of death in this case.

11. The determination of death in this matter cannot be defended. It is indisputable that all of the evidence shows that these men were alive when they were pronounced dead. There is not a shred of evidence that they are not alive today. Many other POWs survived for long periods in the hands of these same captors.

12. An important point to address at this point is that there have been literally thousands of first-hand live sighting reports of U.S. prisoners still held in both Southeast Asia and the Soviet Union. Additionally, U.S. intelligence agencies have amassed a huge collection of POW information up to the day this was prepared. Since this crew was made up of young, healthy men, and considering that they were some of the last flyers to be taken captive, one could reasonably expect them to be less scarred by the POW experience than those older and longer in captivity. Because of this "survivability multiplier", and the fact that these POWs are considered more valuable live than dead due to their technical skills, the surviving members of the Baron 52 crew should be among those most likely to be considered during any negotiations and subsequent repatriation.

13. About the preparation of this paper:

All information comes from seven volumes of official documents, reports, letters, and dozens of interviews with experts and principal participants in activities identical to those of Baron 52, its search and rescue, and other's who handled and/or were otherwise exposed to the extensive files maintained by our government on this case.

Due to regulations in place to prevent disclosure of certain information, great emphasis was placed on omitting information which would outline any sources, methods, or capabilities of our government's intelligence community.

All information presented which was obtained verbally was subjected to double source confirmation before it was included in this text.

14. This report was prepared on behalf of the entire crew of "Baron 52", by the Baron 52 Project. The Baron 52 Project is a non-profit, non-political research project dedicated solely to this incident. Research, conclusions, and recommendations on how to terminate the imprisonment of these Americans, are provided to U.S. and other national policy makers, Press organizations, International Relief organizations, and other informational consumers. Dear _____

On January 7th I read the headline which hailed the "Peace with Honor" Agreement, only to wake the next morning to find my situation the same as the day before. I had spent the night in the hope that the peace agreement would be signed and the war would end. But the peace agreement was not signed and the war was not over. I was still in the same situation as before. I had to go to work as though nothing had changed in the situation.

Believing that I must have missed some of the smaller parts of the inventories, read it and found that I had not overlooked anything that was on the printed page.
It was then that I realized that I and two others of my unit were in violation of an excitement which ~~was~~ ~~was~~ to be an order from the Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces of the United States.

The ~~impact~~ impact of this obligation was quite intense for me. Not only do I feel that it is morally wrong to ~~participate~~ in activities which may jeopardize a peace which took twelve years to reach but also because I feel I may be participating actively in an illegal military mission.

This thought brought back a memory of a certain military man who was in a similar situation and made the choice to dutifully carry out his orders even though there was a question of ~~these~~ legality

This man was ~~St. C.~~ ^{William} Colley.
 Not wanting to risk the possibility of being ~~responsible~~ indirectly responsible for the possible results of the orders I am under I went to seek advice of the base legal officer.

When I was informed of the consequences for refusing to carry out the orders which I consider to be illegal as well as immoral.

These consequences instilled in me a fear which has caused me to abandon any thought of refusing to obey these illegal orders.

The truly sad part of this situation is that I wonder how many other ~~men~~ "St. Colley's" there have been because of

On March 20, 1967, I was in the United States and I received a letter from the Chinese Embassy in Washington, D.C. telling me that my situation was the same as the one before - nothing had changed in Southeast Asia.

Feeling that I must have missed some of the small print of the agreement, I again read it and found that I had not overlooked anything that was on the printed page. It was then that I realized that I and the others of my unit were in violation of an agreement which I consider to be an order from the Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces of the United States.

The impact of this realization was quite intense for me. Not only do I feel that it is morally wrong to participate in activities which may jeopardize a peace which took twelve years to reach, but also because I feel I may be participating actively in an illegal military mission.

This thought brought back a memory of another military man who was in a similar situation and made the choice to dutifully carry out his orders even though there was a question of their legality. This man was Lt. William Calley.

Not wanting to risk the possibility of being indirectly responsible for the possible results of the orders I am under, I went to seek advice of the base legal office. There I was informed of the consequences for refusing to carry out the orders which I consider to be illegal as well as immoral. These consequences instilled in me a fear which has caused me to abandon any thoughts of refusing to obey these illegal orders.

The truly sad part of this situation is that I wonder how many other "Lt. Calleys" there have been because of the same fear that I feel now . . . that fear of being punished for doing what his mind and soul tells him is right.

I regret that I cannot give you any specific details of my unit's violations due to the classification of my work. However, in general terms, violations have been made against (the Peace Agreements) Chapter II, Article 2; Chapter II, Article 3, paragraph A; Chapter II, Article 4; Chapter VII, Article 20, paragraph A; Chapter VII, Article 20, paragraph B.

Perhaps the most disheartening fact is that ever since I entered school and later the military, I have been taught that because of American's firm beliefs in truth and justice we did not break our national promises. However, now I find myself involved in just such an act.

I gratefully appreciate any assistance you can render to help eliviate (sic) this situation for the American servicemen for whom the war has become more frightening. . for now he has yet another enemy to meet: his conscience.

Yours truly,

At this point the only thing

I am writing this letter with the hope of bringing to light a situation which I believe is being hidden from the American people, as well as the entire world.

I am currently assigned to Detachment 3 of the 6994th Security Squadron. Our unit has been involved in acts which I believe to be in flagrant violation of the Paris Conference on Vietnam Agreement. (Chapter II, Articles II, IV, and VII.)

I regret that I am not permitted to give any detailed information concerning this situation. However, I am sure that with superficial investigation alone, these violations could become known to you.

I am assuming that a great majority of the people, as well as your constituents, are unaware of these violations. If they were aware, I cannot picture the American people supporting such acts.

As for myself - throughout my schooling and military training, these sort of violations were always portrayed as acts of aggression by the "barbarous" enemy. It truly bothers me to think that I, as an American, am involved in such practices which are being touted as standard operating procedures.

At this point, the only thing keeping me from refusing to involve myself in these violations is the fear that it would jeopardize my soon coming discharge.

I would like to thank you at this time for whatever effort you may expend on this matter. Perhaps, if all parties involved upheld the Paris Conference on Vietnam Treaty, a truly lasting and honorable peace will be a reality.

Yours Truly,

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Cressman

I am writing to you to provide a detailed summary of all the circumstances surrounding the death of your son, Sergeant Peter R. Cressman. While I do not have any new information, I would like to review the circumstances in more detail for you, and to explain more fully the reasons for the decision to declare your son killed in action.

On 4 February 1973, Peter was a crew member of an EC-47 aircraft on an operational mission over Laos. The aircraft departed Ubon Airfield at approximately 11:05 PM (local), 4 February 1973. At approximately 1:25 AM on 5 February, the aircraft reported observing ground fire, and at 1:30 AM reported operations normal. This was the last contact that was made with the aircraft. After several attempts to establish contact failed, search and rescue efforts were put into effect at 6:00 AM (first light) on 5 February. The search included a continuing visual and communications search in addition to numerous photographic reconnaissance flights.

On 7 February 1973 a crash site was discovered, which through photo interpretation was determined to be your son's aircraft. A helicopter then took a pararescue team to the site and hovered while the team was lowered to examine the wreckage. The aircraft was almost totally destroyed. The entire fuselage was badly burned, and equipment in the aft part of the fuselage was completely melted. The aircraft had impacted upside down and there were no skid marks. Both wing tips were broken off, and were located some distance from the aircraft. The helicopter and the team remained in the area until forced to depart due to running low on fuel. The remains of one crew member were recovered and later identified as those of the co-pilot; no other remains were recovered. Due to the fact that the aircraft crashed in an extremely hostile area, no other search and rescue teams have been scheduled to go into the area. Your son was originally carried as missing in action until a review could be made of the facts and circumstances surrounding the incident. After a thorough review, it was determined that there were no survivors. Based on this, your son's status was changed to killed in action on 22 February 1973.

The severity of the crash, the total destruction of the aircraft, the intense fire, and many other factors were considered before we regretfully reached this decision. Also of importance was the fact that no emergency radio beepers were ever heard from any member of the crew, and no parachutes were seen.

When the current intense hostility in the area subsides, hopefully other teams will be sent in. Please be assured that you will be notified immediately of any new findings. If I may be of further assistance, or if you feel that there is some point you would like to have explained in more detail, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely

Dear Mr. & Mrs. Cressman

17 APR 1973

Thank you for the appreciation you expressed in your letter of 18 March. I sent you a letter on 7 April providing you additional information regarding the decision to change your son's status. A similar letter was sent to the next of kin of each of the seven crew members whose status was changed.

As I mentioned in my previous letter to you, only one identifiable set of remains was found, that of the co-pilot, Lieutenant Bernhardt. Parts of three and possibly four additional bodies were found but none were identifiable due to the fire and state of decomposition. The search team did not recover any personal items identifiable with your son, or any of the other crewmen, excluding Lieutenant Bernhardt. As I related in my letters to you, the aircraft came to rest upside down and the fire within the wreckage was extremely intense, badly burning the fuselage and melting much of the equipment inside the aircraft.

The four men pararescue team that visited the site was on the ground for forty minutes at the crash site, computed from the lowering of the first man to the return of the fourth man to the helicopter. The duties of the team were threefold and in the following priority: pick up survivors, destroy classified equipment, and recover remains. The first two men lowered were constantly checking the perimeter of the crash site for unfriendly persons while the remaining two carried out their assigned duties. The fact that the airplane was upside down, the severe fire, and the limited time to investigate, precluded a more thorough search of the wreckage. We anticipate that further visits will be made to the crash site sometime in the future.

A Joint Casualty Resolution Center has been established at Nakhon Phanom Royal Thai Air Force Base in Northeastern Thailand. The purpose of this center is to visit each crash site and investigate all aspects of each crash. Peter's crash site will probably be one of the first they will visit. However, this cannot be done until an agreement can be reached with the country involved (Laos) and hostilities cease. Hopefully, when these visits can take place, more information will become available. I assure you that any additional facts will be provided to you as they become known.

Again, I offer you my deepest sympathy, and I renew my offer to you to contact me for any additional information.

Sincerely

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Cressman

It is with regret that I inform you that the search for your son, Sergeant Peter R. Cressman, has been terminated. I wish to express my personal sympathy and the concern of our entire wing.

The aerial and ground search has been conducted continuously since the time of the crash and has now been terminated. After locating the crash site, a helicopter was dispatched to the scene and a rescue team was lowered to examine the wreckage. The aircraft was almost totally destroyed. The team reported finding human remains that have been positively identified as belonging to another crew member. After careful consideration I feel that there is a possibility that one or more crew members could have parachuted to safety, therefore your son will continue to be carried in a missing status until a final determination can be made.

Please be assured that if any new information concerning your son's status is received, you will be notified immediately. A detailed report is being prepared at this time. You will be advised of its contents by the Casualty Division, Air Force Military Personnel Center, Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, upon completion of the report.

The adjustment to a loss such as yours cannot be made without great difficulty, but I earnestly hope that this expression of concern, which comes from every member of this wing, will in some small measure help to ease the anguish you feel. I will always consider it a privilege to provide any assistance I can for you.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Cressman
1821 2nd Avenue North
St. Petersburg, Florida 33704

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Cressman

Since my letter of 9 March 1973, I have personally discussed at great length the search and rescue effort associated with the loss of your son's aircraft. These discussions were held with the commander of the wing whose unit visited the crash site. I am more firmly convinced than ever, after our discussion, that the decision to change Peter's status was valid. I hope that the information which follows will allay any doubts or fears that the decision was premature or without adequate basis.

First of all, let me review the communication capability of the aircraft. Because of the distance from the nearest radar facility, the aircraft was not being tracked by radar. However, as indicated in my first letter to you the crew was making routine half hourly radio contact and also reporting unusual occurrences. They were also maintaining radio contact with another aircraft flying in the general area. The last radio contact was at 1:30 AM local, when they made routine contact. Members of the crew had ready and immediate access to various types of communications equipment located within the aircraft. Ultra High Frequency (UHF), Very High Frequency (VHF), and High Frequency (HF) radio equipment was in operating condition at the time of departure from Ubon Airfield and was in use during the flight. In addition, each member aboard the aircraft carried survival radios pre-set to operate on emergency frequency in the event of an unexpected situation. All that was required was that they be switched on. The intensive training of all flying personnel makes it improbable that at least one of the crew members would not have instinctively transmitted on one of the many pieces of communication equipment available, in case of an emergency, unless they were all immediately and completely incapacitated. Further, the aircraft communication equipment could operate off the aircraft batteries in an emergency regardless of the condition or operation of the engines.

Another consideration that had a bearing on this decision is the normal operating procedures followed during flights of this nature. The internal design of the aircraft, coupled with the bulky equipment on board, causes most crews to fly without wearing their survival equipment while in flight. Such equipment is cumbersome, uncomfortable when worn for extended periods of time, and, at times, interferes with their duties. The crews are trained to be able to put on the equipment and get ready to leave the aircraft in approximately two minutes. Further, Peter's flight was operating in the early morning hours at an altitude that would necessitate the exit door being closed and locked in view of the cold temperature. Therefore in case of an emergency it would also take time to unlock and open the door. These things can be done quickly if the airplane is flying straight and level, however, if it is in a spin or dive, movement within the aircraft is extremely difficult, if not impossible.

Since no communication contact with the aircraft or any of the crew was made after 1:30 AM, it is a reasonable assumption that the cause of the mishap must have been of a catastrophic nature. It was probably a direct hit from anti-aircraft fire which immediately started a fire in the aircraft thus precluding the initiation of emergency procedures. Assuming this to be the case, the crew would not have had time to retrieve survival equipment, don it, and exit the aircraft safely. To further document the basis of this decision, the fact that the aircraft had approximately five hours of fuel on board at the time of the crash, must be considered. Since the crew had transmitted a report that ground fire was observed five minutes prior to the last contact, and the loss of the aircraft appears to be instantaneous, it can be logically assumed that the aircraft was hit by ground fire and erupted into intense fire as a result of the remaining fuel supply.

With burning with terrain problem.

The team which visited the crash site had to operate quickly since it was in an extremely hostile area and was subject to attack from ground fire at any time. The extended distance from a friendly base also reduced the allowable time at the crash site, due to the limited fuel supply available for the return trip. Evidence was examined as quickly as possible and team members were thoroughly debriefed and interrogated upon their return. The pararescue team did discover three and possibly four bodies or the remains thereof, (only one of which could be positively identified) but time did not permit a thorough search of the aircraft or the crash site for additional remains. Photographs of the site indicate that the aircraft, in all probability, initially impacted in one area and then continued its trajectory, finally landing in an inverted position. The wreckage was strewn from the impact point to the final resting area, which also prohibited the rescue team from conducting a more intensive investigation.

One of the points made in a letter I received from a next of kin was the treatment of the information concerning the crash by the news media. Premature release of information to the media concerning incidents of this nature could possibly endanger any existing survivors and those involved in their rescue or investigation of the crash site. Once the information does become public knowledge, the treatment of releasable information by the radio, TV and press is beyond our control. As in this case, such treatment can become misleading, causing undue anguish and grief to the next of kin. Admittedly, the mission of your son's aircraft was classified, which tends to spur interest in a "spy plane" incident. Another point made was that the lack of radio beeper contact could not be construed as evidence that there were no survivors, since to establish contact could be risky and unwarranted in such a hostile environment. There is a certain degree of validity to that argument but it is also subject to considerable doubt. Operation of the radio beeper is accomplished by merely activating a switch on the radio. It does not require the downed crewman to talk or make any other movement or noise. Since the beeper does not give away the crewman's location except to aircraft flying overhead, our crews are trained to establish beeper contact even in hostile environments. Although the lack of contact is not overwhelming evidence of death, it, taken into consideration with all other evidence, did have a bearing on the change of status.

In my desire to provide all available information, I want to add some other items of information. The aircraft commander was a seasoned veteran serving his second Southeast Asia tour. The mission was not a special flight - it was a routine flight, of a type flown day and night, without benefit of escort aircraft.

These flights are not escorted by fighter aircraft because of the difference in speed of the aircraft and also because the presence of fighters might attract undue attention. The next point concerns the search and rescue effort. This effort was started immediately after it became apparent the aircraft was in difficulty. Another aircraft flying in the area started listening for emergency radio signals, but none were ever heard. Since there was no contact and the exact crash site could not be precisely located, the search aircraft had to wait for daylight and hope for visual sighting.

Let me summarize by stating that we did employ a certain amount of conjecture in trying to visualize the events as they took place. However, we made logical assumptions based on all the available facts and information. You may be assured that every facet of each piece of information was considered prior to arriving at the difficult decision to change Peter's status to killed in action. Conclusive evidence of death is not required for a commander to arrive at such a decision. Existing evidence did warrant this decision, which is one of the most agonizing and difficult tasks a commander must face.

I am fully aware of the natural instinct to refuse acceptance of the death of a loved one without physical evidence. It is my sincerest hope that I have been successful in alleviating your doubts and, to some degree, in making the loss of your son a little easier to bear. As a final matter of information, the other crew members on the aircraft were Captain George R. Spitz, Aircraft Commander; First Lieutenant Robert E. Bernhardt, Co-Pilot; Second Lieutenant Severo J. Primm III, Co-Pilot; Captain Arthur R. Bollinger, Navigator; Sergeant Dale Brandenburg, Crew Member; Sergeant Joseph A. Matejov, Crew Member; and Staff Sergeant Todd M. Walton, Crew Member.

In the event you desire to communicate with their next of kin, please forward a request for names and addresses to the Air Force Military Personnel Center, Attn: DPMS, Randolph AFB, TX 78148. This is required to protect the rights and privacy of the involved families. I again extend to you my deepest sympathy, and ask that you contact me if there are any other questions left unanswered.

Sincerely

SUBJ: EC-47 LOSS ON 5 FEB 73 (-)
1. THE EC-47 DOWNED FROM UNKNOWN CAUSE ON 5 FEB 73 RESULTED IN THE LOSS OF EIGHT CREWMEMBERS. ON 9 FEB 73 A TEAM CONSISTING OF 3 PJ'S AND ONE INDIVIDUAL FROM THE 6994TH SOTY SQ NKP WERE AIRLIFTED INTO LAOS TO INVESTIGATE THE CRASH SITE. THREE BODIES WERE FOUND. ONLY ONE CO-PILOT WAS IDENTIFIED. A POSSIBLE 4TH BODY WAS OBSERVED, IN THE OPINION OF THOSE WHO VIEWED THE WRECKAGE. THE CABIN SECTION WAS APPARENTLY SUBJECTED TO INTENSE FIRE. AS THEY STATED ALL EQUIPMENT AND BODIES HAD COMPLETELY BURNED, ALTHOUGH REMAINS OF POSSIBLY THREE BODIES WERE SEEN. THERE WAS NO SIFTING OF DEBRIS TO DETERMINE IF EVIDENCE EXISTED TO CONFIRM STATUS OF THOSE PERSONNEL IN CARGO COMPARTMENT OF THE AIRCRAFT.
2. SINCE NO PRESENT EVIDENCE POSITIVELY CONFIRMS DEATH OF REMAINING 5 CREWMEMBERS, THE POSSIBILITY THAT THEY WERE ABLE TO BAIL OUT DOES EXIST, ALTHOUGH NO BEEPERS OR OTHER TRANSMISSIONS WERE NOTED ON GUARD. TO SUPPORT THIS THEORY, THE FOLLOWING SECRET NOFORN (NEED TO KNOW) RELEASE TO THE COMMANDER, 8TFW ON 27 FEB 73 QUOTE: 1. ACCORDING TO A RELIABLE SOURCE, THE ENEMY WAS MOVING FOUR PRISONERS ON TRUCKS NORTHWARD ALONG ROUTE 914 IN LAOS ON 5 FEB 73. THIS SOURCE REPORTED THEY MAY HAVE BEEN ENROUTE TO A STAGING AREA IN LAOS JUST WEST OF THE DMZ. 2. IT IS SPECULATED BY JQ USAFSS THAT THESE PRISONERS MAY HAVE BEEN CREWMEMBERS OF BARON 52, A 56SOW EC-47 AIRCRAFT WHICH CRASHED IN LAOS ON 5 FEB 73. THIS SPECULATION, ADMITTEDLY TENUOUS, IS BASED ON THE FACT THAT THESE PRISONERS WERE REPORTED TO BE IN AN AREA SOME SIXTY-FIVE NAUTICAL MILES FROM THE BARON 52 CRASH SITE. DEPENDING ON THE FLIGHT PATH OF BARON 52, AS WELL AS PREVAILING WINDS THAT DAY IT IS POSSIBLE SOME CREWMEMBERS COULD HAVE BAILED OUT NORTH OF THE CRASH SITE POSITION AND COULD POSSIBLY HAVE BEEN CARRIED EVEN FURTHER NORTH DURING DESCENT. FURTHERMORE, SINCE THESE PRISONERS WERE REPORTEDLY BEING TRANSFERRED BY TRUCKS, IT IS NOT INCONCEIVABLE THAT THEY COULD HAVE BEEN SOME SIXTY-FIVE NAUTICAL MILES FROM THE CRASH SITE THE SAME DAY THAT BARON 52 CRASHED. UNQUOTE. THE 8 TFW CO APPRECIATED THE INFORMATION ALTHOUGH HE CONSIDERED IT VERY TENUOUS. AS YOU CAN SEE, THERE IS CAUSE FOR SPECULATION CONCERNING THE STATUS OF MISSING CREWMEMBERS.

3. PROVIDING TERMS OF THE LAOTIAN CEASE FIRE PERMIT ENTRY OF U.S. PERSONNEL INTO LAOS FOR CRASH SITE INVESTIGATION, IT IS REQUESTED THAT THIS PARTICULAR SITE BE AMONG THE FIRST TO BE INVESTIGATED. A SIFTING AND ANALYSIS OF DEBRIS IN THE CARGO COMPARTMENT SHOULD PROVIDE THE EVIDENCE NECESSARY TO CONFIRM THE FATE OF REMAINING BARON 52 CREWMEMBERS. UNQUOTE

CRESSMAN

Dear Mr. Widdall:

On behalf of the Director, Legislative Liaison, this is in reply to your inquiry of March 5 concerning Sergeant Peter A. Cressman who was reported killed in action. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Cressman, contacted you in this regard.

Mr. and Mrs. Cressman were personally notified by an Air Force officer on February 5 that their son was reported missing in action in Laos. Search progress reports were provided to them on February 8 and 10. On February 13, they were informed that human remains found in the area where their son's aircraft crashed were identified as one of the crew members and his family had been notified of his death. Mr. and Mrs. Cressman were advised that they would be kept informed of any information received concerning the incident involving their son. An Air Force officer personally notified them on February 22 that Sergeant Cressman was declared killed in action on February 5 as the result of injuries sustained in the aircraft incident previously reported to them. The information made available to his commander by members of the search team conclusively established that their son could not have survived the incident. They were provided the telephone number of the Air Force Casualty Division in the event they had questions, but they have not contacted that office since they were notified of their son's death.

The overseas commander sent a letter to Mr. and Mrs. Cressman on March 9 providing them with all known facts surrounding the death of their son. A copy of that letter is attached for your information.

Please assure Mr. and Mrs. Cressman that if there had been any doubt that their son could have survived, they would not have been notified of his death. In the event there is any forthcoming information concerning his remains, they will be contacted by the appropriate Air Force official.

AFDP/MSC

We wish to extend our deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Cressman in the loss they have sustained and want to thank you for your interest.

Sincerely,

17 APR 1973

Dear Mrs. Prime

Once again, our letters have crossed in the mail. I received your 2 April letter on Monday, 9 April, after I had sent you my letter of 7 April. A similar letter to the one you received was sent to the next of kin of the other crew members whose remains could not be located or identified. My 7 April letter answered many of the questions you have asked, and in this letter I will cover the remaining questions you have posed.

The partial remains of First Lieutenant Robert E. Bernhardt, the other co-pilot on the crew, were the only ones recovered and positively identified. His skull and torso were recovered outside the aircraft with identification being made through dental records. Other partial remains were found at the crash site but were not parts which could be identified with an individual or recovered due to advanced decomposition. The remaining seven crew members were declared killed in action based on the circumstances cited in my last letter to you. They, as was your husband, were carried missing in action until that time. Interrogation of the pararescue team revealed that partial remains discovered in the aircraft were trapped into the seats normally occupied by the pilot and the two co-pilots. It is unrealistic to assume that these remains were those of any other members of the crew.

The duties of the pararescue team members were threefold and in the following priority: pick up survivors; destroy classified equipment; and recover remains. Time and related factors previously discussed with you prevented the team from bringing back the remains of those bodies discovered other than those of Lieutenant Bernhardt. The four man rescue team which visited the crash site spent approximately forty minutes on the ground calculated from lowering of the first team member to the reentry of the fourth member back into the helicopter. During this period of time two of the team were constantly checking the perimeter for hostile persons. The other two were conducting their duties. Other than the human remains, there were no identifiable personal objects discovered in the area. However, the lack of dog tags or other objects is not proof that one or more of the crew exited the aircraft safely. The fire in the EC-47 was of such intensity that the entire fuselage was badly burned and equipment aboard was melted beyond recognition. It is therefore illogical to assume that objects that normally could be used for identification purposes would be recognizable, even to a trained pararescue team. The fact that the airplane was upside down also hampered the investigation. I again emphasize the fact that the time restriction imposed on the rescue and search effort severely limited the investigation.

As I stated to you in my letter of 13 February, I sincerely felt at that time that there was an outside possibility that one or more of the crew may have parachuted to safety. In the following week, the Wing Commander of the unit whose pararescue team visited the crash site and I evaluated the possibilities and facts associated with the loss of the aircraft and the decision was then made to change the status to killed in action for the remaining seven men who comprised the crew. This decision was not a contradiction of the original decision, but a change based on a thorough and thoughtful analysis of all available information.

I discussed the radio beepers at length in my most recent letter to you, but would like to add that crew members in most instances can activate the beepers while descending by parachute, after safely exiting the aircraft. They don't have to wait until they are on the ground and thus subject themselves to the possibility of immediate capture, without first alerting friendly forces of their approximate location. The other friendly aircraft flying in the area could easily have heard the beeper signals. The area where the aircraft was conducting the mission is mountainous and does contain dense jungle, as you stated. However, the fact that no parachutes were sighted does not negate all the other facts and evidence I have discussed with you.

A new development is currently underway in Thailand, which may shed more information on the loss of your husband. A Joint Casualty Resolution Center has been established at Nakhon Phanom Royal Thai Air Force Base in Northeastern Thailand. The function of this Center will be to visit each crash site to investigate all aspects of the wreckage. The crash site of your husband's aircraft has been identified as one of the first to be visited. This cannot be accomplished until agreement is reached with the country involved (Laos) and hostilities cease. Contrary to widespread opinion, much of the territory surrounding the crash site remains extremely hostile. I assure you that any additional facts will be forwarded to you as they become known.

Your simile of attempting to put together a jigsaw puzzle is an excellent comparison. We fit together the pieces we have and fill in the rest from considered judgement based on operational experience and known operating factors developed over the years. A decision such as that in the case of your husband is made only after much soul searching examination of all available information.

Again, I truly offer you my deepest sympathy and ask that you contact me for any additional assistance. I want to assure you that it is my sincere desire to alleviate your concern.

Sincerely

CHAPTER FOUR - OPERATIONS

The first three months of 1973 were of increasing importance in the operations of the 361st TFW. Due to the withdrawal of United States forces from South Vietnam, the AADP role of the 361st TFW was a primary concern of higher headquarters.² With the removal of ground forces from SEA, the primary means of detecting enemy infiltration and ceasefire violations fall to the VC-47/361st TFW.

On 5 February 1973, the squadron suffered its first combat loss. A VC-47, flying out of the 361st with eight men aboard, was shot down in a friendly fire area 100 miles north. Radio contact was lost with no information on why or where the aircraft went down. On 7 February, 1973, Maj Norman Vane, 361st TFW assistant operations officer, accompanied the Jolly Green helicopter that participated in the SAR effort. The wreckage was found with no apparent survivors. The bodies of the copilot, 1st Robert E. Bernhardt, and the third pilot, 2nd Devoro J. Prim III, were found and identified in the charred remains of the aircraft. The other crew members were believed consumed in the fire that resulted from the crash. Listed as missing in action were the aircraft commander, Capt George A. Spitz, the navigator, Capt Arthur M. Bollinger, and the radio operators from the 664th Security Squadron, Sgt Dale Brandenburg, Sgt Peter H. Cressman, Sgt Joseph A. Matejov, and 361st TFW Lt. Bolton.

Dear Capt. Vohden:

Persuant to my request of last week, I would like to obtain information on the crash of an Air Force EC-47 Q over Laos, the date of February 5, 1973.

It is known that such an aircraft was shot down with eight persons aboard. These men were: Lt. Robert Bernhardt, E-4 Dale Bradenberg, E-4 Joseph Matejov, E-4 Peter Cressman, Lt. Severo Primin, E-5 Todd Melton, Capt. Arthur Bollinger, and Capt. George Spitz. The body of Lt. Bernhardt was returned to the U.S. All men were declared dead.

It has come to my attention that as many as six men were known to be captured, or at the very least not definitely dead. This fact has not been released publicly up until now.

I would like to obtain a detailed account of the circumstances behind the move to declare these men dead, and information about the known status of these men at the time of the crash. Information concerning how U.S. data on these men was obtained (e.g. intercepts) would be appreciated as well.

Please do all you can to assist me in my research.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely yours,

Josh Levin

ADDITIONAL/Rev. Maddon/00040/24 Oct 72

An Air Force EC-47 aircraft departed from Ayutthaya, Thailand, on an operational mission over Laos at approximately 11:05 PM (local time) on February 4, 1973. It carried an eight man crew.
At approximately 1:25 AM on February 5th, the aircraft reported observing ground fire and at 1:30 AM reported communications normal. This was the last contact made with the aircraft. No emergency signals or automatic beacon signals were ever heard. After several attempts to establish contact failed, search and rescue efforts were begun at 6:00 AM (first light) on February 5th.

On February 7, 1973, the crash site was discovered. A pararescue team was lowered by hoist from a hovering helicopter on 7 February to search for survivors. The team reported that the aircraft was almost totally destroyed. The fuselage was punctured by what appeared to be an extremely intense fire and everything in the fuselage was reduced to ashes or melted. The aircraft had burned until down and there were no child seats. Both wing tips had broken off and were located some distance from the aircraft. The team found no survivors, but found remains of about 40 crew members. The area was considered very hostile and the rescue team's time on the ground was limited by available fuel to the hovering helicopter. The team recovered the identifiable remains and left the crash site when the helicopter's remaining fuel supply necessitated departure.

The remains recovered were later identified as those of the first copilot.

The field commander's decision to declare the crew to be dead was made on February 22, 1973. His decision was based on the circumstances of the loss and the report on the condition of the aircraft made by the rescue team. Although the aircraft was equipped with Ultra High Frequency, Very High Frequency and High Frequency radio, no distress call was received. Each crew member carried a survival radio programmed to operate on emergency frequency, but none were activated at the time of the crash. Most crew fired without wearing their survival equipment. In an emergency, it would have been necessary to don the equipment and open the exit door, actions which are made difficult if the plane has been hit and is not in level flight. When the aircraft was found, it was almost totally destroyed. The chances of survival were extremely remote.

Shortly after the loss of this aircraft, a ~~an~~ ^{that was not in} intelligence source reported that ~~that~~ ^{men who were} ~~four~~ ^{men} were transporting four captured ~~prisoners~~ ^{prisoners} about 55 kilometers from the crash site. ^{however,} No identifying or nationality was ~~given~~ ^{provided} ~~about~~ ^{about} ~~the~~ ^{the} ~~prisoners~~ ^{prisoners} ~~was~~ ^{was} ~~usually~~ ^{usually} ~~used~~ ^{used} ~~to~~ ^{to} ~~determine~~ ^{determine} ~~whether~~ ^{whether} ~~or~~ ^{or} ~~not~~ ^{not} ~~that~~ ^{that} ~~report~~ ^{report} pertained to crew members of the ED-47 aircraft. Loss on February 5, 1973. No further intelligence reports of any kind were received as to the location or disposition of the four ~~prisoners~~ ^{prisoners} mentioned in the intelligence received. The names of the crew and members whose location was not recovered were included on lists provided to the Ministry in May 75, June 75 and April 75 and lists provided to the IAC (in June, October and November 1975).

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Cressman

The attached statement was released by the Department of Defense as the result of a press inquiry concerning the loss of the aircraft on which your son, Sergeant Peter R. Cressman, was a crew member. I read this statement to Mrs. Cressman by telephone on 28 July 1978. Nothing contained in the press release changes the Air Force's position concerning the status of the crew members.

A map pinpointing the area of the crash site of the aircraft, as requested by your son, is being forwarded to you under separate cover.

If you have any questions concerning this matter, please let us know.

Press Release

An Air Force EC-47 aircraft departed Ubon Airfield, Thailand, on an operational mission over Laos at approximately 11:05 PM (local time) on February 4, 1973. It carried an eight man crew. At approximately 1:25 AM on February 5th, the aircraft reported observing ground fire and at 1:30 AM reported operations normal. This was the last contact made with the aircraft. No emergency signals or automatic beeper signals were ever heard. After several attempts to establish contact failed, search and rescue efforts were begun at 6:00 AM (first light) on February 5th.

On February 7, 1973, the crash site was discovered. A pararescue team was lowered by hoist from a hovering helicopter on 9 February to search for survivors. The team reported that the aircraft was almost totally destroyed. The fuselage was gutted by what appeared to have been an extremely intense fire and everything in the fuselage was reduced to ashes or melted. The aircraft had impacted upside down and there were no skid marks. Both wing tips had broken off and were located some distance from the aircraft. The team found no survivors, but found remains of three to four crew members. The area was considered very hostile and the rescue team's time on the ground was limited by available fuel in the hovering helicopter. The team recovered the identifiable remains and left the crash site when the helicopter's remaining fuel supply necessitated departure.

The remains recovered were later identified as those of the first co-pilot.

The field commander's decision to declare the crew to be dead was made on February 22, 1973. His decision was based on the circumstances of the loss and the report on the condition of the aircraft made by the rescue team. Although the aircraft was equipped with Ultra High Frequency, Very High Frequency and High Frequency radio, no distress call was received. Each crew member carried a survival radio preset to operate on emergency frequency, but none were activated at the time of the crash. Most crews flew without wearing their survival equipment. In an emergency, it would have been necessary to don the equipment and open the exit door, actions which are made difficult if the plane has been hit and is not in level flight. When the aircraft was found, it was almost totally destroyed. The chances of survival were extremely remote.

Shortly, after the loss of this aircraft, an intelligence source that may not be further identified reported that enemy forces were transporting four captured men who may have been American pilots about 65 kilometers from the crash site. However, no identity or nationality was specified. It is not possible to determine whether or not that report pertained to crew members of the EC-47 aircraft lost on February 5, 1973. No further intelligence reports of any kind were received as to the location or disposition of the four captured men mentioned in the intelligence report. The names of the seven crew members whose bodies were not recovered were included on lists provided to the Vietnamese in May 73, June 74 and April 75 and lists provided to the Lao in July 1973 and June, October and November 1974.

Misinformation

JACK ANDERSON: The Paris agreement ending the Vietnam War was signed in January 1973. Two weeks later, on February 5th, 1973, a spy plane flew over Laos. It was brought down by ground fire. Well, 17 days later, the eight-man crew was declared dead by the Pentagon. Yet the remains of only one flier were found.

Now my staff has learned that at least half of the crew probably survived. Pentagon officials realized this within days after the crash, yet the Air Force never told the families of these men that their loved ones were probably alive.

An American para-rescue team found the wreckage, but only the remains of the first copilot, Lieutenant Robert Bernhardt, were identified. Afterwards, a surveillance report, which the Pentagon itself calls reliable, sighted four captured men about 65 kilometers from the crash site.

A Pentagon spokesman now agrees there's a good chance these four men were survivors of the crash. Yet the Pentagon deliberately gave the families misinformation.

My sources say this case is not at all unique. The full details of other Air Force crashes, they say, haven't always been made available to the families.

ALL OF THE UNITS ARE TO FIRE AT THE ENEMY AIRCRAFT DURING THE NEW SEASON. THE PEOPLE INVOLVED IN THE SOUTH LAOTIAN CAMPAIGN HAVE SHOT DOWN ONE AIRCRAFT AND CAPTURED THE PILOT/PILOTS. IT REQUESTED THAT ALL OF THE UNITS GO OUT AND LOOK FOR PIECES OF THE AIRCRAFT. IF IT IS FOUND THAT THE AIRCRAFT IS TOO FAR AWAY TO PICK UP THE PIECES, REPORT SO THAT THEY CAN TAKE CARE OF IT. THIS IS TO BE DONE IMMEDIATELY, YOU ARE TO REPORT BACK ON THE 19TH. THIS IS ALL THE TIME THAT YOU HAVE TO REPORT. IT HAS TO BE REPORTED BY THE 19TH

1. HAVE REVIEWED ALL AVAILABLE INFORMATION CONCERNING THE FOUR FLIERS AND NO ADDITIONAL REFLECTIONS OR AMPLIFYING INFORMATION CONCERNING THE DISPOSITION OF THE FLIERS WERE REVEALED. FOR YOUR INFORMATION AND CONSIDERATION THE FOLLOWING IS A RECAP AND SOME OTHER OBSERVATIONS CONCERNING THIS SUBJECT.

2. FOUR FLIERS, WHOSE NATIONALITY WAS NOT DISCLOSED, WERE LOCATED ON 5 FEB IN THE GENERAL AREA NORTH OF MOUNG HONG.

THE FLIERS WERE TO BE TRANSFERRED FROM "44," A PROBABLE REFERENCE TO KILOMETER MARKER 44 ON ROUTE 914 (XD 495254 16-30N 106-25E) TO "93," A PROBABLE REFERENCE TO KILOMETER MARKER 93 ON ROUTE 1032 (XD 549505, 16-43N 106-27E), AND WERE APPARENTLY EN ROUTE TO WEST OF THE DMZ IN LAOS, TWO PERSONS WERE TO BE CONTACTED CONCERNING MOVEMENT OF THE POWS AND IF PROBLEMS WERE ENCOUNTERED, HIGH HQS WAS TO BE NOTIFIED TO SUPPLY "WAYS AND MEANS" (REFERENCES TO TRUCKS) TO MOVE THE FLIERS. SUFFICIENT WATER WAS TO BE GIVEN TO THE FLIERS.

THERE HAD BEEN SOME DIFFICULTIES IN TRANSPORTING THE FLIERS AND ASKED TO SEE IF THESE PROBLEMS HAD BEEN RESOLVED SO MOVEMENT COULD CONTINUE. THE PERSON ALSO ASKED THAT HE BE NOTIFIED OF THEIR TIME OF DEPARTURE AS HE WAS WAITING FOR THEM.

ALTHOUGH THE INITIAL LOCATION GIVEN

IS SOME

65 KM FROM THE CRASH SITE IT IS POSSIBLE THAT AT LEAST PART OF THE CREW WERE ABLE TO BAIL OUT PRIOR TO THE CRASH AND THEREFORE COULD HAVE BEEN CLOSER TO THIS POINT THAN THE CRASH SITE WHEN THEY WERE CAPTURED. FURTHER, SINCE VEHICLE TRANSPORTATION WAS INDICATED, RAPID MOVEMENT IS REASONABLE. IT IS POSSIBLE THAT THESE 4 FLIERS WERE PART OF THE CREW OF THE EC-47.

8418 PENDROY STREET
EAST MEADOW, NEW YORK 11554

29 March 1979

Honorable John C Stetson
Secretary of the Air Force
Washington, D.C. 20330

Dear Mr. Secretary:

There are many forces within me which prompt me to write to you. Firstly, I am a concerned citizen and feel that a wrong has been committed which should be righted. I am also a Retired Army Officer, a Graduate of the United States Military Academy, and hence part of the Family of those who serve, like yourself, the interest of our country in a military fashion. But, primarily, this letter is being written as a parent, a father of ten children, of which one child is the subject of this appeal, as outlined below.

My son, Sergeant Joseph A. Matejko, was involved in an Air Force mission approximately six years ago, February 4th, 1973, in which the plane was shot down over Laos. At first the Air Force declared him Missing in Action. Shortly thereafter, on the 19th of February, the Air Force changed his status to Killed in Action. As recommended by the Air Force personnel who had contact with us during this trying time, a Memorial Service was held for him in the community and the Family then started to close ranks and adjust to this tragic happening. But, as it developed, we were not to be left alone.

Several months ago, the Air Force sent us a news release which indicated that there was considerable doubt that all of the crew had perished since sightings were made of flyers being escorted on a trail to captivity. Privately, I contacted known friends and associates to find out what they knew of this. It appears that in my son's unit, it was common knowledge to all, that the "pilots" of this mission were dead but that the other four, who had operated the electronic reconnaissance equipment in the rear of the craft, had not only survived the crash but had been captured. They, the men of the 1994th Security Squadron, knew of several sightings of the men being herded along dirt roads. They also knew of enemy radio intercepts in which the handling of these captives were of immediate interest. It was "barracks room" talk. And these men expressed surprise and consternation that those captured would be declared dead in so short a time!

As can be expected, this surfacing of new information upset my whole family. After several discussions with the Air Force Casualty personnel, my wife and I were invited to the Pentagon on the 10th of March 74, to personally review the available information surrounding this aircraft incident. There we were made privy to the "visual-sighting" and "radio-intercept" reports in question. I was as amazed and as puzzled as my son's comrades were. I posed the question to Lt. Colonel Bobby D Ballard who was supervising our visit to Washington: "why, in the face of all this information, did the Air Force decide to list the entire crew as Killed in Action?" Colonel Ballard replied that he had asked that same question by telephone of Colonel Humphreys, Commander of the 8th Tactical Fighter Wing (F-4's), my son's senior unit commander at that time. Colonel Ballard explained that he had researched this answer in response to an earlier but similar query given him by parents of other crew members, this same flight. To which Colonel Humphreys replied that he had listed them as Killed in Action simply because he did not have this intelligence information available to him!

Mr. Secretary, I submit to you respectfully, that such a state of affairs would appear to anyone schooled in the Military Arts as inconceivable! In accepting that proposition, however, since it was offered, I hereby petition the Secretary to reopen this case and reverse the ruling made on behalf of my son and declare him again "Missing in Action" as it rightfully belongs, based on the information currently made available. A thorough interrogation of all personnel involved, under oath, to include Colonel F.A. Humphreys, his intelligence staff & other key officials as well as Captain William J. Shea and his cohorts of Detachment 3, 8994th Security Squadron--that now seems to be in order. If, in fact, Colonel Humphreys did not know of these intelligence gleanings, then, who covered up and why?

In closing, Mr. Secretary, I wish to emphasize that at this point I am writing this as a father, who, with wife and children behind him, petition for a redress of a grievance. I have no axe to grind. I am not looking for anyone to be punished. If, in the pursuit of this gruesome predicament, your representative do find a malfeasance of office, I feel confident that the matter will be addressed properly. Rather, I am trying to assure myself and family, and, in a way, my son, that we have not abandoned him.

Please, Mr. Secretary, do not let this become another type of "watergate" affair which will continue to fester and haunt the Air Force until it is aired satisfactorily.

Trusting,

Stephen A. Matejov

Lieutenant Colonel Stephen A. Matejov, USA (Retired)

East Meadow, New York 11554

Dear Colonel Matejov

The Secretary of the Air Force has authorized me to act for him on missing in action issues. Therefore, your 29 March 1979 letter to him has been referred to me for a reply.

Colonel Matejov, having reviewed all the available evidence, I do not believe that an investigation is warranted or that the evidence justifies a change of status to missing in action. Considering the length of time since his loss, the fact that our repatriated prisoners had no information about him or any member of his crew, and the severe health problems any American in arduous circumstances would experience in Southeast Asia, I conclude that there is no substantive basis for a presumption that your son survived.

My staff has spoken with General Humphries and are satisfied that he did not know of the reports about four captives. However, he has since concluded that, if they were accurate, their relevance to the loss of your son would have been questionable in view of all the other available information as set out in his letters to you beginning on 13 February 1973. General Humphries made his decision based upon the available information, and I do not find his judgment to have been arbitrary or unreasonable. Therefore, I do not believe that sworn statements or an investigation are necessary. With respect to the release of the sighting reports to you, I can add nothing to the explanation provided in the letter of transmittal. There was no "cover-up" or intentional withholding of information.

Status changes do not result in an abandonment of our government's efforts to obtain an accounting. We have and will continue to seek a final disposition for all of our personnel lost in Southeast Asia. The actual status of our personnel MIA or KIA has not resulted in an absolute refusal by the North Vietnamese or its allies, to provide information about members whose status has been changed to KIA. Confirmation of this is found in the fact that the remains of 48 Air Force personnel have been recovered since the general repatriation of PWs in March 1973, 27 of whom had previously been changed to killed in action. Consequently, I conclude that a change of status has not been a factor in the North Vietnamese or its allies decision to provide an accounting in individual cases such as your son's. Rather, they apparently provide information when they believe it will serve their interests. Whether we have changed a status to KIA appears not to be a factor in their decisions.

I deeply regret that you have suffered the loss of a son. Please accept my admiration and respect for the dignified manner in which you have presented your concerns. The Air Force appreciates the opportunity to review the case. Being convinced that the original decision was valid, I cannot honor your requests. I want to assure you that in the event any information concerning your son ever becomes known, we will advise you as expeditiously as possible regardless of his status.

Sincerely

POW'S AFTER HOSTILITIES

Mr. FOUNTAIN: You made reference to one case in which information was withheld. Are you in a position to tell us the circumstances in connection with that case?

Mr. SHIELDS: The one case of which I am aware in which there was not what we might describe as simply an oversight was a case in which three men may have been captured. This would have been after the termination of hostilities in South Vietnam. I believe that record has been made public now, has it not?

This was a communications intercept which indicated three men out of a reconnaissance aircraft may have been captured. In fact the communication intercept stated they were captured. The men though, were declared presumptively dead.

The circumstances of the loss were examined on the scene, and as I recall there was concern among officials within the Pentagon that the remains of those three men may not have been in the wreckage of the aircraft, so it raised strong presumptions in my mind that something may have happened to those men. They may have been captured. Nevertheless, they were declared presumptively dead.

I am not sure what the families were told. Families were not informed there had been a communication intercept which indicated they had been captured. This was in 1973.

Mr. GUYEN: Mr. Chairman I am going to give my time to Mr. Gilman because he has so much to ask and I had a chance to make a statement.

Letter of Mary Mateja to Mr. Lawrence Hargrett dated Sept. 17, 1988

Sept. 17, 1988

Dear Larry,

Please forgive me for not answering sooner, but last week I had a house full of visitors and we were never home. There's so much to see and do here. You asked for Joe's story, so I'm enclosing what Skyhook II did on Joe. Part of what they didn't have was my husband and my secret meeting with Dr. Roger Shields in N.Y. City. I didn't talk about this until two years ago. My husband had promised to never tell of this meeting when he made the arrangements. I kept quiet as long as he was alive. Not seeing enough action done to bring our men home, I feel I had to speak about it and I do.

Dr. Shields told us the four men on the ECA7 who manned the electronic equipment had bailed out and were among the known live captured Americans. Their names were on the list to be turned over to the Vietnamese of men we knew they had. It was Bill Clements, (Today the Governor of Texas) then acting Secretary of Defense, who ordered Roger Shields to cross out the four men's names and write over them "killed in action". Our men were killed on paper at the Paris Peace Talks. The reason given was to protect the 591 men coming home, because the ECA7 was flying eight days after the Peace Treaty was signed!

Dr. Shields said he told Bill Clements "You can't do that, you know these men are alive." Bill Clement's answer? "They are killed in action" Shields had to obey the order. Dr. Shields told us he had intended to see what he could do after the 591 men returned, but in all the excitement at Clark Air Force Base he "dropped the ball". My son, Pete Crossman, and the others were just written off. (Helton and Brandenburg)

I'm sure Evelyn Crossman can give you other information I might have left out.

I would appreciate it if you give Evelyn Crossman the Skyhook II material when you are finished with it. I had promised to give it to her in Wash. but with all the action going on I forgot. She's still waiting to see it. If you have any questions, feel free to call or write. I'll be here through Sept. I return to N.Y. early Oct. I hope I've sent you what you want.

I'm also enclosing a letter Joe wrote one week before his capture. Note his interest in the POWs - Little did he know he would soon become one. Thanks for your interest and help to all of us.

Sincerely,
(signed)

Mary Mateja

Excerpt from "Hearings before the Committee on Veteran's Affairs, United States Senate, Ninety-ninth Congress, second session. (1986) Vol.1, page 189.

Mr. NEVIN. Well, it was on apparently April 12, 1973, that the official policy, indeed the public policy, of the U.S. Government became that there is no reason to believe that any American missing remain alive in Indochina.

Senator DENTON. And Roger Shields—

Mr. NEVIN. Yes, sir.

Senator DENTON. Roger Shields went along with that and he is still a good man?

Mr. ASHWORTH. Sir, I think you hadn't been able to make it when I specifically brought up this instance.

Dr. Shields was ordered to say that, and when he objected, my understanding is Dr.—the voice over the telephone said to him. "They are dead. Do you understand, Dr. Shields, they are dead?"

And I have to tell you, in a telephone conversation that I had with Dr. Shields, he told me that at the time that this was stated, that this statement was made at the end of Homecoming, that there were enormous questions, enormous questions, about the POW's over there and that this was not a priority item after that point in time. Dr. Shields personally told me that.

Mr. William "Bill" Hendon's notes on his telephonic conversation with Dr. Roger Shields on 23 April 1963, starting at 1212 hrs. (EST):

TEXT:

(Dr. Roger) Shields answered (the) phone himself - no secretary - he said "Roger Shields". I said Roger, this is (Billy Hendon), etc.

I read him the statement attributed to him in pod S-9, and also (Brigadier General) Kingston's, and also Soth's February 13 (statement). He said he (Shields) hadn't really meant to say that (and he wasn't quoted correctly. He claimed Soth was referring to the 2 (POWs released) thru Hanoi - I (Hendon) told him no way - (and) cited 6 were captured by NVA (North Vietnamese Army) - rather by PL (Pathet Lao), but turned (them) over to NVA in 15 minutes. (I) read (the) Soth statement again and asked how we could make such a statement that they (the POWs) were all dead. He said "we negotiated them away". They were trying to get us to recognize them, deal with them, we said "no way".

There was one incident - I (Shields) can't remember the name of it...

(Hendon): Specimen 170...

(Shields): No, I remember that one - this was a C47 shot down in (February) - we had a radio intercept where they (the NVA) were talking about having the crew - some of the crew - as prisoners - 4 or 5 were killed - the rest were captured - we knew it and negotiated it away. I tried to tell Bill Clements and I almost lost my job. He said they were all dead. I told him we had no evidence of that (and) we couldn't say that. He said "you didn't hear me, you didn't hear what I said - they're all dead. Bill Clements was really a hard core guy on dealing with the communists.... I almost lost my job.

Shields said he had to go to a luncheon, was late, and then had to go to S.E. Asia, (and) would return (on the) 23rd of May. After assuring Shields I would call him in late May (he said he'd come to DC or to NY for meeting). I went over to tell V of my call and cite it as an example of what you can learn if you cut there moving, what you pick up, and I told him the whole conversation. He (V) was stunned. He couldn't believe it. He couldn't believe when I showed him their dead out names in the Homecoming book. He couldn't believe the guy (Shields) would say it over an unsecure line.

I (Hendon) called ----- to get DIA summary of (that) case. It included a (document) we gave to Laos statement captured immediately. V thinks this gets them off the hook as it implies DIA incorporated Shield's story into the info given to the Lao. I tell him no, I recall a story of some guys being seen +/- 20 km away, this is what they mean.

V and ----- see Sol and I am right. V is almost a believer!! Only a few more thousand miles to go!!

Signed and dated.

Case #1983-0-01 thru 07

NARRATIVE

On 5 February 1973, an EC47 aircraft, tail number 43-58636, with eight personnel on board, disappeared while flying over Saravane Province, Laos. On 7 February 1973, the crash site of this aircraft was located in the vicinity of coordinates YC 143 291. Pararescuemen were lowered by jungle penetrator to investigate the burned wreckage. They reported that three of four charred remains were observed in the wreckage but were able to recover only one set which was later identified as one of the missing crew. Due to the possibility that some of the crewmembers may have parachuted to safety prior to the crash, aerial searches were conducted in the area and emergency radio channels monitored, but no trace of any other crewmember could be found. Subsequent information indicates that several of these crewmembers may have been captured.

WORTH L. BLOOM

NOW COMES Jerry J. Mooney, and hereby swears and affirms the following:

I am presently 46 years of age, married and have two children. I am currently a citizen and resident of the State of Montana. I have served on active duty with the United States Air Force since 28 April, 1957. I retired on the 1st day of June, 1977. From approximately June, 1968 to December, 1974, I was assigned duties as a special research analyst and crypt analyst to include all formal reporting actions at duty locations which were Joint Sobe Processing Center (Okinawa) and the 6970th Support Group (Ft. George G. Meade, Md.) with duty to the National Security Agency (NSA).

A general description of my assigned duties was that I was a Superintendent and Section NCOIC for airborne cryptographic operations. I was also a special research analyst and fund programmer and evaluator for the B2 Group. I had responsibilities for developing, reviewing and approving plans pertaining to airborne and conventional resources (intelligence). I assisted in the planning, funding, and allocation of manpower and equipment resources in accordance with global and local requirements. I maintained a top secret security clearance during this entire period of time.

Specifically, on a day-to-day basis, I would receive, process, analyze, evaluate and formally report significant intelligence data in accordance with high level consumer requirements.

I have attended and graduated from the following formal training in the intelligence field: Apprentice Radio Traffic Analysis Specialist Course (AE 10020, March Air Force Base, California), Cryptanalytic Specialist Course (ALX 20130, Goodfellow Air Force Base, Texas), NCO Academy, United States Air Force Security Service. I served in an intelligence career field throughout my twenty years of service with the U.S. Air Force.

During the Vietnam conflict I was assigned to the J.S.P.C. in Sobe Chinawa and later with the 6970th Support Group with duty assignment to the National Security Agency. Based upon my six years of experience in these assignments and based upon my intelligence background, I am presently convinced that there are living Americans who are prisoners of the Vietnam War being held in captivity in Southeast Asia.

I base this opinion on the following: in my job during these assignments I received intercepted North Vietnamese communications and messages directly relating to the command and control and military operations of North Vietnamese units operating in North Vietnam, northern South Vietnam and Laos. These communications were both directive and informative in nature and contained orders to "shoot down the enemy, shoot down the enemy and capture the pilot alive, and shoot down the enemy and execute the pilot." These were the exact operational orders which I collected.

Further, other communications were received discussing the handling, disposition and transportation of captured American personnel—both pilots and ground forces people. These messages revealed the delivery of captured Americans from Laos, South Vietnam through the Bankar and Hugia passes to Vinh, North Vietnam and probably on to Hanoi. They also revealed the execution of captured Americans and the pre-planned execution of impending captured Americans. In my role as a senior analyst and having access to both operational and collateral data from other military organizations and national agencies I was able to associate North Vietnamese references to U.S. official listings of missing U.S. personnel. I compiled a listing of over three hundred U.S. military personnel categorized as MIA/POW. At Homcoming One less than five percent of those on my list known to be alive were returned to the United States.

Further, as a basis for my opinion, North Vietnamese messages revealed a high interest in selecting priority targets to include F-111 aircraft.

airborne intelligence collectors, F-4 laser bomb equipped aircraft and electronic support aircraft. It was clear from the intelligence collected that the North Vietnamese were particularly interested in capturing the crew or pilots of these aircraft alive. They were considered very important prisoners.

In approximately February, 1973, while assigned with the 6970th Support Group assigned further to the National Security Agency at Ft. Meade, Maryland, my section received, analyzed, evaluated and formally reported the shoot-down of an EC-470 aircraft in Laos. Based upon the enemy messages which we collected there were at least five to seven survivors who were identified as Americans and transported to North Vietnam. This is an example of their interest in an intelligence collector aircraft. Since the aircraft was assigned to the 6994th Security Squadron (an intelligence collection unit) and its members were trained intelligence collectors, this confirms my earlier statement of high North Vietnamese interest in capturing these individuals alive. This information was formally reported to interested consumers with an add-on of "White House." I personally wrote the message that these men had been captured alive, that they were Americans and had been transported to North Vietnam. In secure phone conversations with the Defense Intelligence Agency we were in total agreement that these were the crew members of the downed EC-470. In this regard, the attached correspondence from Rear Admiral Jerry O. Tuttle dated 25 February, 1981, relates to this specific incident that I reported on. The representation that there was no identity or nationality of the reported prisoners is completely false. I have reviewed the DIA computer print-out dated 80/02/26 under the "incident date" of 730205 which is attached hereto as Exhibit Two. This is the same incident about which I am referring. The crewmembers listed are in "category one" according to the print out, which confirms my report that certain of these crewmembers were captured alive since I have now learned that "category one" means "confirmed knowledge" of the presence of these men by North Vietnam.

I have given this sworn affidavit under penalty of perjury and I confirm that all of the above is true and accurate to the best of my information and belief. I have given this information also to a United States Congressman as a concerned citizen of this country. I have made this affidavit knowing full well that it may be filed in the case of Smith, et.al. -vs- Reagan, et.al.

25 FEB 1981

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Cressman:

This is in response to your letter of 1 September 1980 to Mr. and Mrs. George Brooks, which was subsequently forwarded to the Defense Intelligence Agency for comments.

The Defense Intelligence Agency has completed a review of your son's case, including the material that you provided. Based on that review, it is understandable why you would have concern and anxiety regarding some of the information and circumstances surrounding the loss of your son's aircraft.

However, based on our review, the information as stated by the Air Force in their press release of 21 July 1978, is correct, in that no identity or nationality of the reported prisoners was specified, and that there was no certainty that these people were American or that the information was connected to the crash of your son's aircraft. Additionally, the statement in the press release that no additional intelligence reports of any kind were received about these four prisoners, remains true to this date.

DIA will continue to make every effort to account for all Americans in Southeast Asia, including your son. I hope that someday we can put to rest all of your and other families' anxieties and doubts about the fate of your loved ones by obtaining a full accounting and the return of any Americans who may still be held captive there.

If I can be of further assistance, please let me know.

Sincerely,

SIGNED

JERRY O. TUTTLE
Rear Admiral, USN
Vice Deputy Director for Intelligence and External Affairs

AFFIDAVIT

RE: SGT JOSEPH A. MATEJOV, ET AL.
THE MISSING IN ACTION AND PRISONERS OF WAR RESULTING FROM THE VIETNAM CONFLICT.

STATE OF MONTANA) COUNTY OF ROOSEVELT) ss.

My name is JERRY J. MOONEY. I CURRENTLY RESIDE AT 324 EDGAR STREET, WOLF POINT, MONTANA, 59201. I AM 49 YEARS OLD, MARRIED WITH TWO DAUGHTERS AND FOUR GRANDCHILDREN. BETWEEN 28TH OF APRIL, 1957 AND 1ST OF JUNE, 1977, I WAS ON ACTIVE DUTY WITH THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE. I RETIRED AT THE RANK OF E8, SMSGT. DURING MY 20 YEAR MILITARY CAREER, I SERVED AS AN INTELLIGENCE ANALYST AT VARIOUS OVERSEAS LOCATIONS IN EUROPE, AFRICA, THE NEAR EAST, THE FAR EAST AND SOUTHEAST ASIA. FURTHER, I PERFORMED THREE STATESIDE DUTY ASSIGNMENTS WITH THE NATIONAL SECURITY AGENCY.

I MAKE THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT CONCERNING SGT JOSEPH A. MATEJOV, ET AL., THE MIA'S AND POW'S RESULTING FROM THE VIETNAM CONFLICT, OF MY OWN FREE WILL AND WITH FULL UNDERSTANDING IT IS EQUIVALENT TO SWORN TESTIMONY AND SUBJECT TO THE PENALTIES OF PERJURY:

DURING THE VIETNAM WAR, THERE WAS A POPULAR PROTEST SONG THAT CONTAINED THE LYRICS: "WHERE DID ALL THE YOUNG MEN GO, A LONG TIME PASSING?". FOR 16 LONG YEARS, SGT MATEJOV'S MOTHER, MARY MATEJOV, THE OTHER FAMILY MEMBERS, AND TOO FEW CONCERNED CITIZENS HAVE ASKED THAT SAME QUESTION OF OUR GOVERNMENT CONCERNING THE MIA'S AND POW'S FROM THE VIETNAM WAR. OUR GOVERNMENT, IN CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES/COMMISSIONS, A PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION, JUDICIAL COURT ACTIONS, AND OFFICIAL STATEMENTS OF RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS, HAVE BORROWED FROM THAT PROTEST SONG THE OFFICIAL U.S. POSITION: "TO GRAVEYARDS EVERYWHERE". CONSEQUENTLY, DURING THE PAST 16 YEARS, OFFICIALLY THIS POSITION HAS BEEN A GOVERNMENT VULTURE CIRCLING THE BATTLEFIELDS OF SOUTHEAST ASIA PICKING BONES, ANY BONES, TO ACCOUNT FOR OUR MISSING. MEANWHILE, THE AMERICAN EAGLE AND ALL IT STANDS FOR IN TRUTH, JUSTICE AND DUE PROCESS, HAS BEEN CAGED FROM THIS ISSUE BY POLICY AND POLITICS.

THE SURVIVING CREW MEMBERS OF THE EC470 DID NOT GO TO A GRAVEYARD ANYWHERE. THEY WERE CAPTURED ALIVE AND IDENTIFIED IN A CATEGORY KNOWN AS "NANNA FROM LENIN, MD-ROSCOV BOUND!" THEY WERE IDENTIFIED AS POW'S. BUT POLICY AND POLITICS AT THAT TIME, ABANDONED THEM, FOR "VIETNAM," AS I NOW REALIZE, BECAME THE "WALK AWAY WAR".

PRESIDENT NIXON WALKED AWAY WITH HIS PEACE WITH HONOR!
HENRY KISSINGER WALKED AWAY WITH HIS NOBEL PEACE PRIZE!
THE HAWKS OF CONGRESS WALKED AWAY KNOWING THE RIGHT BATTLE HAD NOT BEEN FOUGHT AND NOW, COULD NOT BE WON!
THE DOVES OF CONGRESS WALKED AWAY FILLED WITH A GREAT SENSE OF "VICTORY" AT ANY COST.

THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE WALKED AWAY FACING A HUGE TASK TO REBUILD IT'S CAPABILITIES AND LEAVING BEHIND A SMALL REAR GUARD TO CONTROL THE MESS AND PICK-UP THE BONES.

THE MEDIA WALKED AWAY FOR THOSE SENSATIONAL MILITARY BASHING HEADLINES WERE NO LONGER AVAILABLE-NO MORE GOOD RATINGS!

THE STATE DEPARTMENT WALKED AWAY TO PERCEIVED GREATER TASKS; DETENTE, SALT AND ABM TREATIES.

THE MAJORITY OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE WALKED AWAY RELIEVED THAT THE WHOLE BLOODY AFFAIR WAS FINALLY OVER.

AND I TOO, WALKED AWAY, KNOWING WE HAD LEFT SGT MATEJOV AND OTHERS, BEHIND. BUT I WAS CONFIDENT OUR POLITICAL AND POLICY LEADERSHIP WOULD BRING THE MEN HOME!

BUT TO THOSE WHO LIVED AND FOUGHT THIS GOVERNMENT DICTATED "NO WIN" WAR, IT WAS A DIFFERENT ROUTE TO FOLLOW.

FOR 55,000 PLUS, THEY WERE CARRIED AWAY IN COFFINS; THOUSANDS MORE ROLLED AWAY IN WHEELCHAIRS, CRIPPLED FOR LIFE!

COUNTLESS MORE WANDERED AWAY NOT KNOWING, OR UNDERSTANDING, WHAT HAD OCCURRED!

OTHERS STOMPED AWAY, DETERMINED TO FORGET, KNOWING THEY HAD BEEN BETRAYED!

SOME WERE LEFT BEHIND TO THEIR JUNGLED OR WATERY GRAVES; AND

AS A NATIONAL DISGRACE, MANY LIKE SGT MATEJOV, WERE LEFT BEHIND TO THE MERCY OF A NO-MERCY ENEMY AND THEIR INFORMATIONAL DETERMINED ALLIES.

SOME OF THE INTELLIGENCE INFORMATION RELATING TO THE EC470 INCIDENT WAS PROCESSED, EVALUATED AND REPORTED BY MY SECTION. FOUR OF THE CREW, THE "BEEPS" (BACKEND ELECTRONIC PEOPLE), SURVIVED THE INCIDENT AND WERE CAPTURED ALIVE. IN CONVERSATIONS WITH DIA ANALYTIC COUNTERPARTS, THEY CONCURRED, STATING THAT BACKUP OPERATIONAL DATA SUPPORTED THE INTELLIGENCE. FOUR HAD SURVIVED AND WERE CAPTURED BY ENEMY FORCES. THIS WAS A SIMPLE, UNCOMPLICATED TRUTH ARRIVED AT BY THE EXPERIENCED EXPERTS OF THE TIME, BASED ON THEIR PROFESSIONAL REVIEW OF ALL AVAILABLE DATA, WITHOUT THE INTERFERENCE OF POLICY OR POLITICS.

SOMETIME LATER, INFORMATION APPEARED IN THE PUBLIC MEDIA INDICATING THE FOUR SURVIVORS OF THE EC470 HAD BEEN CAPTURED BY THE PATHET LAO. THIS WAS POLITICALLY CONVENIENT TO OUR GOVERNMENT, FOR THE FOUR EC470 SURVIVORS COULD THEN JUST DISAPPEAR INTO THAT RECOGNIZED MIA/POW "BLACK HOLE" IN LAOS, AS DID SO MANY OTHERS. HOWEVER, DATA I PROCESSED AND

EVALUATED WAS NOT PATHET LAO, BUT NORTH VIETNAMESE! BECAUSE OF ENEMY FORCE DISPOSITIONS AND TACTICAL COOPERATION IN SOUTH LAOS, THE PATHET LAO HAD INVOLVEMENT IN THIS INCIDENT. BUT IT WAS THE NORTH VIETNAMESE WHO EXERCISED THE COMMAND AND CONTROL OF THE FOUR SURVIVORS OF THE EC47Q; MATEJOV, CRESSMAN, BRANDENBURG AND MELTON. THIS WAS CRITICAL AS IT ENABLED AN IMMEDIATE, DETAILED EVALUATION OF AVAILABLE DATA. IT CORRELATED KNOWLEDGE OF ENEMY INTENTS AND CAPABILITIES RESULTING IN AN ACCURATE AND PROFESSIONAL ASSESSMENT. TO THE BEST OF MY RECOLLECTION IT WAS AS FOLLOWS:

EC47Q SHOOTDOWN, 5 FEB 73

"THE EC47Q INTELLIGENCE COLLECTION MISSION WAS, IN ALL PROBABILITY, FLAK TRAPPED, A DELIBERATE PRE-PLANNED ACTION, RATHER THAN A TARGET OF OPPORTUNITY. THIS IS SUPPORTED BY (~~SE-FFZ~~) ACTIVITY SHOWING AN ENEMY INTEREST AND PROBABLE INTENT AGAINST THE MISSION PRIOR TO THE INCIDENT. THE PROBABLE UNIT INVOLVED IN THE STRIKE WAS THE (~~5TH~~) REGIMENT WHO HAD CONDUCTED A SIMILAR FLAK TRAP IN LAOS IN LATE MARCH 1972 AGAINST A C130 AIRCRAFT. INFORMATION INDICATES THE "DEEPS"; MATEJOV, CRESSMAN, BRANDENBURG AND MELTON, SURVIVED THE STRIKE AND WERE CAPTURED ALIVE. DATA FURTHER REVEALED THE CAPTIVES WERE IN THE CONTROL OF THE NORTH VIETNAMESE AND THEIR MOVEMENT WOULD BE EITHER TO HANOI OR THE SPECIAL POW CAMP NORTHWEST OF VINH AT (CN ---). IN THEIR MOVEMENT, PRELIMINARY INTERROGATIONS WOULD PROBABLY BE ACCOMPLISHED BY THE (3RD) AND (4TH) DIVISIONS IN THE (---) AREA AND THE (---) DIVISION IN THE (---) AREA. IT WAS FURTHER ANTICIPATED, THAT DUE TO THEIR CURRENT SPECIAL KNOWLEDGE, AND PAST EXPERIENCE, THEY WOULD BE HANDLED AS "MANNA FROM LENIN", WERE MB (MOSCOW BOUND), AND WOULD EVENTUALLY BE PROCESSED THROUGH (SAM REGU) LAOS".

UPON COMPLETION OF THIS ASSESSMENT, IT WAS DISCUSSED WITH A COUNTERPART ANALYST AT DIA. DURING THAT CONVERSATION I MENTIONED, "WELL, THEY (THE SURVIVING EC47Q CREW MEMBERS) ARE GONE FOREVER. WE WILL NEVER GET THEM BACK". THE ANALYST I WAS TALKING TO REPLIED, "YOU BETCHA!"

THOSE TWO STATEMENTS (...THEY ARE GONE FOREVER...AND YOU BETCHA") REPRESENTED AN UNDERSTANDING BY EXPERTS I ASSOCIATED WITH, THAT CERTAIN PRISONERS HELD BY THE ENEMY, "MANNA FROM LENIN", WERE GONE FOREVER. THIS WAS BECAUSE OF THE TACTICAL, STRATEGIC, AND/OR SCIENTIFIC/ECONOMIC VALUE THEY REPRESENTED TO THE ENEMY AND THEIR ALLIES. THIS SHOULD SURPRISE NO ONE, LEAST OF ALL, OUR GOVERNMENT. IN THE ARMS RACE OF MILITARY POSTURES, CAPABILITIES, AND DISPOSITIONS, IT IS NOT OUR QUANTITY THAT ENABLES US TO MAINTAIN A BALANCE OF POWER WITH HOSTILE NATIONS, BUT OUR EXPERT QUALITY-HITECH. IT IS ALSO TRUE, THAT OUR ENEMIES, AS WELL AS FRIENDS AND ALLIES, HAVE RISKED ESPIONAGE, BLACKMAIL, SUBVERSION, ETC., TO OBTAIN SECRETS AND CAPABILITIES. IN THE VIETNAM WAR, MANY OF OUR MEN, TRAINED AND WITH HANDS-ON EXPERIENCE IN THAT HI-TECH AREA OR WITH SPECIAL KNOWLEDGE CAME FLOATING DOWN IN PARACHUTES LIKE "MANNA FROM LENIN" INTO THE COMMAND AND CONTROL OF THE ENEMY AND IT'S ALLIES. SIMPLY PUT, THEY WERE FREEBIES, AND TO DENY THAT THE ENEMY AND IT'S ALLIES WOULD TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS "FREEBIE" SITUATION IS AN ANALYTICAL CRIME OF GROSS INCOMPETENCE.

THE SURVIVING FOUR CREW MEMBERS OF THE EC47Q SHOOTDOWN WERE CARRIED IN THREE UNOFFICIAL ANALYTICAL WORKING AID LISTS? THEY WERE

(A) THOSE MIA'S KNOWN TO BE CAPTURED ALIVE. A LIST OF OVER 400 NAMES OF MIA'S OF WHICH APPROXIMATELY 305 WERE LISTED AS POW'S. ONLY ABOUT 5% WERE RETURNED AT HOMECOMING I. (ASSESS 16 SEP 1977)

(B) THE "WHO TO ASK LIST" ON MIA/POW'S. THIS LIST WAS DEVELOPED IN 1972/73 TO PROVIDE SUPPORT TO OUR HIGH LEVEL NEGOTIATIONS, IF REQUESTED. SIMPLY PUT, IT LISTED OVER 1,000 MIA/POW'S BY NAME AND WHO, WITHIN THE ENEMY'S MILITARY FORCE DISPOSITIONS, WOULD HAVE KNOWLEDGE OF THEIR FATE. SPECIFICALLY, IT WOULD HAVE ENABLED OUR NEGOTIATORS TO ASK, WITH COMPETENCE AND AUTHORITY, NORTH VIETNAMESE NEGOTIATORS: "WE KNOW THAT YOUR (1ST) DIVISION, (5TH) REGIMENT, (...) COMPANY? WAS INVOLVED AND HAS SPECIFIC DETAILS ON THIS MIA/POW (MATEJOV, CRESSMAN, ETC.), HOW ABOUT IT?" NO REQUEST FOR THIS TYPE OF INFORMATION WAS EVER MADE?

(C) THE WARM BODY COUNT SCENARIO FOR 72/73-A COLD SURGICAL LIST WHEREIN ANALYSIS WITHOUT, HEART OR HOPE, MADE KIA DECLARATIONS FOR CERTAIN MIA'S NOT RETURNED AT HOMECOMING I AND CONTINUED POW STATUS FOR OTHERS WITH CAUSE. IT WAS PROMPTED BY A PERCEIVED CHANGE IN POW POLICY BY THE NORTH VIETNAMESE IN 1972, AND IN ANTICIPATION OF SUCCESS AT THE PARIS PEACE TALKS AND WAS REQUIRED TO ENSURE OUR MILITARY WITHDRAWAL FROM SEA.

MY IMMEDIATE SUPERVISORS KNEW I MAINTAINED THESE LISTS. BUT IT WAS NOT UNTIL THE SUMMER OF 1974, FOLLOWING A POSSIBLE POW SITUATION IN LAOS, THAT THEY WERE REQUESTED. MY SUPERIORS WERE INFORMED WHERE I HAD FILED THESE LISTS AND THEIR FUTURE HANDLING AND DISPOSITION IS UNKNOWN.

IF SOMEONE WOULD HAVE TOLD ME 16 YEARS AGO THAT IN 1985, THERE WOULD BE AN MIA/POW CONTROVERSY, I WOULD HAVE REPLIED "YOU'RE CRAZY". PRESIDENT NIXON'S STATEMENT FOLLOWING HOMECOMING I, "THAT ALL OUR BRAVE MEN WERE BACK HOME AGAIN", WAS ACCEPTED BY US ONLY AS A POLITICAL STATEMENT WITH LITTLE IMPACT ON POLICY. FOR AT THE SAME TIME, AND CONTINUING UNTIL AT LEAST 1976/77, THE HIGHEST NATIONAL PRIORITY WAS TO "ISOLATE, LOCATE, IDENTIFY AND RECOVER AMERICAN POW'S PARTICULARLY IN LAOS". THIS REQUIREMENT WAS NOT ONE OF THOSE "EYES ONLY", BEHIND CLOSED DOORS POSITIONS,

BUT WAS TASKED THROUGHOUT THE RANKS AND AT ALL OPERATIONAL LEVELS WITH COMMITTED AND DEDICATED RESOURCES. BUT OPERATIONS, BY THEMSELVES CANNOT ACCOMPLISH THIS OBJECTIVE, THAT IS, THE RETURN OF OUR POW'S. IT MUST BE SUPPORTED AND ACTED UPON BY POLICY AND POLITICS. AND THERE LAYS THE CAUSE AS TO WHY OUR POW'S HAVE NOT COME HOME, AND WHY IN 1929 WE CONTINUE TO HAVE AN MIA/POW ISSUE, ONE OF POLICY AND POLITICS WITH A TRIAD OF OFFICIAL POSITIONS.

1. FIRST THERE WAS THE BAMBOO CURTAIN. THEY ARE ALL DEAD. A SIMPLE WAY TO CLOSE THE DOOR ON AN EMBARRASSING AND POTENTIALLY COSTLY SITUATION IN REPARATIONS AND ACCOUNTABILITY TO THOSE WHO SERVED AND FOR THE WAR. NO NEED TO MAKE THE MIA/POW ISSUE THE LAST BATTLE, INTERNATIONALLY. IT WOULD BE TOO COSTLY.

2. SECOND, THE BRICK WALL. SIGHTING REPORTS, ALTHOUGH THE LEAST RELIABLE OF SPECIAL INFORMATION AND THE MOST DEBATABLE, HAD TO BE EXPLAINED AWAY. EASY ENOUGH WITH AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT THAT SOME MAY STILL BE ALIVE BUT REMAIN BY CHOICE. SIMPLY PUT, TRAITORS. OF COURSE, NO MENTION IS MADE TO THE FACT THAT THE GOVERNMENT'S ACTIONS OVER THE YEARS, THAT IS, DENYING THEIR EXISTENCE, COULD BE CONSIDERED COLLABORATION AND CONTRIBUTED TO SUCH DECISIONS BY SOME POW'S.

3. THIRD, THE STEEL SHIELD OF NATIONAL SECURITY, A POLICY TO PROTECT US ALL. SIMPLY ITS PREMISE IS, GOOD WILL BEGETS GOOD WILL - WE WILL NOT DEAL OR NEGOTIATE FOR HOSTAGES. THIS NATION WILL NOT BE BLACKMAILED. IF THOSE WHO HOLD OUR POW'S WISH TO "GIVE THEM BACK" WITH NO STRINGS ATTACHED, WE WILL ACCEPT THEM. HOWEVER, WE WILL NOT CONSIDER ANY PAYMENT FOR SUCH AN ACTION EVEN THOUGH SUCH A PAYMENT MAY BE A LEGAL OR MORAL OBLIGATION AS A RESULT OF ACTIONS DURING THE WAR.

CONFRONTED WITH THIS UNDERSTANDING, PERHAPS MY STATEMENT IN 1973 FOLLOWING THE EC470 INCIDENT THAT THE SURVIVORS "WERE GONE FOREVER" NOW APPLIES TO ALL POW'S. THE HISTORY OF THE ISSUE TO DATE SEEMS TO SUPPORT THAT 1973 CONCLUSION.

BETWEEN MY RETIREMENT IN 1977 UNTIL MID 1985, I GAVE LITTLE THOUGHT OR CONCERN TO THE MIA/POW ISSUE. THE HIGH LEVEL REQUIREMENTS TO LOCATE AND BRING OUR MEN HOME WOULD BE ACCOMPLISHED? FURTHER, LIVING IN AN ISOLATED AREA OF MONTANA, NO NATIONAL NEWS RELATING TO THIS ISSUE WAS AVAILABLE. THUS FOR 8 YEARS, I LIVED WITH CONFIDENCE AND FAITH THAT OUR GOVERNMENT WAS DEEPLY COMMITTED TOO, AND WOULD BRING THE MEN HOME. IN 1985, CABLE T.V. CAME TO WOLF POINT, MONTANA, AND WITH IT, EXTENSIVE COVERAGE OF NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL NEWS. IT WAS AT THAT TIME, I VIEWED A NEWS REPORT CONCERNING THE THOMAS HART INCIDENT AND HOW THE GOVERNMENT CLAIMED THAT ALL THE REMAINS HAD BEEN RECOVERED

FROM THE CRASH SITE EXCAVATION IN SOUTHERN LAOS. I KNEW THIS TO BE IN ERROR, FOR I RECALLED MY RECORDS LISTING SURVIVORS FROM THAT INCIDENT.

MY INTEREST RENEWED IN THE MIA/POW ISSUE, I DID SOME CHECKING AND FOUND, TO MY TOTAL SHOCK, THAT ALL HAD BEEN DECLARED DEAD AND THERE WAS STRONG GOVERNMENT INSISTENCE THAT NO POW'S REMAINED. INITIALLY I PLANNED TO CONTACT THE DIA, AN ORGANIZATION I HAD A GREAT DEAL OF RESPECT FOR BECAUSE OF THE EXPERTISE IT HAD DEMONSTRATED TO ME IN OUR CONTINUOUS CONTACTS DURING THE WAR, AND CHALLENGE THIS CURRENT POLICY POSITION WITH A REVIEW OF MY HANDS-ON KNOWLEDGE AND EXPERTISE CONCERNING THE ISSUE. HOWEVER, I LATER DECIDED TO JOIN IN THE SMITH, ET AL., PLAINTIFFS, LAWSUIT AS A LEGAL MEANS TO CONFRONT THE GOVERNMENT TO AVOID A CLOSED DOOR, CONTROLLED ATMOSPHERE AND GIVE THE ISSUE SOME PUBLIC EXPOSURE "JUST IN CASE" A COVERUP OR INCOMPETENT EMPLOYMENT OF POLICY AND POLITICS WAS INVOLVED.

IN LATE 1985, I SUBMITTED AN AFFIDAVIT ON THE MIA/POW ISSUE HIGHLIGHTING THE EC470 INCIDENT. PRIOR TO ITS PUBLIC RELEASE IN JANUARY 1986, I HAD OCCASION TO DISCUSS ITS CONTENTS WITH A REPORTER FROM THE WALL STREET JOURNAL. DURING THE CONVERSATION, THE REPORTER ASKED ME WHAT REACTION I EXPECTED FROM THE GOVERNMENT ONCE THE AFFIDAVIT WAS MADE PUBLIC. I REPLIED THAT I ANTICIPATED THE DIA TO CALL ME IN AND WE WOULD DISCUSS MY CONCERNS AND GET THINGS SETTLED. HIS REPLY WAS "LAUGHTER" FOLLOWED BY THE SENTIMENT THAT DIA WOULD NEVER DO THAT FOR IT WOULD BE AN ADMISSION BY THEM THAT I WAS TELLING THE TRUTH!

IN LATE JANUARY, 1986, I TRAVELED TO WASHINGTON D.C. TO TESTIFY BEFORE THE SENATE VETERANS AFFAIR'S COMMITTEE CONCERNING THE MIA/POW ISSUE. PRIOR TO MY DEPARTURE FOR WASHINGTON, I RECEIVED THREATS NOT TO GO. THE NIGHT PRIOR TO MY TESTIFYING, I RECEIVED THREATS TO "GET OUT OF WASHINGTON". THIS PROMPTED CAPITAL HILL POLICE PROTECTION DURING THE REMAINDER OF MY VISIT TO WASHINGTON.

THE MORNING OF THE DAY I WAS TO TESTIFY, I WAS CONFRONTED BY OFFICIALS OF THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT AND SECURITY OFFICERS OF THE GOVERNMENT. ESSENTIALLY I WAS TOLD I WAS BEING "BAD" AND FROM NOW ON LOT TO DISCUSS MY KNOWLEDGE OF THIS ISSUE WITH ANYONE UNLESS I HAD THEIR PERMISSION FIRST. NOT ONCE DURING THE COURSE OF OUR BRIEF CONVERSATIONS DID THESE OFFICIALS MENTION OR SHOW WILLINGNESS TO DISCUSS THE REAL ISSUE, THE MIA/POWS.

DURING THIS SAME TIME FRAME, AT GOVERNMENT INSISTENCE, MY ORIGINAL AFFIDAVIT WAS WITHDRAWN FROM THE COURT, REWRITTEN AND RE-SUBMITTED FOR "SECURITY REASONS". MUCH OF THE DATA THAT WAS DELETED FROM THE ORIGINAL AFFIDAVIT WAS EXTRACTED FROM "UNCLASSIFIED" PERFORMANCE APPRAISALS GIVEN

TO ME BY AIR FORCE PERSONNEL CLERKS AT ANNUAL RECORDS' CHECKS. UNCLASSIFIED THEN, BUT NOW CLASSIFIED BECAUSE IT WAS BEING USED IN THE MIA/POW ISSUE???

IN JANUARY, 1987, THE BBC BROADCAST "WE CAN KEEP YOU FOREVER" WAS AIRED. FOLLOWING THAT BROADCAST, THE DOD RELEASED A PUBLIC STATEMENT REFERRING TO THOSE OF US WHO HAD APPEARED IN THAT BROADCAST AS "LESS THAN CREDIBLE".

HOWEVER, LATER ON, MID-SUMMER OF 1987, I RECEIVED A LETTER FROM A U.S. CONGRESSMAN STATING THAT DIA HAS REQUESTED HE ASK IF I WOULD MEET WITH THEM TO DISCUSS THE ISSUE. I RESPONDED IN A LETTER AGREEING TO A MEETING AND DETAILING EXACTLY THOSE ISSUES AND CASES I WISHED TO DISCUSS. TWO MONTHS LATER, THE LETTER I HAD SENT WAS RETURNED "UNOPENED" AND "UNREAD" (?). ON THE FACE OF THE ENVELOPE WAS A STAMP, U.S. GOVERNMENT MAILROOM-RETURN TO SENDER. EVIDENCE THAT THE LETTER HAD BEEN DELIVERED TO THE PROPER OFFICE AND PERSON WERE CROSSED OUT AND REPLACED WITH "NOT DEL" - NOT DELIVERED. AND ON THE FACE OF THE ENVELOPE WERE THE HANDWRITTEN LETTERS "NGB" - NOT GOVERNMENT BUSINESS! IS THAT THE OFFICIAL GOVERNMENT POSITION FOR LIVE POW'S LIKE JOSEPH A. MATEJOV, PETER CRESSMAN, AND ALL THE OTHERS - NOT GOVERNMENT BUSINESS! IF IT IS, WHO MIGHT BE THE NEXT VICTIMS OF NGB, THE BLACK, THE INDIAN, THE ELDERLY, RETARDED OR HANDICAPPED! WE THE PEOPLE, ALL THE PEOPLE ARE THE GOVERNMENT'S BUSINESS. AT LEAST WE WERE THE LAST TIME I READ THE U.S. CONSTITUTION!

THE EVENTS OF THE LAST 31 YEARS HAVE BEEN BOTH FRIGHTENING AND DISGUSTING REGARDING THE MIA/POW ISSUE. I HAVE BEEN TO THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OF GOVERNMENT ONLY TO BE IGNORED, INTIMIDATED, THREATENED AND DISCREDITED. I HAVE BEEN TO THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH OF GOVERNMENT HEARING MUCH CONCERN, BUT SEEING NO OFFICIAL ACTION IN LEADERSHIP, RESPONSIBILITY, AND ACCOUNTABILITY. AND I HAVE BEEN TO THE JUDICIAL BRANCH OF GOVERNMENT, ONLY TO BE TOLD THAT THEY HAVE NO LEGAL JURISDICTION, FOR THE ISSUE IS AN EXCLUSIVE MATTER OF POLICY FOR THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH. THE LATTER IS THE MOST DISTURBING TO ME. THE COURTS, THE SOUL OF OUR DEMOCRACY AND HUMAN RIGHTS, ARE IGNORING THEIR RESPONSIBILITY IN FAVOR OF POLICY. BUT SUCH ACTION HAS PRECEDENCE IN HISTORY. THE JUDICIARY ALLOWED THE JEWS AND OTHERS TO BECOME A MATTER OF POLICY IN NAZI GERMANY AND THEY DIED BY THE MILLIONS. THE JUDICIARY ALLOWED THE JAPANESE AMERICANS TO BECOME A MATTER OF POLICY IN 1942 FOLLOWING PEARL HARBOR, AND TO INTERMENT CAMPS THEY WERE SENT. OF COURSE, WE LET THEIR FATHERS AND SONS FIGHT AND DIE FOR FREEDOM IN WWII, THE VERY FREEDOM THAT POLICY DENIED THEIR FAMILIES. AND NOW, ITS OUR POW'S AND MIA'S THAT ARE POLICY, NOT JUSTICE. WILL WE NEVER LEARN!

I DO NOT KNOW IF ANY LAWS HAVE BEEN VIOLATED IN THE ACTIONS TAKEN CONCERNING THE MIA'S AND POW'S. THAT IS FOR

LAWYERS TO ARGUE, JURIES TO DECIDE, JUDGES TO RULE AND HISTORIANS TO DEBATE. BUT, AT THE MINIMUM, AS A 20 YEAR PROFESSIONAL, AND CONCERNED, COMMITTED AMERICAN CITIZEN, I FIRMLY BELIEVE OUR GOVERNMENT IS GUILTY OF VIOLATING "THE COVENANT".

"THE COVENANT" WAS EXPLAINED AND INSTRUCTED TO ME BY A SUPERVISOR AT MY FIRST OVERSEAS' DUTY ASSIGNMENT. SIMPLY, THE PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITY OF THE GOVERNMENT TO THE PEOPLE IS TO KEEP THE PEACE. WHEN GOVERNMENT FAILS, FOR WHATEVER REASON, WE THE PEOPLE GIVE GOVERNMENT THE RIGHT TO EXERCISE THE TERRIBLE RESPONSIBILITY TO RISK OUR LIVES IN WARFARE. IN TURN, WE THE PEOPLE DEMAND FROM GOVERNMENT THEIR AWESOME ACCOUNTABILITY NOT TO WASTE US. DURING THE "NO WIN" POLICY AND POLITICS OF THE VIETNAM WAR AND IN THE RESOLUTION OF THE MIA AND POW ISSUE, THE GOVERNMENT HAS FAILED TO FULFILL ITS ACCOUNTABILITY TO THE COVENANT. THOSE WHO SERVED IN THAT WAR KNOW IT, AS DOES JOSEPH A. MATEJOV'S MOTHER, MARY MATEJOV.

FURTHER AFFIANT SAITH NOT.

Dear Mr. Hagerty:

I have your August 22, 1988, letter in regard to a circumstance relating to Vietnam, the Paris Peace Accords, and four servicemen who were shot down over Laos on February 5, 1973.

For your information, General Chappie James was the senior person in DoD responsible for the MIA and KIA lists during the time frame to which you refer, and no decisions were taken by me without full consultation with General James. Dr. Shields has given you grossly wrong information and no names were struck from either the MIA or KIA lists without full staffing and a personal sign-off by General James.

I have no recollection of Dr. Shields discussing this information with me and certainly I had no knowledge whatsoever that these men were alive. I categorically and emphatically refute any such statements by Dr. Shields.

I am not in any way interested in your "equal time." I am denying the information you now have and would suggest to you that without some proof of this "hearsay" information that you forget it.

Sincerely,

Dear Governor Clements,

Thank you for your letter of September 6, 1988 in which you explained that any names removed from the list of known POWs in 1973 were removed at the direction of General James or his staff. Dr. Shields must have been mistaken when he said that you were the person who ordered several names of live POWs to be stricken from the list.

I do have one additional question, however, and that pertains to the order you gave to disregard all current intelligence regarding known POWs who did not return after "Operation Homecoming". Before I televise this story, I would like to have your point of view, for the information I have does not place you in a particularly patriotic light.

As I have the story, you ordered the "shelving" of the detailed list of known POWs. Furthermore, our source says that it was you who set in motion the restructuring of intelligence criteria to preclude any future "confirmed" sightings of the men we left in Southeast Asia at the end of the war. If this is not true I need to know, for I certainly do not want to imply that you bear major responsibility for the continued imprisonment of these men if it is not true.

Very truly yours,

Larry Hagerty

Dear Governor Clements,

1. I am writing to you in regards to a situation which I believe You may be helpful in clarifying. The situation to which I am refering is the Missing in Action (MIA)/ Prisoner of War (POW) question.
2. A local television show recently aired here in the Tampa Bay area which gave the details of my brother's crash incident. The February 5th 1973 shootdown of an EC-47Q over the country of Laos.
3. Details provided by the show included some rather distressing information concerning the "Striking" of my brother and his crewmates from the negotiating lists.
4. The details listed Dr. Roger Shields and yourself as the persons directly responsible for this indefensible action. In addition, the show quotes a confidential source from the U.S. Intelligence Community stating that Dr. Shields and yourself wrote a directive changing the criteria to be used by U.S. Intelligence Agencies in defining a confirmed POW report.
5. If the information shown was in fact true, please explain why my brother was abandoned. Was it in the name of Political Expediency? Were you directed to strike the names from the negotiations?
6. Sir, I am a life member of the Air Force-Sergeants Association, and have seen your name associated with outstanding community action projects with the Boy Scouts of America, AFSA, and others. You don't sound like the type person who would knowingly turn his back on a fellow serviceman. I hope that you will take a few moments to explain what happened, so that I can better understand why my brother was not even asked for by our government until the Gen. Vessey trips of 1987-88.
7. I have an appointment with a Mr. Lawrence Hagerty, producer of the show mentioned, on 13 February to discuss my brother's case and to see what else he knows about it. Please try to respond to this inquiry prior to that meeting so that I might have a better viewpoint from which to evaluate his information.
8. Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter.

Respectfully

Mr. Patrick J. Cressman

Pinellas Park, Florida, 34665

Dear Mr. Cressman:

I have your letter of February 5, 1989, asking for clarification regarding my position relative to the MIA question and POWs in Vietnam. This of course is an old issue and has been grossly misrepresented through the years. I applaud your interest and I am certainly pleased to know that you are a life-member of the Air Force Sergeants Association. I am most sympathetic to your feelings considering the background of your brother having been lost in Vietnam.

You are correct in stating that I was in the Department of Defense from January 1973 to January 1977 so for four years I was involved one way or another in the POW situation.

During the period that I was in DoD I looked primarily to General Chappie James who had a long and distinguished record in the Air Force and was a pilot in Vietnam for several years. Also Dr. Shields played a role and made certain reports to the Congress and to me but I looked primarily to General James for my information and liaison with the POW groups.

In answer to your question, and for the record, I never struck any person's name from any list; that was not my function and I had no personal knowledge of any list per se. What you hear on television or from some unofficial sources could be anything but in this instance it is certainly not true that I had anything to do with any list.

I appreciate receiving your letter which of course gives me the opportunity to put the record straight. As a citizen I have been interested in the POW situation in Vietnam since the middle of the 1960's and my interest continues. I am most pleased to note the return of remains from Vietnam during the past year where in Vietnam is now at least partially beginning to assist us in the recovery of the remains which is the first step in identification of the MIAs.

I appreciate your letter and I am sympathetic to your interest regarding your brother.

Sincerely,

I've been a while answering your letter but I just wasn't to go. This all worked out right & I was somewhat apprehensive about writing you, not knowing whether you would get my letter, whether you wanted to talk with someone from [] outfit or whether it may have been too painful, oh, a hundred things. But I'm glad I did and happy you answered. I've been thinking this around for so long and have never really spoken to anyone about it in any great detail. But I'd like to do it now. I'd like to tell you how I felt about things and what happened that night in February of 1973 so far from home. I read Chapter 15 of "First Haves" and have some comments on it too. But first —

I don't know how [] felt about being there but by the time I got over there in August of 1971 I knew we weren't there to win a war. I just saw our job as protecting as many Americans as we could before the end came. What we were doing was classified but it's been 16 years since I got out and I doubt there will be any serious problems if I go into details now. [] I was an intercept operator listening for Morse code transmissions. I don't remember his AFSC (Air Force Specialty Code). We also after carried voice intercept operator, who knew Vietnamese and listened for voice radio calls. They were 203's. I was an analyst, a 202, and when an operator got a target up I would try to determine whether it was a high or low priority. We flew in EC-47's, old converted cargo planes stuffed to the maximum with radio gear and direction-finding equipment.

We were the "back-enders" because we worked back in the cabin of the airplane. The "front-enders" were the pilot, co-pilot, and navigator, even though they now worked back with us. Of course, the "front-enders" were all officers while we "back-enders" were all enlisted men. We would fly missions that lasted from 5 to 7 hours. We would listen for radio transmissions and when one came up, try to locate him. This information would be passed along through various agencies and channels until, if it was an important target, fighter or bomber aircraft would try to destroy it. In the last part of January or early February 1971 we were given a mission to try and locate a group of tanks that were moving from North Viet Nam through Laos and into Cambodia. Some General back in Hawaii requested or should say ordered, the missions. They were night missions which was unusual for us. Mostly we flew in daylight and it was a lot safer that way. We looked like a harmless cargo plane and so were not fired on much. But at night we were just a slow flying target. They didn't even give us escorts.

Tanks communicate by voice radio and so the missions were flown with two voice operators and two nose operators. Voice men didn't know how to operate the equipment that was tied into the navigational equipment for DF purposes so the nose men flew too. US analysts were not needed on the missions because our job was totally dependent on nose signals. We had books that told us who some of the nose signals were and so could figure out who was important and who wasn't. Another of our jobs was to write up the mission reports when the mission recovered (ended).

So during these night missions we would sit in our communication trailers and take radio calls from the plane. If they were able to find a tank and DF him they would radio us and we would pass it on to (eventually) bombers that were standing by. We felt pretty left out and there was a feeling among us analysts that the others who flew the missions thought we were sitting things out in safety while they were risking their lives. Chicken in other words, though it was not our choice to wait on the ground. The missions had been flown for 3 or 4 days and some had returned early because they were taking so much fire. It was just too dangerous. But the general just said, "keep at it".

A spokesman for us analysts went to the Squadron Commander to try and get us to fly on the missions too. Basically just to show the others we could. A few hours before "Boson 52" (Joss plane) was to take off the OK came through. The mission and its crew had already been assigned but the analyst on duty that night could go if he wanted. Some re-arranging would have to be done and Someone would have to be "bumped" off the mission but it could be done. The next night we would be scheduled on the flights with the rest of the crew. Well, that night was my night to be on duty. I remember our representative who had gone to the CO coming in just after I went on duty and telling me. If it had come through the day before I would have been on the plane but as it was I "didn't want to make a fuss". And, frankly, I was scared. Though I would probably have died if I had gone, I have to live with that feeling of cowardice the rest of my life. At any rate I didn't go.

The crew showed up for their briefing at about 8 or 9 p.m. as I recall. Giving

The briefing was another job for the analyst so I gave it to the crew, watched them leave, and sat down to wait for the radio calls.

Take-off time was around 10 or 11 pm as I recall and the briefings were a few hours before that so maybe it was around 6 or 7 that I briefed them.

Once they go to the plane and had it powered up they would begin their pre-flight radio checks. The planes had a lot of radios. The pilots used radios "in the clear" that is, not scrambled. These were the radios they used to talk to the control tower and other aircraft. The "back-enders" used 3 "secure" radios. These were scrambled to avoid a bad guy hearing what we were saying. The only way you could receive the signals is if you had a radio that could de-scramble the signal. Sort of like the pay TV channels HBO and Cinemax. You need a de-scrambler to get them.

The 3 radios were FM (or "Fox Mike" as we called it), UHF 1 and UHF 2. The FM was the main radio and most reliable but it had a limited range. If the mission were to DF a tank they would probably use the longer-ranged UHF radios.

As the plane sat on the run way it made its checks to make sure the radios were OK. They were. They called me with a check of their system, I acknowledged them, wished them luck, and later they took off.

The call name for our Squadron was "Baron", the mission number was five two. Baron 52.

Tanks would be pretty easy to see throwing up a lot of dust during the day time so they only traveled at night. They knew we (the U.S.) would be looking for them so they didn't communicate very often and when they did it would only be for a short time, maybe less than a minute. We needed a minute or so of intercept to DF them so it was a hard job to locate them.

Udon Royal Thai Air Force Base was where we were stationed. We were a detachment (Det 3) of the Headquarters of the 6994th Security Squadron stationed north of us at Nakorn Phanom, Thailand, better known to us as NKP. NKP had a mission up too so each night there were 2 EC-47's out looking for tanks.

The first hint I had of any trouble was at about midnight or so. A sergeant in our tele-comm shack came over to tell me that our airplane wanted me to call them. Most of our reports, etc. were sent via a teletype machine in our tele-comm shack. We also communicated with NKP, and other ground stations (Hawaii, Washington DC, etc.) over these machines. Apparently NKP's plane had been talking to ours and passed the message to their (NKP's) base and they teletyped it over to us. I don't know if that's real clear but anyway I got a message to call Baron 52. No explanation, just "give them a call." I knew they were out pretty far and it would not be easy.

to reach them but I gave it a try on each radio. I got no answer so I waited 15 minutes (standard procedure) and tried again without success.

Twenty minutes or so later the guy in the tele-comm shack came back and said NKP wanted to talk to me so I went to the shack. The guy at NKP wanted to know if I had been able to get in touch with our plane. When I said no he said he had been in touch with his plane and that both planes had been fired on by "accurate 59 mm guns, probably radar guided." NKP's plane had not been able to raise our plane after that. I knew something was a little messed up because it should have been either 27 mm or 52 mm. There was no 59 mm. Anyway, their plane was returning to base and it would have the AMS (Airborne Mission Supervisor) or their plane get in touch with me when they landed and give me the straight story.

But that I should try hard to reach our plane. I immediately went back and made more radio calls, again without any luck. I went outside our compound and over to our maintenance building. They had a radio which transmitted in the clear. There were two maintenance men there playing cards. I asked to use their radio and made some calls to our plane. There was no response so I made a call to "any station" that is, any airplane that might hear me was to respond. Again, I got no answer.

Before I went back to our trailer and the secure radios, I told the maintenance men who was going on and to keep trying to contact anyone. It was about 2 o'clock in the morning by now and the crew for the first morning mission showed up. The AMS for that mission was a higher ranking Sgt who had been in for a number of years, a "lifer" as we called the career men. He asked if I had notified the Capt (our CO) or the Squadron of "front loader." I said no and he said he would handle it. Meanwhile I was to issue a "CRITIC" report. This was the highest priority message only used for emergencies or very high priority messages. I did. A CRITIC requires hourly updates until the situation is resolved. I issued the next two follow-ups and my shift was over.

I stayed around until about 6 or 6:30 am in case the plane came back, thinking, hoping, that it was just some radio problems and they were on their way back without radios. They only had enough fuel to stay up until 6 a.m. or so and then I knew they were down. The crew from NKP got back around 3 a.m. or so but they couldn't shed any more light on the subject, just that our plane had been fired on a number of times and was trying to get away from the guns.

When I got back to our squadron compound at about noon there was no new information.

A couple of days later we were told a photo recon plane had photographed a crash site. We could look at the pictures if we wanted which a friend of mine and I did. You couldn't tell much. Just a burned out place in the jungle. The Search and Rescue people sent a helicopter out to the site the next day. The next day an squadron commander called a meeting of everyone to explain the findings.

The plane was ~~lying~~ ^{flaying} on its top. The wings, outboard of the engines, were found a quarter of a mile or so away from the crash, one wing north and one northeast, as I remember.

This might have indicated the plane was spinning and the wings broke off. Everything from just behind the cockpit to just in front of the tail was burned to ash. They recovered what they thought were two bodies from the cockpit area. One was later identified as the Copilot. Everyone else was declared MIA until about two weeks or so later we were told all were declared KIA. They thought it had gone down too fast for anyone to get out and we only flew at about 10,000 feet which isn't very high.

That was the last I heard of Baron 52 until about 2 years ago. A Viet Vet I ran into had a copy of the names on "the Wall" and so I looked up Joe's name. To my surprise I saw him listed as MIA again. So I wrote to the National League of Families to get more information.

Baron 52 was not the only F-47 to be lost in the war. There were a couple of others shot down near the DMZ in the late 1960's. One had some casualties and the other didn't. I remember reading the reports.

Robert Crisman said in First Heres that the plane carried "extremely classified intelligence equipment", which it did, and that it was "designed to explode on impact." This is just not true. There were no explosives on board our aircraft. As fact, the standard procedure was that if the aircraft survived a crash in test, the crew was to get out and away from it and call in an air strike to destroy the equipment. I don't know where he got that bit of information but it's just plain wrong. I flew 102 missions on board there and I would have known if there were explosives on board. There weren't.

I don't know if what he says about a helicopter crew being on site of the crash the same day it went down is true or not but I seriously doubt it. Our squadron, because of the nature of our work, was privy to all kinds of classified information and I'm sure we would have known about a visit to the site. The USAF had documented all known crash sites in SEA so that if a pilot reported seeing one it could be checked to see if it was a new or old crash. It took time to verify Baron 52's crash site.

However, one thing he said did trigger a memory of mine. A few days after the plane was lost I saw a short message. It read that a "normally reliable source" in Laos (a friendly nation) had reported seeing 3 or 4 Americans, clean shaven, and in flight suits, being led through the jungle. Our plane was the only one lost in that point so, if true, they would have been our people because if they had been down for a long time they would not be clean shaven and would not have been dressed in their flight suits. But nothing was ever followed up on the message to my knowledge and it was dismissed as a bad report.

There was a strange thing that happened in relation to the mission that I want to mention. It's not significant, just strange. The front enders usually flew as a team. Benson 52's team was young, about our age and real cut-ups. Just before the plane was to start its engines, in fact just as the pilot was climbing on board, he was overcome by a tremendous headache. So bad he had to stay behind. A relief pilot was called and flew the mission. The other pilot was flown to the Philippines and was found to have a brain tumor that chose that moment to act up. He was operated on, recovered, and was back flying within a couple of months. Strange. The relief pilot was married to an Oriental or perhaps a Philippine and had a couple of kids.

When I said earlier that if I would have gone someone would have been bumped, it wouldn't have been me or any other of the operators. He was an AMS. You had to be good to be an AMS.

I don't know if anything Dave said has helped. I hope it doesn't hurt.

I can't understand why this country isn't doing more to find our buddies. And I think the way they've treated

I've been a month or more putting this down so I'd better get it in the mail now. I would like to keep in touch with you.

C. 1. p

A It was highly classified at the time; higher than the field commander had access to. Even in an unclassified form, it was not available until after the men had been declared dead.

2. Why didn't someone in the Air Force pass to casualty or the field even an unclassified version of the material?

A: The incident occurred just prior to the return of our prisoners of war. The intelligence community, at the time, was carrying an understandably heavy burden preparing for the repatriation of our PWs. Excess manpower needed for such things as declassification of documents was simply not available. It was hoped that if they had indeed been captured alive they would have been repatriated along with the rest of the prisoners. The fact that they were not repatriated led us to the regrettable conclusion that they were, in fact, not captured alive as this intelligence report would lead you to believe.

After the return of our PWs, the work load in our intelligence organizations continued at an extremely high level while the returned prisoners were debriefed and their debriefings were analyzed. Incidentally, no information was provided by these debriefings which would substantiate the capture of this crew. During that time, the intelligence report in question apparently fell by the wayside and no attempt was ever made to declassify it until recently. I would like to point out here, in conclusion, that we have never received any other information to support the claims made in this report. Conversely, everything we have, including investigations by a House Select Committee and a Presidential Commission, lead us to the conclusion that no one is left alive.

3. Why didn't the Air Force ever provide information to the NOVA?

A: As mentioned before, it is the belief of DOD and the Services that after the repatriation of PWs the communists no longer held any of our men alive. It was the general opinion, born from experience with hundreds of other MOK, that providing information we felt, and still feel, was misleading or worse - false, could have a detrimental effect on the MOK by giving them false hope for the return of a loved one who we were sure was not alive. On many occasions, foreign governments have stated that they no longer hold any American prisoners and have steadfastly refused to provide us with anything but remains or information about those who were killed in the conflict.

SUBJECT: Transmittal of DIA Analysis

1. On 5 February 1973, an EC-47Q electronic reconnaissance aircraft on an intelligence gathering mission over southern Laos crashed with the loss of all personnel on board.
2. Sanitized intelligence reports from February and May 1973, which were released to the families of crewmembers, and assertions made by a former U.S. Air Force intelligence analyst have led some to the erroneous belief that at least four crewmembers survived and were captured.
3. In July 1986, Mr. Patrick J. Cressman, a relative of one of the crewmen, wrote to the President and several members of Congress, stating that his brother and three other crewmembers, known by the U.S. Government to have been alive and captured, were "abandoned."
4. The Defense Intelligence Agency has conducted an exhaustive analysis of all available intelligence and operational data surrounding the EC-47Q loss. This analysis has concluded:
 - a. There is no evidence that any crewmembers survived the crash.
 - b. There is no evidence that any crewmembers were captured by enemy forces.
 - c. The intelligence reports of 5 February, 17 February and 2 May 1973, contain no evidence that relates to crewmembers of the EC-47Q.
5. A copy of the DIA analysis is attached. This analysis will also be provided to the White House and in response to Congressional queries.

ANALYSIS OF INFORMATION ON THE LOSS OF EC-47Q BARON 52

LOSS INCIDENT

The EC-47Q, call sign Baron 52, and its eight crew members were lost over Laos on 5 February 1973. Four days later a search team inspected the wreckage and located the remains of four crew members. Two of the remains were in the pilot and co-pilot positions. The third was in the engineer's compartment, and the team was able to recover a portion of this body, which was identified as the other co-pilot. The fourth body was near the engineer's compartment. Normally in this type of aircraft there are two positions immediately behind the engineer's compartment. One of these two positions would have been occupied by SSgt Todd M. Melton and the other by either Sgt Joseph A. Matejov or SSgt Peter R. Cressman. Due to physical and time constraints and hostile forces in the area, the team was not able to lift the fuselage to search for additional remains.

The search team also found what appeared to be anti-aircraft artillery shrapnel holes in parts of the wreckage. They found no evidence that the crew were preparing to bail out when the plane crashed; and it did not appear that the aircraft attempted a controlled crash landing. The disposition of the wreckage and other features of the crash site (e.g., absence of skid marks) indicated the aircraft had plunged nearly vertically to earth, bounced once, landed upside down and burned.

Although operating outside the range of ground radar stations during most of its mission, Baron 52 had frequent radio contact with other aircraft in the area. For example, the commander made routine half hourly contacts with, and reported all unusual occurrences to, Moon Beam Airborne Command and Control Center, and also had radio contact with Spectre 20, an AC-130 gunship working in the same area. The electronics warfare crew members also used separate communications equipment to maintain contact with another EC-47, Baron 62, flying in the same general area. The last reported position of Baron 52 was about 8-10 minutes flying time from the crash site.

COMMANDER'S DETERMINATION

Following a review of facts associated with the crash, the Commander, 8th Tactical Fighter Wing, in coordination with the Commander, 56th Special Operations Wing, recommended that the status of the crew members be changed to killed-in-action. The next-of-kin were informed of the status change and the facts supporting the decision in a series of letters dated between 24 February and 17 April 1973, which summarized the events of Baron 52's last mission and the evidence obtained by the search team. The commander added that in view of the capabilities of the radio communications equipment, Baron 52's frequent contacts with other aircraft, and the intensive training of the crew, in case of emergency at least one of the crew would have instinctively used the radios unless the aircraft crashed as a result of some catastrophic incident that immediately and completely incapacitated the crew members. Having reviewed the available facts, the field commanders reported that they believed "there was no reasonable doubt that all the members of the crew of Baron 52 were killed in the crash."

INTELLIGENCE REPORTS

Although the observations of the search team and other facts constituted what the field commander believed to be compelling evidence that none of the crew members survived, four sensitive intelligence reports, portions of which were declassified for release to the next-of-kin, led others to speculate that the four electronics specialists could have survived. Two of the documents were dated 5 February 1973, another 17 February 1973, and the fourth 2 May 1973. Through a longstanding misinterpretation of these sanitized documents an erroneous impression of survivors was preserved. Yet in fact, the four reports do not relate to the loss of the EC-47Q.

- The initial 5 February report originated in the area of Vinh, North Vietnam, over 240 miles by road north of the EC-47Q crashsite. In that report, which was issued as an unevaluated spot report as soon as the information was acquired, a North Vietnamese unit near Vinh is said to be holding four prisoners who are not further identified.
- The later 5 February report, based on and issued after a review of the information in the earlier 5 February report, provides no additional insights into the origin or identity of the prisoners.
- The 17 February document is a report by an enemy unit of the alleged downing of an aircraft in the area immediately south of the Demilitarized Zone which separated North and South Vietnam, and as such does not relate to the EC-47Q or its crew.
- The 2 May report is yet another analyst's interpretation of the 5 February reporting and is neither new information nor a new report. DIA's review of the evidence shows that the analyst who prepared the 2 May report made a number of arbitrary and erroneous assumptions and speculative assertions in an attempt to infer that the 5 February information originated from a location much closer to the EC-47Q crashsite and that some of the crew survived. The 2 May report therefore actually provides no more conclusive information than the original 5 February report did; however, the unwarranted personal speculation tends to draw attention away from this fact.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, it should be emphasized that the four documents cited above were never conclusively correlated to crew members of Baron 52. The documents initially were entered into the files of the crew members only because the information was acquired shortly after Baron 52 became missing, and it was anticipated that future reporting might permit DIA analysts to make a definitive correlation to the Baron 52 incident. No such reporting was ever received. It is further emphasized that following the loss of Baron 52 none of its crew was ever seen alive, and there is no intelligence whatsoever which would indicate any of the crew survived the incident of loss.

Dear Mr. Brown:

I wish to thank you for your generosity in contributing your research and many long hours of work to our POW/MIA investigation. The documents you provided pertaining to POWs of World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War will offer us an invaluable historical context for understanding this issue as we seek the truth and a resolution of the matter.

As you request, let me give you my assurance that I and my staff will not permit any copies to be made of these documents, nor will we permit access to them, without your express approval. We are grateful that you have donated this effort to our cause and I will do whatever I can to ensure that your request is honored.

Once again, thank you for your outstanding work and generosity. Please let me know if I can be of help in your future endeavors.

Personal Attn. Mr. Lolesnik
U.S. Senate Hart Building
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Grassley,

I am submitting for the current investigation into the matter of U.S. prisoners of war who remained in hostile captivity 260 + numbered, now-declassified official documents uncovered by me in the National Archives. These documents confirm the existence of American POWs of the 1918-1920 American intervention in Russia, World War II, Korea and Vietnam in Soviet or Soviet-surrogate control. I have selected them from among some 10,000 other POW-related documents now in my possession.

These documents form the basis for my February 1990 VFW Magazine article, MISSING POWS OF THE COLD WAR, my May/June two-part New American article, MIKHAIL GORBACHEV, LET OUR PEOPLE GO, and my September 15, 1990 Washington Post column, THE POW CONSPIRACY, all of which are enclosed. As an author, currently writing a fully documented history of U.S. POWs of the above listed conflicts, this primary-source documentary evidence is very valuable to me, and there is no one else in the United States whom I would have entrusted with it. I request that you do not permit any copies of the enclosed documents to get into the hands of other writers or reporters who might misinterpret them or quote them in the wrong context, or use them to coopt my own investigative research. I am trusting you and your staff to safeguard what represents years of work on my part, on behalf of the POWs. If you need further assistance please contact me.

Sincerely,

A:

The POW Conspiracy

At the close of his article "No MIA Conspiracy" (op-ed, Aug. 24), Stephen Rosenfeld wrote "my own sense of things is that the Americans who were taken prisoner in Vietnam have been honorably served by those charged with pursuing their fate. Does that make me part of the conspiracy?"

The answer is that nearly all of the "hundreds and perhaps thousands of officials" Rosenfeld referred to did play a part, usually minor, in ensuring that the full truth on American and Allied POWs held by the Soviets and their surrogates after World War II, Korea and Vietnam would not be revealed to the American public. The matter has been a national security concern since the development of the Soviet nuclear threat to the very existence of the United States. All the officials and officers who have taken part in suppressing the truth of Soviet-surrogate-held American POWs have faced a painful moral choice while doing their lavishly ordered duty.

Based on thousands of declassified official documents and supporting eyewitness accounts obtained during seven years of investigation and research, it is clear that thousands of American POWs have been secretly held by the Soviets and their surrogates since 1945. The numbers of Americans thus illegally withheld appear to have been approximately 20,000 in 1945, 4,000 to 5,000 (or more) after 1963 and perhaps as many as 1,000 after 1973. These Americans, and many thousands more Allied POWs, were withheld for ransom and blackmail, used as forced labor and for espionage purposes. In addition I can document the secret withholding of American POWs of the 1918-1920 intervention in Russia in Lukovka prison in Moscow and the Selovosty Island GPU forced-labor camps until at least the 1950-1955 period.

In answer to Rosenfeld's 5-nd question: All major-circulation U.S. publications I have contacted, with the exception of the VFW Magazine, have declined to publish documentable facts of the history of U.S. prisoners of war held by Communist nations. These publications have apparently decided to even investigate the matter seriously. It is therefore difficult to escape the conclusion that the editors of such publications have avoided publishing such historically significant material in the interest of some higher political purpose.

Rosenfeld accused people like me of "turning on our own government." It might be in order to state that my family helped found and protect the revolutionary government of the United States in 1776 that I in my turn served that government in front-line combat and that it was the intention of the Founding Fathers that our government be constantly held accountable to the people. That is the principle for which the tens of thousands of missing American POWs fought, and that is why people such as myself consider that we are merely doing our duty toward our fellow American servicemen by uncovering the truth about their fate.

Hidden POWs of the Cold War: One Man's View

By John M.G. Brown

A series of signals from the Soviet Union asking for U.S. assistance in repatriating some 300 Soviets missing in Afghanistan and Pakistan offers a unique opportunity.

Reports from Soviet diplomatic sources appearing in the American press in 1989, indicating that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev had discussed this matter with President George Bush, demonstrates possible linkage in accounting for Russian MIAs in Afghanistan and American POWs and MIAs from the Vietnam War as well as previous wars.

A number of U.S. prisoners may have been transferred to the Soviet Union from Indochina, and documentary evidence exists of the transfer of large numbers of U.S. POWs of the Korean War to the Soviet Union. The U.S. demanded their return in May 1954, but the Soviet Union denied holding American POWs "under guard."

And the existence and disappearance of American and British POWs under Soviet control in 1945 has been documented by this writer through declassification of thousands of formerly secret U.S. cables and reports in the National Archives.

Although many Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests have been denied me for "national security" reasons, some records have been obtained through FOIA. Interviews with 1945 participants have clarified other aspects of this hidden aspect of the Cold War.

In 1945 the Soviet Army liberated over a million Western Allied POWs and displaced persons in Nazi camps in Poland, eastern Germany and Austria. According to the Yalta Agreements they were to be repatriated to their native lands.

While some were relatively well-treated by front-line Russian troops, documentary evidence details how over 500,000 of these prisoners were forcibly retained by Soviet authorities. Included were hundreds of thousands of French, Belgians, Dutch and ethnic Jews who had survived the Nazi concentration camps.

Among them were tens of thousands of American, British and Commonwealth POWs whose kidnapping became a high-level national security secret. American and British prisoners were also among the more than 4,500,000 German and Japanese POWs retained as forced labor by the Russians.

On May 23, 1945, two weeks after the end of the war in Europe, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's chief POW negotiator with the Soviets, Maj. Gen. Ray Barker, stated in a secret report: "The SHAEF (Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force) representatives came to the firm conviction that British and American prisoners of war were, in effect, being held as hostages by the Russians..."

Recently declassified U.S. and British documents record details of a Soviet "blackmail" operation executed by Soviet leader Joseph Stalin and his cohorts Molotov, Beria, Gorkov and others.

Their object was to obtain Allied compliance in the coerced and forcible repatriations of more than 5,000,000 Russians, Ukrainians, Czechs, Poles, Hungarians and other eastern Europeans. They also demanded U.S. diplomatic recognition of Communist regimes in Poland and elsewhere in Eastern Europe.

An additional benefit to the Russians was to be the labor of thousands of technologically advanced (by Soviet standards) Allied prisoners. The actions of highly placed Soviet spies in the British and American governments severely compromised the Allies and greatly assisted the Soviets in this operation.

Repatriation of POWs was a secret topic of the 1945 founding United Nations Conference in San Francisco, the 1945 Hopkins-Stalin meetings and the Potsdam Conference. It appears that Field Marshal Alexander, Gen. George Patton and to a lesser extent others, including Gen. Eisenhower, resisted this chain of events prior to and following the unsuccessful September 1945 foreign ministers meetings.

Well after the war, Alexander cabled London: "Difficulty in tracing BR/US PWs in Russian zone." He reported that U.S. and British

POWs were being shipped east into Russia "in boxcars with German PWs."

Meanwhile, Patton's Third Army had located thousands more American and British prisoners being withheld after the war by the Soviets in Austria. According to once-top secret U.S. documents, decisions were first made by President Franklin D. Roosevelt and then by President Harry Truman that the potential losses of a 1945-46 war with Russia were not worth the possible recovery of some 20,000 American and 20,000 or more British and Commonwealth POWs.

Implementation of this policy was passed on to the responsible departments and agencies. Evidence has surfaced of the secret return of Allied prisoners for the forcibly repatriated Soviet citizens of whom Soviet dissident Alexander Solzhenitsyn, Lord Bethell and Nikolai Tolstoy have written so eloquently.

Repatriations to Stalin's GULAG were marred by mass suicides. Stalin reneged on full reciprocity and most of the Allied POWs disappeared into secret, special camps. Stalin's failure to reciprocate in the repatriations of 1945-47 resulted in an official tendency to minimize the extent of Allied losses.

In classified U.S. and British documents, the total number of prisoners known to be in Soviet hands was scaled down to some 5,500 Americans and 8,500 British and Commonwealth troops. Continuing research indicates that these figures reflect a shifting of known prisoners into other categories. All told, some 78,000 Americans remain unaccounted for from WWII.

The acute need for intelligence inside Soviet territory to locate the large number of missing Allied prisoners for possible secret rescue or negotiations led to U.S.-Soviet air battles in Europe and U.S. naval threats to the Russians in Manchuria.

This crisis led to the first major American covert actions after WWII inside Soviet territory executed by the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), Army G-2/SSU, the State Department's Office of Policy Coordination, and later the CIA.

Among other assets, they used existing German intelligence networks. The perceived need for extreme security in this matter helped create a chain of events leading to the present debate on the limits of secrecy in a free society.

The latest Soviet statement of concern for the return of their missing Afghan War prisoners should be viewed as a public diplomatic signal of their willingness to consider an exchange. This should not, however, be permitted to become a forced repatriation of those 40-80 former Soviet prisoners known to be living in freedom in the U.S. and Canada. What would be in order, however, is the use of American influence to gain control of those Soviet POWs in Afghanistan and Pakistan who wish to return home.

Given the present glum mood and Gorbachev's statements on Stalin's crimes, it might finally be to the Soviet Union's advantage to reveal the truth about American POWs from WWII.

Dreadful military secrets

WILLIAM STEVENSON

"It seems unbelievable," begins a feature in the U.S. Veterans News and Report. "Since the end of the Vietnam war, the Vietnam veterans have contended that Americans were left behind. Scoffed at and harassed, the veterans have been accused by government officials of using the myth of POWs to hold onto the war. But if the United States was willing to forsake more than 20,000 men while postulating the most powerful military force in history..."

Let me cut in here to say the authors of A Secret that Shames Humanity are no secretoids. One is a valued friend: John Brown, a combat infantryman in Vietnam; and Tom Ashworth, a former Marine helicopter pilot. They have been digging through bureaucratic secrecy and now come up with troubling questions:

"Where are the secret records concerning thousands of live Canadian, American and British fighting men who disappeared into the Soviet prison system at the end of World War II?"

"Were those U.S. officers who handled the coverup on abandoned Allied prisoners then promoted to high rank in policy-making and intelligence positions because of their dangerous knowledge and the need to ensure silence?"

"Did this become a pattern, ensuring that similarly involved officials in later wars would also rise rapidly and even become assigned to questionable covert operations of recent years?"

"Have the Soviets and other communist governments used the complicity inherent in this coverup to compromise or blackmail key U.S. officials, thus endangering U.S. security?"

To get such questions before the public, the authors have been obliged to publish some 1,000 words in The U.S. Veterans, having been opposed in their efforts to find someone bold enough to print their book. Their theme is said to be too potentially damaging to national interests. Their answer is that nothing can damage a nation more than the pretense of abandoning its own men on the battlefield.

The Soviet Union kidnapped and held in perpetual captivity tens of thousands of Canadian, American, British and Commonwealth POWs," says Brown. "It was done with the knowledge of the highest level decision-makers in the United States and Great Britain..."

"Allied prisoners were the principle component in forcing mass-repatriations of Russians, Ukrainians, Czechs and other Soviet citizens and in helping ensure British and American recognition of puppet Soviet governments in East Europe."

Brown and his co-author spent years burrowing through files labelled TOP SECRET long after there was any apparent need for secrecy. They began by looking for hard evidence of U.S. secret intelligence on American left behind in Vietnam and found themselves on a paper-chase back through history.

They retrieved confidential messages between Moscow, London and Washington following the Moscow Conference in February, 1945 when Stalin, Roosevelt and Churchill met for the last time. Brown believes "it was then that the West agreed to the forced repatriation of two million 'Soviet citizens' who were in Allied hands. The price was the return by Stalin of some 20,000 Americans and some 20,000 British in Stalin's hands."

Stalin never paid the agreed price. Now the authors disclose cables between British Field Marshal Alexander and the supreme headquarters of Allied command in London (SHAEP) that show Alexander refusing orders to forcibly deliver up some 20,000 Czechs to the Russian NKVD (now the KGB).

In the end, Alexander complied in order to get the Russians to release British and American soldiers. The bloody operations resulted in some British troops throwing down their rifles and refusing to carry out orders to force the Czech families - wives and children as well as the soldiers - into the waiting Russian arms.

Alexander's cables in late spring 1945 reflect his growing realization that the terrible deed - Operation Keelhaul - served little purpose. For instance: "In Russian some difficulty experienced in tracing British POWs... unconfirmed reports in Russian/U.S. POWs being evacuated Odesa by rail in boxcars..." There were many top-secret messages like that.

Ten years later, British security files still bore traces of sensitivity in the form of a red tag: "This document is to be handled for official use only... The term Forcible Repatriation cannot be used for dissemination to the public..."

U.S. Gen. George C. Marshall was less willing to gloss things over. A month after victory in Europe, he called Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, the Allied supreme commander: "Concerned your report 5-26-45 that 20,000 U.S. prisoners still in Russian hands." But Marshall was thrown a distracting bone, and said to forget what had become "a national security matter."

Armed with paper clues that soon filled their basements, Brown and Ashworth concluded that the communist countries have always used prisoners as pawns, to be discarded when no longer playable. They depict world statements sucked into a game that, in Vietnam, gave the Hanoi government a strong bargaining hand before letting U.S. President Richard Nixon withdraw from that war.

They claim to have accumulated documentary evidence of the continued existence of thousands of American prisoners in enemy hands following the Korean and Vietnam wars.

Brown says, "Federal agents came to see me last month (April) and reminded me of the need for national security secrecy in these matters."

From that he concluded if U.S. publishers were being told the same yarn, he and Ashworth might as well print the bare details in the veterans' newsletter. "Then," he tells me, "maybe someone will let us publish the whole truth."

Dear Mr. Brown,

Bill Stevenson wanted you to have a copy of his column.

The POW Conspiracy

At the close of his article "The MIA Conspiracy" (Sept. 8, p. 34), Stephen Rosenfeld wrote "my own sense of things is that the Americans who were taken prisoner in Vietnam have been honorably served by those charged with pursuing their fate. Does that make me part of the conspiracy?"

The answer is that nearly all of the "hundreds and perhaps thousands of officials" Rosenfeld referred to did play a part, usually minor, in ensuring that the full truth on American and Allied POWs held by the Soviets and their surrogates after World War II, Korea and Vietnam would not be revealed to the American public. The matter has been a national security concern since the development of the Soviet nuclear threat to the very existence of the United States. All the officials and officers who have taken part in suppressing the truth of Soviet- or surrogate-held American POWs have faced a painful moral choice while doing their lawfully ordered duty.

Based on thousands of declassified official documents and supporting eyewitness accounts obtained during seven years of investigation and research, it is clear that thousands of American POWs have been secretly held by the Soviets and their surrogates since 1945. The numbers of Americans thus illegally withheld appear to have been approximately 20,000 in 1945, 4,000 to 5,000 (or more) after 1953 and perhaps as many as 1,000 after 1973. These Americans, and many thousands more Allied POWs, were withheld for reasons and methods, used as forced labor and for espionage purposes. In addition I can document the secret withholding of American POWs of the 1916-1920 intervention in Russia in Lubyanka prison in Moscow and the Solovetsky Islands GPU forced-labor camps until at least the 1930-1930 period.

In answer to Rosenfeld's final question: All major-circulation U.S. publications I have contacted, with the exception of the VFW Magazine, have declined to publish demonstrable facts of the history of U.S. prisoners of war held by Communist nations. These publications have apparently declined to even investigate the matter seriously. It is therefore difficult to escape the conclusion that the editors of such publications have avoided publishing such historically significant material in the interest of some higher political purpose.

Rosenfeld accused people like me of "lying on our own government." It might be wiser to state that my family helped fund and protect the revolutionary government of the United States in 1776 that I in my turn served that government in front-line combat and that it was the intention of the Founding Fathers that our government be constantly held accountable to the people. That is the principle for which the tens of thousands of missing American POWs fought, and that is why people such as myself consider that we are merely doing our duty toward our fellow American servicemen by uncovering the truth about their fate.

Mikhail Gorbachev, Let Our People Go

Holding American, Allied, and other prisoners as hostages — for ransom or blackmail or for intelligence purposes — has been a Soviet-communist policy since 1919. Hundreds of American civilians and U.S. military hostages of the intervention held prisoner by the victorious Bolsheviks, along with others arrested or detained later, were used by the Soviets in 1921 to obtain $100 million worth of desperately needed food supplies under the authority of war relief director (later President) Herbert Hoover. In his memoirs Hoover listed as the first minimum condition for U.S. aid: "freedom of all American prisoners in Russia."

According to an October 21, 1920 Associated Press report, the total number of American citizens in Russia was estimated at 3000 (including some families of naturalized Americans). Certainly, at this time, hundreds of native-born American civilians and U.S. military prisoners were being held hostage by the Soviets. One of them, a Red Cross official and U.S. Army officer in WWI named Emmett Kilpatrick, captured with men of Wrangel's White Army, smuggled a letter out of a Chekha secret police prison: "... I am now held in prison as a hostage for one Jim Larkin [a communist agitator imprisoned in the U.S.] now serving a sentence of twenty years, and the same has been awarded me."

Western European war prisoners and civilians were also being held hostage by the Soviets at this time, in an effort to gain concessions from their home governments. The U.S. State Department sought to put the matter to rest with a public announcement on October 22, 1920, a day after the above quoted AP story: "Irish-American figures on the number of Americans in Russia are off by about 1000, according to

Soldiers in the American intervention forces were targeted for capture by Lenin

State Department records, which put the correct number at about 35."

Death Warrant

The State Department claimed that the others were Russian-Americans, and that "all the Americans in Russia remained there of their own free will when Ambassador Francis left that country July than War prisoners should be viewed as a public diplomatic signal of their willingness to consider an exchange. This opportunity should not be permitted to become a forced repatriation of those 40-50 former Soviet prisoners known to be living in freedom in the U.S. and Canada, or of those Vietnamese who have escaped a modern Stalinist regime.

* Russian Peter Nikolaevich Wrangel led a White Russian force of counter-revolutionaries, fighting against the regime established in Russia by the Bolsheviks in 1917. Following his appointment as commander in chief of the White Russian forces in April 1920, Wrangel established a provisional government in the Crimea and scored several victories against the Soviet troops. His defeat late in 1920 marked the end of the White Russian apparatus in the Soviet revolutionary government.

Since Vietnam has evidenced some fear of dealing honestly with the United States on the fate of known POWs in its control, perhaps the correct approach is to involve Vietnam's powerful ally (and originator of the problem), the Soviet Union. If the Vietnamese feel unable to resolve this issue to the satisfaction of the United States while still expecting U.S. diplomatic recognition, then the Soviet Union should assist its ally by providing a way out of the present dilemma.

America should already be using its influence to gain control of those Soviet POWs in Afghanistan and Pakistan who wish to return home. The Soviet Union should announce that, as part of their campaign of "openness," they will allow American prisoners who have come under their control. In various ways to return home if they wish to. In matters truly involving the national security of the United States, certain returning prisoners could be sworn to secrecy.

Whose National Interest?

Recent developments in the POW matter in the United States and Canada indicate that American and Allied leaders may have discussed this subject with Soviet leaders prior to and during the recent Malta Summit. U.S. determination to continue a transparent secrecy in this matter, on the grounds of national security, raises the question of whose national interest such secrecy actually serves.

The Soviet domestic press has begun to publish portions of the truth for their own people. Also, during 1989 the USSR propaganda magazine Soviet Life, published by governmental agreement in the U.S., admitted some of Stalin's crimes: "... Stalinism implies mass terror, contempt for human life, the massacre of millions of innocent people on political grounds.... Stalinism means forced labor of millions of people.... Stalinism means fraud on the state level, fabrication of 'traitors against the homeland,' misrepresentation of collectivization, falsified history of the party, the state and the world."

The publication of such truths by the Soviet Union should challenge the United States government to open some of its own secret files. With the monumental changes apparently taking place in Eastern Europe, more of the history of the 1945 Soviet takeover in those areas is emerging. Once set in motion, such a tide of revelations is difficult to reverse. Given the present "glassnost" mood and Gorbachev's statements on Stalin's crimes, it might finally be to the Soviet Union's advantage to expose the full truth of this matter and restore the surviving prisoners to their homelands. ■

Colonel Shelton, POW

The Moving Wall has finally come to San Angelo, Texas. The Vietnam Veteran's Memorial (Moving) Wall preserves the names of the American soldiers who gave their lives for freedom or were left behind to languish in Southeast Asia. Among these missing men is Colonel Charles Ervin Shelton.

Col. Shelton, a reconnaissance pilot, was shot down in his RF-101 while on a secret mission over Laos — 25 years ago, on April 29, 1965, his 33rd birthday. Other pilots circling over Sam Neua Province saw him land safely. His wingman even waved to him. According to the U.S. Defense Department, a 105 pilot made radio contact with Shelton, who responded that he was in "good condition." Shelton sat on a hill for two hours, waiting to be rescued by helicopters that never came.

Intelligence personnel report that Shelton managed to evade capture until he was surrounded by two Pathet Lao platoons, three days after being shot down. Officially listed as a POW on May 24, 1965, Col. Shelton has one advantage over other POWs/MIA's: He is the only one still officially listed as a POW. The decision whether or not to keep his file open was debated in October 1980, at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas. Previous hearings for other POWs had all ended with the same results: "presumed dead."

The last name on the list was that of Charles E. Shelton. The three hearing officers reported that the classified documents they reviewed had no bearing on their 2-1 decision that Col. Shelton can reasonably be presumed dead. But, since Shelton's was the last name to be considered, the decision had to be approved by the Secretary of the Air Force. What with all the "red tape" involved, it wasn't until 1984 that Verne Orr (then Secretary of the Air Force) publicly stated that Shelton's POW status would not change until positive evidence could be obtained to justify it.

Throughout the years, Shelton's wife Marian has received several first-hand live sighting reports from reputable intelligence personnel. As recently as 1986, a former intelligence agent who still travels to Vietnam said that he was told by U.S. intelligence analysts that it had been reported that Shelton had been moved to Vietnam from Laos in April 1985, to a secluded island prison called Ho Thach Bai, located 40 miles northeast of Hanoi, off the Red River. These sightings are what have kept the Shelton family from giving up hope. "I'm very worried about the future and the honor of this country and believe that all of our men who fought for this country should be brought home with honor," says Mrs. Shelton. "For, as President Reagan once said, 'A country that forgets its fighting men is a country that in itself will be forgotten.'"

Prison, Moscow)

I have looked into this question and find that at least one case that has an important bearing on it, namely the case of William J. Martin, Company A, 539th Infantry, which regiment served in Archangel on North Russian Expedition. Under date of Feb. 3, 1919 a report from Archangel showed Martin missing in action. This was the last information received from Europe. Under date of March 14, 1921 we made a determination showing: "Was killed in action Jan. 19, 1919". This determination was no doubt predicated on the unexplained absence of the soldier for about two years.

I also find another case which may possibly be involved, it is that of Lindsay Retherford, up in my mind because of the mention of the Russian sailor of Alfred Lindsay. Lindsay Retherford was reported missing and a similar determination was made in his case.

I showed to Colonel Parrott the Martin case and he was very much impressed by the thought that Martin may possibly be alive.

He wished you to obtain from Miss Shahan a list of all determinations concerning men who served in North Russia or Siberia in the cases of men missing in action, prisoners of war, deserters, etc. With regard to Siberia, I understand that one officer and six enlisted men were taken prisoners in Siberia, but I understand that they were repatriated from capture by the forces operating against the Americans in Siberia. This in order to determine whether there could be any more cases like the Martin case.

French here estimate about 800,000 French POW have been taken by Soviet armies, among which are 10,000 women and children recovered from camp at Kattowice and 41,000 POW recovered in East Prussia. They believe large part of all French POW will be recovered on Eastern Front.

French here say they made request to UNIMIA for assistance in care and evacuation of POW from Russia. Compliance with this request was deferred. They then made request to American Red Cross for clothing, medicine and concentrated food but not for help in actual evacuation. They are now negotiating with Soviets.

Mr. Perkins:

Mr. Ciechanowski, of the Polish Embassy here, called me this afternoon to say that they have just received word from their (Polish) Government that over 1,000 officers and enlisted men of the American Army escaped from German prison camps in the Posen district and are now scattered in various towns in Poland. The prison from which they escaped was in Szulin in the Posen area. Two American officers: Colonel Charles Kohn and Major Jerris Kiden called at the Foreign Office in Lublin and asked the Polish authorities to communicate the above information to the Ambassador. Mr. Ciechanowski's telephone is: D - 3 - 00 - 25.

AMERICAN EMBASSY

London, February 14, 1945.

Subject: Statement in House of Commons Concerning Release of British Commonwealth Prisoners of War by Soviet Forces.

The Honorable
The Secretary of State,
Washington.

Sir:

With reference to the Embassy's despatch No. 20914 of February 8, 1945, concerning questions in the House of Commons with respect to the release of British Commonwealth prisoners of war by Soviet forces, I have the honor to report that in reply to further questions from Sir Alfred Knox (Conservative) and Mr. A. Edwards (Labour) as to whether any British prisoners of war had been liberated, as to the number of British prisoners of war camps in the Eastern Area, and as to the steps taken to secure their well-being, Sir James Grigg, Secretary of State for War, made the following reply on February 13, 1945:

"Twelve camps, whose numbers are given below, have either been overrun by the Soviet forces or are in their direct path. There were about 60,000 prisoners from the British Commonwealth in these camps. It is clear that the Germans intended to move the prisoners from these camps to Central Germany and considerable transfers have taken place. The men are apparently moved on foot by daily stages of between 12 and 18 miles. It is likely, however, that many have been overtaken by the Soviet forces. The arrangements made with the Soviet authorities were outlined in a reply given by my right hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Miss Ward) on 6th February, and my hon. Friend will no doubt have seen the text of the comprehensive agreement about the repatriation of prisoners of war now in German hands which is published in this morning's papers. Some scores of names of British ex-prisoners have so far been picked up from the Lublin radio. Next-of-kin are being informed."

has obliged abandon approximately 200 men on roadside

J.S.

The following information comes from a conference with Mr. Schinner, Ambassador's representative Berlin, at present in Geneva:-

(1) At the present time, there are approximately 100,000 P.O.s marching along the region of the North German coast. Some few still remain on the road between Lauenburg 17° 45' East, 54° 40' North and Stolp 17° 27' East, 54° 25' North. The great body is in the region between Schwanau 14° 15' East, 53° 55' North, Dresden to Jeklin, Dossin and Neukirchensberg. They will continue west along roads in a region bordered roughly by the sea on the North and on the South by Danzig 15° 10' East, 53° 45' North, Schwering 15° 25' East, 53° 40' North and will be settled in the region of Lübeck, Hamburg and Bremen.

The present rations of these men are 3 - 4 potatoes per day, 1 quart of hot water and 200 grammes of bread when bread is available, which frequently is not more than once in 3 or 4 days. About 50% of these men are suffering from dysentery, apparently in a contagious form. They are selling everything they have, watches, jewelry and even clothing to obtain food, but the country has been so well worked over by civilian refugees and previous waves of prisoners that there is practically nothing to be had.

The Interzone delegation in Berlin has succeeded in obtaining two German army trucks of 22½ tone capacity, and has been using these to move SP7 from Lübeck to men on the Northern line of march. During the first three days, 22,000 food parcels were moved in this way. In addition, they were able to move by train six car loads of SP7 to form a stock at Neukirchensberg, whence they are being shuffled by truck to various points along the Northern line of march. Subsidiary stocks have been established out of Neukirchensberg at Jeklin, Dossin and Stolp.

(2) At present, 800 officers from this camp are at present at Alt Lauen 12° 45' East, 53° 50' North, where they will rest for three days. Mr.
Schinner states that these officers, who were out of training at the beginning of the march, are now probably in the worst condition of any of the men involved in this movement. When food parcels were brought to them, many of them were so weak that they were unable to carry off a 5 eleven pound parcel.

About 60,000 P.O.s are moving westward in a belt bounded roughly on the north by Berlin and on the South by Dresden and Leipzig. The Southern edge of this movement has already begun to reach the boundaries of Wehrkreis II ..

14
J.S.

Wehrkreis II, and there is being moved by train to final destinations. These men are in a relatively good condition.

For the use of men on the central line of march, the delegation has succeeded in getting up a stock of eleven car loads of SP7 at Stolp III - Ludowigsdorf, whence it is being moved, as possibilities allow, to the necessary points.

(3) At present, 200 severely wounded American officers, presumably wounded in Stalingrad III, were abandoned in this town and have now been covered by the Russians.

Major Flörkeberg a/cdr. 390 severely wounded Allied prisoners were transported from this camp in coal barges. They had no bedding, no light, no heating but were provided with two blankets per man. They were accompanied by one American doctor and 15 Allied Sanitary Personnel. During the trip, they had practically no food and no medicine. After an eight day trip in temperatures of 20° - 25° below zero, they arrived at Warden 12° 30' East, 52° 25' North where they have now been hospitalised. The losses during the trip amounted to 7 men dead, none Americans. At Warden, 200 SP7 have been placed at their disposal by the delegation in Berlin.

Approximately 80,000 prisoners including 25,000 Americans are now marching through the Sudetenland along a route marked roughly by the towns of Kladsko, Litochin, Angermünde, Neukirch-Lütz, Ansbach, Treglow, Witten, whence about half will continue by Kladsko and the other half by Kladsko through Riga to a region bounded roughly by Riga, Ostrov and Riga. The situation of these men is extremely grave. They have been repeatedly starved and straggled along the route and although little is known as to their present food supply, it is presumed to be extremely small. These men have been marching through the Czechoslovak mountains under extremely severe weather conditions, and are on the whole in very poor condition.

Along a great proportion of the Eastern war zone, whenever the evacuation of a camp is announced, the Volksturm appears within a few hours fully armed and with means of transportation to empty out the Red Cross warehouses. This has been repeatedly done in various camps and the Volksturm seems powerless to prevent it. The supplies are distributed to the local civilian....

16

civilian population. On a number of occasions, Wehrmacht guards have been driven from warehouses at the point of a bayonet by the Volksturm.

The discipline of the American prisoners during this movement has been of the highest order and has received general praise from the Ober Kommando der Wehrmacht. Mr. Schirmer states that a good deal of responsibility for maintaining this order has fallen upon a general and a colonel whose names he could not recall but who are presumably General Vanaman and Colonel Spivey from Stalag Luft III. These officers and their staff are at the present time practically free, living at Junkenwalde in the German officers' quarters and eating at the German officers' mess. This has aroused some critical comment on the part of other Americans.

The following information results from a conference with Mr. Wyse Dumant, delegate of the International Committee in Berlin, at present in Geneva:-

During the period from February 6th to February 25th, Mr. Wyse Dumant was visiting camps in Wehrkreis VI, immediately behind the present line of battle. On the night of February 22nd, at 12.30, he was caught in a raid on Stalag VI-D. He states that this Stalag had been flown over a number of times in the days preceding the attack by reconnaissance planes, and presumably photographed. For the attack, a parachute flare was dropped, which clearly lighted the whole camp, after which the camp was severely bombed and totally destroyed with a loss of one French prisoner and 70 Russian prisoners dead, plus 200 wounded. During this attack, no bombs fell outside the camp area. Mr. Wyse Dumant lost all his papers and his clothing during the raid and was, therefore, unwilling to give specific data of other attacks on camps in Wehrkreis VI. Certain of this information is, however, in the hands of Mr. de Courtrix in Berlin and has been urgently asked for. Mr. Wyse Dumant states that during the past weeks, a considerable number of established and regularly recognized camps in this region have been repeatedly bombed and strafed, both by day and by night, by the Allied aviators.

He further states that the new headquarters of the International Committee at Uffing were also recently bombed without serious damage and without any direct hit being registered. Uffing is at the Northern end of a small....

a small "L" shaped lake known as the "Stafelsee" North West of Murnau, approximately 30 kilometers South West of Munich. The headquarters is an old castellated brick building, square and with a single central tower. It stands by itself and is clearly visible on the top of a hill.

TO DEANE FROM MARSHALL: TOPSIRC.

Please deliver the following message from the President to Marshal Stalin at once and also deliver a copy of it to Admiral Archer for transmission by him to Mr. Churchill.

Begin message: I have reliable information regarding the difficulties which are being encountered in collecting, supplying, and evacuating American ex-prisoners of war and American aircraft crews who are stranded east of the Russian lines. It is urgently requested that instructions be issued authorizing 10 American aircrafts with American crews to operate between Poltava and places in Poland where American ex-prisoner of war and stranded airmen may be located. This authority is requested for the purpose of providing supplementary clothing, medical and food supplies for all American soldiers, to evacuate stranded aircraft crews and liberated prisoners of war, and especially to transfer the injured and sick to the American hospital at Poltava. I regard this request to be of the greatest importance not only for humanitarian reasons but also by reason of the intense interest of the American public in the welfare of our ex-prisoners of war and stranded aircraft crews. Secondly on the general matter of prisoners of war in Germany I feel that we ought to do something quickly. The number of these prisoners of war, Russian, British and U. S., is very large. In view of your disapproval of the plan we submitted what do you suggest in place of it.

Personal and Top Secret for the PRESIDENT from BARRIMAN. TOPSEC

In light of Marshal Stalin's reply to your message regarding our liberated prisoners of war I feel you will be interested to have from me a brief review of the situation.

Our information received from our liberated prisoners indicates that there have been four or five thousand officers and enlisted men freed. The Russians today claim that there are only 2,100 of whom 1,350 have arrived at Odessa and the balance being en route by train.

Russian information is based on reports from concentration points within Poland where our prisoners have been collected. Meantime there appear to be hundreds of our prisoners wandering about Poland trying to locate American contact officers for protection. I am told that our men don't like the idea of getting into a Russian camp. The Polish people and Polish Red Cross are being extremely hospitable, whereas food and living conditions in Russian camps are poor. In addition we have reports that there are a number of sick and wounded who are too ill to move. These Stalin does not mention in his cable. Only a small percentage of these reported sick or wounded have arrived at Odessa.

For the past ten days the Soviets have made the same statement to me that Stalin has made to you, namely, that all prisoners are in Odessa or entrained thereto, whereas I have now positive proof that this was not repeat not true on February 26, the date on which the statement was first made. This supports my belief that Stalin's statement to you is inaccurate.

I am glad to say that the reports from our contact officers in Odessa indicate that the Russians have done a first rate job in providing quickly a reasonably adequate camp in Odessa and our prisoners are reasonably well provided with food, etc. Our officers there also are allowed to communicate with us daily. I have no present reason to complain about the situation in Odessa or about the speed with which our prisoners have been moved from Poland by train, considering the shortage of transportation.

I am outraged, however, that the Soviet Government has declined to carry out the agreement signed at Yalta in its other aspects, namely, that our contact officers be permitted to go immediately to points where our prisoners are first collected, to evacuate our prisoners, particularly the sick, in our own airplanes, or to send our supplies to points other than Odessa, which is 1,000 miles from point of liberation, where they are urgently needed.

Since the Yalta Conference General Deane and I have been making constant efforts to get the Soviets to carry out this agreement in full. We have been baffled by promises which have not been fulfilled or have been subsequently withdrawn. We succeeded after considerable delay in getting one contact team of an officer and a doctor to Lublin but they have not been permitted to move to other points and our infrequent communications with them have been largely through the friendly intervention of the Polish Embassy here.

Ten days ago the Soviet Foreign Office finally authorized General Deane to go to Poland to review the situation but no action has been taken so far. I pressed it again last night and hope to hear today. I have proposed that he go with a Russian officer and report jointly to the Soviet authorities and myself as to whether their information or ours is correct.

I am not so worried about our prisoners who are well. These, I believe, will gradually be assembled and shipped to Odessa. I am extremely concerned, however, over the sick and wounded. I hope to get an answer today about Deane's trip. If it is not satisfactory I will recommend that you cable Stalin again.

From General Deane:

10 March 1945

Lieutenant Colonel James D. Wilmoth,
American Prisoner of War Contact Team,
Lublin, Poland.

Dear Colonel Wilmoth:

There is no use of my going over the difficulties I have had in Moscow in attempting to help your situation. Needless to say, our efforts would fill a book, but the results are nil despite the fact that we not only have gone to the Ambassador level but to the Presidential level.

I was informed that your pass for Lublin is good until March 15th. However, I want you to remain there beyond that date and not leave unless they threaten to forcibly make you. I have been trying for two weeks to get authority for a trip to Poland to get first-hand information on the situation and I think I will eventually make it, but so far have only had day to day postponements. When I see you we can go over the situation more thoroughly.

The ten prisoner of war contact teams arrived at Poltava today and at least four officers and four non-commissioned officers will go to Odessa to relieve Hall. Thus far we have had no authority to establish contact teams in Poland and I am constantly told that your work is finished, which I know is not true. We shall keep working on the situation, however, as you know.

I am hopeful that the same plane that brings you this letter will bring you at least some supplies, and if I come I will have my plane filled with supplies.

We have had a few messages from you but they have been badly garbled and it was difficult for us to know your exact situation. I do know what a difficult time you have had and how frustrated you must have felt on many occasions. I know that you have felt, as I have, that there is much that could have been done, but that we have been frustrated on every attempt to accomplish it.

We did get one cable from you which you apparently filed commercially on the 8th. It arrived this morning, indicating that you need certain supplies and stating that there are now ten Americans and twenty-eight British at the hospital. This seems to be an effective method of communication and I suggest that you try it frequently. I will also endeavor to use commercial communication to you. Until I can get planes and supplies to you, just sit tight and do the best you can.

I am deeply grateful for the work you, Kingsbury and Kiehl have done so far, and I am fully aware of the difficulties under which you are working.

Hoping to see you soon, I am

Sincerely yours,

I assume the Department has been informed by the War Department of the great difficulties General Deane and I have been having with the Soviet Government in regard to the care and repatriation of our liberated prisoners of war. In the beginning it appeared that the Soviet authorities were going to interpret our agreement substantially as we did, namely that we be allowed to send our contact officers to several points within Poland to which our prisoners first find their way, to fly in emergency supplies and to evacuate our wounded on the returning trips of the planes, although in Soviet planes rather than United States planes. We obtained authority for one contact team of an officer and doctor to go to Lublin with one plane load of supplies and they have done extremely useful work there. No other teams or supplies have since been permitted and authority for the Lublin team to remain has recently been withdrawn.

The Soviets have now contended that Odessa is the only present "camps and points of concentration" referred to in the agreement to which our contact officers are to be permitted. The Soviets are, however, planning also to establish camps at Lwow, Bronnitsa and Volkowisk which are just east of the present Polish border and will be accessible to our officers, but even these camps are a long way from the original points of liberation.

Our prisoners have suffered serious hardships from lack of food, clothing, medical attention, et cetera, in finding their way to concentration points in Poland and on the long rail trip to Odessa because we have been stopped from sending in our contact teams and emergency supplies, a considerable number of sick and wounded are still hospitalized in Olch.

I have been urging for the last two weeks that General Deane be permitted to survey the situation with a Red Army officer. This was first approved in writing with the qualification that arrangements must be made with the Polish authorities. An officer of our military mission informally approached the Polish

the Polish Embassy here and was advised that no Polish authorization was necessary as it was entirely within the competence of the Red Army. We have been unable, however, to get authorization for Deane's trip.

It seems clear that the Soviets have changed their point of view during the last several weeks and are now rigidly determined that none of our officers shall be permitted in Poland.

I saw Molotov again today about the situation. He maintained that the Soviet Government was fulfilling its obligation under the agreement and both the Red Army authorities and the Polish Provisional Government objected to the presence of our officers in Poland. When I pressed him on what valid objection the Red Army could possibly have, he pointed out that we had no agreement with the Polish Provisional Government. In spite of my contention that this was a Soviet responsibility he kept reverting to the above fact. I then directly asked him if he was implying that we should make such an arrangement with the Poles and if so, whether the Red Army would remove its objections. He did not answer this question directly but left me with the impression that he wished me to draw that deduction.

I am satisfied that the objection comes from Soviet Government and not the Provisional Polish Government as our military mission has been in informal contact with the Polish Embassy here who have been extremely cooperative as have all Polish authorities including the Polish Red Cross to our prisoners in Poland.

I feel that the Soviet Government is trying to use our liberated prisoners of war as a club to induce us to give increased prestige to the Provisional Polish Government by dealing with it in this connection as the Soviets are doing in other cases.

General Deane and I have not (repeat not) been able to find a way to force the Soviet authorities to live up to our interpretation of our agreement. We have used every argument to no avail. Unless some steps can be taken to bring direct pressure on the Soviets, our liberated prisoners will continue to suffer hardships, particularly the wounded and sick. I recommend that the Department consult with the War Department with a view of determining what further steps might be taken here or elsewhere to induce the Soviets to change their present un-cooperative attitude.

It is the opinion of General Deane and myself that no arguments will induce the Soviets to live up to our interpretation of the agreement except retaliatory measures which affect their interests unless another direct appeal from the President should prove effective. We therefore recommend that the first step be a second request from the President to Marshal Stalin along the line of the suggestion I have already made in my Army cable March 12, perhaps now amplified in light of developments since. In the meantime, however, we recommend further that the Department and War Department come to an agreement on what retaliatory measures we can immediately apply in the event an unfavorable answer is received by the President from Marshal Stalin.

Consideration might be given to such actions as, or combination thereof: (One) That General Eisenhower issue orders to restrict the movements of Soviet contact officers in France to several camps or points of concentration of their citizens far removed from the points of liberation, comparable to Lwow and Odessa; (Two) That Lend-Lease refuse to consider requests of Soviet Government additional to our fourth protocol commitments for such items as sugar, industrial equipment or other items that are not immediately essential for the Red Army and the Russian war effort; (Three) That consideration be given to allowing our prisoners of war en route to Naples to give stories to the newspapers of the hardships they have been subjected to between point of liberation and arrival at Odessa and that in answer to questions of correspondents, the War Department explain the provisions of our agreement and the Soviet Government's failure to carry out the provisions of the agreement according to any reasonable interpretation.

certainly up to the last few days and possibly still are, large numbers of other liberated American prisoners either at Soviet assembly points awaiting entrainment to Odesa or wandering about in small groups not in contact with Soviet authorities looking for American contact. I therefore understand your reluctance to permit American contact officers, with the necessary means, to assist their own people in this matter. This Government has done everything to meet each of your requests. I now request you to inform me in this particular matter, so that I may be able to explain to you in detail my desires.

PERSONAL AND SECRET FROM FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT TO THE PRESIDENT: MR. F. ROOSEVELT

I am in receipt of your message about the evacuation of former U.S. prisoners of war from Poland.
With regard to your information about allegedly large numbers of sick and injured Americans who have been evacuated to Odesa, I must state that I have not contacted the Soviet authorities, and I am not in a position to verify the information. Actually, apart from a certain number who are on their way to Odesa, there were only 17 sick U.S. servicemen on Polish soil as of March 21. I have today received a report which says that the 17 men will be flown to Odesa. I am not sure of this.
I say that if it concerned me personally I would be ready to give way even to the detriment of my own interests. But in the instance the matter concerns the interests of the United States, front and of Soviet continuing no relation to the military, and odd offered looking after, want all kinds of meetings and contacts, protection against possible acts of sabotage by German agents not yet ferreted out, and other things. I am not at all certain of the commanders bear full responsibility for the state of affairs at the front and in the immediate rear, and I do not see how I can restrict their rights to my extent.
I must also say that U.S. ex-prisoners of war liberated by the Red Army have been treated to good conditions in Soviet camps—better conditions than those afforded Soviet ex-prisoners of war in U.S. camps, where some of them are still with German authorities, and some are subjected to unfair treatment and individual persecutions, including beating, as has been communicated to the U.S. Government on more than one occasion.

PERSONAL AND TOP SECRET FOR MARSHAL STALIN FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

The State Department has just been informed by Ambassador Gromyko concerning the composition of the Soviet Delegation to the San Francisco Conference.¹ We have the highest regard for Ambassador Gromyko's character and capabilities and know that he would aptly represent the Soviet Union. I am sure that Mr. Gromyko will be able to help in the friendly and fruitful cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union at Yalta. Recalling the friendly and fruitful cooperation at Yalta between Mr. Molotov, Mr. Eden and Mr. Stettinius, I know that the Secretary of State has been looking forward to continuing at San Francisco in the same spirit—the establishment of the eventual realization of the peace and the establishment of a secure and peaceful future.

The Conference, without Mr. Molotov's presence, will be deprived of a very great asset. It has pressing and heavy responsibilities in the Soviet Union make it impossible for him to be present. It is a conference that will find it possible to hold the conference at least for the vital opening sessions. All speaking Powers and the majority of the other countries attending will be represented by their Ministers of Foreign Affairs. In these circumstances I am afraid that Mr. Molotov's presence at the conference will be of considerable interest in the general objectives of this Conference on the part of the Soviet Government.

I have received your message.

So far as concerns British prisoners of war, you have no grounds for anxiety. They are living in better conditions than was the case with Soviet prisoners of war in English camps, when the latter in a number of cases suffered persecution and even blows. Moreover, there are no longer any English prisoners in our camps - they are on route for Odesa and voyage home.

Following is text of personal message received by the Secretary of State from Molotov dated March 23rd.

I have received your message of March 21st on the subject of prisoners of war.

I cannot agree with your assertion that this agreement has been unsatisfactorily carried out so far as the Soviet side is concerned. Moreover I cannot regard as justified the exaggerated claims which do not follow from the agreement. I can assure you that British prisoners of war are in good conditions. We will continue to take care of British prisoners of war in future.

When a release was given
BOWEN, April 8—Prisoners of American soldiers came home
"day after month of privation in German prison camps. Battle-scarred and some of them still bearing marks of long confinement, the largest contingent of liberated prisoners to return from Europe debarked this morning from an Army troop transport.

Most of the former prisoners were liberated by the Russians in eastern Germany. Many escaped in the narrow corridor the Russian thrust across Poland into Germany.

The soldiers told of terrible hardships in Nazi prison camps, of an almost starvation diet, of inadequate shelter in the cold of winter and inadequate shelter.
They described the long trek across Poland into Russian territory. An officer said:

"The Polish were especially in the harrier and it was very hard there and they opened their doors gave us food from their meager stores and helped us on our way."

The Russians, the soldier said, were friendly only with their military and didn't have a whole lot of time for us."

Saved By Red Cross Food
Despite their ordeals, the fifteen hundred men appeared in good physical condition, which they attributed mainly to Army care and a "wonderful food" of recent months while they waited in the Mediterranean area to be brought home.

The majority spent only five or six months in prison camps. A few suffered through almost a year. Many of them said in effect:
"If it hadn't been for the Red Cross packages, many of us wouldn't be here."

The prisoners said they engaged in a flourishing "black market" trade with German guards to obtain bread and other food. Four for the most part was soup and a bit of bread for five men every two days. Meat was served once a week, usually consisting of two thin slices of Bologna. Red sugar and jelly also was served once a week. Oranges, they said, were "distributed widely."

They tried to tell of how they felt to be home. Loaded into troop trucks, they were whisked to Camp Meyer, Bannockburn, where the first time of major importance was a steak dinner and all the food they could drink.

They will be issued new clothing by the end of the week. The Army hopes to have them back to their homes within a week. They will start working for their own benefit.

sians. Sherman tanks, rifles and even hand grenades.

Liberated from a camp near called one of the first things they saw when the Russians drove toward them was a Sherman tank, manned by a Russian woman.

Many of the men reported:

"We were treated as rough and had a lot of things to get to be told. They also told of German civilians helping our Air Force men who had parachuted into enemy territory.

Red Cross workers, USO volunteers and an Army band greeted them as their ship docked. Intertainment went on until almost midnight. On the train to Camp Standard, they closed their eyes to the passing landscape.

Staff Sgt. Earl Evans, one of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Evans, of 2506 back without a scratch but a nightmare experience. A strapping 313 pounds when he was a semihustler in the Golden Gate heavy-he dropped about twenty-seven pounds while a prisoner.

THE NEW YORK TIMES CAPTIVE STRAFING IN ERROR ADMITTED

Assistant Provost Marshal Explains Mistakes to the Prisoners' Relatives

WASHINGTON, April 8 (UN-Manned) of migrating POW prisoners in Germany have occasionally been strafed in mistake by American planes. A War Department spokesman said today.

"It is hard to understand how this happens, as my photo are briefed about prisoners-of-war movements," said Gen. B. M.
Byrne, assistant provost marshal, headquarters of prisoner affairs.

He said the truth is that things are changing so fast over there that it is impossible to brief the pilots accurately. The pilot's instructions are to disrupt transportation and search every German vehicle they see on the roads."

General Byrne described three great mistakes of prisoners of war, served by their captors to search westward because of the Russian advance. Information obtained from the prisoners of war said that the Germans had a policy of capturing POWs and keeping them in the rear areas to be used as labor.

These figures are to large, General Byrne said, that experts in the Provost Marshal General's office find them hard to believe.

General Byrne said that about 100,000 prisoners of war, including 15,000 Americans, were being moved from the rear areas to the front lines of Germany. The movement was being made in a series of small groups, and that a large number of these prisoners were being moved in a line south of Berlin.

camp for Soviet nationals was established immediately in Fifth Army area in Florence and base camp in Bari.
No guards were provided at each installation and Russians were permitted and encouraged to set up their own camp administration. Russians of all categories are accepted at Florence camp, outfitted with clothing, PX supplies and same facilities as for United States personnel. After minimum processing they are flown to Bari to await shipment

On March 2 this HQ sought through AGC Hungary, to attach United States POW contact personnel to our mission in Hungary and to HQS on Russian front. No authority has been received to date. Deane has since reported that he feels certain Russians will not allow United States personnel to enter Poland for political reasons. (Details of Bucharest experience are included see our 1352 of April 6, 11 a.m.).

Twenty-six hundred Americans have been evacuated via Odessa to date but a shipment of 884 Americans who arrived there April second are now held up there under Russians at Bari.

In light of conflicting interpretations of Yalta Agreement, McNarney has asked for War Department

My dear Hodges:

First let me thank you for your courteous reception and your kind invitation for luncheon. We not only enjoyed our all too short visit but left feeling that we had gained important information that would permit us to be of further help at this critical time.

We are strengthening Ad Sec's transportation resources with a large number of truck companies and, incidentally, some L-5's for rail reconnaissance.

Answering your inquiry as to how much force an Army Commander would need to gain the control of displaced Russians, I can only say that in my letter of 8 April 1945, SWSJepi: Liberated Prisoners of the Soviet Union, covers the matter in general and more particularly in Paragraphs 5, 6, 7, and 9. I enclose a copy of your easy reference.

Talking with Judge McCloy today, he agreed that of course an Army Commander could use any force necessary to insure the success of his operations. He expressed the hope, which I share, that most of these people can be kept well forward and thus be enabled to reach their Fatherland over the shortest possible route.

With kindest wishes for your continued victories.

feasible to move our POW's westward through a widening corridor instead of bringing them all the way around through Odessa.

The accuracy of the information we have on location of POW camps and numbers of prisoners is open to question. Best data available from the War Department report of 17 March 45 shows over 5,000 at Barth near the Baltic coast north of Berlin and 3,000 more at Neu Brandeburg. South of Berlin 2,900 at Luckenwalde, 2,500 at Muhlberg and 1,000 others at four other camps in this same area. Some of these may already have been overrun.

West of Vienna at Gneixendorf (near Krems) 4,000 were indicated, and 4,000 more at Wagscheid west of Linz. However, Archer says the International Red Cross believes that many of these prisoners have been shifted by the Germans and that the Russians will not liberate nearly so many as we at first anticipated. You may be able to get in Washington more up to date information.

 He stated he had a telegram from the Prime Minister concerning on this and handed the paper to Mr. Eden. Mr. Eden stated that we were afraid if we did not go in now we might not get in at all. Mr. Eden asked Mr. Eden if he would give him his comments on this tomorrow if possible. Mr. Eden agreed.

F. Sweden

Mr. Eden referred to the recent proposal of the Norwegian Government to the Swedish Government that the Swedes should now come into the war and help throw the Nazis out of Norway. The Secretary stated that this matter had been referred to our Joint Chiefs of Staff and that we were now waiting for their views. He said that Mr. Hickerson was handling this matter and that he hoped for an answer tomorrow. He suggested to Mr. Eden that it might speed the matter up if the British repre-

 Joint Chiefs of Staff so that the matter could be considered by the Combined Chief.
 Mr. Eden said he thought we could do this.

G. Prisoners of War

Mr. Eden said that the Secretary had mentioned to him while they were with the President today that he wanted to talk to him about a "prisoners of war" matter.
 The Secretary said that what he had in mind was the difficulty we had were having with regard to members of the U. S. and U. K. Armed Forces who were prisoners behind the Russian front lines. He said that the treatment which our prisoners had obtained were quite unsatisfactory and that we had not been able to have contact teams sent into the area to care for and provide for our men. The Russians had promised to do something about this at Yalta but they had done nothing. He wanted to raise this matter with Mr. Molotov when he arrived.

MEMORANDUM

April 19, 1945.

Mr. Secretary

The following is a list of questions which Mr. Molotov may raise or which you might wish to raise depending upon the course which the discussions take:

1. Implementation of the Crimea Agreement on liberated areas in Rumania.
2. Implementation of the Crimea Agreement on liberated areas in Bulgaria.
3. Need for improvement of the American position on Allied Control Commissions in satellite states.
4. The failure of the Soviet Government to provide facilities for the entry of UNRRA and Red Cross personnel into Poland and the Balkans.
5. Failure of the Soviet Government to satisfy our requirements for full advance information concerning transfers to third countries of supplies furnished to the Soviet Union under Lend-Lease or supplies of Soviet origin similar to Lend-Lease materials.
6. The implementation of the Crimea Agreement regarding the exchange of liberated prisoners of war and civilians.
7. The Krasnodar case.
8. The Soviet request for a six billion dollar loan.
9. Forthcoming meeting of the Reparations Commission in Moscow.

48
J.E.

4. The Failure of the Soviet Government to Provide Facilities for the Entry of UNRRA and Red Cross Personnel into Poland and the Balkans.

UNRRA has been attempting for several months to arrange for the entry of UNRRA personnel into Poland in connection with the carrying out of its functions there. Despite the fact that the Provisional authorities in Poland indicated their agreement, it has not been possible to obtain the necessary visas. Similar difficulties have been encountered by the Red Cross in getting its representatives into Poland. Late in February, however, two Red Cross representatives did finally get into Poland and one is still there. It has been impossible so far for them to carry out any effective work since the sixty tons of medical supplies sent from Moscow in February had not arrived in Lublin by April 16.

Mr. Molotov may take the position that this is a matter for the Polish Provisional Government. You may wish to point out that these areas are under Soviet military control and that UNRRA is an international organization in which the Soviet Union is a prominent member. We cannot believe that these difficulties could not be overcome if the Soviet Government desired to do so. You may also wish to stress the humanitarian aspects of this matter and to point out that our sole interest is to help the people in these areas who have suffered so much from the effects of the war.

J.E.

6. The Implementation of the Crimea Agreement Regarding the Exchange of Liberated Prisoners of War and Civilians.

You are familiar with the fact that despite the intervention of the President the Soviet Government would not allow our contact teams to proceed to Poland to assist our liberated prisoners of war in accordance with the terms of the Crimea Agreement on this matter.

Mr. Molotov may raise the question of our refusal to return to Soviet control Soviet Nationalist prisoners in German uniform who claim the protection of the Geneva Convention as German prisoners of war.

You may wish to explain that we have been concerned that the Germans might retaliate on American prisoners of war in their hands if we did not comply with the provisions of the Geneva Convention on this matter. We have insisted with the Germans that prisoners of war captured in American uniform be treated as American prisoners of war regardless of their nationality. Moreover, German measures of retaliation might not be confined to this particular question. You might assure Mr. Molotov, however, that we have no intention of holding Soviet citizens after the collapse of Germany regardless of whether they desire to return to the Soviet Union or not.

6. The Soviet Request for a Six Billion Dollar Loan.

You may wish to state that the Soviet memorandum on this subject is receiving the careful consideration of this Government, but compliance with the Soviet request would require prior legislation by Congress.

Depending on the general tenor of the conversations you may consider it advisable to point out to Mr. Molotov that in considering this matter the Congress will doubtless be influenced by the prospect for full collaboration between the United States and the Soviet Union in the establishment and maintenance of peace and stability.

You might further desire to remind Mr. Molotov that Congress reflects public opinion and that public opinion in this country has been greatly concerned over developments in Eastern Europe since the Crimea Conference. You will doubtless wish to assure Molotov, however, that this Government sincerely desires this collaboration, and we are anxious to do all we can to assist the Soviet Union in reconstruction and in the further development of its prosperity.

Mr. Dunn, Mr. Bohlen and Mr. Hiss met with the Secretary at the Secretary's apartment this morning.

The Secretary said that he wished to go over the matters which he should take up with Mr. Molotov and Mr. Dunn.

Mr. Bohlen, Mr. Dunn and the Secretary then discussed the Polish situation at some length. Mr. Bohlen reported on the latest visit of Ambassador Harrison on this subject. (Mr. Bohlen had met Ambassador Harrison on the latter's arrival at the airport last night.)

The Secretary then brought up the subjects relating to the San Francisco Conference which remained unsettled. After a good deal of discussion it seemed to be generally agreed that provided it was clearly understood that there would be only one presiding officer at a time, we might be prepared to agree to there being a commission of four presidents of the Conference, one of the four to be designated chairman of the Conference, and the four to be presiding officer when present.

Mr. Dunn said that it was particularly important that no way appear to be agreeing to a collection of four which would have to agree unanimously on points of order and other rulings brought up at the Conference. He feared that this concept

The Honorable

The Secretary of State

My dear Mr. Secretary:

There has come to hand a third person note from your Department dated 11 April 1945, S/W, inclosing a copy of a note to you from the Soviet Ambassador, Washington, dated 26 March 1945. This note alleges that the American authorities failed to disclose to the Soviet Government the existence of three American camps in England holding 1000 former Soviet prisoners of war, and charges that such failure is a violation of our agreement with the Soviet Government concerning prisoners of war.

The same complaint was presented at Moscow about 27 March to the Commanding General, U. S. Military Mission, by the Moscow military authorities. In response to inquiries made by General Deane at that time, Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force informed General Deane and the War Department by message dated 1 April that the existence of these camps has been known to the Russian authorities in the United Kingdom since their inception, and that these camps have been visited repeatedly by Soviet officers. The reason why these Soviet nationals were brought to England was in order that the ships which will repatriate them to Odessa may conform to movement schedules. SHAEF's message further states that the theater gives every facility to the Soviet representatives in the carrying out of their mission, and that Soviet participation in the internal management of their camps is granted to the maximum possible degree. The extent of such participation is in some cases, however, limited by a shortage of qualified Soviet officers.

For your further information it may be mentioned that the Commanding General, United Kingdom Base Section, in a message dated 30 March informed the War Department that General Ratov, in an interview with the American military authorities in London on 20 March, requested permission to interview Soviet citizens held in the United Kingdom by the United States, which request was immediately granted. On 30 March 1945 General Ratov and members of his staff began a tour of inspection of installations in which such personnel are held.

It will be seen from the foregoing that there has been no failure on the part of this Government to keep the accredited Soviet representatives duly informed, as required by the agreement in question.

repeated to Moscow,

Your telegram No. 2639.

Following for Secretary of State.

We are repeating to you
Moscow telegrams Nos. 1173, 1205 and Foreign Office telegram to Moscow
No. 1922.

It is clear that Soviet Government will not allow our contact teams into Poland. The Russians deny the existence of any British prisoners of war in Poland but we have evidence that there are prisoners of war concentrated at Cracow and Gostochin and in hospitals. This is a clear breach of Yalta agreement and we ought to maintain our position on this. At the moment however, the important thing is to get medical supplies and comforts to our men in Poland. We have therefore turned to the Red Cross channel (see Foreign Office telegram No. 1922 to Moscow) meanwhile reports from our contact officers who have been at Lwow-Volkovysk which are concentration points designated by the Russians themselves and are east of Curzon line disclosed serious breaching of the agreement which merit strong protests. In reply Foreign Office telegram No. 1958 has been sent.

Following received from Moscow telegram No. 1173 April 1945.

Begins.

Your telegram No. 1663.

Soviet authorities at Lwow have refused to extend permits of our officers beyond April 5th and have ordered them to return to Moscow. Admiral Archer has instructed our officers to stay where they are but I understand that they have been confined to their hotel. The reason given by the Soviet authorities was that the camp at Lwow had been cleared. They promised new passes if more prisoners arrived.

2. Owing to lack of communications with Volkovysk we do not know whether the same has happened there but it seems likely.

3. Before the receipt of your telegram under reference I had written to
M. Molotov pressing strongly for our officers to be allowed to remain until they have completed the duties which they were sent from England to perform and pointing out to him that the British public would never understand withdrawal of our officers until all our missing prisoners had been accounted for, particularly because a great number must have been liberated by recent operations of the Red Army or would shortly be by operation which were about to be undertaken.

4. While I agree that we should now await reports from our officers at Lwow and Volkovysk I doubt if these will in fact provide much additional information. There is I am sure great opposition to allowing our people to have access to Poland and also some inclination to blackmail us into dealing with Warsaw authorities. But we also have to make allowances for rooted Soviet objective summary of interview with Col. General Golikov, representative of Soviet of Peoples Commissars for Repatriation Affairs, which was featured in today's PRAVDA (To Paris for Murphy and Robor as 86 and to ANPOLAD Casorta as 75) Golikov makes startling allegations regarding mistreatment of Soviet citizens in British and American prisoner of war camps and contrasts unfavorably treatment accorded them with generous treatment allegedly accorded American and British prisoners of war liberated by Red Army. No allegation that all liberated British and American prisoners have been repatriated except for small groups and complaints of delays in repatriation of liberated

Russian prisoners of war.

Suggest this telegram and summary of inter-

Subject: Release of Belgian prisoners by the Russians.

Source: Major Akbar, Service des Informations, Petit Sablon, Brussels.

1. Major Akbar member of the Belgian mission which has been attempting to get released for Soviet Russia for several months. They have cut down their numbers from 33 to 4 but are still unable to get the necessary permission to enter Soviet-controlled territory. They propose, if satisfaction is not given shortly, to go to Constantinople and from there demand of the Russians whether or not they are to be allowed to complete their mission.
2. Major Akbar saw some 40 Belgian prisoners in Paris and all 40 confirmed the harsh treatment meted out to them by the Russians in the front lines and lines of communication, and only when they reached Moscow did things improve. The men were force-marched, given practically no food, robbed of their possessions, made to wait on roads and the clearing of debris, like convicts. At one point a Russian Colonel who spoke French intervened in their favor, but as soon as he had gone the ill-treatment was resumed. One of the 40 told Major Akbar that he was a Communist before he saw the Russians, but he is one no longer.
3. Major Akbar asked Colonel Malinoff if he could explain the attitude of the Russians, which appears contrary to all Russian interests and ideology, and Col. Malinoff, in a typically Russian report, said that the two Belgian SS brigades on the Eastern Front had fought with such fury and distinction that they had left a very evil souvenir in the minds of the Russians. He also added that possibly, in view of the uniforms they were wearing, they were mistaken by the Russians for members of the Organisation Todt.

Information received from prisoner of war camps in rear of Russian lines indicates thousands of United States and British prisoners of war held in close confinement under unsatisfactory conditions. We could have evacuated them by air a week or ten days ago if the Russians would agree to cooperate by permitting us to land planes at nearby airfields, as specifically authorized by Article 4 of Yalta Agreement.

Unless this evacuation can be effected promptly, there may well ensue most undesirable consequences.

This is in reference to our number FWD-21010. Please express to Russians the urgency of this matter and ask that they direct their commanders on Western Front to permit the landing of United States and British planes at fields near camps for evacuation of our prisoners of war.

Deputy Head of Soviet Repatriation Committee, Lt. General
 Golubev, informed me on 12 May that there would be no more Americans sent to Odessa except a few individual stragglers, and that henceforth all repatriation of American prisoners of war would be westward and overland.

In accordance with the above, I have initiated steps to abolish our contact team in Odessa and have also been requested by the Soviet
 Soviet authorities to do so. Foreign Office also informed our Embassy today that they would not approve visas of Red Cross personnel to Odessa because there would be no more prisoners of war evacuated through that port. In addition, Admiral Archer was informed by the Soviet Repatriation Committee on 27 May that instructions would be issued to stop sending British officers, soldiers and citizens to Odessa. Also, that henceforth those Allied prisoners of war liberated in the southern region would be dispatched to Orsk (Asiric) to be handed over to the 8th Army.

From the above, it is apparent that it is the intention of the Soviet High Command to abandon the port of Odessa as a transit camp

Mr. John M.G. Brown
Box 30
Petrolia, CA 95558

Dear Mr. Brown:

I received your letter and the articles you enclosed, and have read them with great interest in light of my own experience when I was liberated by Russian forces in late April, 1945. For many years after the war I thought about the circumstances of my own exfiltration from Stalag IV B in eastern Germany. I tried, unsuccessfully, to communicate my concerns to American Officers when I reached Frankfurt's repatriation Center and again when I was flown to LeHarve, France. My concerns for other prisoners left behind at IV B were treated with initial scepticism, then annoyance at my persistence, and finally with reassurance that the matter "would be investigated."

When I finally came back to the States, recovery from wounds that I had received at the time of my capture, the malnutrition and amoebic dysentery I developed, and the sheer exhilaration of surviving and being home took precedence and life soon resumed some semblance of normalcy.

Your articles, and the enormity of the possible number of prisoners that suffered a quite different fate have served to bring that traumatic period back in memory, tho' possibly dimmed by the passage of the years.

At any rate, the following are my recollections to the best of my ability.

When we were liberated by a Russian tank battalion, a group of us enthusiastically sought out a Russian officer to try to find out what was happening, and when we could expect to be repatriated back to American control. This officer spoke no english, but did have a smattering of German and since my mother had spoken German/Yiddish and my father had come from Russia and had taught me some of that language, I became sort of an unofficial translator for some of the men in my section. This is exactly what I was told by a Major Vasilli Vershenko.

The Russians were first concerned about the repatriation of the Russian prisoners held in a separate compound at IVB, and the Major indicated that they had to be interviewed individually since they felt that there were many "cowards, traitors and deserters among them and they had to be dealt with expeditiously". Then he told me that the Russians and the Americans had agreed to a pact wherein the Russians would receive "credits" for each American POW returned. This, he explained was a complex logistical matter, best handled by sending us to Odessa for treatment and repatriation. The callousness of his response and the officious tone in which this information was given, gave me real pause and I tried to explain to others that I was suspicious of their methods and motivations. Most of the men, however, felt that the Russians were our allies and that we were going to be well treated and returned home shortly. That night, my bunkmate, Cpl. William Smith of the 9th Division shared our mutual concerns and decided to take off on our own. The next evening, we "liberated" two Russian bicycles, got thru a gap in the wire where a Russian tank was parked and took off toward the west where we believed the American army would be. Our subsequent journey back thru Russian held territory, our capture by a band of fanatical "Hitler Youth" and subsequent escape, is a two week adventure that is an unbelievable story that must wait for another time to relate. As I said earlier, I tried to tell American Intelligence officers about the Majors comments, but was told that we were probably told that version in order to preserve order in the camp.

I'm happy that you have and are pursuing the matter of missing POW's, and would appreciate hearing more about your efforts.

I'm truly sorry that I can't shed more light on the subject, but as you know, generally a G.I.'s view of war is limited to what he directly sees, feels and experiences.

Sincerely,
[Redacted Signature]

Norwegian General Officer, who has been a prisoner of war at LEUCHENWALD, South of BERLIN, has arrived in MOSCOW.

He states that conditions in LEUCHENWALD under Russian control are extremely bad. Camp Commandant is a major who is usually intoxicated and treatment of British and American prisoners is not good. He states that recently a great many British and American prisoners were flown out in American transports against the Russian's wishes and that the Russians have vented their resentment on the remainder.

The Norwegian does not want his name used for fear of the effect it might have on Russian treatment of other Norwegian prisoners; however, if you have any supporting data that you can furnish, I would appreciate your sending it to me so that I can put pressure on the Russian Repatriation Committee.

In any event, when GOLDBEV meets your representatives in LEIPZIG, we should be prepared to confront him with all factual data possible concerning mistreatment of our prisoners by the Russians.

The repatriates may carry personal property, clothing, blankets, provisions - no bulky items. (Personal effects include watches).

DOCUMENTATION

To be carried out according to mutual arrangements between local Commanders on each side.

REPATRIATES - IN ROUTE

To be supplied with rations until time of delivery at ultimate transfer points.

First priority of movement will be given to sick and wounded who are fit to travel. There are certain provisions as to disinfection, all of which are more or less normal.

The Commanders will take immediate steps to put the plan into effect and will complete repatriation at the earliest possible time.

The plan was approved as at 1300 hours 22nd May, and went into effect today, 23rd May.

It is conclusive and final, and is now in operation. As a matter of fact, we began putting it into effect on the afternoon of 21st May, when we moved 2,300 British and Americans across.

There are no points especially disadvantageous to us, and everything the SHALT Staff wanted, they obtained, except we were not able to initiate them and there a standing liaison committee on both sides. This was forbidden by MOSCOW direct.

SUBJECT: Report on Conference with Russian Officials Relative to Repatriation of Prisoners of War and Displaced Persons.

TO: The Chief of Staff
Supreme Headquarters, AEF

79
J.B.

1. In accordance with your oral instructions of 13 May 1945, a party of SHAEF officers and enlisted men proceeded by air transport to Halle, Saalkreis, Germany, on 16 May, 1945, for the purpose of conferring with representatives of the Russian High Command on the matter of repatriation of prisoners of war and displaced persons. This party was accompanied from Versailles by the Russian Major Generals DRAGUN and RATOV and their secretaries.

A Russian party arrived from Moscow via Berlin about 1530 hours, same date. This party was headed by Lieutenant General GOLUBEV. When the Russian Mission was finally assembled it numbered some forty officers and forty to fifty enlisted men. Among the Russian officers were one Lieutenant General and six Major Generals.

The Russian party arrived in requisitioned German vehicles of all makes, an American-type armored car, fully equipped, and a radio truck, which latter was in operation during most of the time. All Russian male personnel were heavily armed with pistols, sub-machine guns and rifles. The first conference was held in a former Luftwaffe officers club at the Luftwaffe school, at about 1800 hours, 16 May, the date of arrival. The respective Missions were headed by General GOLUBEV and the undersigned. After opening statements by those officers, I proposed the immediate initiation of steps looking toward prompt release and return to Allied control of all British and American prisoners of war then in Russian custody, using air and motor transport. This proposal was firmly resisted by General GOLUBEV, who cited all manner of local administrative difficulties which precluded the operation. He stated that serviceable air fields did not exist, which was known by myself to be not the case and I so informed him. The Russian position was very clear that neither now, nor at any time in the future, would they permit Allied airplanes to be used for the movement into or out of their territory of prisoners of war or displaced persons, except "Distinguished persons, sick and wounded". From the discussions on this first point, which lasted some two hours, the SHAEF representatives came to the firm conviction that British and American prisoners of war were, in effect, being held as hostages by the Russians until deemed expedient by them to permit their release. other Allied/Russian matters. The Russian Mission could not agree to this, apparently in response to instructions from Moscow.

5. Final agreement on a plan was reached at 0415 hours, 22 May. Signatures were affixed thereto at 1800 hours, same date. Copy of the Agreed Plan is attached hereto (Appendix "A").

6. Although the Plan indicates that its provisions are to become effective twenty-four hours after signature, it actually began to operate on the afternoon of the 20th, with the transfer of some 2,200 US/British prisoners from the camp at Luckenwalde.

There is every indication that the Russians intend to make a big show of rapid repatriation of our men, although I am of the opinion that we may find a reluctance to return them all, for an appreciable time to come, since those men constitute a valuable bargaining point. It will be necessary for us, therefore, to arrange for constant liaison and visits of inspection to "uncover" our men.

7. On the afternoon of 22 May, two groups of SHAEF officers, by arrangement with General GOLUBEV, went on a tour of camps in the Russian area where US/British prisoners of war are thought to be located. They will investigate conditions and gather data thereon. This is the first instance of either American or British officers being permitted to visit such camps in the forward Russian area.

(2) Plan with Russians for mutual repatriation of prisoners of war and displaced persons was agreed and signed at noon 22 May. Under this agreement:

a. All USSR PW and citizens liberated by Allied Forces and all Allied PW and citizens liberated by Red Army are to be delivered through Army lines to Army Commands on each side.

b. Recovered Allied prisoners of war will be received at 5 points - WISMAR, WUSTMARK, LUDWIGSLUST, MAGDEBERG and LEIPZIG. 2 additional transfer points will be arranged in GERMANY and in AUSTRIA.

c. Capacity each point from 2,000 to 5,000 daily. Figures do not imply for man exchange.

d. Documentation to be responsibility of receiving and not dispatching authority.

e. First priority in movement to be accorded to those sick and wounded fit for travel.

Although the plan actually went into operation today, we were able to make it effective on the evening of 20 May with respect to 2200 British and American PWs at LUCKENWALDE. The fact has been established that the Russians are now prepared to make prompt delivery and it is expected that considerable numbers will be delivered to us on the 23rd.

(3) In order to give the War Department prompt data concerning all U.S. EX-PWs recovered from Russian control under the above plan, we are prepared to make nominal rolls at each of the 5 transfer points and will forward them to the War Department by most expeditious means and prior to accurate and complete check in Casualty Branch this Theater.

(4) Observation shows that due to the loose administrative system in Red Army we cannot expect to get any worthwhile information on men in their custody for some time. We now for first time have officers in their forward areas inspecting PW Camps and hope for some information from them. Also hope now to make regular visits of this nature, until evacuation is complete.

(5) The following remarks apply to all U.S. EX-PWs held in GERMANY:

1st - Many of these men became PWs in NORTH AFRICA and MEDITERRANEAN; hence there is no previous record of them in Casualty Division this Theater.

2nd - The only detailed information we have on German holdings of PWs is that furnished from time to time by Casualty Branch, AG War Department.

3rd - In order to expedite receipt of names by War Department, lists of recovered EX-PWs are now being prepared at Reception Camps and sent direct to War Department prior to final check and processing in Theater Casualty Division.

For these 3 reasons we believe that Casualty Branch War Department is the best source of information as to status of individual PWs prior to their recovery.

It is desired to obtain nominal rolls of recovered U.S. Prisoners of War at the earliest possible time. To this end it is desired that you utilize excess PWK personnel and any other personnel necessary to document these Ex-Prisoners of War at the points the Russians deliver them to our control. Rolls will be prepared giving the following information:
A. Last Name, First Name, Middle Initial; B. Serial Number;
C. Rank; D. Former Organization; E. Date returned to U.S. Control;
F. Whether or not Hospitalized.

These rolls will be delivered by the most expeditious means possible to General LOVETT, Theater Adjutant General, PARIS, using, if necessary, officer couriers and air transportation. The greatest care will be exercised in preparing these rolls, using either typewriter or printing plainly as it is intended to telephoto the original rolls to War Department. It is of the greatest importance that every U.S. Prisoner of War transferred from Russian custody be so documented, as well as any other recovered U.S. personnel.

New subject: It is also desired that every recovered U.S. Prisoner of War be given an opportunity to send a 15 word cable to his next of kin. These cables may be written on any type paper available giving full address of the next of kin, text and full signature of sender. 23 MAY, 1945 meeting between PATTON's 3rd Army Chief of Staff, General GAY, and Soviet General Derevenko, confirming that Soviets were holding American & BRITISH POWs in Austria at Melk.

General GAY: I say yes. Is that satisfactory with you?

General Reinhart: If I should have to use truck transportation, that would be a stiff haul. The trip to Erlauf is 107 miles round trip. Erlauf is some 10 or 12 miles this side of Melk.

General GAY: I think it is all right.

General Reinhart: Does the General have any further objection to having it at Amstetten?

General Derevenko: I am ready to start the work. To change this location, it would require time to organize another place. I am of the opinion that it would be much better if it is in the vicinity of Melk.

General GAY: We would have to be able to use the railroad in this connection.

General Derevenko: I am waiting to get a definite statement concerning the railroad, and until that time, we will have heavy traffic. Of course, it would be much easier not to begin this work with traffic on the roads. Too, because your organizations have done quite a good job in the vicinity of Amstetten and other places, too many bridges are out. It is not so easy to restore them. Restoration work is being done all the time.

Colonel Vissering: When we get the railway in running order, if we put up two coaching stops, perhaps you could arrange to find two sets in your area, so one day your trains could run our way, and the next day our trains could run your way.

General Derevenko: I will consider this question and give you an answer as soon as possible through General Reinhart.

General GAY: We assume also that we will have authority to use boats to take prisoners down or bring them back.

General Reinhart: Is Melk on the river?

General GAY: Yes.

General Reinhart: On the question of trucks, I believe there should be some agreement that the Russians and Americans will run an equal number of convoys of approximately the same size, and that all convoys should be used both ways.

Colonel Leitch: Yes, if we send a train load of Russians over to Melk, that same train should be loaded up with Western Europeans and returned to us. It should be the same both ways in order that truck and train transportation can be used to its fullest capacity.

General GAY: I think that will normally be true.

General Derevenko: I think the same way on this question as you do. General Reinhart is concerned about the amount of both sides.

their transportation is only to collect through Melk, and that we will do all the hauling of prisoners.

General GAY: When people are there ready to go, they will use their transportation.

General Derevenko: I can state that this can be worked out in the most perfect manner.

General Reinhart: Then we will do all the hauling.

General GAY: Other than that which he desires to do.

General Reinhart: I think this railway runs down to Steyr. It runs in Russian territory from Enns down to Steyr. This is going to be a double-barrel proposition for me. I will be getting lots of these people back to forward further west and I am going to need some help on the transportation.

General GAY: We will haul prisoners of war first, and displaced persons second. Are you in shape to get the prisoners started tomorrow?

General Reinhart: I could send prisoners of war right now, but the question is: Has he a control party to clear them? We don't want to be getting a bunch of German agents. On that question of the control party also comes up the point of documents. They will need somebody familiar with the documents.

General GAY: You can bring British and Americans over without screening them.

General Reinhart: No, sir. I think we should identify them before we bring them.

Colonel Leitch: The divisions are busy now getting PWs screened.

General GAY: Do you have British and American prisoners of war on hand at Melk now?

General Derevenko: The British and American prisoners of war are not in the vicinity of Melk. They are farther down the Danube, in the vicinity of Vienna, but they will be brought up immediately, and will be screened.

General GAY: How do you feel about our putting people down at Melk to screen these people?

General Derevenko: We must work it so you could have your representatives at this point.

General GAY: We feel that we can get our people down to Melk so they can start work tomorrow night.

General Reinhart: We must also have a medical check because of disease etc.

General Derevenko: At 1600 today, Moscow time, they are waiting for information on one point at Enns and the other in the vicinity of Steyr.

General GAY: We won't be able to start running there until tomorrow evening.

Harry Hopkins - Stalin, Meetings in Moscow

TOP SECRET

J.B.

PARAPHRASE OF NAVY CABLE MAY 30, 1945

FROM HOPKINS, TOPSECRET FOR THE PRESIDENT ONLY:

On two occasions Stalin has emphasized the importance of planning at once for the organization of the Peace Conference in so far as it relates to Europe. Apparently he is thinking about a formal conference and he emphasized that the Allies were not properly prepared at Versailles and that we should not make that mistake again. At your forthcoming meeting he will bring this up.

We reminded Stalin some days ago that he had made a speech in which he said that he did not favor the dismemberment of Germany. This appeared to be contrary to the position he took both at Tehran and Yalta. His explanation of this action on his part was that his recommendation had been turned down at Yalta and more specifically that Eden and Strang on behalf of the British had stated that dismemberment was to be accomplished only as a last resort and that Vissart, who was present at the Conference at which this discussion took place in London, interposed no objection, hence Stalin states that it was his understanding that both Great Britain and the United States were opposed to dismemberment. I undertook to tell him that this was not the case; that while you had made no final decision in regard to this, the United States considered this an open question and that you would surely want to thrash it out at your next meeting. I told him that he must not assume that the United States is opposed to dismemberment because he may learn from you that just the opposite was the case. He then said that dismemberment was a matter which the three Allies must settle among themselves and that he would keep an open mind in regard to it.

He went into some detail regarding the definition of the German General Staff and stated that it would be desirable if the members of that Staff could be detained for ten to fifteen years and if a legal way could be found to prosecute and convict the General Staff as a war criminal organization that would be all the better. The Soviets have captured certain members of the General Staff whom they consider to be war criminals and whom they propose should be prosecuted as such under any circumstances. Stalin stated that the Soviets permitted no prisoners of war to go to work on farms or in factories. As to exactly what he was doing with prisoners of war he was somewhat hazy but he indicated that he was bringing many of them back to White Russia and the Ukraine to work in mines and on reconstruction. He said that he did not know just how many prisoners of war they had but he thought they had about 2,800,000 of which 1,700,000 were German and the balance Rumanians, Italians, Hungarians, etc. He stated that the officers were not repeat not being required to work. You can be sure that at your next meeting Stalin will have some pretty specific proposals to make about prisoners of war, and more particularly, I believe, about war criminals. He did not, as we anticipated, express any criticism of our handling of war prisoners. Stalin outlined in some detail his administrative procedure in local German communities, but I shall delay a report on that until I return home. He said he believed we should do everything to encourage them to get to work on their farms in order to provide food for themselves, and indicated that we should cooperate in getting their light consumer goods industries going. He indicated that Germany should be permitted these heavy industries required for the rehabilitation of their transportation systems, electric power, water, sewage, etc.

Although he promised that he was going to appoint Zhukov as his member of the Control Council for Germany, it has not yet been done. We shall at tonight's meeting again urge him to announce at once Zhukov's appointment.

12. General N. V. Slavin,
Assistant Chief of Staff of Red Army,
People's Commissariat for Defense,
Moscow, U.S.S.R.

Dear General Blarbas:

I have had a cable from General Marshall in which he states he has received information which indicates that 12,527 United States liberated prisoners of war are now under control of Marshal Tolbukhin. He says further that his information is that Marshal Tolbukhin proposes to continue the evacuation of these prisoners of war through Odesa, rather than repatriate them westward and onward, as was proposed by the Soviet Government and accepted by the United States and British authorities in the agreement at Kalle. He has asked me to obtain information on this subject and reply to him urgently.

I have been informed by General Colburn that no more American prisoners of war would be repatriated through the port of Odesa and that all would be repatriated westward and overland. However, there seems to be some difficulty in accomplishing this. Field Marshal Alexander has also cabled to me stating that the repatriation of prisoners of war in Marshal Tolbinich's area continues to be through Odesa.

We have been requested by the Soviet authorities to abandon our program of our contact team activities in Moscow and I have already taken steps to accomplish this. It seems apparent to me that it is the intention of the Soviet High Command to evacuate our prisoners of war westward, but perhaps these instructions have not yet reached Marshal Tukhachev.

I would appreciate your letting me know the attitude of the Soviet Government in this matter with the least possible delay in order that I may reply to General Marshall. I am making a similar request to Lt. General Coluber.

Latest available displaced persons and prisoners of war figures show almost 1,600,000 Western Europeans (French, Belgian, Dutch and Luxembourgais) either repatriated from or at present held in SHARP area. Soviet delegates at LEIPZIG conference stated only 300,000 Western Europeans in their area. Continued working party on European food supplies, composed of representatives from UNRRA, SHARP, USSR, UK and USA, including Soviet delegate KHUSCHENKO, estimated approximately 3,000,000 displaced Western Europeans in enemy-held territory at beginning 1945. This discrepancy of over 1,000,000 Western Europeans is causing the Dutch and French Governments considerable anxiety. Can Soviets help to clarify situation by giving nationality breakdown of all Western European displaced persons and prisoners of war now held by them and gathered in GERMANY, POLAND, USSR, BULGARIA, HUNGARY, ROMANIA, AUSTRIA and CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

Subject: Overland Exchange of Ex-Prisoners of War and Displaced Persons Liberated by the Allied Expeditionary Force and the Red Army.

The Secretary of State,
Washington.

Sir,

With reference to my telegram Nos. 8625 and 2936 of May 15 and 24, 1945, respectively, I have the honor to transmit a copy of the plan agreed by representatives of Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, and Supreme Command, Red Army, at Halle, Germany, May 22, 1945, for the most expeditious overland delivery of Allied and Soviet ex-prisoners of war and displaced persons liberated by the Allied Expeditionary Force and the Red Army. The two delegations were headed by Lieutenant General A. D. Golubev, Red Army, Soviet Assistant Administrator for Repatriation, and Major General R. W. Barker, U.S.A., Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, SHAEP.

As reported in my telegram No. 2236 of May 24, 4 p.m., the plan, in its final form, was only agreed after six days of conversations. Allied desiderata which were unacceptable to the Red Army delegation included permission to fly transport aircraft into Soviet-occupied territory and the establishment of a standing working committee or commission to be set up at some convenient location near the demarcation line, such as Leipzig or Halle, charged with handling day-to-day details of the exchange. Although General Golubev would not agree to the incorporation of a paragraph providing first priority delivery of U.S. and U.K. ex-prisoners of war, he gave his most solemn personal assurance that all U.S. and U.K. ex-prisoners of war would, in fact, be given preferential treatment. A request for second priority for Western European ex-political detainees, in accordance with the desires of the Western European governments that such persons be repatriated before their respective ex-prisoners of war and other displaced persons, was summarily refused. The assertion that (all) political prisoners held in German concentration camps overrun by the Red Army had been released and that there were, accordingly, no more political prisoners in Soviet-occupied territory. With respect to this category of displaced persons, not even verbal assurances were to be had.

The Red Army delegation, for its part, had arrived in Halle with a set document which contained numerous provisions unacceptable to SHAEP. In form, the document Cannon Street, LONDON, W.I.

1. It is considered that the time has now arrived when certain Dominion and Services Liaison Officers may be withdrawn from this Theatre in the immediate future.

2. Prisoners of War not yet evacuated and in RUSSIAN hands will be dealt with through exchange points already agreed upon. From these points they will be evacuated with the minimum delay either through Staging Camps or direct to the U.K. depending upon availability of aircraft and upon weather conditions.

3. In these circumstances it will only be necessary to have minimum Dominion and Services representation at exchange points and Staging Camps.

4. It is suggested that a member of the Staff, "Miaja", though the training of them will be a long process, it is intended that this shall be the case for a further representation in the future, and when the relevant date of this category is available from your Casualty Branch. In any event it is desirable to retain Dominion and Services Officers for this purpose, it is suggested that they may be made available from the personnel remaining on the Continent at exchange points and Staging Camps.

5. (a). It is urgently necessary to curtail the number of personnel in this Theatre and particularly on this Headquarters and it will be appreciated if you will obtain the concurrence of the Dominions and Services that personnel when this Headquarters considers can be dispensed with shall be returned to the U.K.

(b). It is proposed to release personnel attached to this Headquarters in the first instance, followed by release of those surplus to Army Group requirements.

25,000 Missing U. S. Soldiers Turn Up Alive

Men, Found in Nazi Prison Camps, on Way Home;
89,776 Prisoners Found

By Carl Levin

By Wire to the Herald Tribune
Copyright, 1945, New York Tribune Inc.SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Paris,

June 4. — Twenty-five thousand

American soldiers who had been listed as missing in 1943 have turned up as prisoners of war and now are on their way back to the United States, it was disclosed

here today by the Recovery

Allied Military Personnel Division

at the Office of the European Theater of Operations Forces

Marshal.

Lieutenant Colonel W. P.

Schweitzer, of Elizabeth, N. J.,

chief of the R. A. M. P. Division, said there was little likelihood any others would be found, except stragglers who may yet come in from Russian-occupied Germany.

It also is believed, he said, that the 89,776 American prisoners of war recovered from camps in Germany constitute the entire American prisoner group which was in Nazi hands during the final stages

of the war. Of this number, which includes those previously listed missing in action, all but about 20,000 are either already in the United States or on an en route.

The 25,000 have been processed and are waiting at Lucky Star, the R. A. M. P. camp near La

Havre, for ships home.

Schweitzer, a New York paper manufacturer in civilian life, said most of the recovered prisoners will suffer no permanent health defects as a result of their experiences. Surprisingly, he said, those who had been captives for the shortest periods were found to be in the worst condition.

This was particularly true of the men captured in the Ardennes battle last December. Stay of them, Schweitzer said, had no real and almost no food for weeks as the Nazis tried to keep them from falling into Allied hands as the end neared. A slice of bread a day and a little soup, if it was available, was a common ration for Ardennes captives during their forced marches to the Nazi rear.

The weakest of these, as well as a considerable number of other wounded or ill prisoners who needed hospitalization and could not go through the established repatriation procedure, are not included in the R. A. M. P. figure.

In further reply to MARK-90429 of 30 May, General Golikov, Head of the Soviet Repatriation Commission, assured me last night that they would make every effort to locate individual Americans who might be stranded in Soviet-occupied territory and when located, they would be evacuated by any route that I requested. I informed him that I would like to have them evacuated westward, in accordance with the agreements made at Yalta. I do not believe there are very many such individuals, although I do know of a few and have already furnished the information to the Soviet Repatriation Commission.

Concerning those liberated prisoners of war in Marshal Tolbukhin's area, estimated in excess of 15,000, Golikov assured me that they would be evacuated westward in accordance with the Yalta agreement. He confirmed my previous belief that Odessa was to be abandoned as a transient camp for the repatriation of American prisoners of war.

Repatriation of British, US, and Other United Nations
Prisoners of War as of 7 June 1945

1. Figures of British and US recovered Prisoners of War shown in this memorandum represent personnel handled by PWK Organisation. The same is true to a large extent of the numbers of Dutch and Belgians. Russians reported delivered to the Russians have been handled through both DP and PW channels.

It is believed that there are more British and US PWs to be recovered and the War Office/War Department are endeavoring to ascertain the number and if possible the location of such personnel. As regards the number of US PWs the figure is somewhat complicated by the large number of missing in action personnel recovered as PW but never reported as such due to lack of time between their capture and recovery.

From the SHAEF area, practically 90% of BR/US recovered personnel were evacuated by air, the majority of the British being flown to the UK. Of the remaining 10% evacuated by land/sea a large number were medical evacuees. A large proportion of French, Dutch, and Belgians and some Polish recovered PWs have been evacuated by air as well as a number of Russians flown to the vicinity of the Russian lines for handing over to the Russians. Air evacuations is still continuing for allied personnel.

2. Under the provisions of the Crispan Agreement, negotiations were completed 22 May 1945, between the Soviet High Command and SHAEF for delivery of liberated former Prisoners of War and citizens to the respective forces for repatriation. Certain points along the Soviet-SHAEF line in Germany and Austria were agreed as assembly points to which Soviet and Allied subjects would be collected for delivery to Soviet or Allied forces as the case might be.

(Reference is made to telegram no. 2064, June 7, 7 p.m. to the Department,) (sent to London as no. 265, repeated to Stockholm as no. 29, and repeated to the Department as no. 2013.) Although it has no evidence to support reports of severe treatment to Soviet citizens who have been repatriated to Allied occupied areas, the Embassy feels that it would be unwise to disregard these reports. Military authorities and the Soviet Government have never attempted to hide their scornful attitude toward Russian troops taken prisoners of war. The Russian Government has never signed the Geneva Convention and during the war it refused all attempts of enemy governments to come to an agreement regarding the treatment of POWs. Such an agreement would have improved the welfare of those Soviet POWs held by the Germans.

Many of the Soviet prisoners and civilians removed to Germany accepted service in German labor and military formations and were consequently liberated in German uniforms. The Russian attitude towards these individuals is very severe and they will probably be accused of having committed an act against the State which is one of the most serious crimes in the Soviet.

Although repatriation has been under way for several months the Embassy knows of only one case in which a repatriated prisoner returned to his family and home and was reinstated in his prewar pursuits. This individual suffering from tuberculosis, was released after having been held for 4 months under guard in Moscow.

It has been learned that repatriates are met by Soviet guards at the port of entry and are marched without ceremony to unknown destinations. Trainloads of repatriates have been going to Moscow enroute east. No contact may be had with the prisoners while the train remains in the Moscow railyards. Little information is available but it is understood that each repatriate is subjected by the police to an intense screening. Unless the repatriate can present extenuating circumstances he will probably be accused of desertion. If the prisoner is found in German uniform he will no doubt be accused of activity against the State. Those who have been accused of anti-State activity or deliberate desertion are probably being shot. However, some repatriates may be allowed to return home such as those who possess good war records, or refused to fight with the Germans, or were captured, when wounded or under similar circumstances. However, the largest portion of repatriates are without doubt placed in forced labor battalions and under police supervision are working on construction projects in Central Asia, Siberia and the far north of the Urals.

The Soviet citizens who have not yet been repatriated have few illusions regarding the treatment awaiting them on their return since they know well the attitude of the Soviet authorities towards surrendering and anti-State activity. Therefore it is not surprising that many of them show little enthusiasm at the prospect of return to the Soviet and are doing everything possible to avoid it.

The reports of execution taking place at Murmansk may be the result of this state of mind. The Embassy is verifying these reports and all developments will be transmitted to the Department.

BRITISH PRISONERS OF WAR

30. Mr. Graham White asked the Secretary of State for War if he can make any further statement with regard to the incidence of tuberculosis among returned prisoners of war, including the numbers in military and civilian hospitals, respectively.

Sir J. Grigg: Three-quarters of the prisoners who have returned have been examined by Mass Miniature Radiography and the rest will be examined when they return from leave. 294 have so far been found to be suffering from tuberculosis. This is about three in every 1,000. 158 have been admitted to civil sanatoria and 136 are in military and E.M.S. hospitals awaiting admission.

31. Mr. Graham White asked the Secretary of State for War if he has any information later than that of 29th May as to the number of British prisoners of war still unaccounted for.

32. Captain Gamman asked the Secretary of State for War if all British Commonwealth prisoners of war liberated by the Russian armies have yet returned to this country, and, if not, how many are still unaccounted for.

Sir J. Grigg: Since the beginning of this year close on 166,000 British Commonwealth prisoners have reached this country or their country of origin overseas. This is nearly 3,500 more than the figure I gave on 5th June in reply to my hon. and gallant Friend the Member for Wycombe (Sir A. Knox). There are still some prisoners in parts of central and southern Europe, prisoners of the Soviet Union, but figures are not available. Arrangements are being made for their transfer westwards to areas in British and American occupation.

Captain Gamman: Have representations been made to the Soviet Government to supply lists of the names of these prisoners-of-war, in view of the fact that the war has been over for more than a month?

Sir J. Grigg: There certainly have been representations. I do not think it is a very hopeful line of country to ask them to supply lists. The representations have been in the main, if not entirely, pressure to send the prisoners back to our lines.

Sir Joseph Hall: How many are there still unaccounted for in the official records?

Sir J. Grigg: I do not think my hon. Friend can have read the answer that I gave last week. I referred to that and suggested that it is impossible to give exact figures.

This is a report on an informal interview with Lt. Col. William F. Penell O-313894, AC (present address Delta Base Station, APO 772 which is an air corps processing center on the Riviera). Col. Penell recently returned from Russia where he was stationed at both Poltava and Odessa, since early this year, mainly as a contact man with the Russians on problems connected with repatriation of American prisoners of war freed by the Russians. Toward the end of his stay he apparently became persona non grata with the Russians for he was suddenly ordered to leave by the American command and to take the first boat out of Odessa, regardless of where it was going. Since returning from Russia he has been interviewed by intelligence officers at DIAEF and has had extended conversations with General Epper and others there. He maintained a daily log of what happened during his stay in the USSR and turned it over to Col. Strong of PWX (U-1) DIAEF at Frankfurt-on-Main. He does not speak Russian. His personal attitude generally was that war against Russia would be a world catastrophe. He felt that to prevent it two things were needed: strong American forces in Europe capable of giving a good account of themselves, and friendly but firm diplomacy to stand up for American rights and to negotiate the settlement of outstanding differences.

Col. Penell's main points concerning his story in the USSR may be summarized as follows:

1. Treatment of American PWs. American PWs freed by the Red Army were in the main treated very shabbily and came to hate the Russians. Many of them were robbed of watches, rings, and other personal possessions which they had managed to retain even after extended periods of captivity under the Germans. Their food at Odessa was very poor, consisting mainly of soup with cucumbers in it and sour black bread. The Russians generally tended to throw obstacles in the way of repatriation, frequently calling off prisoners at the last minute and insisting always upon clearance from Moscow for every prisoner released. American PWs at Odessa were guarded by Russian soldiers carrying loaded rifles with fixed bayonets, and Russian security was more stringent there than German security had been in the various ghettos and Oflag. A number of American officers who went to Poland at various times to coordinate the hunt for 14th Army PWs were ordered out very quickly at Russian insistence.

2. Russian attitude toward US. Among lower echelon officers with whom the Colonel came into contact, he noted a number of times a strong feeling of hostility toward the United States and Great Britain. In general the Russians are extremely cocky, convinced that they alone won the war, and confident in their own powers. On 8 May when Americans and Britons at Odessa heard the V-E proclamation over the BBC, the English and American boats sounded their fog horns and generally indicated their relief at the end of the war in Europe. Commanding officers of all such units were called to the Odessa Port Commander's office and reprimanded sharply for such peculiary behavior, and told flatly that the war could not be over, regardless of what BBC said, since Stalin had not made any such announcement. The Colonel did meet many Russians who were extremely pleasant and anxious to get on with the Americans, but he got the impression that the attitude of hostility and cockiness was the "official" line and reflected the position of higher-ups. He claims to have talked with American officers who contacted the Russians in Germany and to have been told that at regimental and division headquarters they were treated royally, but at corps, army and higher headquarters they got very cold receptions.

3. American-Russian military cooperation. The Colonel claims that even during the operations of the Poltava bases for American aircraft a good deal of hostility was evident. When American aircraft were grounded by the Russians last March, a number of Americans tried to destroy their Radar equipment, according to instructions, and were threatened with machine-gunning by the Russians. At Odessa a number of American officers were called in by Russian intelligence officers and grilled very minutely on a very wide range of questions, from the organization of the American Army and the situation in the sectors they were in when they were captured to the personal political beliefs of the officers concerned. The Colonel worked with a Russian major in Odessa who told him flatly that regardless of his (the American's) rank or his orders from his own headquarters, he would do as the Russians ordered because he was in the Soviet Union and was in their power.

4. Internal sentiment among Russians. From his limited contacts with civilian Russians in the Ukraine, the Colonel felt that there was a good deal of hostility toward the Soviet state, and one Russian even told him that the USSR was simply a prison camp for 200 million people. There were many rumors always floating about Poltava about anti-Russian sabotage committed in the Ukraine and in White Russia by nationalists opposed to the Soviet regime, and the Colonel personally felt that the purpose of setting these two republics separate seats at San Francisco was to mollify the strong nationalist feelings in those areas.

5. Russian treatment of their own returned PWs. Col. Penell saw many repatriated Russian PWs march off the docks at Odessa and these were invariably under armed guard. The report on their fate which he gave credence to was that these repatriates were compelled to work at forced labor for a period equal to their captivity under the Germans. Some of the Russian

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

THE LEGAL ADVISER

June 22, 1945.

To: Mr. Herriek (SWP)
Mr. Durbrow (EK)

From: Mr. Flournoy (Le)

Subject: Proposed Transfer to Soviet Authorities in Germany of Soviet Nationals now Held in this Country as Prisoners of War, Who Were Wearing German Uniforms When Captured

As I told Mr. Herriek this morning, it does not appear to me that the Department is justified in invoking Article 75 of the Geneva Prisoners of War Convention of 1929 to justify the proposed action in this case. I understand from Mr. Herriek's statement to me that Assistant Secretary of War McCloy suggested mentioning the treaty provision in question, but, for the reasons hereinafter stated, it appears to me that it would be improper to invoke it. While the War Department is no doubt primarily responsible for the proposed action in this case, this Department has a certain responsibility in the matter, especially with regard to the proposed invoking of the treaty.

I gather from the attached correspondence and statements made to me by Mr. Herriek this morning that the cases to which the attached draft note to the Soviet Embassy and telegram to our Embassy at Paris relate differ from most of the cases in which Soviet nationals who were captured in German uniforms have heretofore been sent to Germany for transfer to Russia.

It is my understanding that most of the earlier cases related to Soviet nationals who wished to be repatriated. Apparently in those cases the Soviet Embassy appeared as protector of the rights of the persons in question, or at least pretended to do so.

In a note of February 1, 1945 the Department observed that it had previously taken the position that the uniform, rather than the nationality of prisoners of war governed with regard to exchanges, that wearers of the American uniform were entitled to "the full protection of the Geneva Convention", and that this Government had

It might be contended that at least some of the persons in question deserve to be executed for serving in the armed forces of Germany against the Soviet Union, but it would seem that such a contention could be justified only upon the ground that the service of these persons in the German armed forces was voluntary. However, even if it could be proved that they were all serving voluntarily in the German armed forces when they were captured, it is not believed that the repatriation provisions of the Geneva Convention have any application to them, since their real destination was to be not Germany but Russia. Therefore, if the proposed note and telegram are to be sent, it is recommended that the references therein to the Geneva Prisoners of War Convention be eliminated.

It is believed that, if there is legal justification for sending the persons in question to Russia, it must be found in the laws of war, for the proper administration of which the War Department, rather than the Department of State, is responsible.

Lieutenant General K. D. Golubev,
Assistant Government Authorized Administrator for Repatriation,
Moscow, U.S.S.R.

Dear General Golubev:

We have been requested by General Eisenhower to make an urgent appeal to you for an estimate of the number of displaced Western Europeans who are now in Soviet-occupied areas of Eastern Europe.

Thus far, about 1,800,000 French have been repatriated. Less than 100,000 French remain in German areas occupied by British-American forces. This makes a total of 1,900,000 French accounted for, exclusive of those who still remain in Soviet-controlled territory. French authorities insist that the total number of prisoners of war and displaced persons amount to 2,300,000. Even allowing for several hundred thousand unaccounted individuals, there would still remain a great discrepancy.

1,000,000
FRENCH MISSING IN SOVIET ZONE

About 170,000 Dutch have been repatriated. Less than 25,000 Dutch still remain in Germany under control of British-American forces. However, the Dutch authorities estimate that there were originally 340,000 Dutch nationals deported, thus leaving a great discrepancy.

The Belgian authorities also reported a discrepancy but it is comparatively smaller than those of the French and the Dutch.

Specifically, General Eisenhower would like to know:

- (1) Your estimate of the number of French, Dutch and Belgian ex-prisoners of war or displaced persons still remaining in Soviet-controlled territory.
- (2) How many of these persons are accessible for transfer across the Allied lands?
- (3) How many of these persons are inaccessible, that is Western Europeans now in the Soviet Union, Poland, Austria, Czechoslovakia or the Balkan countries?

Apparently this matter is causing the governments concerned great anxiety not only for humanitarian reasons but also because of the necessity of planning their economy to take care of the repatriated persons when they are finally brought home. We would be grateful if you would let us have this information at your earliest convenience.

3. Still up to the present time we have been unable to get the exact information on the number of Soviet citizens located in the territory of the Allied Governments and in territory under the control of the Allied Armies. The data which is given to us is extremely inconsistent and, of course, does not correspond to those facts which we have.

"On 22 May Major General BARKER at the time of the negotiations at HALLE told us that in the jurisdiction of the Allied Command there are up to 1 and 1/2 million Soviet citizens. Of this number, on 22 June, we had accepted 989,543 persons including those who crossed through the lines of the troops on their own.

"On 13 June Representatives of SHAEP informed our Representative in FRANCE that in addition to those Soviet citizens handed over to us, they figured on handing over more than 1,000,000 more Soviet citizens.

"This indicates that there is still no exactly calculated data on Soviet citizens in the hands of the Allied Command, and that many hundreds of thousands of Soviet citizens in addition to the 1,000,000 being figured on for handing over, evidently are continuing to work on the fields of the German farmers and live in the cities of the Allied Governments and in territory under the control of the Allied Command. We have full reason to affirm this. It was definitely not accidental that on 20 May in the English newspaper "SUNDAY TIMES" information was published that in the zones of the British and American Command alone there are about 3,000,000 Russians, together with many Poles and Latvians.

"In giving you the exact data on persons liberated by the Red Army in Western EUROPE and already handed over to go home, I wish to express my conviction that you will help in every way possible not only to get exact data on the number of Soviet citizens under the jurisdiction of the Allied Command, "Possibility that several hundred American prisoners of war liberated from Staling Lft 1, North, are now confined by the Russian Army in the Rostock area pending identification as Americans is reported by an American who recently returned from such confinement.

S/Lt Anthony Shary was one of 1000 air force officers and non-commissioned officers who left Staling Lft 1 immediately prior to assumption of control in North by the Red Army in order to obtain summer air transport from Wismar. The group of ten in which Sgt. Shary travelled was arrested by Russian soldiers and held in jails in Bad Döberan, then Rostock. Ten other Americans were seen under similar circumstances in Rostock.

Russian authorities demanded identification papers, which no prisoner possessed, and refused to consider dog tags proof of the Americans' status. The Americans were well fed and well treated but Shary complains there was no disposition to speed identification and evacuation. After 25 days he escaped from jail and made his way to British forces.

From his own observations and conversations with other former prisoners he believes several hundred Americans may be held in like circumstances in the Wismar-Bad Döberan-Rostock Area."

Dear General Deane:

In answer to your letter of 13 July, I can state the following:

1. During the entire time of repatriation, the following numbers of foreigners were handed over to the Allied Command:

Americans	22,010
English	20,463
French	223,111
Belgian	31,530
Dutch	23,558
Luxembourg	1,246
Norwegian	1,011

2. Inasmuch as a check has not yet been finished, I am unable to tell you the precise number of Western Europeans who have remained in the Soviet zone of occupation in Germany after Allied Anglo-American troops withdrew.

However, we know exactly that in this zone after the withdrawal of troops there were more than 100,000 foreigners of which more than 70,000 were Poles, 80 Americans and 13 English.

3. We do not have precise information concerning the number of Soviet citizens who have been returned to us by Anglo-American troops and left by them in the zones of occupation. Therefore, we would be very appreciative if you could tell us.

Respectfully,

assume the specific obligation to return these Russians by force if necessary? In the protocol which I have seen informally I find no reference to this subject but understand the Chiefs of Staff made an agreement on this subject.
Gray has suggested that where force is necessary we might wish to permit Russian troops to enter our zone for the purpose of removing these individuals. G-5 estimates there are from twenty to thirty thousand of them.

agreement signed Yalta being forwarded by airmail. Briefly agreement provides all Soviet citizens liberated by US forces be separated from enemy POW's and maintained separately until handed over to Soviet authorities. Military authorities each contracting party required without delay to inform competent authorities other party regarding citizens found by them and at same time to take necessary measures to implement all provisions of agreement.

While agreement makes no mention of Soviet citizens captured in German uniforms nor of the use of force, Soviets have consistently claimed it covers all their citizens and Department has interpreted it as covering POW's of Soviet nationality prior to 1939 and in concurrence with War Department ordered return to Europe and turned over to Soviet authorities a number of POW's brought to this country and later ascertained after thorough screening to be Soviet citizens.
Incidents involving resistance requiring use of force by our military authorities occurred in connection with this group.

For your confidential information, Department has been anxious in handling these cases to avoid giving Soviet authorities any pretext for delaying return of American POW's of Japanese now in Soviet occupied zone, particularly in Manchuria. (Matthews.)

It is an understandable reaction, of course. They wonder why their American Allies are spying on them in territory occupied by the Red Army in fulfillment of an agreement to help the U.S. fight against them. (None of these ideas were ever openly stated, but oblique remarks carried the above impressions?).

h. Two incidents at Dairen did not help to relieve the slight tension. On one day between the 2nd and 8th of September American Naval carrier aircraft made a "show of force" over the harbor of Dairen according to Commodore C.C. Wood, who witnessed it. This excited the Russian authorities in Dairen a great deal and they asked Commodore Wood what it was all about. As he had not been given any advance information from the Navy he was just as puzzled as the Russians and could offer only a weak explanation. In the afternoon of the 12th of Sept. (after the ex-POWs had sailed) Admiral Settle was informed by radio that another "show of force" would be made that afternoon, this time by cruisers and destroyers of the Seventh Fleet. This worried Admiral Settle considerably and he sent a strong protest to his headquarters. He was very puzzled by this show of force which was duly made outside the harbor about 1500 hours 13 Sept.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT:

The following information, obtained by OSS representatives in Mukden and transmitted by the OSS representative in Chungking, is dated 13 September:

Americans are very unpopular with the Soviets in Mukden, probably because the Soviets do not wish Americans to observe their actions. The Soviets are to leave on 1 November. In the meantime they are carrying out a program of scientific looting. Every piece of machinery is being removed and all stocks of merchandise in stores and warehouses are being taken away. Mukden presumably will be an empty city when they leave.

The Soviets are indiscriminately Killing Chinese and Japanese. Three OSS men have been held up by Red Army soldiers armed with sub-machine guns, and their watches, wallets, and pistols have been taken from them. Four American officers have been removed from Mukden's good hotel and have been placed in a second-rate Japanese hotel.

1. Correspondents returning from Mukden report that nearly 200,000 Japanese soldiers from the Japanese Army were transferred by the Russians to China, Siberia. Apparently, the soldiers were used as laborers to install remodeled Manchurian machinery in new plants at China. Of the 5000 factories in Mukden, no more than 100 are operational. The rest were run down by the Russians and then blown up either by them or by the Communist 8 Army, giving the impression that the damage was caused by bombing.
2. Many correspondents feel that the Americans have the responsibility of evacuating the Japanese wherever Russia's only claim, if any, is the evacuation of machinery.
3. The Soviet commander of Mukden claims that all Mukden factories are war booty and that the Russians are entitled by the Yalta Agreement to all such booty.
4. The Japanese in Manchuria are eager to be evacuated by the Americans; which discounts Russian statements to the effect that they will get out of Manchuria when the Americans get out of China.

THE PROBLEM

1. To consider a message from the Commanding General, United States Forces, European Theater (Appendix "C", page 5) requesting information as to whether any further decision had been taken concerning the final disposal of Chetniks and German Croat troops, about whom original instructions were issued to the Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean, in PAN 576, 20 June 1945 (page 3 of C.O.S. 876).

FACTS BEARING ON THE PROBLEM

2. In C.O.S. 876 Series, the Combined Chiefs of Staff informed the Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean, and the Supreme Commander, Allied Expeditionary Force that pending further consideration by the United States and British Governments, Chetniks and German Croat troops taken into custody would be retained in custody and handled in accordance with existing instructions of the Department of State and British Foreign Office to their respective representatives in Italy.

1. Informant, a Pole forced to serve in the German Army, was taken prisoner by the Russians in 1944. He was kept for a time in the Transit Camp in KAUNAS, then in MINSK until he was deported across SIBERIA to the SEVINSKAYA camp near VLADIVOSTOK. At the end of 1945 - APRIL, he escaped and tried to get to Europe. He was, however, arrested by the NKVD after he had got beyond MOSCOW, and placed in the P.O.W. and Internee Camp in TAMBOV, which was occupied by Germans, French, Americans, British, Dutch, Belgians, and even a few citizens of LUXEMBOURG, also Estonians, Letts, Rumanians and Yugoslavs. The prisoners numbered, in informant's estimation, well over 20,000; they were both military and civilian, most likely over-run by the Russians during the offensive.

2. All prisoners were forced to work, and the food they were given was very bad and monotonous. They were housed not in huts but in dug-outs.

3. The monotonous food caused some strange disease which made the legs and arms swell; the swellings spread and the swollen places developed sores and wounds. After a time men afflicted with this disease died. Informant was told that more than 25,000 Italians, more than 2,500 French and approximately 10,000 Rumanian and Hungarian prisoners had died in this manner. There were also many casualties among Poles and the other nationalities.

4. Prisoners in this camp included men of very high culture and learning and great experts in many fields of science. Informant observed that German engineers were employed on a special task - the drawing up of blue-prints for a four-engined aircraft, which would carry about 500 men and achieve a speed - it was alleged - of 1,000 kilometres per hour. The Russians were extremely interested in these blue-prints and men working on the invention were granted all possible facilities both in work and the conditions of life in the camp. Informant was also told that a group of technicians and engineers of all nationalities was busy working out plans for new types of tanks and other technical machines and installations, but he was unable to learn any details about them.

5. When informant left the camp there were still numerous Frenchmen due to be repatriated in the next batch; there were also some Belgians and Dutch, and others, including some Englishmen and several Scots Americans, the presence of whom in this camp is probably unknown to the British and the U.S.A. authorities. When he was leaving, these Englishmen and Americans asked him urgently (as did the French officers and men) to notify the Allied authorities of their plight. Informant succeeded in reaching France with a convoy of Allied nationals.

The Militant and UPRAR performed assessing various aspects of the plans and agreements, although probably no major final decisions were made in Yugoslavia, were given on September 1981.

At the same time, Danish and Norwegian Jewish birth numbers were also reduced. In the case of the Danes, this was because of a large number of emigrants fleeing Copenhagen, including a few hundred (out of thousands) who fled the Russians and the Flemings. Both Jews and Greeks, apart from the Jews, probably numbered no more than a few thousand. Soviet nationals, for whom no official estimates were given, probably equalled several million persons.

iosis surveys of all centre residents. Penicillin was used to reduce the allegedly high incidence of gonorrhoea and syphilis. Supplies of standard medicines and surgical equipment were made available in ample quantities, backed by large military reserves; and the American Red Cross released large stocks of unused 'standard medicine kits' originally earmarked for prisoners of war. Forty-seven thousand of these kits were distributed in Western Germany, and 7,400 in Austria.

Because of the concern felt by UNRRA medical personnel over the general reduction in rations during 1946, UNRRA made substantial distributions of cod-liver oil and allotted 900,000 tablets, containing standard doses of vitamins C and D, to all children and adolescents under twenty years of age, to all pregnant and nursing women, and to all persons suffering from vitamin deficiency. Simultaneously, UNRRA "weight-bearing" testing was instituted in the British and United States Zones. The results of the testing indicated that the average man lost 10 to 20 pounds more than the German population, so that men for the most part were to some extent allowed to Dental care, too, was provided for displaced persons by UNRRA, although a continuing shortage was reported of toothbrushes and acrylic resin needed to make dentures. By July 1946 there were 76 dental centres in the British Zone, with 1130 dentists, 54 dental assistants, and 35 technicians, practically all recruited from the displaced persons; 16 German dentists, and 5 UNRRA dentists. During June comparable personnel in the United States Zone attended to about 40,000 patients. Dental services in the French Zone were considered inadequate, being described as 'rudimentary in personnel and equipment';

TRACING OF MISSING PRISONERS

BRUSSELS, 1946 European tracing bureaus prepared what was probably the largest list of missing prisoners of war, and lost their lives as a result of the war, and in addition contained detailed personal descriptions.

International Red Cross committees, working from 1939 to 1945, collected 100 per cent for the missing prisoners of war, and were unable to locate 100,000. The British Red Cross committee, which had been working since 1945, published in their own and they maintained a central list with a view to tracing the missing.

A central data bank was established at a hospital in Lisbon near where in the British Zone, and during July last people were contacted.

Memorandum for the Director
Office of the Chief of Staff
Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

In accordance with your oral request, supplemented by recent conversation with Major Gundersen of this office, inclosed herewith is chart showing Missing in Action (including captured) U.S. Army personnel for the period 7 December 1941 through 31 December 1945. This will provide you with the best recent figures available in published form, for purposes of comparing German and Japanese losses.

It will be noted that the items "Prisoners of War (Current Status)" and "Missing in Action (Current Status)" are still large. The reason of course is that as of 31 December 1945 these categories reflected latest definite reports available for statistical compilation, and the situation to date has not materially changed. You will appreciate that for statistical purposes these categories cannot be moved to other categories until detailed disposition records have been processed. In many cases, final disposition must await a legal determination of death under Pt. 490 which may take up to next September, even though investigation to date leaves little logical doubt that a given man is permanently lost. There is the further factor that the processing of individual records for final statistical purposes is necessarily much slower than a numerical count of unprocessed cases in theaters, creating a time lag. As further data is available in final form, this office will be glad to make it available to you.

The foregoing data was classified "Restricted", but has been approved for release to you.

Very truly yours,

there were more persons in this category than had been supposed at an earlier date.

When the policy relating to forcible repatriation had become clarified in December 1945, it was specified that Soviet citizens who had been residents of the Soviet Union on 1 September 1939 and who had been captured in German uniform would be repatriated without regard to their personal wishes and by force if necessary. By the spring of 1946, when repatriations of the displaced persons were resumed, the problem of forcible repatriation had reduced itself, for the most part, to the disposal of those who had been captured in German uniform. It was natural that the most tenacious resistance to repatriation arose within this group, as well as among those accused by the Soviet authorities of having rendered aid and comfort to the enemy, as these persons had the worst to fear in the way of retribution. In January 1946 a definition of 'German uniform' was requested for purposes of repatriation. The definition was made to include membership in all regular military formations, certain paramilitary organizations auxiliary to the Nazi Party, and voluntary units like the Goetzack and Ukrainian legions. On 24 February 1946, a group of 1,590 Soviet citizens who had been captured in German uniform were delivered from Prisoner-of-War Enclosure Number 431 at Plattling to the Soviet authorities at Schonberg. In spite of the elaborate precautions taken during this transfer, five of the men succeeded in committing suicide and a number of others attempted to do so. After this transfer, a total of 1,630 remained in Theater Headquarters issued instructions to deliver 794 of these to the Soviet authorities, but to hold the remainder, designated as 'political, without citizenship rights, pending further instructions.

The final disposal of the last of the Soviet citizens captured in German uniform was reported by the Third United States Army as follows:

Operation TAFER was completed on 13 May 1946. This operation was the forced repatriation of two hundred and twenty-two (222) Soviet war criminals from Prisoner-of-War Enclosure Number 431, Plattling. During the week 4-11 May, all Soviet prisoners of war in Plattling who were found not repatriable were discharged. Seven hundred and ninety-one (791) Soviet citizens who were to be held for further screening were moved from Prisoner-of-War Enclosure Number 431, Plattling, to Prisoner-of-War Enclosure Number 118, Burgau, Germany. On 13 May 1946, the 3rd Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, shipped the remaining to Russia. There was one fatality and two injuries among the prisoners of war. There were no casualties among American personnel.

NARA, Date 11/18/89

IMMEDIATE PROBLEM:

1. Retain, after 31 March 1946, a limited number of German prisoners of war who are directly or indirectly involved in production of Army and Navy Intelligence.

2. Categories in question are as follows:

- Prisoners of war being interrogated for information
- Prisoners of war voluntarily preparing intelligence or historical reports
- Prisoners of war translating documents essential to intelligence or scientific and technical research.
- The bare minimum of German prisoners of war essential to service of above personnel which cannot be achieved by other personnel. (This will be the touchy problem, and we must justify these accurately.)

3. Agencies interested: Navy, AEF, AAF, GDS, CR

4. G-2 will request using a circular to nominate and justify retention. G-2 will recommend approval of L/C of C and Secretary of War. G-1 has already informally concurred.

5. G-2 will simultaneously recommend:

- Retention of additional prisoners of war justified as essential to intelligence projects, but not now being so utilized (including War Crime C.)
- Shipments of additional prisoners of war to the U. S. who can be exploited and returned by 15 June 1946.
- Repatriation by 15 June 1946 of all prisoners of war retained after 31 March. Justification of retention of any prisoners of war after 15 June 1946, and only on cases that cannot be exploited under any other project to be presented to the Secretary of War by 15 May 1946.

6. As a result, for the present, no prisoners of war, whose exploitation cannot be completed by 15 June 1946, will be brought to the U. S., but will be frozen in present location in Germany.

SECONDARY PROBLEM: Exploitation of German personnel after 15 June 1946.

1. In order not to prejudice the projected long-range version of OVERCAST project KIS will not, at this time, recommend exploitation under OVERCAST of personnel not qualified for that program.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PROPOSED MARSHAL GENERAL:

SUBJECT: Special Handling of German Prisoners of War Formerly Held by the Military Intelligence Division

1. Attached as Tab A is a roster of German prisoners of war transferred to Fort Meade, Maryland, on 6 June 1946. One of these prisoners of war, Paul Hoffmann, 200-1220, can be separated from this group for repatriation with any other prisoners of war being returned to Germany. In accordance with informal arrangements made with your office and Fort Meade by representatives of the GFI branch of this Division, it is requested that prisoner of war Robert Schumann, 200-1285, be substituted for prisoner of war Hoffmann in this special group and that a separate order be issued for this particular group of forty-seven (47) prisoners of war in order to insure that they remain together throughout transport to Frankfurt, Germany.

2. Temporary duty orders are being issued on 1st Lieutenant George H. Hildner, Jr., G-170370, and Sergeant John S. Dean, 21432916, as G-2 escorts for these forty-seven (47) prisoners of war.

3. In a separate memorandum to the A. C. of S., G-2, Headquarters, USFET (a copy of which will be furnished your office) complete instructions as to the disposition of these forty-seven (47) prisoners of war after their arrival at Frankfurt, Germany, is being forwarded.

4. Fourteen (14) of this group of prisoners of war could, under normal circumstances, be repatriated to some other than the U. S. Some in Germany, and six (6) of this group of prisoners constitute a specific security threat if close surveillance is not maintained by the A. C. of S., G-2, USFET, after their arrival in Germany. Furthermore, all of these prisoners of war, because of their retention on various service duties at a classified intelligence installation, will constitute, for approximately ninety (90) days after their departure, a security threat if not kept under a limited surveillance at Frankfurt. It is therefore requested that as great a degree of segregation as possible, both while en route to the Port of Embarkation and on the transport by which they will be shipped to Europe, be afforded this whole group of forty-seven (47) prisoners of war. It is to facilitate this segregation and

Excellency,

I have brought to the attention of the Minister for ex-Prisoners of War the testimony of Mr. Joseph Bogenschutz, 35 Grand'Rue, at Mulhouse, (Haut Rhin), who was repatriated on last July 7 from Russia, from Camp 189-6 at Linskaya, which is 75 Kilometers from Novosibirsk, and who states that about 20 Alsatians and Luxemburgers were still in this Camp at the time of his departure.

Bogenschutz states that he wrote at least three cards a month through the Red Cross (Red Crescent) since September 1944 and that none of these cards ever arrived. He states that the Camp Commander is a German and that instead of repatriating Alsatians, he selects Germans for repatriation.

Bogenschutz, in addition thereto, alleges that there remain American, British, Belgian, Polish, Rumanian, Luxembourg, etc., nationals in the Camp.

I am bringing this matter to your attention more particularly because of the latter information.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurance of my highest consideration.

SUBJECT: Transmitting List of American War Prisoners who were Registered by the Polish Red Cross.

RECEIVED

HONORABLE
THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
WASHINGTON.
JUL 16 1946
DEPARTMENT OF STATE

I have the honor to inform the Department that the Polish Red Cross at Warsaw, Poland has provided the Embassy with the names of 230 persons who were registered with the Polish Red Cross at Warsaw, Poland between February 1, 1945 and May 1, 1945 as American War prisoners. While the Polish Red Cross has stated that for several reasons beyond its control, some of the data set forth in the list may not be entirely accurate, the list as it was received from the Polish Red Cross is transmitted herewith in original and photograph.

It is suggested that the Department may wish to refer copies of the enclosed list to the office of the Provost Marshal General, War Department, for such action as that office may deem appropriate in the efforts it is exerting to ascertain the whereabouts and welfare of former American prisoners of war.

The Embassy has sent an appropriate note of appreciation to the Polish Red Cross for its action in sending the Embassy the list of names under discussion.

Respectfully yours,

For the Ambassador:

Edward J. Doran
Second Secretary of Embassy

My dear Mr. Freeman:

Representative Gerald W. Landis has requested the Department of State to endeavor to assist you in obtaining information regarding your son, Sergeant Forrest E. Freeman, who has been reported missing with his crew since December 1944, pursuant to the inquiry contained in your letter to him of September 2.

The War Department has informed this Department that its overseas commanders were recently queried as to the probability of personnel now carried in a missing status being located alive, and that the answers from all commanders reveal that no information had been brought to light by intensive investigations which would indicate the possibility that any will be found alive with the exception of those missing less than sixty days or those who may be deliberately absconding themselves from military control. However, if you will furnish exact information regarding your son the Department of State will be glad to undertake the desired inquiry through official channels. Such information should consist of his full name, Army serial number and mailing address, date and place of birth, the names of the members of his crew, particularly that of the plane commander, etc.

Sincerely yours,

For the Acting Secretary of State:

Edward D. Malachukin

She further furnished information substantially the same as that contained in the attached letter of December 3, 1946 addressed to Mrs. Freeman by the War Department adding that the plane was seen to drop below and behind the formation about 125 miles from the Russian line. Negotiations for entry of Graves Registration units into Soviet-occupied Germany, Austria and Poland have so far been unsuccessful and it can not be predicted when these areas can be covered. All Americans who were liberated by the Russians have been returned to our forces and our military attache at Moscow, in cooperation with the Russian Government, has in all cases taken action to insure that all Americans discovered in Russian territory are returned promptly to our control.

Reference the underlying file. So far as concerns paragraph 3 I agree that if the paragraph can be misinterpreted in the sense suggested by Miss James, an outsider could without effort arrive at the same impression. I am prepared therefore to make this change as suggested.

So far as concerns the second change suggested by Miss James I find that acceptance of this would leave the letter meaningless so far as concerns the group of persons we are discussing in that paragraph. It would make an entirely erroneous impression in the minds of the persons receiving the letter.

When Ambassador Smith was here he stated that the attitude of the Soviet Government in regard to the American deportees from the Balkans was entirely unsatisfactory but that we would not be in a position to protest until they flatly refused to release a person proven to be an American citizen and proven to be in the Soviet Union. That has not occurred and that is the important point in my opinion to stress to the public. The fact that we are presenting these cases to the Soviet Union is not in my opinion any reason why we should make a Pollyanna-ish presentation of the matter to the public.

I could understand a suggestion that we should add into the fourth paragraph of the draft letter a statement that we are currently presenting cases of this type to the Soviet Government and that they are under investigation by that Government, but to eliminate the sense of the statement on the grounds that we are presenting the cases does not appear to me to be logical.

Letter to Miss Paul

Dear Sir:

I have read with interest the item in the Chicago Tribune of Jan. 9, "Envoy 'ledges help if it's proved B-24s hold any Americans".

My son was a gunner on a B-24 which flew from lower Italy to Vienna Austria during the last months of the war. On Feb. 19, 1945 they bombed Vienna and were hit over the target, killing one member of the crew. But they flew back over Yugoslavia and radioed their intention to bail out. Last radio coordinates were 43deg. 35min. north by 15 deg 0 min. east. 2:40 PM. The entire crew is still missing and presumed dead by our government.

Since Yugoslavia is Russian dominated, we understand free travel is forbidden and we have heard and still fear that American flyers are being held in that country.

If our searching teams are allowed in Yugoslavia it seems to us, that some evidence of the plane or the crew should have been found by now.

Any information you can give us will be appreciated.

Thanking you, I am,
Yours truly,

Miss Lynn Paul.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE CHIEF, COLLECTIVE BRANCH, CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE GROUP

SUBJECT: German Prisoners of War in U.S.S.R.
(Reference: CD No. 575.2)

1. Reference is made to Intelligence Research Project No. 5616 "German Prisoners of War in the U.S.S.R." which was forwarded by memorandum, subject as above, dated 17 March 1947.

2. It is requested that the following addendum be added to paragraph 2 of reference project:

In official communiques from June 1941 through 14 May 1945, published in the New York Times, the Soviets claim a minimum of 1,400,000 German prisoners of war, of which number at least 1,250,000 were rounded up after 8 May 1945. These figures do not include satellite prisoners. During the war many of the communiques did not give figures for captured, stating merely that many prisoners were taken. Considering this fact and the confusion during the rounding-up process after VE Day, the total figure given above may have been understated by as much as one million men.

Many of these citizens left the United States after World War I, some travelling on American passports and some on foreign passports issued to their alien parents. Some of these persons did not hold themselves out to be American citizens while residing abroad before and during World War II nor did they maintain ties with the United States during that time. The governments of the countries in which they reside contend that they are not citizens of the United States but rather citizens of the countries in which they have lived and worked for many years and where they raised their families. This Government, of course, does not recognize this contention and continues to assert the American citizenship of such persons when such citizenship has been established in accordance with our law.

The figure in line 2 concerns so-called national American citizens excluding official personnel. However any effort to distinguish between dual nationals and persons who are citizens only must be tentative in view of the singular later revelation of nationality laws exercised by Communist governments. Many of those the list in line 2 have not communicated with our missions for several years and it has not been possible to determine their present circumstances or whereabouts. Some of those have possibly renounced their citizenship, some may have died and several would probably prefer to remain where they are. Those who have communicated with our missions and expressed a desire to return to the United States have been assisted by our missions, to the best of their ability, in their efforts to obtain exit visas for return to this country.

The figure in line 3 is probably fairly accurate, but some American citizens may have departed these countries without informing our missions of their movements.

The figure in line 4 concerns only those American citizens who have informed our missions that they are unable to depart because of the failure of the Communist government to grant them exit documentation. There are probably many others in this category of whom our missions have no knowledge.

Line 5 concerns those Americans who when last heard from were in labor camps, prisons or concentration camps throughout the orbit. Specific information concerning those in this category is contained in the secret annex to this memorandum.
